Stewart Charges Senator Nye With Falsehood

INDIANA OIL HEAD ANSWERS CHARGES HURLED IN SENATE

Use Cloak of Immunity To Slander Without Restraint, Says Antagonist of Rockefeller.

BORAH INTIMATES JOHN D. SMEARED

Nye Demands Entire Industry Clean House To Secure Public Confidence and Esteem.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Colonel Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, imputed "falsehoods" and "slander" to his accusers tonight in a statement answering the renewed charges by Senator Nye, of North Dakota, that Stewart had given false testimony before his senate committee.

"Senators Nye and Norris set themselves up as superior to courts and juries," he declared, recalling that he had been tried and acquitted in the courts of the perjury charge that followed his apperance as a witness in the Continental Trading company investigation. "They arrogate to themselves the position of advisers to private investors and private corporations. Behind their cloak of senatorial immunity, they slander and abuse individuals without restraint."

Turning to Senator Nye's comment on Colonel Stewart's assertion that the profits in the Continental Trading company bond transaction went into dividends for the Standard oil stockholders, he said:

"The Standard Oil company, of Indiana, and its stockholders have much to boast of and nothing to apologize for. Neither Nye nor Norris have ever before had the temerity to charge that the Standard Oil company, of Indiana, had ever received any illegitimate profits from any sources. Heretofore, Senator Nye has said to the newspapers that it appeared that the time had come to attack the Standard Oil company, of Indiana."

Venable Suit Asks Recovery of Title To Stone Mountain

Waste of Money and Failure To Carry Out Provisions of Deed Charged By Petitioners.

Recovery of title to Stone Mountain property for the "sole purpose of enabling the public to carry the monument to completion" is sought in a petition filed Saturday in DeKalb superior court by S. H. Venable, Coribel Venable Orme and Robert Venable Roper against the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association. The plaintiffs allege that the monumental association not only has failed to carry out provisions specified in the deed regarding completion of the main group of the monument within 12 years, but that the defendant association has squandered several times the amount necessary to complete the work and now is hopelessly involved.

Although the main portion of the central group of the monument could have been easily completed within the 12 years specified at a cost not exceeding $250,000, the defendant was forced to abandon all work on the monument in May, 1928, on account of lack of funds with which to meet its payroll and other obligations, after having collected and spent the "stupendous sum of $1,195,845, besides incurring an indebtedness of approximately $260,800," the petition charges.

Confidence Lost, Charge.

"While these funds were collected from a generous and responsive public for monumental purposes, and have all been spent, there is nothing on the mountain to show for it, except the mutilated bust of a man, intended as a likeness of General Lee, but to whom it bears no resemblance," the plaintiffs allege. The petition charges that "the defendant has so completely lost the confidence of the public that it would be utterly impossible for it to complete said monument, even if an extension of time were granted to it."

The Venables declare in the petition that "it is the dominating desire of their lives to see a monument carved on said property in accordance with the original designs, and they, therefore, bring this suit for

"DICK" GALLOGLY'S TRIAL FOR MURDER TO OPEN TUESDAY

Alleged Accomplice of Condemned Harsh To Face Jury in Slaying of Willard Smith.

Richard Gray (Dick) Gallogly, alleged accomplice of George R. Harsh, condemned collegiate thrill slayer, will go on trial before a Fulton superior court jury Tuesday. Gallogly is charged with murder in connection with the deaths of S. H. Meeks and Willard Smith, slain in holdups. He probably will be tried for the Smith murder. Judge Virlyn B. Moore will preside.

Harsh, convicted of first degree murder by a jury a week ago Saturday and under sentence to die in the electric chair at Milledgeville March 15 and whose attorneys are expected to file a plea for a new trial Monday, will be the state's chief witness against Gallogly, Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated Saturday.

Harsh To Be Main Witness.

"George Harsh will be our main witness against the man he named as his accomplice," Mr. Boykin said. "We will have others to substantiate his testimony and I have no doubt, but that the verdict will be a vindication of the law to its fullest extent."

The solicitor general refused to go into details concerning the persons he expects to put on the stand against Gallogly, asserting, however, that he expected the chief substantiation of Harsh's testimony to come from William Mahoney, a friend and confident of both Harsh and Gallogly who, the former, in his confession of the murders of Meeks and Smith, said, was with him at the McRoberts drug store, 802 Boulevard, N. E., the night Smith was slain.

Mahoney Not On Stand.

Mahoney, who has turned state's evidence, testified before the special grand jury session which indicted Harsh and Gallogly for the murders of Meeks and Smith. He previously had made a signed sworn statement to Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole and though subpoenaed as a state's witness at the trial of Harsh was not put on the stand, Solicitor General Boykin declaring in his final argument before the Harsh jury that "Mahoney was not put on the stand because we have another case in which he will be a more important witness and in which his testimony will be needed more than it is now."

The solicitor general also announced that he had several other witnesses who definitely will place Gallogly on the scene of the crime and also that he intends to use F. Morgan Sutton and Jack D. Wright, both of whom Harsh appealed to the night of the Smith murder. Gallogly, Harsh said in his confession, was with him when he approached Sutton and Wright for assistance in treating a wound he had received at Smith's hand when the drugstore manager resisted the attempt to rob his store.

Other Witnesses Available.

If the state should elect to try Gallogly for the murder of Meeks, which is improbable, the solicitor general said he also had a number of witnesses who would identify the accused youth as the man who acted as lookout for Harsh while the now condemned slayer of Smith entered the A&P store at 1004 Hemphill street on the night of October 6 on a robbery mission which resulted in a gun battle and wounds fatal to the clerk, Meeks.

Reuben and Lowry Arnold, counsel for Gallogly, Saturday were reluctant to discuss their plans.

"We are going to make a determined fight for our client," Lowry Arnold, speaking for the defense, said. "We have a number of witnesses and know pretty well what the state will offer. We are ready to combat it. We are hopeful of a favorable verdict."

Robberies Rocked City.

The series of robberies which resulted in the deaths of Meeks and Smith startled Atlanta early last October, and the arrest several weeks later of Harsh and Gallogly shocked the entire city. Harsh made an immediate confession, but despite determined efforts on the part of Chief Poole, Solicitor General Boykin and Detective John W. Lowe, central figure in the police's investigation of the case, Gallogly has refrained from making any statement, save a "few in-

Sight of Injured Girl

:: Auto Crash Leads to Death of Mrs. G. Z. Rutherford ::

Fatal to Aged Woman

Accident led indirectly to tragedy early Saturday night, when Mrs. G. Z. Rutherford, 72, of 3035 Mayson-Turner road, dropped dead at her home as Miss Ruby Croft, of 950 Ponce de Leon avenue, victim of an accident, was brought into the house to receive emergency treatment. Doctor gave the probable cause of death as apoplexy induced by shock.

Miss Croft suffered possible internal injuries and cuts about the face, when the car in which she was riding overturned on the Mayson-Turner road, near Mrs. Rutherford's home. E. E. Daniel, of a Tenth street address, the driver of the car, also suffered possible internal injuries and less serious bruises and cuts. He told officers that he was forced from the road by a speeding car which was being driven along the middle of the road and which did not dim its glaring lights when approaching his machine. He also stated that the car sped on after his auto crashed into a ditch.

Miss Ruby Brown, of a Tenth street address, and Hugh Mason, of Lithia Springs, passengers with Daniel, also were slightly injured.

Daniel was removed to Grady hospital by passing motorists, while Miss Croft was carried to the house in which Mrs. Rutherford lived with her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Cochrane. According to witnesses, the aged woman collapsed on sight of the injured girl.

America Returns With Heroes and Wreck Survivors

New York Pays Homage to Stalwart Crew as Blushing Rescuer Tells Modest Story of Feat.

BABY BOY BORN AS VESSEL SINKS.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—A nine-pound boy was born on the liner America while the big ship was racing through boisterous seas to the rescue of the freighter Florida.

The baby was born in the steerage and was named George Fried Kajowski as a tribute to the America's gallant master. A small white dog named "Smiles," a cat and a canary, ship's pets, went down with the ship.

BY W. W. CHAPLIN,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—The liner America came steaming home today with the 32 Italian sailors it had saved from the ocean's fury and full details of the actual rescue were told for the first time by Harry Manning, the diminutive chief officer who was in command of the life boat.

Half-coated in ice and her high flanks smeared from the gale-whipped seas that had battered her during the rescue, the America dropped anchor at quarantine just at noon and a hundred reporters and cameramen swarmed aboard.

After Captain George Fried had been welcomed by his wife and Manning by his mother they met the newspaper men in a saloon on the boat deck and Captain Fried smilingly pointed Manning out as the real hero of the occasion.

Manning Tells Story.

Manning is less than average height and weighs 130 pounds. Seeing him there in the luxurious saloon, his face the fresh color of a boy's and his dark hair curling neatly backward from a placid brown, it was hard to think of him as the man who had flung himself into the face of almost certain death to save the crew of the Italian tramp steamer Florida.

This little sailor in blue and brass had pitted his knowledge and courage against all the force of the sea and storm, and he had won. With

JAMES HOLLOMON RITES CONDUCTED

Following Impressive Ceremony Here, Body Is Taken to Kernersville, N. C., for Burial Services

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Funeral services for James A. Hollomon, associate editor of The Constitution, were held Saturday afternoon in the Central Congregational church. Mr. Hollomon died Thursday night of injuries suffered when he fell two stories down the stairwell at the Henry Grady hotel 48 hours earlier.

Following the funeral rites, the body was taken to Kernersville, N. C., for interment, leaving the Terminal station at 7:30.

Facing the gray casket in which all that was mortal of their friend and co-worker lay, with a great mass of floral tributes backing the casket and draped upon the pulpit, leaders in state and city government, famous figures in national life, fellow newspapermen, friends and admirers of the popular editor paid silent tribute to

Ellaville Boy And Teacher Being Sought

School Principal, 35, and Student, 17, Are Believed To Have Eloped.

Ellaville, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—A search for Mrs. M. M. Wellons, 35-year-old school principal, and Edwin Chapman, a 17-year-old pupil, figures in a suspected elopement, today extended to Akron, Ohio, on information gleaned from school children.

Night Police Chief J. H. Holloway said he had learned that Chapman recently approached a boyhood friend with a suggestion of a trip to Akron. The student protested he had no money, the chief said, and was told that Chapman "had a way to go."

Sheriff E. C. Rigsby announced that he had information of a recent loan of $300 on the Wellon farm and payment of back salary to Mrs. Wellon amounting to $200. Her husband, a farmer who came with his wife from north Georgia five years ago, told the sheriff he had no knowledge of the whereabouts of his wife or the money.

Ellaville residents told Chief Hol-

FULTON, DEKALB MERGER PUSHED

Movement for Unification of Two Counties Gets Support of Civic and Political Groups.

Merger of DeKalb county with Fulton in which all the governmental functions of DeKalb would be absorbed by Fulton county as proposed by two grand juries of DeKalb, will be pushed by civic clubs and political leaders in that county, it became known Saturday.

There are 272 square miles of territory in DeKalb county and only 185 in Fulton. Population of Fulton county, however, is about six times as great as DeKalb, the census giving the latter 50,000. Councilmen William E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, Kirkwood, DeKalb county, and George Lyle, of the eleventh ward, Saturday strongly advocated the change, stating that the consolidation would be mutually beneficial.

HIS FINAL EFFORT TO STAY BUILDING DECLARED BEATEN

Senators Believe Majority Sufficient To Force Time Limit Is Now Assured.

CHAMBERLIN SEEKS TO ASSUAGE U. S.

British Leader Says Empire Is Anxious To Accord Parity to United States.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The senate today voted to stand by the house provision in the cruiser construction bill requiring that eight of the proposed 16 new warships be built in government yards.

This cleared the way for a showdown next week on the big controversy raised by President Coolidge's desire to eliminate a clause to require a start on the naval program by 1931.

While the senate argued today over the navy yard question leaders were busy counting noses for the voting engagement on the dominant issue of whether the president should be given authority to initiate and carry out the cruiser program as he might deem best.

Friends of the bill insisted tonight that Mr. Coolidge again faced defeat. The house last year rejected his proposal to knock out the time limitation provision and he has a divided party now in the senate on this point. A final vote on the bill during the coming week was freely predicted.

Senator Bingham, republican of Connecticut, offered the amendment to strike out the house provision to give the navy yards half of the 16 warships. He proposed instead that it be left to the discretion of the secretary of the navy where the ships should be built. Senator Johnson, republican, of California, remarked this would mean that the government yards probably would get none of the vessels.

The bill was amended, however, after a protest by Senator McKellar, democrat, of Tennessee, to provide that material parts not ordinarily manufactured in government plants might be manufactured for the ships at other places. The measure as amended by the senate naval committee, would have left this to the discretion of the secretary of the navy with power to purchase any part outside of government yards if the saving in cost was material. Senator Swanson, democrat, of Virginia, offered the substitute proposal which was accepted.

Of the proposed ships, 15 are cruisers and one is an aircraft carrier.

CHAMBERLAIN ANXIOUS TO REACH AGREEMENT.

Birmingham, England, January 26, (AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, in a speech here tonight expressed the conviction that the problem of naval armaments, which is the "only difference" with the United

STATE JAIL CONDITIONS REPORTED IMPROVING

Dr. Woodward, of Public Welfare Division, Says Situation Is Better.

Various aspects of jail life in Georgia, notably those of general cleanliness and grouping of prisoners, have shown decided improvement during the past few years, according to Dr. Comer Woodward, acting executive secretary of the Georgia department of public welfare. The delinquency division of the department recently has finished a survey of county jails and has issued a statement in comparison with conditions encountered in surveys made in 1922 and 1924.

Another conspicuous improvement is the better attitude of jail officials, who now frequently call on the welfare department for suggestions and aid, the report states.

The accompanying table shows the percentage increase in the number of jails making outstanding improvements in certain factors:

General cleanliness, 219 per cent; window fly screens, 218 per cent; requiring prisoners to bathe, 342 per cent; heavy window screens, 175 per cent; metal painted light color, 141 per cent; hospital ward, 92 per cent; wall bunks, 79 per cent; grouping of prisoners, 43 per cent.

Additional to these improvements were noted in such significant things as the provision of adequate bedding, waterworks, residence with jails, regular laundering of bedding, discipline, meals, transfer of prisoners and various other important factors.

criminating admissions," which Chief Poole said Gallogly made verbally to him immediately after his arrest.

Members of the Harsh defense counsel refused to comment on the plea they would file Monday before Judge E. D. Thomas, who presided over the condemned youth's trial last week. William Schley Howard, Walter T. Colquitt and Ben Conyers completed their appeal Saturday and said that its formal filing before Judge Thomas was being delayed only by the absence from the city of James A. Branch, also a member of the Harsh legal staff, who is expected to return to Atlanta Monday morning.

Makes Fat People Slim

New York Physician Perfects Simple and Easy Method of Reducing Weight

Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician, of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without unnecessary change of diet or burdensome exercise. He also says that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. The Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. R.—(adv.)

FAMILY FEUD RESULTS IN WOUNDING OF MAN

C. C. Smallwood, Alleged Assailant of P. L. Dill, Sought by Police.

A quarrel believed to have been one of long standing resulted early Saturday night in the shooting of P. L. Dill, of 470 Savannah avenue, by C. C. Smallwood, of 563 Pinell street, according to police reports. Dill was struck in the right shoulder by a charge from a shotgun. He was removed to Grady hospital, where doctors did not regard his condition as dangerous.

Dill was found lying in an alley at the rear of his home at about 7 o'clock by three neighbors, L. W. Brown and Fred Sanders, of 167 Savannah street, and D. H. Bodie, of 390 Berean avenue.

Call Officers Floyd and Ratledge were summoned and went to the hospital with the wounded man. Dill admitted to them that he had been with Smallwood, but was unable to give a clear account of the shooting, and did not say definitely that Smallwood had shot him.

Patrolman Wiley, who is stationed at the hospital, later reported, however, that the wounded man confessed to him that Smallwood had shot him after they had quarreled again over a family matter which had been the cause of trouble before.

Officers went to Smallwood's home, where they found a single-barreled shotgun which, they said, had recently been discharged. Smallwood was not found, and police late Saturday night were searching for him.

NEW YORK PAYS HOMAGE TO HEROES

modest hesitation he told how it was done.

"How did you select the eight men who went with you in the lifeboat?" he was asked. "Did you call for volunteers?"

"Everyone volunteered," he said. "I could have filled 40 boats. I chose eight whom I had worked with and knew.

"The trip to the Florida from the America wasn't so bad, except that we didn't dare to go very close because of the deckload of lumber that might have come tumbling down on us. But we got a line over and the men from the Florida began pulling themselves through the water to us.

Captain Last Rescued.

"Most of them had taken off what clothes the storm had left them so they could swim better. Some of them were badly injured and you could hear them groaning as they crawled along through the waves. We yanked them in and they lay there on the bottom of the boat, exhausted, dazed, silent.

"Captain Favoloro, of the Florida, came last. He seemed reluctant to leave his ship but at last he, too, stepped into the sea and came over. And then the real battle began. The storm was increasing and as the waves got higher my hopes went lower. I really never thought we'd make it."

It was only a 30-foot boat and it had 41 men in it. Manning said that the six oarsmen were unable to make any progress and six of the rescued Italians had to be asked to help. They responded eagerly, though they were spent with days of struggle, and in a little more than an hour the quarter mile between the two steamers was crossed.

In Nick of Time.

"If we had been minutes later," said Manning, "I don't believe we would have made it."

This point in the rescue, Manning said, marked the only instance when anyone showed any signs of being unnerved. A couple of the rescued men leaped from the lifeboat to cargo nets let down the America's side, instead of waiting to be assisted. But they were too weak and fell back, one on top of Manning, injuring his back, and the other across the lifeboat's gunwale.

They were finally all hoisted aboard and then Manning himself started up a ladder. But he was so worn with the struggle of the past two hours that he could not summon energy to pull himself up. He would have fallen into the sea, he said, had not Assistant Engineer King, of the America, dragged him up to the deck, ladder and all.

Met By City Greeters.

"It was all a matter of cooperation," he said. "The Italians did just as they were told and helped at every opportunity and everyone worked together. It was a perfect example of cooperation."

The America was met at quarantine by the city tug Macom with relatives of the heroes and city and diplomatic officials aboard and was hailed all the way up the bay by the whistles of other craft. At its Hoboken pier, Captain Fried and his wife and Manning and his mother were taken off by Police Commissioner Whalen and escorted by motorcycle police to their homes, there to rest until the official welcome ceremonies at city hall on Monday.

Rescue Side Lights

BY LORENA A. HICKOK,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—To mathematics—old-fashioned, prosaic mathematics—the crew of the Italian steamer Florida owe their lives, Captain George Fried said today as he brought them up the bay on the liner America.

His instruments and books having been washed away, Captain Giuseppe Favoloro, of the Florida, was unable to give Captain Fried his position, but he did put on the wireless his "altitude," an observation as to how high in the sky the sun had gone at a given hour. From this information Captain Fried was able to figure out where he was.

"I worked it out from that," Captain Fried said, "and I figured that I should be alongside the Florida at 6 p. m. Wednesday. We arrived at 6:04."

Captain Favoloro chose a typically Latin means of showing Chief Officer Manning's mother his gratitude to her gallant son. He kissed young Manning on the cheek.

"With your son I am now great friends," he said as he was presented to Mrs. Manning. "It is like I have known your son 20 years."

The kiss followed.

Captain Favoloro's greeting to Mrs. Fried was more formal. Very pale, with a bruise on his face and his hand in a sling, and wearing a grey suit presented to him by one of the America's passengers, the young captain of the Florida bowed low over her hand.

"I am very, very happy to meet Mrs. Fried," he said huskily. Mrs. Fried was all sympathy.

He told Mrs. Fried that he hoped to get another ship right away. "I am like a fish out of water when I am on land," he said.

Captain Favoloro is only 33 years old. He has followed the sea since he was 12, and was made a captain five years ago.

"Aren't you tired of welcoming me?" Captain Fried asked Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the mayor's welcoming committee, as they met on the swaying gangplank that led from the Macom into the America.

"I never get tired of welcoming you, Captain Fried," Whalen replied.

"It was a pitiful sight to see that little lifeboat battling her way back to us through that sea Wednesday night," Captain Fried told Commissioner Whalen. "It was a horrible thing to look at. When they finally came alongside, I saw that Manning had the rescued crew packed into the bottom of the boat like sardines. He'd had to pack them down that way for ballast."

"That radio operator on the Florida was a dandy," Captain Fried said. "From the time we got their first S. O. S. he never left his instrument. Whenever we gave him a tick he was right there."

"That radio operator," Munzio di Gangi, turned out to be an exceedingly modest young man.

"No, I was never afraid," he said. "The captain was always right there with me, and we all had faith that we would be saved."

Di Gangi denied reports that there had been disorder among the crew and that they had threatened him.

As the reception committee was boarding the America for the trip to quarantine, Captain Fried's old command, the President Roosevelt, passed her, putting out to sea. With blasts from her whistle, the Roosevelt saluted her former captain. Captain Fried commanded the Roosevelt three years ago when he rescued the 25 men of the sinking British freighter Antinoe.

Other ships paid their tribute to the America during her triumphant journey up the harbor.

Passengers on the America said the launching of the lifeboat from the America last Wednesday night was one of the most solemn scenes they had ever witnessed. In spite of the cold and rain nearly everyone was on deck silently watching.

As the boat went over Captain Fried called out: "Good luck," and Chief Officer Manning replied: "Thanks."

There were no cheers when the little boat came back. The condition of the Florida crew was so miserable, the passengers said, that cheering seemed entirely out of place.

State and Defense Ready for Gallogly Trial

The second of Atlanta's legal battles of the decade opens Tuesday morning before Superior Court Judge Virlyn B. Moore, when Richard Gray (Dick) Gallogly goes on trial for the murder of Willard Smith, slain in a holdup on the night of October 16, 1928. The state charges Gallogly with being an accomplice of George Harsh, condemned to die in the electric chair for the murder of Smith. Gallogly is shown at the upper left and Judge Moore at the upper right. In the center is Solicitor General John A. Boykin, who will prosecute Gallogly, and below are Lowry and Reuben Arnold, noted Atlanta lawyers, who will defend the accused youth. The Fulton county courthouse is in the background.

Spanish Vendetta Claims Lives of Two at Wedding

:: VENGEANCE IS OATH OF FAMILIES ::

Dixon, N. M., January 26.—(AP)—Above the wailings of a grief-stricken Spanish family as two of their men lay dead and another dying, the result of a feud, today arose the cry for revenge upon Juan and Antonio Lovato, whose bullets felled a father and two sons at a wedding dance here Thursday night.

Most of the 400 population of the Dixon vicinity in remote Rio Arriba county, where telephones have yet to penetrate, had gathered for the celebration of a young couple of Dixon.

Celebration of the wedding festivals had hardly started when through the doorway Jesus Medina, 55, the father, received a bullet in the heart, and his sons, Daniels, 26, and Alberto, 28, fell with gun shots in their bodies as the Lovatos settled a family difference of two years' standing.

Daniel had been the best man, the wedding was over and the bridal party, guests had filed to the dance hall for the grand ball, and two dances had passed.

The firing started apparently without warning. Seven or eight shots were fired and the thing was over so quickly that District Attorney Jack Kenney was unable to learn definitely how many men had used guns. There was a wild scramble for safety. Two of the wedding guests were seared by stray bullets.

Daniel died within a few minutes. The Lovatos, District Attorney Kenney said, went to Dixon creek and surrendered to the constable.

They were taken to the New Mexico penitentiary at Santa Fe for safekeeping, and District Attorney Kenney said he probably would hold a preliminary hearing at Dixon next week will actively support the proposal, they declared.

"We feel that the logical thing to do is to merge the two counties in the interest of efficiency, economy and good government," Mr. Saunders said.

"Two DeKalb county grand juries have asked for the merger, declaring it to be the best thing for all concerned, and some action should be taken at the next session of the Georgia legislature looking towards consummation of the proposal. Some of the leading citizens of DeKalb county have voiced themselves as favoring the proposition. There is really no logical objection to the merger plan."

No DeKalb Funds.

Mr. Saunders is chairman of the board of firemasters, which Friday served a notice on DeKalb county officials that portions of DeKalb county lying outside the city limits of Atlanta will not receive fire protection from the Atlanta fire department after February 15.

L. T. Y. Nash, DeKalb county commissioner, declared that under the law, he could not appropriate funds of the county to fire protection and therefore he could not establish a fire district or pay the Atlanta department for its services. In the past the Atlanta department has attempted to protect outlying districts.

Members of the fire board held that restricted funds prevent a continuance of the service.

PLAN TO REAPPORTION HOUSE LOSES GROUND

Measure Loses in Fight for Place on Senate Calendar.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The prospect of senate passage at this session of the bill to reapportion the house membership became less favorable today when the republican steering committee failed to give it a place on the senate calendar in advance of other legislation.

The committee decided upon the following order after the pending 15-cruiser bill has been disposed of:

The bill of Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, to prevent the sale of cotton and grain in future markets.

The proposal of Senator Jones, republican, Washington, to increase the penalties under the prohibition act.

The resolution of Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, proposing a survey for a canal through Nicaragua.

All of these measures are expected to cause considerable debate. The Edge Nicaraguan canal bill has drawn opposition from middle western senators who believe the Panama canal has been detrimental to western commerce, although Senator Edge declared recently that he believed a favorable vote would be obtained with little delay.

Italians Dedicate New Home Here In Brilliant Ball

Color and brilliance conspicuously marked the recent opening ball of Il Circolo Italiano di Atlanta, which dedicated its new quarters, comprising the entire top floor of the Zahner building, at Peachtree and Tenth streets. More than 250 Atlantans, members of the circle and their guests, assembled for the occasion.

A feature of the dedication ceremonies was the presentation of beautiful silk and Italian flags to the society. The American flag was presented by little Miss Emma Griffin Hardman, young daughter of the governor, while the Italian flag was presented by Giovanni Maria Bollati, the tiny daughter of Cavalier Attilio Bollati, the Italian consul to Atlanta.

Cavalier Bollati delivered a brief address on the significance of America and Italy joining hands in token of friendship, the preservation of peace and the advancement of commerce and social welfare. At the conclusion of his remarks he presented Mrs. Hardman with a volume of Roman Art, of beautiful Italian hand workmanship.

An attractive musical program was directed by Emilio Yolpi, vice president of the society, and one of the south's leading maestros. Guido Negri, president of Il Circolo Italiano, and one of the leading Italian citizens of the country, presided at the meeting, which was concluded by a ball.

REUBEN BRAININ, WRITER, TO SPEAK IN ATLANTA TODAY

Reuben Brainin, journalist of the modernistic school who has attained a position of prominence among liberal writers in practically all the capitals of Europe and western Asia, will be in Atlanta today to deliver an address on colonization work in Russia.

In addition to his universal interest in the political and literary fields, Mr. Brainin is a Jewish scholar of note, and has been invited to Atlanta to speak under auspices of the local Jewish Colonization in Russia organization. He will lecture at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Jewish Woman's club. The gathering is open to the public.

While known to the general public as a publicist, author and editor, Mr. Brainin has been a leader among his fellow religionists in many movements of interest to world Jewry. He was co-founder of the first political Zionist body which issued appeal for political action to regain Palestine, he was originator of the Hebrew university in Jerusalem idea, which since has materialized, and is now honorary vice president of the World Zionist organization.

Since inception of the plan, he has been a warm supporter of Jewish colonization work in soviet Russia, which will be the subject of his address here.

FORESTRY LEADERS TO HOLD MEETING IN JACKSONVILLE

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The American Forestry association announced today that its annual meeting would be held at Jacksonville, Fla., February 27 and 28.

George D. Pratt, of New York, president of the association, will preside and speakers will include Roger Babson, the statistician, and Dr. Charles H. Herty, of the Chemical Foundation, New York.

The association said the meeting would mark the first time that a national forestry convention of such a scope has been held in the far south and that it would bring together specialists for the purpose of furthering southern forest conditions.

GEORGIA OCCUPIES SEVENTH PLACE IN ROAD MILEAGE

Georgia now occupies seventh place in total highway mileage, following the completion of the 1928 building program, according to the current issue of Georgia Highways, official publication of the state highway department. The year just past has broken all records for both construction and paving, the magazine states.

GEORGIA TEACHER AND BOY MISSING

loway they saw Chapman join Mrs. Wellon in her automobile last Sunday and drive off toward Atlanta. No word has come from either to friends or relatives since.

Chapman is the son of a farmer, W. C. Chapman, whose antecedents have been residents of Ellaville for three generations. Mrs. Wellon, who lived near Glenn Holly, a settlement five miles away, took up the duties of principal of the Glenn Holly school last September. Chief Holly said Chapman, a tenth grade pupil, probably had not known the teacher before she started to the Glenn Holly school last September.

Sheriff Rigsby broadcast telegrams to police in Georgia and Ohio when Chapman's parents told him they suspected the teacher and pupil of an elopement. He said he had several replies but none of them gave direct information as to the whereabouts of the couple.

U. S. BANKER SAFE AS HYDROPLANE RUNS INTO ROCKS

Athens, January 26.—(AP)—Charles Holder, an American banker of Paris and his daughter escaped injury when an Italian hydroairplane of the Piraeus-Brindisi service hit rocks on the northwest coast of Corfu before dawn today. Two other persons in the plane were killed and two were injured, the second pilot and the telegraph operator being the victims.

Mr. Holder and his daughter were at a hotel in Corfu tonight and they expected to embark on a steamer for Brindisi tomorrow. He had been advised by friends not to take the air trip but had insisted upon going.

The accident was ascribed to a dense fog which led the pilot to descend. He was unable to pick out a suitable landing place and the machine hit the rocks instead of open water. The accident occurred near the famous monastry of Palaiokastrizza.

"HOT DOG" VENDOR IS READY TO AID IN FIGHT ON FLU

West Palm Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Tired of fighting life as a "hot dog" vendor, Bert Miller has offered himself as a specimen to scientists searching for an influenza serum.

His savings lost in unwise transactions during the Florida real estate inflation, the 60-year-old sandwich man has decided he "has nothing left to live for."

"Easy money" lured Miller here several years ago from Flora, Ind., where he had been in business 18 years. But his transactions wer unfortunate, and his savings soon dwindled away.

"Last summer my wife died," Miller said. "I have no children, no one depends on me, and I'm too old now to start making back what I lost. If sacrificing myself will do anything for humanity, I'm willing."

Gov. Johnston Impeachers Balk at Calling Woman Aid, Prominent Figure in Quiz

Confidential Secretary Will Not Be Summoned, Oklahoma City Newspapers Insist.

Oklahoma City, January 26.—(AP)—Showing no abatement of interest in the versatile part played by Mrs. O. O. Hammonds in the administration of Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, whom she has served as confidential secretary, the house of representatives investigating committee today evinced no eagerness to interview her personally.

Although Mrs. Hammond's appeared punctually yesterday at the hour designated by the committee and asked for the privilege of using her own stenographer, in addition to the regular committee clerk, to record her testimony, she was excused and the committee today showed no disposition to recall her.

Committee members would not comment on deductions of local newspapers that she would not be called.

Much of the evidence taken by the committee today centered about the family loyalty of the woman secretary. Her husband, Dr. O. O. Hammonds, is state health commissioner, an appointment of Johnston. Her brother, Reed Scott, has been a salesman for a road machinery company which witnesses testified has enjoyed a flourishing business with the state highway department. Her uncle, James W. Armstrong, an advisor to Johnston, has acted as attorney for a bonding company which underwrote contractors doing business with the highway department.

R. L. Seaman, former secretary of the highway commission, testified today that he once refused to show requisitions for machinery, sent in by divisional engineers, to Scott. Seaman, who was discharged by the commission several months ago, declined to answer the interrogative speculation of a committee attorney that a two weeks absence of Mrs. Hammonds from the governor's office just preceding his discharge might have been a "strike on the woman secretary's part to force his dismissal.

Seaman said the highway commission commended him for his work after it discharged him.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings, but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-1817 W. Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. They also need men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer.—(adv.)

ALUMNI EDITION OF MERCER CLUSTER NOW ON CAMPUS

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The first issue of the alumni edition of the Mercer Cluster, student newspaper, under the editorship of Fred Shaw, of Tifton, appeared on the campus yesterday.

The alumni section contained articles about Courtland Gilbert, of Atlanta, writer for the United News; Herbert Bradshaw, Norman Felder, I. E. Norman and June Ellis, all of Waycross; Wiley Jordan, of Macon; Henry Jones, editor of the Okemah (Okla.) Daily News; Malcolm M. Johnson, formerly a reporter of the Macon Telegraph and now on the staff of the New York Sun, and Dr. John G. Harrison, professor of philosophy at Mercer and an alumnus of the university.

WIFE OF OBREGON ASSASSIN GIVES BIRTH TO A SON

Mexico City, January 26.—(AP)—The wife of Jose De Leon Toral today gave birth to a son. The father, who assassinated President-elect Obregon last July, has an appeal now pending in the supreme court for an order to prevent the death sentence being carried out upon him.

Louise Johnson, of Philadelphia, were married here today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Hyman. The ceremony was performed by Dr. N. D. Wilson, pastor of Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, south, in the presence of the immediate household.

After a luncheon to which a few intimate friends were invited the couple left for a motor tour to southern resort cities.

Mrs. Van Valkenburg for 17 years was head of the bureau of nurses for the division of medical inspection for the Philadelphia board of education.

Mr. Van Valkenburg was editor and publisher of the Philadelphia North American for 30 years. When the paper was sold to the Public Ledger he retired from active newspaper work and moved to his country estate near Wellsboro, Pa.

I. C. C. TO ASK COURT FOR CARGO COAL RULE

Test of Right To Control Situation Will Be Made Soon.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Although danger of an immediate rate war between northern and southern railroads on cargo coal for lake ports was temporarily ended recently by an agreement between them, the interstate commerce commission has completed arrangements to test out in the supreme court its right to control the situation.

The commission filed today with the court a brief in a case it instituted to set aside an order of a federal court at Charleston, W. Va., prohibiting it from compelling the southern carriers to cancel a reduction of 20 cents in their rates.

Since the decision in the lower court the carriers have agreed upon rates which gives the northern railroads an advantage of 35 cents per ton in rates over their southern competitors. This is 10 cents a ton less than the commission would enforce.

The commission declared that when it prohibited the southern carriers from reducing their rates 20 cents a ton to meet a reduction of 20 cents a ton which it had authorized the northern carriers to make, its action was not in recognition of the economic advantages of the southern coal fields and their ability to produce cheaper than the northern coal fields. It asserted the commission had "expressly declared that it was without power to regulate or equalize industrial conditions under the guise of regulating rates."

The southern carriers failed to show that their earnings warranted the proposed reduction, the brief said. Emphasis was placed upon the injury which the commission said the Baltimore and Ohio, the Pennsylvania and other northern carriers would suffer from the proposed reduction.

In summarizing the argument, it was stated that the commission had the power to make the order which the federal court had set aside and that the court had exceeded its jurisdiction in substituting its own judgment for that of the commission.

OUTLAWS BLAMED AS FOUR BRAZILIAN SOLDIERS ARE SLAIN

Rio de Janeiro, January 26.—(AP)—War against outlaws was the explanation given in a government statement today referring to newspaper dispatches from Asuncion saying that Paraguayan civilians had been attacked by Brazilian troops.

The newspaper dispatches said that four Brazilian soldiers were killed in the encounter but no direct word was received in Rio Janeiro of any casualties.

The government statement said that the band of outlaws was composed of both Paraguayans and Brazilians in that state of Matto Grosso. Such bands are not uncommon in the sparsely settled regions and frequently clash with the authorities.

PECULIAR HOLE IN TRAIN TICKET CLUE IN KILLING

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The peculiar hole left in a commutation ticket by a conductor's punch became a factor today in the investigation of the Laura Buchholz slaying.

Police had arrested Leonard Mitchell, a negro, and said several circumstances led them to believe he may have had knowledge of how the 26-year-old clerk was clubbed to death near her home in Blue Island Wednesday night.

L. Postweiler, conductor on the train which carried Miss Buchholz from Chicago to Blue Island the night she was slain, identified Mitchell as having been a passenger.

"He's got a ticket in his pocket," the conductor said. "Let me see it."

The ticket was produced. "That's my punch," the conductor said, explaining that each conductor's punch makes a different mark.

Police said parts of Mitchell's account of his whereabouts the past several days were contradictory.

ROMANCE ENDED, MRS. M'CORMICK IS GOING TO RENO

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner said today that Mrs. Leander J. McCormick has taken a residence at Reno, Nev., but that she had declined to say whether it was for the purpose of obtaining a divorce.

Mrs. McCormick, distinguished for her titian beauty, has been a leader of Chicago Gold Coast and Lake Forest society since her debut as the youngest of three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy. Her marriage in November, 1917, to the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Hamilton McCormick was a war time society event.

When Captain McCormick returned from Europe in 1919, he went to the home of his parents, and both families said the couple had separated. There was a reconciliation in 1920.

Mr. McCormick, who is understood to be in Europe, is a brother of Allister McCormick.

SMARTLY DRESSED GIRL, SHOT THREE TIMES, FOUND DEAD

Hingham, Mass., January 26.—(United News.)—The body of an attractive young woman, excellently dressed, was found late today on the Brewer estate.

She had been shot three times in the head and authorities believed she had been dead at least two days. Her body was covered with snow and there was a pool of blood nearby. No weapon was found but a cartridge was found close by the girl's body.

Czecho-Slovakia is the second of the 15 original signatory nations to complete ratification of the treaty.

HEALTH EXPOSITION OPENS HERE APRIL 8

With the appointment of general committee for the Atlanta good health exposition by President Jonathan H. Woody, of the junior chamber of commerce, everything is in readiness for swinging into action Monday in preparation for the big affair, which will be staged in the city auditorium the week of April 8, it was announced from exposition headquarters in the chamber of commerce building. The exposition and good health educational campaign which will accompany it, is expected to be the biggest and most important movement of this kind ever undertaken, being statewide in its scope and marking the beginning of a national movement in the interests of better health and living standards.

The general exposition committee is headed by First Vice President Joe W. Ray, of the junior chamber, as chairman and consists of Cyril F. Dieter, vice president; Frank Shaw, treasurer; George Yancey, secretary; Boyd White, John N. Armour, Luther S. Turner and Frank Hall, all of whom have taken leading parts in the activities of the junior chamber that enabled the Atlanta aggregation to win four out of five cups at the last national convention and giving it the place of honor among the junior chambers of the United States for its civic activities and leadership.

Baby Show to Feature.

One of the outstanding features of the good health exposition will be the baby show to be made a part of the program. The baby show will be given a prominent part in the exposition in an effort to arouse greater interest in healthier and finer babies and thousands of youngsters from Atlanta and other parts of the state are expected to be entered in the contest, which is expected to be one of the prettiest and most appealing spectacles ever seen in Atlanta.

Another big feature, from a purely entertainment standpoint, will be the fashion revue, which will have a place on the entertainment program. This feature will combine color, art, grace and beauty in one gorgeous spectacle and will serve to balance off a program intended to be both educational and entertaining. Attention will be paid to the beauty of the numerous models as well as the beauty of the costumes, in other words, as Chairman Ray expressed it.

"There will be beautiful girls to be glorified and beautiful clothes to glorify them."

The entertainment part of the program will also include a number of other features, which will be announced later, it was stated.

The purpose of the good health movement, as stated by those in charge of preparations, is to arouse greater interest in knowledge and matters pertaining to the health of the nation, with the aim of preventing much of the sickness that now prevails and thus lengthening life. It is conceded by medical authorities, it was pointed out, that practically all human ails can be avoided or prevented simply by putting into daily practice the knowledge given to the world in recent years by science, and it is the purpose of this movement to place this knowledge before everyone and urge its application in dialy life.

Typhoid Terror Gone.

As examples of the truth of this, it was pointed out that typhoid fever, once a dreaded scourge, was robbed of its terror when science discovered the germ that causes it and gradually taught the people how to avoid it by destroying flies (carriers of the germ) being careful about food and water supplies. Later when anti-typhoid serum was perfected, science added another victory to its credit.

Yellow fever, another bygone terror of the human race, was practically wiped out when science finally discovered that the germ was carried by a certain species of mosquito, and by the mosquito alone. The remedy was simple, and consisted in getting rid of the mosquito.

So it is with practically all diseases. There is a cause and a preventative for almost everything, even common colds, but nothing can be accomplished, it was pointed out, without the cooperation of every man, woman and child. For this reason it is urged by leaders in the movement that everyone take a genuine interest in the good health movement, follow its activities closely and help to reduce unnecessary sickness and suffering, as well as add a few more years to the present average lifetime.

MALARIA CONTROL TO BE STUDIED AT ALBANY MEET

Albany, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Taking the initiative in what state board of health officials hope will be a statewide movement for malaria control, the Dougherty county board of health today recommended that a program of control advocated by the United States public health service be inaugurated, and called on the board of county commissioners to levy any tax necessary to carry on the work.

Dr. L. L. Williams, assistant surgeon general of the United States public health service, presented to the board a plan for county control work and offered to have government experts supervise the work for a year. L. E. Clarkson, chief sanitary engineer of the state board of health, offered full cooperation of that body.

A mass meeting of Albany citizens earlier in the week had called for a tax levy to provide funds for malaria eradication, and the health board meeting today was attended by 50 business and professional leaders who endorsed the action taken.

Alabama Glee Club Will Give Concert At Piedmont College

Demorest, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The University of Alabama Glee club, composed of 30 male voices and directed by Tom Garner, will give a concert at Piedmont college, February 6, in the college auditorium at 8 p. m.

The Crimson Warblers will stop over here en route to Greenville, S. C., where they will participate in the southern intercollegiate glee contest. They won second place last year, and this year, winning out in preliminaries held in Mississipi, Louisiana and Alabama. The winners of the contest in Greenville will entrain for New York city, where the finals for America will be held. The winners of the New York finals will then go for an extended trip in Europe.

SON OF OIL KING MARRIES HEIRESS; SOCIETY ATTENDS

Cleveland, January 26.—(AP)—Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr., youngest member of the family of Colonel Henry P. Rogers, oil multimillionaire, and Miss Virginia Lincoln, daughter of Dr. William R. Lincoln, wealthy Cleveland physician, were married here late today at the First Unitarian church.

Included in the guests were Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Sr., Millicent Rogers Ramos, sister of the younger Rogers, and the former Countess Salm, and her husband, Arturo Ramos; besides other society leaders.

Rogers, a graduate of Oxford university, met his bride while working as a mechanic in an electric plant here. Miss Lincoln was a student and collector with the Gage galleries.

Abandon N. Y. Flight.

Para, Brazil, January 26.—(AP)—President Leguia, of Peru, has ordered the Peruvian good-will fliers, Carlos Martinez de Pinillos, and Lieutenant Carlos Zagarra, to return to Lima following the same route which they used in their flight from the Peruvian capital to Para. The orders will make it necessary for the two fliers to abandon their hope of ending the trip in New York.

BILL SETS COMPROMISE IN FAILURES OF BANKS

George Proposes Shareholders Be Liable for Part of Losses.

Washington, January 26.—(By Staff Correspondent.)—Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, laid before the upper chamber today a bill authorizing receivers of national banks to accept a compromise from shareholders as to liability in cases of national bank failures.

The present law on the subject has never been clearly defined with the result that it has become the set policy of the comptroller general to decline such a compromise prior to judgment in bankruptcy.

Senator George explained that his bill is the outgrowth of condition in south Georgia following the failure of national banks there. He said it was intended to avoid the multiplicity of suits over liability of stockholders, which often result in no benefit either to depositors or creditors.

"If judgments are obtained against the shareholders," he said, "and their goods and chattels reduced to cash the consequence is often the complete destruction of their business and yet at the same time no good is accomplished; for the amount obtained finally is, in many cases, practically nil. By a revision of the present statutes in a manner to give the comptroller general and national bank receivers greater power of compromise an improvement in the general situation should be accomplished."

KABUL NOW MENACED BY JALALABAD TRIBES

Habibullah Khan Is Fighting Desperately To Retain His Throne.

Moscow, January 26.—(AP)—Kabul was menaced today by the Jalalabad tribes. Habibullah Khan was fighting desperately to retain his seat upon the throne which he ascended scarcely more than a week ago.

The Jalalabad forces were under the leadership of Alliajmethan (presumably Ali Ahmed Khan, former governor of Kabul and one time ally of former King Amanullah.) Habibullah sent an advance guard to deal with this threat to his reign. The two forces fought a pitched battle near the summit of Khakijevar and the king's forces were routed, fleeing precipitantly toward Kabul.

Following up this advantage, the main Jalalabad force reached Jegdalik, 30 miles from Kabul on one of the main routes. They sent out a flanking column which crossed the region of the Tarao and attacked Jebulserap. This created a new menace to the north of the capital.

To the south of Kabul the population of the fertile Logar river valley has not submitted to the new government and in this lies a possible further threat to Habibullah.

The soviet foreign office today denied reports that Leon Trotzky had an army under him near the Afghan border characterizing the reports as sheer nonsense.

Mohammed Nadir Khan is willing to return to Afghanistan and attempt to rule from the troubled throne "despite anything" if called by popular vote.

Nadir, who has been occupying a villa near Nice, France, which was formerly the residence of Frank Harris, Irish-American writer, has been proposed by some of his countrymen as possibly a satisfactory ruler of the Afghans.

Second Attempt Made To "Crash" U. S. Pen By Breaking Window

Why people pick on the windows at the United States postoffice in endeavoring to obtain the position of free boarders with Uncle Sam has not yet been fully determined, but the fact remains that just such an incident came to light for the second time Saturday afternoon, with the arrest of George Ethridge, 56, of 1140 North avenue, N. E., who was detained by Officers V. H. Whitley and T. C. Watkins for hurling a bottle through one of the postoffice windows. He told the officers that he wanted to get into the pen for the winter, it was reported, and he is being held at the police station in default of $2,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. The case has been set for a hearing before Recorder Murphy M. Holloway Monday.

A similar procedure was attempted approximately a year ago by one Lawrence Aber, who attempted to crash the pen gates by smashing a postoffice window with a crutch.

SHAKEUP HITS 30 IN FLORIDA MOTOR VEHICLE BUREAU

Tallahassee, Fla., January 26.—(AP) The state motor vehicle department underwent a sharp reorganization today.

D. B. Pinkston, appointed by Governor Carlton yesterday to succeed W. F. Allen, who resigned, announced that 30 employees of the department had been suspended and that other requests contained in a letter received by him from the chief executive, asking revisions in the bureau's operation would be carried out.

The announcement by Mr. Pinkston came simultaneously with an exchange of letters between the governor and Mr. Allen, in which the retiring commissioner tended a formal written resignation and the chief executive accepted it.

B'NAI B'RITH SESSION WILL OPEN TONIGHT

Louis Marshall Will Be Chief Speaker at First Meeting.

Increasing interest in the fifth district convention of the B'nai B'rith, scheduled to open at 8 o'clock tonight, in the temple auditorium of the Hebrew Benevolent congregation, at the corner of Pryor and Richardson streets, has been revealed since announcement that Louis Marshall, renowned Jewish leader, would visit Atlanta to address the opening session, it was reported Saturday by J. N. Reisman, general chairman of the convention.

The local committee will do all in its power to accommodate those who wish to hear Mr. Marshall at the temple, Chairman Reisman stated. The doors will be opened at 7:30 p. m., and the public will be welcome as long as there are seats.

MRS. MILTON KLEIN.
Chairman Ladies' Committee.

The convention will continue for three days, including the opening business session at 10 o'clock Monday morning at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel; reception at 2 o'clock in the afternoon for visiting ladies; banquet and ball at 8 o'clock Monday night; second business session at 10 a. m. Tuesday and a sight-seeing trip of points of interest in the afternoon.

Committees appointed to handle details of the convention include the orphan home committee, Victor H. Kreigshaber, chairman; ways and means committee, Joseph B. Wolfe, chairman; reception and arrangements, Hyman S. Jacobs, chairman; program committee, H. A. Alexander, chairman.

Mrs. Milton Klein has been appointed chairman of the special ladies' committee, to handle arrangements for the large number of women visitors to the convention. Mrs. J. N. Reisman is vice chairman.

SUTTON PRAISES WORK OF PUPILS IN HEALTH DRIVE

Expressing gratification over the growing perfection of teeth and health among the school children of Atlanta, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of public schools, Saturday addressed a letter to the girls and boys of the city urging their continued care in this regard.

Superintendent Sutton's message follows:

My Dear Boys and Girls:

These warm January days make us know that February and Valentine's day are on the way. Hundreds and thousands of you were thoughtful enough to give me a Christmas present of your perfect teeth and health certificates. I wish to ask another favor of you, and that is that every boy and girl in the entire system may have their health certificate and dental certificate by Valentine's day. I think if you could read my heart you would find written on it the desire that every boy and every girl in the Atlanta school system would measure up to a perfectly healthy standard of living; that each of you would have a scholarship record commensurate with your ability and that each of you would maintain in character those high standards which would make you useful men and women.

So I am writing today to ask that you will commence to think of Valentine's day and to think of the big red heart that you are going to send me with the good news written on it that every child in your grade has his health certificate, his teeth certificate, that he is up to standard in weight and that his scholarship is beyond the passing grade. This is my message for the week. Will you not try to make it a reality by February 14?

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

NEWLY-CREATED FARM CONGRESS WIDELY PRAISED

Responses from all sections of the south are pouring into the offices of the newly-established American Chamber of Agriculture as a result of invitations broadcast to the farm and business interests of this section for the first agricultural congress to convene here on Thursday, according to announcement Saturday by W. C. Chase, executive vice president and secretary of the agricultural congress movement.

While the program for the congress is still on a tentative basis, permanent arrangements are expected to be completed early in the week, Mr. Chase said. The congress, which marks the first important action of the American Chamber of Agriculture, will be featured by address of leading citizens of the country and election of permanent officers of the chamber.

The heavy responses to the invitations sent out indicate the widespread interest in the movement, Mr. Chase pointed out. The congress will continue for three days, opening with Richard B. Russell, chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia, presiding.

OTTO T. BRANNARD, BANKER, LEAVES YALE $2,100,000

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Otto T. Bannard, banker, who died recently at sea, left $2,100,000 of a $5,000,000 estate to Yale university, his alma mater, under the terms of his will filed for probate today.

Among the relatives and friends who are to receive shares of the estate are Hubbard Francis Bannard, a nephew, San Francisco, Calif.; Louis O. Bannard, nephew, Sawtell, Calif.; Frederick Raymond Bannard, nephew, Sawtell, Calif.; Elizabeth Hadhams Pearson, Atlanta; Helen Bannard, sister-in-law, Sawtell, Calif., and Ephriam W. Dickson, Omaha.

Moultrie Negro Must Die For Burt Murder

Moultrie, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—James Crumady, negro, must die in the electric chair February 22 for the murder of George Burt, young merchant, whose charred body was found in the ruins of his store following a fire last October.

After evidence had been presented indicating that Crumady had gone to the store to "see a fellow" shortly before the fire occurred, the case was given to the jury. It was stated that the negro was armed. The jury started its deliberations last night and a verdict of guilty was returned this morning.

A heavy guard was on duty throughout the one-day trial, but there was no disorder.

JOHN COOLIDGE MAY BE UNABLE TO VISIT FIANCEE

Miami Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Only a possibility remained tonight that John Coolidge would be able to visit his fiancee, Miss Florence Trumbull, during her Miami Beach visit with her parents, Governor and Mrs. Trumbull, of Connecticut.

Miss Trumbull had expected that John would arrive here today following her arrival with her parents and Mrs. and Mrs. Herman Dann, from St. Petersburg last night, but it was understood that John's duties as a "railroad man" had prevented this.

Governor Trumbull said today that he and his party expect to return to St. Petersburg next week prior to his departure Friday for his home to prepare for a session of the legislature.

He was asked if he expected to exercise his license as an airplane pilot while here, but declared that he wanted to see horse racing at Hialeah track before he indulged in the other mode of entertainment.

Governor Trumbull is the only governor who is a licensed plane pilot.

MORE PUBLICITY URGED IN ACTION ON NOMINATIONS

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Senator Jones, of Washington, the republican whip, gave notice today that he would attempt to have more publicity attend consideration of nominations by the senate.

The senator said he would propose that all executive nominations be considered in open session unless two-thirds of the senate voted to close the doors. Under the present rules a two-thirds vote is necessary to order open sessions.

A number of senators complained about the recent consideration of the nomination of Roy O. West as secretary of the interior, in executive session.

H. W. ROHRER NAMED Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY

Former Louisville Man Has Had Years of Experience in Association Work.

H. W. Rohrer, formerly of Louisville, has been chosen state secretary of the Young Men's Christian association for Georgia, Eugene R. Black, chairman of the state committee, announced Saturday. The new secretary already has arrived in Atlanta and Monday will assume charge of the association's offices in the Thrower building.

H. W. ROHRER.

Mr. Rohrer has had many years experience in Y. M. C. A. work and is said to be exceptionally well-fitted for his present task, both by endowment and training. A native of Ohio, he is a graduate of Juniata college and of the University of Pennsylvania and began his Y. M. C. A. experience as president of the college association. After graduation he served as director of instruction of the West Philadelphia Y. M. C. A., and then became general secretary at Ardmore, Pa. From that position he was called to Kentucky to become district Y. M. C. A. secretary and then state secretary of city and railroad work. From each of these positions he comes highly recommended as an able leader.

Mr. Rohrer also is a noted churchman—a Southern Baptist, active in Sunday school and church work.

NEW OFFICE OPENED

Baker Perkins Co., Machinery Makers, Come Into South.

Establishment in Atlanta of the district office of the Baker Perkins company, Inc., manufacturers of bakery machinery and ovens, was announced Saturday by the industrial bureau of the chamber of commerce. The general offices and factory of the company are located in Saginaw, Mich., and the local headquarters is in the Healey building.

The Atlanta office is in charge of W. I. McDonald, who has been in actual contact with the southern territory previous to the establishment of the local office.

DR. BYRNES NAMED HEAD OF RED CROSS

Dean of Atlanta-Southern Dental College Made Board Chairman.

Dr. Ralph R. Byrnes, executive dean of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college, and a prominent business man and clubman, has been named chairman of the board of directors of the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross, it was announced Saturday.

George A. Bland is the new vice chairman; Miss Cleveland Dahner, secretary, and Henry W. Davis, treasurer.

Dr. Byrnes announces the following members of the board to serve with him on the executive committee: Herbert N. Hutchinson, George K. Selden, George A. Bland, and C. A. Rauschenberg.

Came Here in 1920.

Dr. Byrnes came to Atlanta in 1920, and since his residence here he has identifed himself with the progress of the city. He is an alumnus of Vanderbilt university, and moved to Atlanta from Richmond, Va., in which city he was in charge of the school of dentistry, Medical College of Virginia. At various times during his professional career he has also held important posts in the business world, having been president of the Virginia Casualty company, director of the Central National bank, Central Trust company and of Bellevue Park, Inc., all of Richmond, Va.

He is the author of scores of articles on dental and accounting subjects. In recognition of his services to the dental profession, in 1922 he was made a Fellow of the American College of Dentists, is an honorary member of many state societies, and is at the present time supreme worthy master of Delta Sigma Delta international Greek letter fraternity. In Atlanta he is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary, Capital City, Druid Hills Golf club, and is prominent in Masonic circles. Although Dr. Byrnes was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, most of his life has been spent in Georgia, he being a resident of Savannah for a number of years.

Chapter's Work Outstanding.

According to Miss Ruth Sheafe, executive secretary of the Atlanta chapter, the work of the Atlanta chapter for the past year has been outstanding. The major concern of the local chapter is the care of the disabled, compensable veterans of the world war. During 1928 the Red Cross here has been instrumental in obtaining from the veterans' bureau hospitalization and hospital pay for numberless veterans who for reasons of disability and unfamiliarity with government routine have been unable to prosecute their just claims. This feature of Red Cross activity is called "home service."

Another major project of the Atlanta Red Cross chapter is the disaster relief program. During 1928 remarkable results were accomplished, especially during the Florida disaster. The chapter raised $51,000 to meet the emergencies of that disastrous event, and over 300 cases of clothing, in excellent condition, were sent to the storm area, each case containing from 300 to 1,200 garments. In addition the Red Cross here raised $750 by the sale of certain articles of clothing, originally intended for distribution in the tropics, this amount supplementing the $51,000 previously sent to the storm area. The Atlanta chapter made the best showing of any of the Red Cross chapters in the south during the Florida disaster, and it has been complimented by high officials of the national Red Cross for its work during that time.

Other Activities Pushed.

Other activities of the Red Cross which are being vigorously prosecuted here, and which accomplished exceptional results during the past year, are concerned with first aid service, home hygiene for the care of the sick (a course in this subject being conducted at the present time in the Red Cross building here), the Junior Red Cross, with an enrollment of 40,000 school children; the motor corps, which, in time of distress, collects and distributes food and clothing; the hospital entertainment committee, which gives an entertainment once a week at hospital 48, and instruction for the blind.

One of the most important accomplishments of the local chapter during the past year was the inauguration of a milk station at the Egleston Memorial hospital, for the benefit of premature infants. Mother's milk is collected twice a day from maternity patients, is thoroughly tested, prepared, and is sold at the hospital, for an exceedingly small cost, and in many instances to mothers of Atlanta, with premature infants. As a result of this unique and beneficial service during 1928 it is reported by Red Cross authorities that the lives of at least 12 infants were saved during the past year.

332 Families Aided.

The Atlanta chapter is financed by the Community Chest. The Red Cross officials here report that during 1928 332 families received material relief, 1,241 visits to homes were made, and 1,945 office interviews were held with applicants receiving benefits at the hands of the local chapter.

Following are the chapter's directors: Dr. R. R. Byrnes, George Bland, H. W. Davis, Miss Cleveland Zahner, Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, Mrs. William Rawling, Mrs. J. E. Sommerfield, George K. Selden, Mrs. A. H. Latham, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Miss Jane Van de Vrede, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., Mrs. Spencer R. Atkinson, Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, Mrs. Marcus Beck, Mrs. Paul Seydell, Herbert N. Hutchinson, G. H. Phillips, Robert S. Parker, Dr. David Marx, Rev. N. R. H. Moor, Dr. M. Hines Roberts, Chris A. Rauschenberg, John K. Ottley, Jr., Frank B. Saunders, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale, Robert G. Stephens, Edward L. Pugh, Elfred S. Papy, W. L. Percy and John M. Slaton, Jr.

"Sargon Is Wonderful—There's No Doubt About That," Says Well-Known Atlanta Railroad Man.

"Since my return from the World War I have hardly known what a well day was, and my condition was steadily getting worse until I began taking the Sargon treatment. This wonderful medicine has made a new man out of me, and I feel that the luckiest day I ever had was when I found Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills," said E. A. Adams of 836 Dixie avenue, Atlanta, recently.

E. A. ADAMS

"Mr. Adams is in the employ of the Atlanta Joint Terminals, is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the Masons and the Presbyterian church.

"About three years ago my condition began to grow worse," continued Mr. Adams. "I had reached a point where I could not eat anything without suffering with indigestion. I was troubled greatly with gas, bloating and dizzy spells. Frequently my food would not stay on my stomach, and I was so nervous I could not get a good night's sleep. The misery that I would go through was awful, and I was not able to retain enough food and get enough sleep to keep up my strength. I was also losing weight, and a man who has my kind of work to do can not keep going long with such a condition of health.

"I cannot say too much for Sargon. When I started taking it I only weighed 132 pounds. I have only taken two bottles and have gained four pounds, and the aches and pains that bothered me so much are gone. I can eat anything I want without it hurting me in any way. And sleep! Why, I sleep fine and wake up in the morning feeling as good as I used to when I was a boy. That certainly is worth a great deal to a fellow, who before taking Sargon, would roll and toss most of the night and get up feeling as tired as when he went to bed.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills are the best laxative I have ever taken. They cause no sickness and bring about a perfect bowel movement. I started with three pills at a time, but now I need only one and they keep me as regular as a clock. The Sargon treatment is wonderful; there's no doubt about that."

Scores of people are calling daily at Jacobs' main store, 6 and 8 Marietta street, where a special representative of the Sargon laboratories has established headquarters and is explaining the merits of the celebrated medicines, Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills, which may also be obtained at the other Jacobs' stores all over Atlanta. —(adv.)

VENABLE SUIT ASKS RECOVERY OF TITLE

the purpose of recovering said property, in order that it may be re-dedicated to its original purpose and that national interest in the same may be rehabilitated."

G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association, who is in New York on a business trip, was quoted in a press dispatch from that city Saturday night as denying the charge of extravagance and insolvency brought against the association. Mr. Willis was quoted as saying that allegations of insolvency "against an association backed by the united south" were "ridiculous." He also defended, according to the dispatch, the statue of Lee which has been carved upon the mountain side. "Lee's nearest relatives declare it a good likeness," Mr. Willis was quoted as saying.

Coincident with the filing of the suit by John I. Kelley and James A. Branch, as attorneys for the plaintiffs, S. H. Venable gave out a statement declaring that in return for the donation of the necessary space on the mountain and his own time and at least $10,000 of his own funds to the monument, "we have received nothing except heart-aches and the sad spectacle of seeing a noble conception perish through waste and mismanagement."

The Venables have seen the side of the mountain and the natural beauty of its contour, along which Lee would have led his men in imperishable granite, blown away until it has been reduced to a scar, according to the statement.

S. H. Venable's Statement.

Mr. Venable's statement follows:

"In order that Atlanta, the south and the nation may not be further discredited by the shameful waste and mismanagement of public donations to the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association for the carving of a monument to the heroes of the Confederacy, we are bringing suit for the recovery of the Stone Mountain property, in accordance with the reversionary clauses in our deed of 1916. This action is prompted by the sole purpose of enabling the public to carry the monument to completion.

"With the written understanding that the association would carve within a period of twelve years a gigantic panorama consisting of five groups of colossal sculpture, we deeded the property in 1916. The first or central group was to consist of seven figures on horseback, the second and third groups were each to represent a section of infantry, the fourth, a group of cavalry, the fifth a group of artillery. The total length of the entire panorama was to be approximately 1,200 feet and the height of the central group was to be approximately 200 feet. The association recognized that the central group could be completed within three years at a cost of $250,000 and actually entered into a contract to that effect.

Statement by Auditors.

"Inasmuch as the association has repeatedly made the statement that its failure to complete the monument and its being forced to suspend all work was due to the fact that interminable controversy had made it impossible to get funds with which to carry on its operation, the attention of the public is called to the statement of the income and expenses of the association for the three years ended March 31, 1928, as tabulated in the audit of March 31, 1928, by Peat, Marwick Mitchell and company. This audit has been timorously withheld from the public.

"The statement shows the total income of the association for those three years to have been $877,235.71, or more than three times enough to have completed the central group. The statement of expenses for the same three years shows $650,242.45 to have been spent for things other than carving. Among items of expense are the following:

"Salaries	$223,806.82
"Traveling	73,014.45
"Campaign expenses for individuals	57,065.81
"Publicity	54,462.14
"Telephone and telegraph	20,765.65
"Postage	18,043.37
"Office and supplies	18,436.63
"Rent	12,391.65
"Auditing (not intended for public to see)	7,969.02
Parenthesis mine.
"Commissions	35,604.90
"Entertainment	10,427.96
"Legal	3,665.48
"Gifts	1,630.55
"Souvenirs	13,056.78
"Automobile expenses	2,129.30
"Unveiling expenses	1,998.59
"Miscellaneous	9,738.07

Work Discontinued.

"Is it any wonder that the association was forced to discontinue all work on the mountain in May of last year on account of the lack of funds with which to meet its payrolls and current expenses?

"In view of these stubborn facts, is it surprising that the association tried to palm off on the state of Georgia, during the last session of the general assembly, the responsibility for the building of the monument? The legislature wisely refused to become responsible for the money that had been squandered and wasted and the association was soon forced to suspend all work on the mountain.

"In donating this property to the association, we were actuated by the patriotic desire of seeing a monument carved on the mountain which would forever enshrine in its eternal granite, the likenesses of those immortal heroes of the Confederacy whose glory belongs to history and to the ages. In addition to donating my share of the necessary space on the mountain, I gave unsparingly of my time and contributed at least $10,000 toward the expense of the monument.

Mismanagement Charged.

"In return we have received nothing except heart-aches and the sad spectacle of seeing a noble conception perish through waste and mismanagement. We have seen the side of the mountain and the natural beauty of its contour, along which Lee would have led his men in imperishable granite, blown away until it has been reduced to a scar. We have seen the scale of the monument decreased to about two-thirds of its original size and an uncompleted figure of Lee on horseback carved in the face of the mountain is all there is to show for more than twelve years of time and an expenditure of approximately one and a half million dollars.

"Under the circumstances, there is nothing left for us to do, except to insist upon a forfeiture of the property as provided in our deeds. The work already done will not be disturbed but upon a recovery of the property, we yet hope, under proper management, to see a monument completed as originally planned and in accordance with our deed.

"(Signed.) S. H. VENABLE."

Owned By Venables.

The petition seeks to show that prior to the conveyance to the defendant, S. H. Venable owned fee simple title to one-half interest in the property, while Coribe Venable Orme (then Kellogg) and Robert Venable Roper each owned a quarter interest, in accordance with the devises of the will of their father, W. H. Venable.

The action claims that the reversionary clauses in the deeds of April and June of 1916 executed to the defendant association by the plaintiffs have been breached, the clauses dealing chiefly with the time limit of 12 years set for the completion of the monument. Conditions which the plaintiffs allege the defendants have violated were as follows, according to the petition: that no part of the property should be used for any commercial purposes, nor should any stone be quarried therefrom for the purpose of financial gain to any person; grantee or its assigns should within 12 years from the date of the execution of the deeds cause to be carved in the side of the mountain a tomb to the memory of the late W. H. Venable, this memorial to be among the first to be carved; grantee or its assigns should carve upon the face of the mountain a permanent memorial to be of the extent and according to the general character and plans contemplated by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, to be completed within 12 years; that the property should never be used except for the purpose of the memorial.

Clauses Violated Claim.

The plaintiffs seek to show that the 12 years specified have expired since the execution and delivery of the deeds to the defendant, and that the main portion of the permanent memorial, as proposed to be constructed, has not been finished nor has the permanent memorial been completed. Further, the petitioners seek to show that the defendant has failed to complete or finish a single figure of the permanent memorial. It is alleged by the plaintiff, Robert Venable Roper, that the defendant has "continuously and persistently used said property for commercial purposes by vending for profit various articles of merchandise such as soft drinks, cigars, candies, cigarettes, post cards and the like," and that the defendant has wholly neglected and failed to carve a tomb to the memory of his father, W. H. Venable, within 12 years.

The petition recites that, according to the audit of the defendant's affairs made by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and company up to March 31, 1928, the defendant had spent $506,720.51 for salaries, traveling expenses, publicity, telephoning and telegraphing, postage, printing, stationery and office supplies, and $129,788.51 for commissions, entertainments, attorneys' fees, campaigning and gifts, including Christmas gifts for employees, while $18,788.51 was spent by the president of the association as traveling expenses during the three years preceding the date of the audit.

Judgment against the defendant for the recovery of the property and return of the undivided interests of the plaintiffs is asked in the suit. Attached to the petition are the deeds executed by the plaintiffs to the defendant.

G. F. WILLIS DENIES WASTE, INSOLVENCY.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association, tonight denied charges of extravagance and insolvency brought against the association in a suit in Decatur, Ga., today.

Mr. Willis said that allegations of insolvency against an association backed by the united south were "ridiculous." He also denied that the figure now carved on the mountain bears no resemblance to General Lee.

"Lee's nearest surviving relatives declare it a good likeness," he said.

"Possibly to an uninformed observer, the work done on the mountain to date does seem to represent an excessive sum of money," Mr. Willis said, and continued, "the first sculptor employed by the association, after spending a great deal of money and time in preparing models, laying out the work and partially executing one figure on the mountain became involved in various controversies, which ended in his suddenly destroying his models and leaving the state."

(He referred to Gutzom Borglum).

New Models Required.

"Following this it was necessary to contract with the present sculptor, Augustus Lukeman," Mr. Willis continued. "It was also necessary to spend a great deal of money making new models, laying out the work and removing the partially completed figure from the mountain."

As to the charges that the "mutilated bust" not on the mountain bears no resemblance to General Lee, Mr. Willis said, "this opinion, I am glad to say, is shared only by Mr. Venable and a small partisan group. As a matter of fact, some of the world's foremost sculptors have pronounced the Lukeman design one of the greatest masterpieces in the modern world of art. This opinion is also shared by General Lee's nearest living relatives."

Mr. Willis said the executive committee of the association had received written opinions "from two of the great law firms of Atlanta and the south," to the effect that the association's title to the site "was perfectly valid."

Success In Courts Seen.

"We have every assurance that we shall be able successfully to defend our title in the courts," he said.

"It is unfortunate that any individual or group should see fit to take by action that might retard the completion of a work whose development every man and woman in the south has followed with keenest interest," he said, "but since Mr. Venable has decided to oppose the memorial, the executive committee welcomes the final test because we have felt the controversy could only be settled satisfactorily to all parties in the court."

Mr. Willis leaves for Atlanta tonight.

'Champions' Fox Movietone To Be Shown Free Monday

What goes on behind the scenes in the club house between halves of a crucial football game? What does a coach say to his men that so crystalizes their determination to win that they come back in the second half and completely upset the opposing team.

Those who have sat in the stands and wondered about this phase of football psychology will have opportunity to step "behind the scenes" while Coach Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, exhorts his men in the plot of the Fox Movietone production, "Champions," which is to be presented on Monday, January 28, from 5:30 to 10 p. m., at the Yarbrough Motor company, 560 West Peachtree street.

The public is invited. The audience sees and hears the fiery Notre Dame mentor talk to the members of his 1928 squad just before sending them for the second half of an important contest.

One of the outstanding football "upsets" of the 1928 season was the defeat of the Army by Notre Dame. Gridiron critics watching the game agreed that Notre Dame played practically perfect football during the first half yet seemed to make little progress against the heavier, more experienced soldiers. At the start of the second half the "Irish" came back with a spirit which admitted no defeat and scored two touchdowns to win.

What Rockne said to his men between halves to kindle the spirit which won the game is revealed in "Champions" for the first time. Appearing with Rockne in this production are several of the renowned members of the "Fighting Irish," including Chevigny, whose touchdown beat the Army; Niemic, Law, captain-elect for 1929; Brady, Leppig, Collins and Ransavage.

The plot of "Champions" is replete with action. Ann Pennington of "The Scandals"; the Howard sisters of "Whoopee"; motor cars soaring around the Atlantic City speedway; presentation of the latest authentic Paris fashion creations by a Vogue fashion show; Flo Ziegfeld, the man who glorified the American girl—all are elements in its unique plot. The cast includes, in addition to those named above, such national celebrities as Eva LeGallienne, famous emotional actress; Quin Ryan, the voice of WGN; Ab Jenkins and Ralph Hepburn, racing drivers; Oscar Amundsen, a relative of the famous polar explorer; Elinor Sherwin, artist's model, whose face has charmed millions of Americans from billboards all over the country, and several Ziegfeld follies beauties. Roxy's famous orchestra furnishes the musical scoring.

Rain, Warmer Weather Today, Forecast Says

Rain and higher temperatures is the official weather forecast for Atlanta and vicinity today.

After a frigid Saturday, which saw the mercury indicator drop six points below freezing level and fail to rise above the 31-degree mark at the warmest moment of the day, the Sabbath will witness a rise in temperature of nearly 10 degrees, according to predictions of the local station of the United States weather bureau.

However, the Sunday skies will be marred by threatening clouds and a considerable quantity of rainfall is expected, the meteorology officials stated.

The mercury column in the early morning hours will start its upward cycle for today at the minimum temperature of 34 degrees, it was predicted, the high of the day is expected to be about 60 degrees.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS ARE "NUISANCE," SAY PROFESSORS

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The impatient motorist has long felt that the stop-and-go traffic lights were a positive nuisance, and today he had corroborative statements from two University of Illinois professors.

Professor C. C. Wiley and Professor J. S. Crandell told the Illinois Society of Engineers that the green and red lights, the no-left-turn rule and other regulations were unnecessary and ineffectual. Twenty per cent of traffic has been forced to make unnessary stops because of the lights, they said. The signals were of actual value during only one or two hours of each day, and a handicap the rest of the time, they said.

STEWART CHARGES NYE WITH FALSEHOOD

trol of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was called to the attention of the senate today by Senator Nye, republican, of North Dakota, who assailed Stewart's connection with what he described as the "Shady Continental Trading company."

Senator Nye today declared that Stewart "defied the senate, misled the senate, lied to the senate, and then proceeded to explain successfully his record to the satisfaction of a District of Columbia jury."

Referring to a recent statement by Stewart, the senator declared that in this Stewart had said that his share of profits from the Continental Trading company was "partly the source from which the steady stream of cash dividends has been paid to the stockholders of the Indiana company."

Stockholders Get "Stealings."

"It looks to me," interposed Senator Norris, republican, of Nebraska, "that some of the stockholders want Stewart reelected because he gave them the benefit of his stealings."

"If Mr. Stewart's claim is correct," asked Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, "then the stockholders benefited by that transaction, did they not?"

"Yes, that is true," Nye replied.

"Yes, he is."

"Has there been any effort made by any stockholders to return this money derived through the Continental Trading company?"

Senator Nye said he was not aware of any such attempt.

Industry Must Keep Clean.

Senator Norris read a letter he said he had received from one of the oil stockholders denouncing the manner of Stewart in soliciting proxies and describing Rockfeller's method as "just and proper."

In his prepared address, Senator Nye declared that the senate's investigations of the oil industry had saved the government billions of dollars and "ought to have created a determination in the circles of the oil people of the land to cleanse the industry of agents and officials who, by their methods, bring the entire industry into bad repute."

"Not often are business battles," he continued, "accorded such liberal publicity as is now being accorded the Rockefeller-Stewart tilt. Watching it from day to day, my conviction grows that if Mr. Stewart's press agents remain at their game long enough we will yet gain that desired complete story of the Continental Trading company and its affairs."

COOLIDGE FACES DEFEAT ON CRUISER BUILDING

States, could be settled amicably. "Do not be discouraged if we have not solved the problem at once," he counseled.

"As we seek to be loyal to other friends," he said, "so will we seek to be loyal to that nation which is nearest and most akin to the racial and moral outlook of all the nations of the world."

The existing difference he said is "as to how we shall apply a limitation of naval armaments fairly and justly to our different circumstances and condition. . . . We admit freely and willingly the parity between the United States forces and our own. It is an admission which we have never made to any other nation and which we would have made to no other nation.

Two People Alike.

"Such differences as have occurred have not therefore been differences of principle but merely differences arising out of the difficulties of applying that principle to very different circumstances and needs of the two countries."

The foreign secretary believed that the "passing difficulty" looms larger than similar differences with any other country because of the common thought and outlook of the two people.

"The problem is to find some conclusion whereby we can measure naval strength so that the parity which both nations desire may be reached, and reached at a level which will mean not an increase in the armaments of the world but a reduction."

United States Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton, who had preceded Sir Austen in speaking at the dinner, said that too much already had been said about the relations of the two nations. This had created a sensitive state, but nevertheless the relations remained fundamentally unimpaired.

PASTOR DENIES AIMEE PAID JUDGE LEGAL FEE

$2,500 for Lectures and Advice in Church Dispute, Probers Told.

Los Angeles, January 26.—(AP)—An investigating committee of the state legislature learned today that a $2,500 check given Judge Carlos S. Hardy by Aimee Semple McPherson was for "lectures, radio talks" and advice offered in a church dispute.

The testimony came from a nervous little pastor who kept the books of Angelus temple. The witness, the Rev. J. W. Arthur, while denying the money was given for "legal advice" admitted that it was drawn from the "legal and defense fund" of the evangelist.

Questioned about the word "legal" penned upon the check, the pastor-bookkeeper replied it was there because that "was the best way I could think of to designate the expenditure." It was before a crowd that far exceeded the limited seating capacity of the committee's special chambers in a downtown office building that the first move in the investigation thus was made today.

As the committee, charged by the legislature to "disclose facts that will either vindicate Judge Hardy or give grounds for impeachment proceedings" adjourned until Monday, it curtly told Mrs. McPherson that her proposed tour of Canada must be delayed.

The evangelist, appearing but a few moments before adjournment, was questioned only momentarily. Mrs. McPherson informed the committee that she had planned to leave Los Angeles Monday for Canada. The committee answered by saying: "Be in these rooms at 9:20 o'clock Monday morning."

With Mrs. McPherson, the session brought Judge Hardy to the chambers. He told reporters he had nothing to say about what testimony he might make, but said that he would testify "willingly."

the man they had loved and honored in life, as the pastor of the church, the Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, voiced the regard in which he had been held.

Characteristics Beautiful.

Dr. Dodge told, forcefully and tenderly, of the many beautiful characteristics of Mr. Hollomon's personality and referred to the splendid service he had rendered his city, state and nation, through the trenchant editorial writings he has contributed to The Constitution for years past.

Following Dr. Dodge's words, Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, brother to Dr. W. L. Poteat, president of Wake Forest college, where Mr. Hollomon was educated, rendered the prayer. A second solo softly sung whispered through the gothic arches of the old church and the service was ended.

Two solos were rendered by Mrs. Laura Lombard, while Mrs. R. G. Sawyer presided at the organ.

The honorary escort filed through the door. Pallbearers bore the casket to the waiting hearse between the double rank of escort, and the last honor to a great newspaperman, a writer who ever held his pen true to his beliefs and highest ideals, was paid.

Among the magnificent array of floral tributes which surrounded the casket and banked around the pulpit, were gifts from the following:

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Christian, Paul W. Jones, Ralph Lee Edwards, Constitution Publishing company, Georgia Press association, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard Bryan, Alice Wilson and Elizabeth, Mr. Holloman's associates on The Constitution, General Outdoor Advertising company, Atlanta Safety Council, Miss Marion Upshaw, Frank Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. George Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. George Glozier, W. R. Neal, Mrs. William Pinckney Hill, the Hallman family, Hoke Smith, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Bonnell Stone, the Old Guard, by W. L. Hancock, adjutant; Gladstone and Sarah Orr Williams, Washington; Colonel T. L. Huston, Brunswick; officers and directors, Atlanta & Lowry National bank; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Erwin, Athens; John Paschall, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Holliday, H. C. Bagley and boys, Atlanta "Hoo Hoo" club, number 1; Lee Worsham, Sam Tate, L. K. Starr, Chief Justice and Mrs. Richard B. Russell, Sam W. Small, Civic club of Atlanta, Georgia Manufacturers association, by J. P. McGrath, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Frank L. Stanton, Albert E. Thornton, Frank E. Shumate and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman.

Active Pallbearers.

The honorary escort consisted of Governor L. G. Hardman, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, Clifford Walker, Hugh M. Dorsey, John A. Boykin, William C. Edwards, L. O. Moseley, Sam Slate, W. Tom Winn, W. R. Neel, Joseph P. Glozier, Benjamin S. Barker, Judge Shepard Bryan, John L. Westmoreland, Bonnell Stone, Major Clark Howell, Jr., Ralph T. Jones, Lewis C. Gregg, Robert Moran, P. W. Hammond, H. H. Trotti, Dr. Horace Grant, Frederick J. Paxon, J. S. Kennedy, William Candler, F. H. Abbott, M. D. Gleason, Channing Cope, Willard Cope, J. R. Bachman, Paul S. Etheridge, Charles J. Haden, Walter C. Hill, J. Henson Tatum, Platt Young and Walter G. Cooper.

A special escort from the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce included George W. West, Alfred C. Newell, Milton Dargan, Jr., Horace Russell, W. R. Tucker, J. H. Woody, L. H. Beall, W. D. Hoffman, Ivan Allen, G. C. Bowden, Frank L. Butler, Roy LeCraw, N. Baxter Maddox and Milton W. Bell.

From the Georgia Press association a special honorary escort was appointed by Miss Emily Woodward, president, consisting of Miss Emily Woodward, president, Vienna News; James Kempton, Fulton Daily Report, John Paschall, Atlanta Journal; James B. Nevin, Atlanta Georgian; V. L. Stanley, Dublin Courier-Journal; Evelyn Harris, Southern Telephone News; Lauren Foreman, Southern News Bulletin; Brown Tyler, Fulton Review; J. A. Hall, DeKalb New Era, and E. D. Shirey, Western Newspaper Union.

Mr. Hollomon was vice president at large of the Bankhead National Highway association, with executive offices in Birmingham. A special honorary escort from this organization was named as follows:

J. A. Rountree, Birmingham, director general; M. J. Abney, Athens, vice president for Georgia; Tom Winn, Atlanta; J. A. Manderville, Carrollton; C. M. Ferguson, Winder; A. N. Alford, Hartwell; Judge C. E. Roop, Carrollton; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Atlanta; Mrs. Ruth Kummer, Carrollton, and Mrs. Stewart D. Brown, Royston.

Leaders of State and City Pay Tribute to J. A. Hollomon

Tribute to the rare ability, magnificent service and warmly human character of James A. Hollomon, associate editor of The Constitution, poured into the office of the paper and to his home on Piedmont avenue following announcement of his death.

Mr. Hollomon died Thursday night of injuries received in a two-story fall suffered Tuesday night, down the stairwell of the Henry Grady hotel.

Telegrams and letters expressing the admiration and love of friends and admirers in every walk of life have come to The Constitution since his death. Fellow workers in southern newspaperdom have voiced their sorrow at the sudden passing of a dear friend; leaders in political and business circles in many states have sent their condolences and expressed their realization of the loss to Georgia and the south his death entails; and others who base their sorrow on no other ground than that of the loss of a kindly, helpful friend, add their messages of sympathy to the list.

Sam W. Small, for years his colaborer and closest friend on the editorial staff of this paper, sends a beautiful personal message from Washington, and other newspapermen, including many from Georgia papers, add their tributes to list.

Lauded by Senators.

United States Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George wired their condolences to Mrs. Hollomon. Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman sent a telegram of sympathy. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, of Atlanta, issued a formal statement of appreciation of his life and sorrow in his death.

Among others who sent telegrams or letters were:

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, through C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary; W. G. Sutlive, of Savannah; Joe P. Johnston, postoffice inspector in charge, Atlanta; Hiram Gardner, Albany, Ga.; J. A. Rountree, director general Bankhead National highway, Birmingham; Mrs. Max M. Kuttner, Rome; Clarence H. Leavy, Brunswick; D. G. Bickers, Savannah; Hugh Rowe, Athens; Dr. Robert P. Adams, Winder, Ga.; Ernest Camp, Monroe, Ga.; John A. Thurston, Thomaston, Ga.; J. C. McAuliffe, Augusta; Willis M. Ball, of Jacksonville; J. H. Eve, Savannah; B. M. Gaddis, Valdosta; Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, Washington; Peter V. Rice, Elberton, Ga.; A. F. Dean, Gainesville; Louie D. Newton, Atlanta, and J. W. Williamson, Jacksonville.

Dr. Small, from Washington, sent the following telegram:

"Washington, January 26.—(Special.)—My loyal friend and affectionately-valued co-worker has passed on into that other life ahead of us who thought we would precede him thither. His going has brought to my spirit that peculiar pain which the heart produces when it is baffled for expression.

"During the long years of our association there grew in both of us a brotherly love akin to blood devotion. Neither of us was blind to the laches of the other, but we were always moved by charity and solicitude for each other. Our hearts and aims were at one in the ambition to do human service in ungrudging spirit.

Gifted in Mind and Spirit.

"The message telling me of the shattering fall which he suffered last Tuesday and the wound from it shocked me inexpressibly. Looking back to my recent experiences from a lesser similar accident, and the aftermath which still hampers me, I was not unprepared for the fatal consequence. But that did not lessen by a shred the acute pain of the closing event. His spirit is not far ahead of mine, possibly, and I know in my soul that we shall meet again—how soon, God knows.

"Jim Hollomon, as known to his closest associates and admirers, was gifted in mind and spirit. He used his talents with diligence and integrity. He served his duties with loyalty and honesty. He obstructed no one, from envy or malice. He helped to the measure of his ability and the full strength of his benevolence whoever appeared to need his aid. He had a high sense of the demands of the public welfare and gave it his unstinted promotion. I found in him abundant reasons to love and honor him.

"Dear Jim—may our Father, our Elder Brother and 'the spirits of just men made perfect' welcome you to eternal peace, and rest, and joys.

"SAM W. SMALL."

From Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman came a message reading:

"We are deeply grieved in this sad hour. James A. Hollomon was of the highest type of southern manhood. His service and contribution to humanity will remain a monument to his memory."

Other telegrams included the following:

"Profoundly grieved to learn of Mr. Hollomon's death. There can be no doubt that Atlanta and Georgia have lost one of our most useful citizens.

"(Senator) WALTER F. GEORGE."

"His death removes one who was doing splendid work for Georgia. His passing is a personal loss to me. I admired him and valued his friendship.

W. G. SUTLIVE,
"Savannah."

"I am distressed at the passing of Mr. Hollomon, of whom I have been very fond for many years and whose friendship I prized very much. His death is a great loss to Georgia, to Atlanta and the hosts of good fellows who were proud to call him friend.

"JOE P. JOHNSTON."

"The state of Georgia and the south has lost a great leader. Good roads and the Bankhead national highway has lost a great advocate. His place will be hard to fill.

"J. A. ROUNTREE, Birmingham"

"We were greatly shocked and grieved to read of the death of Mr. James A. Hollomon. He was a fine type of citizen and his passing will be mourned by the host of friends who knew him personally and through his writings in The Constitution.

"C. V. HOHENSTEIN,
"Executive Secretary Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association."

"I suppose somebody will take Mr. Hollomon's place, but it will be a long search. I have followed his writings with a great deal of pleasure. My sincere consolation is offered.

"ROBERT P. ADAMS,
"Winder."

"Great Blow to Georgia."

"The death of James A. Hollomon is not only a great blow to his family and friends but to the state of Georgia, which he loved so well. It removes one of the ablest and most constructive forces in Georgia journalism and a man loved by thousands throughout the nation, with whose affairs he kept in such interesting luminous touch. For years he had been one of my most devoted and cherished friends. ERNEST CAMP,
"Monroe, Ga."

"We will miss the illuminating column of 'Just in Passing.'

"JOHN A. THURSTON,
"Thomaston, Ga."

"Mr. Hollomon's death is a great shock to me. He was a forceful newspaperman and in his passing Georgia loses one of its greatest and most constructive journalists.

"J. M. McAULIFFE,
"Augusta, Ga."

"It is with sincere regret we note the death of James A. Hollomon. He was a splendid newspaperman, a great Georgian and a true Southerner. Accept the true sympathy of the Gainesville Eagle in your loss.

"A. F. DEAN,
"Gainesville, Ga."

"Mr. Hollomon loved people. He loved Atlanta. He loved Georgia. He loved his country.

"He worked hard to see Georgia go forward and he has not labored in vain. Though dead he yet speaketh. All the high notes he sounded, all the forward looks he gave us, all the impelling appeals he made to Georgians to do more and to do better—these all live on in our hearts. His soul goes marching on.

"LOUIE D. NEWTON,
J. W. Williamson, of Jacksonville, was private secretary to Mr. Hollomon during his life in the Florida city as a real estate man, from 1905 to 1916. He sends a message of personal appreciation, relating many anecdotes of their days together and ending:

"All who were associated with him in his enterprises loved him if they did their duty. I, for one, feel I have lost the best friend I had next to my mother. His gentle kindness and his character have always been an incentive to me to do better and treat others better. I loved him. I shall miss him."

FRENCH PEASANTS NOW ORGANIZING THEIR OWN PARTY

Paris, January 26.—(AP)—French peasants have begun organization of their own party similar to that now in power in Rumania and to the peasant parties in Czecho-Slovakia and Germany.

At an organization meeting today messages of sympathy were read from the heads of various peasant parties throughout Europe. The temporary president of the meeting, M. Fleurant-Agricola, then made an address in which he declared that 48 per cent of the French population was agricultural and that it would have more representation in the country's affairs.

The new party will be called the agricultural and peasant party and will begin contesting seats.

NORTH CHINA STAR EXPECTED TO LOSE MAIL PRIVILEGES

Shanghai, China, January 26.—(AP) The ministry of communications of the nationalist government announced today that it is planning to deprive the North China Star, an American newspaper published in Tientsin, of its mailing privileges. The reason given was that the paper had "published rumors detrimental to the kaumintang and the national government."

The publisher of the newspaper is Charles J. Fox, a former correspondent in Washington.

The Doctor Took One Look—

"FLU"

He had a bit of a headache and a couple of chills—but pshaw!—it was only a "slight" cold and he'd shake it off! That was yesterday. Today he was in bed, burning with fever one moment and the next shivering with chill. The doctor took one look and—"Flu!"

C. OF C. WILL GIVE BANQUET THIS WEEK

Members Urged To Make Reservations for Annual Dinner.

Members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce who have not made reservations for seats at the sixty-third annual dinner of the organization next Thursday night are urged to write or telephone early this week, in order that efficient service may be provided.

The dinner will begin at 6 o'clock, and members are urged to arrive early, in order that everyone may be seated quickly and the program begun.

Indications are that it will be necessary to seat more than 100 members and guests in the street floor dining room, while the second floor assembly hall will be used for the official program, with 300 person accommodated. Plans are being made to provide decorations, music and other entertainment for the overflow meeting, and after dinner is served all those in the street floor dining room will be invited to hear the speakers in the main assembly hall.

Judge Shepard Bryan has accepted the post of general chairman in charge of arrangements, with Sam C. Rothberg as vice chairman. Details will be discussed at a meeting of the committee to be called this week.

A feature will be a humorous address by Dr. D. W. Daniel, of Clemson college, who has several times spoken in Atlanta with great success. He has a national reputation as an after-dinner speaker and humorist.

The officers will be installed for the year, as follows: Philip H. Alston, president; Horace Russell, Frank L. Butler and Gregory C. Bowden, vice president; Henry W. Davis, treasurer. Milton Dargan, Jr., retiring president, will discuss the work of his administration, and B. S. Barker, executive vice president, will submit a condensed report of the year's activities.

Magazine Tells Of Girl's Great Fight for Career

A story of remarkable persistence, with the ultimate reward at last responding to a young girl's determined effort to overcome all handicaps in her fight for recognition in her chosen art, is told in the January issue of the Louisville and Nashville employees' magazine.

The girl is Miss Eleanor Speer, of Atlanta, daughter of K. W. Speer, an engineer employed at the Atlanta joint terminals.

Miss Speer, handicapped by serious eye troubles, determined to become an organist and, under the tutelage of Dr. Ben J. Potter, organist at Trinity church, head of organ and choral department of Brenau college at Gainesville and an associate of the Royal College of Organists of London, finally achieved public recognition as a splendid performer when she gave her debut recital at Trinity last fall.

Miss Speer is now planning to go to Europe to continue her studies there, but has been delayed by recurrence of her eye trouble.

Miss Speer began studying the piano when nine years of age and continued this for eight years. An attack of influenze brought about the serious handicap to her work by leaving her with imperfect eyesight.

She graduated from a college preparatory course at Girls' High school and arranged to study under Dr. Potter. She has been a member of his choir at Trinity and is now assistant organist there.

After she studies in Europe Miss Speer plans to continue her efforts toward the goal she has set of concert organist.

Sewanee Glee Club Here February 3 on Annual Tour

JULIAN ROBERT DE OVIES, Son of the Very Rev. Raimiundo de Ovies, of Atlanta.

A. W. JOHNSON, Son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, of Atlanta.

The Sewanee Glee club, hailed by critics as one of the best in all Dixies, and which, with the exception of the Yale and Notre Dame clubs, has traveled more miles in two weeks than any other like unit, will start its annual winter tour this month, appearing at Egleston Memorial hall February 5.

The club will present much new material on its trip this season as well as number of old favorites. Among the numbers especially singled out for praise last season was "O Lovely Night" (Barcarolle, Offenbach-Spicker and at the request of the cities visited the number will be included in this season's program.

The program consists of ensemble, classical and semi-classical numbers interspersed with vocal solos, selections from the orchestra, and skits.

The "Tin Can Quartet" has a technique all its own and presents in a most singular fashion. "Chords and Dischords" is their act. "Ab" Johnson's imitation of a sawmill when the saw strikes a knot must be heard to be appreciated.

"The Dizzy Dumb Dora" is the title of a skit especially written for the Sewanee Glee club by Ruth C. Bassette, a professional New York artist and playright.

John Ashmore Gowen, baritone soloist of the club, was trained in the studio of John Itherspoon, formerly of New York, now of Chicago. Gowen is better known in the New England states than in the south, for his chief concert and radio broadcasting performances have been in Connecticut.

A real impersonation of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde will be seen when Jack Walthour, director, will not only appear as the leader of the club, but will present a stage novelty under the nom de plume of Banjovial Jack.

The Sewanee Syncopators., orchestra of the University of the South, will appear with the club in their own performance. The syncopators are able to hold their own in any battle of jazz. Each man is able to play several instruments.

One of the features of the Sewanee Glee club is the informality with which the program is presented. This is a distinct departure from the average glee club tradition and has been warmly welcomed and highly praised since its inception.

"INSPIRATION flies away when shoes hurt . . ."

An interview with HELEN DRYDEN, one of America's foremost fashion artists

"ALTHOUGH most people may not think so, painting is really hard work. I mean not only work of the mind, but actually physical work. Often I stand before my easel for hours without a rest, without a single pause...That's why comfortable shoes are indispensable to the artist. Inspiration flies away quick enough when shoes hurt!

"I wear Cantilevers. They are marvelously comfortable, caressing, pleasing to one's eye and pleasing to one's style sense. Cantilever shoes have become almost as much a part of my tools as my brushes and my palette."

Cantilever Shoes are so comfortable because they are perfectly proportioned to fit the foot. With every step you take they yield gracefully and support the foot naturally.

The new styles are particularly attractive—charmingly fashioned and designed for the gentlewoman's taste.

A Lawyer pleads for comfort . .

"The profession of law is an especially exacting one. Pleading and defending keeps me on my feet for hours at a stretch. Comfortable shoes are an absolute necessity to me. It is equally important that a lawyer look her best at all times. A good appearance makes the best impression on both the client and the Court.

"That is why I have worn Cantilever Shoes for the last two years. For my work, they are the ideal shoes, comfortable, soft and flexible ... trim and smart-looking as well."

MISS LILLIAN R. BASSMAN

Among the enthusiastic Cantilever wearers in this community are:

Miss Emily H. Clay, Miss Mary Allen, Miss Ethel Clark, Mrs. G. B. Kornegay, Mrs. T. C. Erwin, Mrs. I. T. Irvin, Jr.

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice, he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and placed it on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a public success as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us it helped when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr.

Dr. W. B. Caldwell M.D. AT AGE 83

Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, its mild, gentle action is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.—(adv.)

FAMOUS SYMPHONY WILL VISIT ATLANTA

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, one of the five greatest symphony organizations in the world will give two concerts today at the auditorium on Wednesday, February 6, it was announced Saturday by S. Russell Bridges, president of the Southern Musical bureau.

This event marks the most important musical engagement for Atlanta during the year, with the exception of grand opera.

Conductor Widely Known.

Henri Verbrugghen, famous European conductor who came to take over the direction of the Minneapolis orchestra some years ago, will conduct the concerts here. The entire personnel of the orchestra will be present. Incidentally, it is interesting to note that many of these musicians have been with the orchestra ten years or more and five have been with it ever since its inception, 25 years ago. The importance of this long service by symphony players is recognized by all critics, as it is the blending of each player, both mechanically and spiritually, that creates the perfect whole, like one great instrument, upon which the conductor plays.

Conductor Henri Verbrugghen.

The annual tours of the Minneapolis Symphony have been a high-light of American musical life for the past 20 years and the orchestra is known from the Atlantic to Pacific, from Canada to the Rio Grande. It has contributed an inestimable portion of the musical tradition which has accumulated in this country during the past quarter century.

No Seat Sales Yet.

The orchestra is supported by generous contributions from public spirited citizens of Minneapolis, thus making it possible to give its concerts at admission prices no higher than those usually charged for first-class attractions, despite the tremendous costs in maintaining such an organization. Figures disclose that these Minneapolis contributors have given in excess of $2,500,000 toward permanently maintaining the orchestra.

Mr. Bridges stated that details as to seat sales, etc., had yet to be arranged and would be announced as early as possible.

HEADS BIBLE CLASS

Mrs. C. J. Buhman Elected by Good Samaritans.

Mrs. C. J. Buhman has been elected president of the Good Samaritan Bible class of the First Baptist church, it was announced Saturday. The election took place Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. B. Emerson, on Peachtree Hills avenue.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. R. D. McDowell, first vice president; Mrs. Fuller Mynatt, second vice president; Mrs. J. B. Franklin, third vice president; Mrs. J. M. Staples, recording secretary; Mrs. Alex Bealer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. L. Collier, publicity chairman; Mrs. J. H. Coin, teacher.

WOMAN, INJURED IN FALL FROM CAR, SUES FOR $50,000

A suit asking $50,000 as damages for injuries alleged to have been received when she fell from the doorway of a Stewart avenue street car on October 28, was filed Saturday in the city court of Atlanta by Miss Vinnie Hughes, 65, against the Georgia Power company.

Miss Hughes alleges that the accident happened when she was waiting for the door to open at the end of the Stewart avenue line, and charges that the motorman opened the door and stopped the car suddenly, the momentum throwing her into the street.

The plaintiff recites in the petition that her injuries consist of a fracture pelvic bone, and fractured left hip and thigh bones. Poole and Fraser filed the petition as attorneys for Miss Hughes.

MACON MAN GETS YEAR FOR DRUG ACT VIOLATION

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—A. W. Rogers, who was arrested Friday on the charge of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic law, was brought before Judge Bascom S. Deaver, in United States district court today and entered a plea of guilty. Judge Deaver sentenced him to a year and a day in the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

$200.00 Paid for One Penny

J. D. Martin, of Richmond, Va., is the proud possessor of a check for $200.00 paid him for an old copper cent. The Numismatic Company, Dept. 901, Fort Worth, Texas, who purchased this penny from Mr. Martin, says there are thousands of old coins, bills, medals and stamps for which they will pay big cash premiums. So that everyone will know the value of old coins and stamps and what to watch for in their change, the Numismatic Company will send for only 4c to any reader of The Constitution who writes them, a large illustrated coin folder describing many of these wanted articles and the big profits to be made. Better write them today for their large folder so you can post yourself and know what to look for. Remember that Mr. Martin's knowing the value of his penny meant a difference of $199.99 to him. Without knowing its value that penny might still be in circulation, passing through the hands of thousands until someone like Mr. Martin, who knows old coins, recognized its value. It pays to be posted. Send 4c now for their illustrated coin folder. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain. —(adv.

BROTHERS IDENTIFY MAN KILLED BY CAR

Victim of Accident, H. B. Jones, Once Accused in Wife's Death.

Identification of the man who Friday night sustained fatal injuries when he was run down by a street car was established Saturday by H. B. Jones, 45, of 10 Springer street, who several months ago was tried and acquitted on a charge of murdering his wife on April 22, 1928. Jones was lying on the street car tracks at the time he was struck.

Relatives Saturday morning identified the body of the man shortly after he died at Grady hospital.

It was alleged by police in the trial of Jones several months ago that he had shot his wife to death at their residence on DeFoor avenue, off Crooked road a Sunday afternoon while in a drunken condition. He was indicted by a Fulton county grand jury but subsequently was acquitted on trial.

Jones was run down at Pearl and Fair streets by a car operated by J. T. Brock, who has been released by police on $1,000 bond for disorderly conduct charges.

Brock said he saw what he thought was a bit of rubbish lying on the track and did not stop until the car had passed over it. Jones was rushed to Grady hospital. Two brothers of the dead man, M. W. and G. F. Jones identified the body at the funeral parlors of Blanchard Brothers Saturday morning.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

Give freely

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

Frigidaire Officials and 600 Salesmen Of Southeast To Assemble Here Thursday

F. G. BIECHLER,
President and General Manager.

R. F. CALLAWAY,
Manager of Branches.

J. A. HARLAN,
Sales Manager.

E. D. DOTY,
Advertising Manager.

MISS VERNA MILLER,
Director of Experimental Kitchens.

Climaxing months of preparation by officials of Frigidaire Corporation at Dayton, Ohio, 600 selling men of the General Motors subsidiary will meet in Atlanta January 31, opening the first of 10 regional conventions to be held all over the United States and in Canada. Business sessions will be held at the Forsyth theater and a banquet has been arranged for the evening at the Ansley hotel.

E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, will head 30 factory representatives who will arrive here the morning preceding the opening of the convention. C. F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors in charge of research, will accompany the party to Atlanta, according to information received by E. H. Danforth, local branch manager.

Mr. Kettering, who will be one of the principal speakers at the banquet, is regarded as one of the outstanding research engineers and inventors in the United States. He is the inventor of the automobile starter and founder of the Delco-Light company. Besides developing an individual electric lighting plant he has played a prominent part in the development of ethyl gasoline, the duco process and numerous other scientific achievements. His philosophical addresses on scientific subjects have won him national recognition.

Elaborate Program.

Details of the convention program, which will afford opportunity for the discussion of outstanding accomplishments of the electrical refrigeration industry during 1928 and additional developments anticipated in 1929, will be under the personal supervision of J. A. Harlan, sales manager.

Every detail of the convention program has been timed so accurately that every event is scheduled as accurately as a vaudeville program. This arrangement enables a program to be presented in a few hours which would ordinarily take several days to encompass.

Stage scenery, electrical effects, loud speakers, displays and numerous other pieces of equipment will be carried to the convention cities in a special car which will make the 10,000-mile tour necessary to reach 8,000 field men in the Frigidaire organization. The convention paraphernalia will be set up at the Forsyth theater the day preceding the convention so that all will be in order when the meeting convenes.

Although it takes approximately six hours to install the convention equipment, the stage properties can be dismantled so quickly that the party is in readiness to continue its journey within half an hour after the final session. The Frigidaire executives are making the convention trip in a private car, directly ahead of cars bearing the stage equipment and helpers, stage assistants and professional entertainers.

Products on Exhibit.

Various products of the company will be on exhibition at the Ansley hotel for the information of the salesmen in attendance. Signal honor will be accorded at the convention to members of the 1928 quota club, composed of salesmen who have reached or exceeded the quota of sales assigned them for the year. These outstanding salesmen will be presented with gold purses and otherwise honored by the entire convention. Additional ways in which the company plans to honor individual selling accomplishments will be announced at the meeting. Four Frigidaire salesmen of this city will be presented with $100 in gold each at the convention. They are J. A. Woodliff, Allen Stewart, R. W. Goodrich and W. E. Hudson.

Accomplishments of the past year will be briefly reviewed in a series of short speeches and the program for the next 12 months will then be outlined in detail. R. F. Callaway, manager of branches, will discuss recent price reductions and tell of plans for 1929 activities. Sales points will be emphasized by playlets, taking but a few minutes to enact but affording a medium to present points which would take a speaker an hour or more to discuss. Charts and motion picture projectors will be employed.

L. S. Keilholtz, chief engineer, will speak on the company's products, telling of their quiet operation and other engineering developments and refinements. Household and commercial refrigeration equipment as well as electric water coolers will be discussed at this time.

Other Speakers.

The practical uses of Frigidaire to the busy housekeeper will be discussed by Miss Verna L. Miller, home economist in charge of Frigidaire experimental kitchen, and recipe book author.

Other convention speakers will include T. B. Fordham, works manager; E. D. Doty, advertising manager; G. A. Ames, of the General Motors Acceptance corporation; R. L. Lee, head of the sales promotion department; J. E. Houser, chief inspector; H. F. Lehman, installation and service manager; T. H. "Dusty" Miller, Ohio newspaper publisher and humorist, and S. A. Long, Wichita distributor, who will represent the field organization.

The banquet program will include a cabaret performance by the professional entertainers. All these participating in the convention, comprising salesmen from Georgia, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and South Carolina, will attend the banquet, which will constitute the final event of the Atlanta meeting. Holding of the convention here represents the second time that Atlanta has been chosen as the convention city for this territory.

2 ATLANTA STUDENTS HONORED AT WESLEYAN

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—L. H. Fowler and H. H. Cobb, both of Atlanta, made an average grade of "B" in the Mercer university law school here last term, thus placing themselves on the list of honor men for the term, Dean J. A. McClain, Jr., announced yesterday in compiling grades of the students for the fall term.

J. Q. Davidson, of Fort Valley, broke all scholastic records at the school by establishing an average of 91.4. The record was held by Scott Russell, former United States district attorney, and now with a local law firm, when he made a grade of 89.9 in 1925.

Charles C. Cork, of Macon, made the second highest average of the term. Other honor men in the senior class are Mr. Fowler, of Atlanta; E. L. Benton, Macon; W. E. Smith, Fitzgerald; Harvey Jay, Fitzgerald; Pollard Jent, Macon; Fred W. New, Oneida, Tenn.; Oliver C. Custer, Bainbridge.

The junior honor men are S. C. Callaway, of Ashburn; R. F. Scarborough, Eastman; Mr. Cobb, Atlanta; C. H. Baldwin, Macon; O. H. Middlebrooks, Macon; T. R. Watkins, Lexington; J. A. Hammack, Coleman.

These are the freshman honor men: W. H. Rehberg, Cairo; G. M. Smith, Cairo; R. U. Harden, Whigham; W. Reeves Lewis, Stapleton; H. G. Stephenson, Macon; A. E. Lockerman, Montezuma.

CENTRAL VIADUCT OPENING TO AWAIT OTHER PROJECTS

Although the Central avenue and Wall street viaducts will be ready for traffic the earlier part of this week, they will not be opened for about 30 days, when the Pryor street bridge and the Alabama street approach are completed, according to announcement Saturday by the bridge committee of city council, of which Alderman W. Guy Dobbs is chairman.

Ceremonies marking the formal opening will be arranged by Mr. Dobbs and Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond commission.

"It is correct," Alderman Dobbs said Saturday, "that the Central avenue bridge is practically ready for traffic now, and that the Wall street link will soon be so, but these portions of the viaduct system are being used to a great extent in the construction of the Pryor street bridge and the Alabama street approaches. To open the completed parts to traffic immediately would possibly delay completion of the other links.

"Since the viaducts will probably be complete in all details within a month, we see no reason why any links should be opened until the entire system of splendid bridges is ready for the public."

LUNCHEON MONDAY

C. of C. Woman's Division Will Hold Monthly Meeting.

The monthly luncheon of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce will be held at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce building. A full program has been arranged which will include several talks and a number of musical selections.

BIG MASS MEETING CLOSES CHRISTIAN-JEWISH CONCLAVE

With a mass meeting and musical recital at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Baptist tabernacle on Luckie street as the principal service, the Jewish Christian conference will come to a close today. Sessions will be held at the Atlanta Gospel tabernacle this morning and tonight.

Alexander Kaminsky, noted Russian violinist, will render a special musical program at the mass meeting and tell the story of his conversion.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Rev. Henry Singer, of Detroit, will speak at the Gospel tabernacle, his subject being "Personal Reminiscences," and Sunday night at 7:45 his topic will be "The Passover."

FOUR CONVENTIONS IN ATLANTA THIS WEEK

B'nai B'rith and Frigidaire Gatherings Hold Center of Interest.

Four conventions and special events to be staged in Atlanta this week were announced Saturday by Fred Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

Beginning today, and continuing for three days, will be the fifth district convention of the grand lodge, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, with headquarters at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. About 75 official delegates and many other visitors are expected to be in attendance.

About 600 sales representatives of the Frigidaire corporation will assemble in Atlanta on Thursday for one of a series of regional sales conferences being conducted by the organization. Headquarters for the conference will be at the Ansley hotel. A corps of workers from the home office, in Dayton, Ohio, have been in the city for about a week completing local arrangements.

Though small in number, the Council of Associations of Community Chests, which convenes for a two-day session at the Ansley hotel, Friday, February 1, is one of the most important conventions to be scheduled in some time, it was stated at the convention bureau. The gathering will be composed of representatives and directors of Community Chests throughout the country.

The Burrough's business show, comprising an exhibit of the same display that has attracted wide attention in New York, is scheduled as an event of the week to be held at the Henry Grady hotel. In addition to salesmen of this territory, a large number of visitors are expected to view the show, G. W. Eakins, local manager, stated.

CHURCH LEADERSHIP SCHOOL OPENS TODAY

Program for Meetings at First Christian Church Announced.

A six-day training school for Christian leadership will open this afternoon at the First Christian church under direction of the Rev. E. B. Quick, of Atlanta, southeastern superintendent of religious education for the Christian church.

The Sunday session will be held at 2:30 o'clock while daily sessions will run from 5 o'clock until 9 o'clock with an hour taken for dinner between 6 and 7 o'clock. This meal will be served at the church to permit those who wish to come directly from their work to the school.

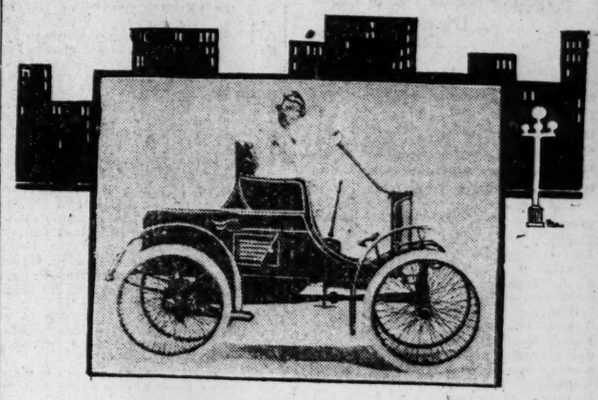

At the daily sessions the hour from 5 to 6 o'clock will be devoted to group discussions, led by faculty members, on such subjects as leadership training, adult work, fine arts in religious education, the worship program, educational evangelism, training in stewardship, Christian endeavor, and young people's conference.

GALLSTONES KILL MILLIONS ANNUALLY

According to eminent medical authorities, Gallstones exact even a greater toll of lives than modern warfare. It is estimated that every year millions of people die directly or indirectly from Gallstones or kindred ailments. An old German doctor, Dr. Hildebrand, devoted years in an effort to find a Gallstone cure. His efforts were spured on by the fact that he was a sufferer himself. After numerous experiments he at last found a treatment that cured him of his Gallstones. The old doctor then prescribed this treatment to other sufferers. The amazing results they report is convincing evidence of the merit of his treatment. For a limited time through the Dr. Hildebrand Laboratories, Dept. 719, 155 N. Union Ave., Chicago, Ill., sufferers everywhere may obtain a test of this marvelous treatment free. Anyone troubled with Gallstones, Liver or Stomach ailments should send their name at once.—(adv.)

J. C. Cook To Speak.

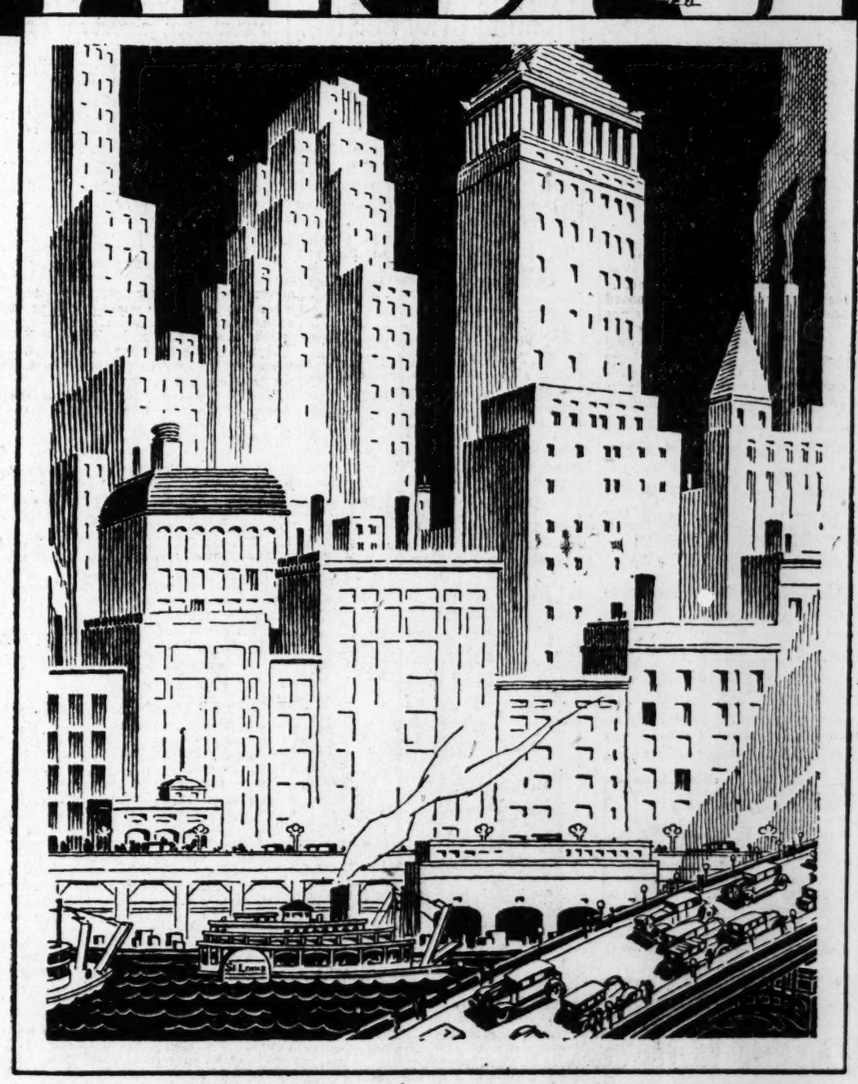

John C. Cook, great sachem of Georgia, will be the principal speaker at "homecoming" of the Red Men of Natahalie Tribe, No. 98, at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, in the Red Men's wigwam, 160 Central avenue. The entertainment feature of the program will be selections by members of the mandolin club of M. Rich & Bros. company.

Following the report of the Union station committee, a resolution was unanimously adopted urging immediate action in the construction of a new station and the committee was instructed to put forth every effort to get the work under way as soon as possible. The auditorium committee, consisting of Reuben R. Arnold, Gordon Burnett, John A. Sibley, Wade H. Davis and J. J. Haverty, was continued and given instructions to cooperate with the convention bureau in securing an adequate auditorium for the city. A new committee was appointed to cooperate with the committee of council in the matter of a proposed new bond issue for Atlanta.

D. I. Cooper, of Cooper and Cooper, architects, urging a uniform movement in the construction of the viaducts area, agreed to prepare a sketch to be published in the near future, showing an outline of the uniform reconstruction of the fronts of buildings in this section.

The association went on record as indorsing the proposal to change the name of Decatur street to East Marietta street, also as advocating the merging of Washington street, Courtland street and Juniper street into one great thoroughfare to be known as Washington boulevard.

Psychology Lecture.

"Open Secrets of Personality, Success and Prosperity" will be the subject of the lecture in practical psychology to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. The public is invited.

DRINK WATER FREELY IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleans the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Emergency Medical Supply Is Received in Record Time

Rushing emergency medical supplies is becoming one of the most important missions of modern aviation. A notable instance of this valuable humanitarian work was written recently, when influenza was epidemic throughout large sections of the country.

Washington, D. C., was severely hit. The demand for remedies was so heavy that a large chain of drug stores completely exhausted its supplies of Vapex, a germicidal inhalant discovered in England and recently manufactured in this country.

The president of the chain received insistent calls from all his 31 stores to the effect that supplies had disappeared. Faced with a heavy loss of sales unless fresh shipments were immediately available, new supplies were ordered rushed by plane from New York. The sister ship of Colonel Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" tuned up at the Newark airport; supplies of Vapex were rushed to the flying field and two hours and 10 minutes later had arrived in Washington, 230 miles away. Trucks of the People's Drug Stores were waiting at the Washington airport and distributed the shipment immediately. The whole transaction, from the actual order to delivery of the supplies in Washington, required only a few hours.

Formation of Thrift Habit Urged by Willis A. Sutton

The following statement on thrift was issued Saturday by Dr. Willis A. Sutton, Atlanta superintendent of schools:

"I have often said that thrift may rightly be termed as the mother of many virtues. Three-fourths of the heartaches of the world have their source and origin in financial difficulties. The Bible has rightly said that the love of money is the root of all evil, and a parallel passage might have read as follows: The lack of money is the source of many troubles. Realizing in my own personal experience the need of such training in youth and having suffered from the lack of it in my own life, it has been one of my chief concerns as an educator to provide the opportunities for the formation of the habit in the children of this generation.

"The first act of my school administration about eight years ago was to call together the principals and to formulate plans for a system of thrift teaching in our public schools. This plan was presented to the board of education and adopted, and since that time there has been a regular weekly banking day in the public schools of Atlanta. The pupils of the schools now carry a balance of more than $200,000 in the Fulton National bank and during that time have taken in more than a million dollars in the Atlanta public schools. And these figures represent the smallest result of our work.

Real Benefits.

"The inculcation of the habit of thrift, the idea of having a regular day to bank money, the training in banking methods and procedure—all these are the real benefit accruing to the boy or girl who gets in the habit of knowing that there is a banking day and that he or she should make a deposit regularly and who keeps up this practice for 13 years of school life will not be likely to forget or neglect it throughout the remaining days of life. In fact, I believe that no habit consistently followed through the 13 years of school life will be able to be broken in after life. The thrift habit, therefore, is the greatest of moral advantages as far as our banking system is concerned.

"The boy or girl who cultivates the habit of thrift will throw no money away on cigarettes, cigars, tobacco or alcoholic drinks. He will have thoroughly mastered the idea of saving money. He will know that the expenditure of money for these things will cut down the amount of his deposits, the amount of his accumulation. Therefore, the boy or girl who becomes accustomed to saving money regularly will in time eliminate these wicked and unwholesome habits.

Budgeting of Time.

"The student who cultivates the habit of thrift in money soon comes to apply the same principle to his time. He who budgets his money will have created in his brain an impression that will make him able to budget his time. He who has saved time has saved life. So that the thrift habit is the mother of the time-saving habit in life. And so we might apply this same principle to all of the moral virtues, and so we will find that the boy or girl who has acquired the habit of thrift will not be extravagant in clothes, in what he eats, nor will he spend his money on useless luxuries, knowing that he is lessening his opportunity for accumulating.

"Therefore, I think we might rightly say that thrift is the mother of virtues."

MOREHOUSE TO OPEN $300,000 CAMPAIGN

Morehouse college, local institution for the training of young negro men, is launching this week a campaign for $300,000 to match a like amount recently offered the institution conditionally by the general education board, of New York city. Roy H. Tolleson, a specialist in this line, is in charge of the work and has opened headquarters at 409 Palmer building, where he is rapidly shaping up far-reaching plan for the campaign which will be conducted in several stages. There will be first, a campaign among the faculty and students; then the local alumni and the colored people of Atlanta will be appealed to; then the white people of Atlanta; and finally a general campaign among alumni and friends of the institution north and south.

The campus campaign will begin Monday, under the chairmanship of R. W. Riley, assisted by Vice Chairmen J. H. Wheeler and O. M. Beverly, eight captains and a working organization of sixty. A campus goal of $15,000 has been adopted, and advance subscriptions and the interest manifested indicate that this amount will be oversubscribed. Immediately following the campus campaign the citizens of Atlanta will be given an opportunity to assist. The program is under the general supervision of the board of trustees, which is headed by Dr. Carter Helm Jones.

Morehouse college, with an enrollmen of 400, is one of the most important negro educational institutions in the country. Established in 1867 by William J. White, of Augusta, a former slave, with an enrollment of 40, it has steadily grown to a position of major influence. Its alumni number many of the most prominent negroes in the nation, among them being ten college presidents. The school consists of the college of arts and sciences, school of religion, the academy, an evening extension division, and a summer school. The institution is given high rating and its graduates are accepted at the leading universities of the country.

The present head of Morehouse is Dr. John Hope, a native of Augusta, who has administered the affairs of the college since 1906. It now has an endowment fund of $320,000, which will be increased to $920,000 on the successful termination of the present campaign.

Accused Negro Loses Clothing Fleeing Police

The comic strip characters jump out of their shoes and clothes when registering astonishment or similar emotions, but the creations of pen and ink were outdone Saturday morning when Adolphus Battle, negro, heard pistol bullets whizzing through the air, according to county police.

County Patrolmen Willard Vinson and E. W. Wilson told the story of Adolphus' frantic endeavor to lighten himself so he could run faster. The negro was discovered carrying a gallon of "cawn" under his coat, attached to a wire looped around his neck, the officers said. When relieved of the illicit load, Adolphus took to his heels, and a couple of bullets fired into the air by Wilson only hastened his steps, the officers related.

As the negro ran, he shed a shoe, his hat, coat and sweater, but to no avail, for he was collared after a 200-yard dash, and lodged in Fulton Tower to await a benefactor who could post $200 in bond, the officers said.

HARALSON COUNTY FARMER WILL GET AWARD THURSDAY

Charles N. Long, of Bremen, Haralson county, farmer who was awarded the Southern Railway System's corn cup as the producer of the best 10 ears of corn in the south in 1928, will receive the handsome trophy from the hand of Governor L. G. Hardman in the executive offices in the state capitol at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, January 31. Sanders McDaniel, well-known Atlanta attorney, who is division counsel for the Southern, will act as master of ceremonies.

After winning first prize at the Southeastern fair, Mr. Long entered his exhibit in the competition for the Southern's cup. Exhibits from the eight states of the south served by the Southern were collected in the office of Roland Turner, general agricultural agent, at Atlanta, on December 11 and were judged by a committee of experts, consisting of Dr. Tait Butler, editor the Progressive Farmer; Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. H. W. Barre, director experiment station, Clemson College, S. C., and C. A. Cobb, editor the Southern Ruralist, Atlanta.

The cup will remain in the possession of Mr. Long until the winner of the 1929 competition is announced and his name will be engraved on it along with those of Willie Pat Boland, of Newberry, S. C., winner in 1925; James A. Patterson, of China Grove, N. C., 1926, and Dan Bickley, of Irmo, S. C., 1927.

STATE 'KIT' OFFERED BY WOMEN VOTERS

Information for Government Study Is Issued in Compact Form.

Believing that the reorganization of the state government is a paramount issue in Georgia, the Georgia League of Women Voters has given it first consideration and to provide ready information for its members and for other interested organizations has compiled a kit containing information, compiled by experts on government, interesting and accurate, which places the situation squarely before the mind of the reader.

The kit, in its completed form, contains the following:

A foreword, by the Georgia League of Women Voters.

A reprint from the Georgia Voter—"What About Georgia?"

A chart—a proposed plan for reorganization.

Questions and Answers—Are You Interested in What Becomes of Your Money?

Questions and Answers—Does Georgia Need a New Constitution?

A model Charter—prepared by a committee of experts for the National Municipal League.

A pamphlet by Sam Slate, Georgia state auditor, setting fourth conditions existing in the government now and offering plans for reorganization.

A statement on the need for a short ballot.

Suggestions for accomplishing reorganization.

Speakers' bureau.

Many Prominent Speakers.

In the speakers' bureau are:

Dr. Theodore H. Jack, chairman, men's council; professor of history and dean of graduate school, Emory university.

M. H. Bryan, associate professor, University of Georgia.

Dr. E. M. Coulter, professor of history, University of Georgia.

Judge Blanton Fortson, judge of superior court, Athens.

Dr. Cullen B. Gosnell, department of government and history, Emory university.

Mrs. L. L. Hendren, chairman of committee on efficiency in government Georgia League of Women Voters, Athens.

Miss Roberta Hodgson, professor of history, Georgia State Teachers' college, Athens.

John W. Jenkins, professor of business administration, University of Georgia.

Mrs. Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb, Georgia league chairman of ninth congressional district, Lakemont.

Dr. J. H. T. McPherson, professor of history and political science, University of Georgia.

R. C. Norman, Georgia state tax commissioner, Atlanta.

Dr. Jere M. Pound, president Georgia State Teachers' college, Athens.

Sam Slate, Georgia state auditor, Atlanta.

Mrs. Wellington Stevenson, president Georgia League of Women Voters, Decatur.

Mrs. R. L. Turman, third regional director—National League of Women Voters, Atlanta.

The chief virtue of the kit is "compactness." Some of the material contained therein has appeared in the press at one time or another, but newspapers are easily destroyed—thus, when the individual wishes to refer to an article, and the paper is not to be found, his attention is likely to be diverted in the time that will be consumed in writing to the state capitol for the required information.

The kits will be distributed by the Georgia league to organizations wishing to undertake a study of the simplification of state government, as well as to individuals. Details of distribution will be worked out at once and announced through the press.

3 WILL BE GRADUATED FROM NORMAL SCHOOL

Final Annual Exercises for Training Institution To Be Held Thursday.

Graduation exercises for the senior class of the Atlanta Normal Training school, which will be suspended at the close of the current semester, will take place at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Miss Emma Wesley, principal, announced Saturday.

Margaret Winstandly Kelley will receive a certificate of graduation from the normal school, while Margaret DeMonier Bowling and Emily Bealer Calhoun will be graduated from the kindergarten primary course. The certificates will be presented by George W. Powell, president of the board of education. The presentation will be preceded by a short program participated in by students, former students and teachers at the school.

The normal training school was launched in Atlanta in 1906, teachers with wide experience offering their services in instructing other teachers who sought a wider knowledge of their work than they had obtained in college or in practical experience. By 1914 the school had become an important unit in teacher training and was given permanent quarters in the Lee street school with Miss Azile Simpson as director of training. Miss Kate Massey was assistant principal from 1915 to 1919, when Miss Simpson assumed the duties of the position, which she still holds.

When Dr. Willis A. Sutton became superintendent of Atlanta city schools he realized the good being brought about by the training school and immediately launched an effort to widen its scope. After much work by Dr. Suttson, in cooperation with the teachers, the school attained its present standard, now being ranked among the leading teacher training institutes in the south.

WARS ON GAME WASTE

Commissioner Twitty Issues Booklet to Wild Life Lovers.

Two conservation booklets, urging Georgians to avoid waste of the game life and pointing out the need of replenishing the stores of wild life as they are used up, have just been issued by the state department of game and fish, under the direction of Peter S. Twitty, commissioner. One of the pamphlets is titled: "Suppose We Never Planted Anything?" while the other bears on its cover the words: "What God Gave to Georgia. What Are You Doing With It Today?"

As explained by the booklets: "Conservation does not mean idleness or non-use. Nature never intended anything it created, on the earth, or in it, to be a thing of non-use; a purposeless something. At the same time the abundant creation of none of the resources given to us was to encourage wasteful abuse or extravagant consumption."

MOTORISTS MUST GET NEW LICENSES, CARSWELL WARNS

Warning that all motorists driving their automobiles after February 1 without 1929 license tags will subject themselves to prosecution was sounded Saturday by George H. Carswell, secretary of state, in calling attention to sales so far this year amounting to slightly more than 32 per cent of the total for last year, although but five days remain in which cars may be operated without 1929 tags.

The attorney-general's office, in an interpretation of the motor vehicle license law, said that February 1 is the last day upon which automobiles may be driven without liability to penalty, if they do not carry the new plates.

Mr. Carswell said that sales so far this year showed a total of 92,721 tags and $1,305,435.91 in receipts, as compared with 70,143 tags and $943,982.95 in receipts up to the same day last year. He added that he did not consider the sale of tags as far advanced as it was a year ago, due to a change in the law which shortened the time in which cars may be used with old licenses.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION

VOL. LXI., No. 226. ATLANTA, GA., SUNDAY MORNING, JANUARY 27, 1929.

King Winter Lays Barrage of Snow For Zero Attack

All Sections of Country Held in Icy Grasp of Boreas' Worst Blow in Decade.

ROADS IN WEST BLOCKED BY SNOW

Eighteen-Year-Old Youth Freezes in Dakota; Blizzards Sweep Across Western Plains.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Winter today had encased the north, south and middle west in snow and subzero weather and pelted the east with snow, sleet and rain.

In some areas the weather was moderating but for the most part a continuance of the cold wave with more snow and freezing temperatures was predicted.

The heavy snowfall afforded employment to many, who supplemented regular street, road and track crews of cities, state highway departments and railroads.

The storms' widespread intensity brought discomfort and hardship in several states and accounted for the eighth death of the week in the northwest. Two men were dead in the east, two in Chicago and one at Gary, Ind. Icy pavements, when they were not buried in snow, caused many accidents.

Roads Piled With Snow.

In many rural districts of the midwest, driving was impossible with roads piled high with snow. Telegraph and telephone wires were down in many communities.

Wisconsin, one of the states hardest hit, experienced the worst snowstorm in years. Men worked throughout the night opening roads to isolated towns. Miles of communication lines were down in northern counties where all highways were reported blocked.

Passengers on the Milwaukee train, No. 46, were marooned at Deansville, Wis., near Waterloo, Iowa. They suffered no hardship.

Freight service of the Northwestern road between Milwaukee and Madison, Wis., was cancelled and ticket sales on the Superior, (Wisconsin) division were stopped as were ticket sales on the northern division between Horigon and Oshkosh. Freight trains marooned on both divisions were forced to wait for the wind to abate before relief could reach them.

Bus traffic in Superior was at a standstill and workmen dug through huge drifts in the streets. At Lacrosse, almost completely isolated, all traffic was suspended.

The frozen body of an 18-year-old youth was found near Linton, N. D., and state highway crews labored overtime opening blocked roads in Minnesota and the two Dakotas. The temperature was below zero.

Twenty-two persons in passenger cars and motor busses were marooned for 36 hours in a blizzard on the Red desert until cowboys rescued them. They arrived safely at Rock Springs, Wyo., although some suffered from exposure and hunger. Three women and two children were among the victims that suffered in the 30-below weather.

Seven inches of snow fell at Boise, Idaho, in 24 hours and roads were blocked in the vicinity of Salt Lake City and Bingham, Utah. A near-by mining town was isolated.

In Montana more snow and continued cold was promised today but slightly warmer weather was predicted for Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and west Texas.

BLIZZARDS SWEEP WESTERN RANGES.

Salt Lake City, January 26.—(AP) Blizzards swept across the sheep ranges of northeastern Utah today, marooning large flocks and leaving scores of animals frozen to death or starving in snow drifts.

From Mada, in the center of the sheep country, came a report that the mercury dropped to 38 degrees below zero, bringing the coldest weather ever recorded there. Sheepmen reported their flocks were starving and freezing to death and it was impossible to reach them.

Fifteen inches of snow fell at Dragon, in southern Unitah county. Ten inches of snow fell at Ouray, 35 miles south of Vernal.

A heavy snow was falling in Salt Lake City today. The state highway department had emergency crews attempting to keep the highways open.

CANADA SUFFERS COLDEST MONTH.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, January 26. (AP)—January apparently will be set down as the coldest month on record in Manitoba. Sub-zero temperatures have prevailed through western Canada, and particularly in this province, for several weeks. The forecast is for continued cold weather. At Minnedosa yesterday and today the temperature was 40 below, the lowest mark in the western dominion.

12 MINERS KILLED IN COAL WORKING IN WEST VIRGINIA

Two Unaccounted for After Explosion; Rescue Workers Locate Dozen Bodies in Ruins.

Kingston, W. Va., January 26.—(AP)—Twelve miners were known to be dead and two were unaccounted for tonight following an explosion in the mine of the Kingston Pocahontas Coal company here today. Sixty-nine men were in the workings at the time of the blast and of this number 55 escaped. Rescue workers who found the bodies of the 12 men believed the two missing workers had perished, as the bodies located were scorched and in some instances badly burned.

Fifty-three of the underground workers fled to safety through an entry on the opposite side of a mountain from the main shaft and walked two miles back to the mine offices. Two were later found by rescue crews who said the miners were slowly working their way to the entrance when picked up. One of the latter men, G. W. Williams, was suffering from after-damp and shock.

While the mine employs 500 men, only 69 were on duty when the blast rocked the workings early today. It was some time before it was known that anyone had escaped and then the 53 men appeared over the brow of the mountain after their long tramp in the cold.

Rescuers carrying oxygen helmets advanced cautiously into the gas-filled entrys soon after the detonation. They were still searching the workings tonight. R. M. Lambie, chief of the West Virginia department of mines, was in charge of the rescue work. He was aided by safety squads from near-by mines.

NEW HEALTH CODE ASKED FOR STATE

Revision of Statutes Is Called for in Resolution of Georgia Associaton of Health Officers.

Recommendations calling for a redraft of Georgia's public health laws along strictly modern lines, with the object of raising the state's health standard, were adopted at the closing session of the Georgia Health Officers' association convention here Saturday.

A committee was appointed to study the situation and submit its findings to the incoming legislature in time to insure action this year, if possible, and a program discussed which would make personnel and standards as high in country districts as in towns and cities.

Would Amend Statute.

According to the resolution adopted the Ellis health law, which creates and regulates the public health movement in this state, would be amended so as to divide the state into about sixteen health districts, with practically ten counties to a district. A health officer would be appointed by the state board of health to take charge of each district, and at least one trained nurse would be employed by the county board of education and the county board of health in each county with offices connecting with the county superintendent of schools. Their duties would be prescribed by agreement with the state board of education and the state board of health."

The suggestions for change were made by Joseph S. Stewart, professor of secondary education and state examiner to medical colleges, of Athens.

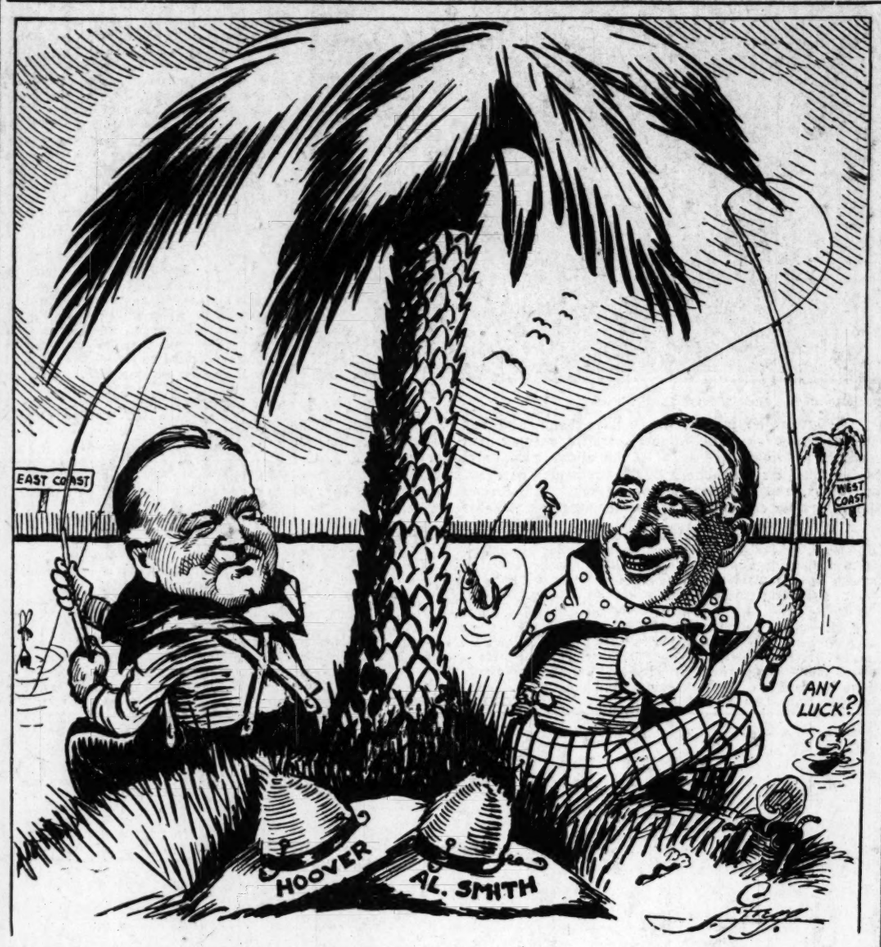

It was further recommended that perhaps three-fifths of the salary of the nurses would be paid partly of board of education funds, the remainder to be paid by the county commissioners from county funds. The sixteen medical officers would be paid by the state board of health from funds appropriated by the legislature for that purpose. Cities and large communities would still be permitted to furnish special medical officers working in cooperation with district medical officers. All teacher training institutes, it was recommended, would be required to give a two semester hour course in health so that graduates could cooperate more intelligently with the nurse and medical officers.

Ellis Heads Committee.

The committee named to redraft the present law to make it conform with the recommendations was made up of: Colonel R. C. Ellis, author of the Ellis health law, of Americus; Governor Hardman, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, state commissioner of health; State Superintendent of Schools M. L. Duggan; Dr. Alan H. Bunce, of the Georgia Medical association, and Mr. Stewart. They are expected to report their findings at a mid-year meeting of the association in Macon this May.

Before adjourning the association voted to consider entrance into the American Public Health association. The principal speaker in the final session was Mayor Gordon Saussy, of Savannah.

Kaiser's Birthday Revives Wrangle Over War Guilt

DIPLOMATS DENY KAISER'S VIEWS

Girard, Clemenceau and Polk Disagree With Many Historians as to Germany's Position.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—Diplomats today refused to lift from Germany the burden of responsibility for the world war in their comment on the statement of Kaiser Wilhem that Germany was not prepared for war in 1914 and that Germany wanted peace.

One of the most outspoken of the diplomats was James W. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany at the time the mobilization orders were given.

He pointed out that the former kaiser declared Germany was fighting a defensive warfare, that he had claimed Germany wanted peace and that he maintained France was the aggressor.

Georges Clemenceau, war-time premier of France, dismissed the statement as "childish" and "not worth wasting my words on."

Statement Childish.

The statement was read to Clemenceau and he paid keen attention to the reading. Now and then a smile flitted across the face. Occasionally he would shrug his shoulders. His bushy eyebrows arched noticeably at two or three of the statements.

"It is not worth wasting my words," he finally responded and added that the statement was "childish."

When it was pointed out that since he was one of the few statesmen living who was familiar with the diplomatic and political background of the events leading to the war, the "Tiger" grinned and said:

"I already have said more than I intended."

"The fact is that the kaiser claimed falsely that France invaded Belgium and that French flyers flew over Nuremburg," said Mr. Gerard. "The kaiser, under the constitution, could not declare an offensive warfare, but on this basis he declared a defensive war.

"Germany was so ready for war that she put an enormous force into the field. I was told by German generals that she had 12,000,000 men under arms. They all appeared on the day of the mobilization order in brand-new uniforms, guns and equipment. It looked as if Germany was getting ready for warfare."

Hid Behind Queen.

But seated in the quiet study of his Fifth avenue home Gerard, with a gesture, urged that all this war talk cease and that talk of responsibility only tended to stir up bitter embers which the peoples of the world should forget.

Gerard spared the German monarch none. He urged that those who spoke of the kaiser as the German "war lord" and a great militarist would be silent.

"He proved himself because, after parading around in a uniform all of his life with an enormous sword about four and a half feet long, instead of putting himself in charge of a troop of cavalry and charging the American lines he sought refuge behind the skirts of the Queen of Holland. That might have been prudent of a college professor, but it certainly destroyed his reputation as a warrior," Gerard said.

Historian from Germany.

Gerard's statement was supported somewhat by Frank L. Polk, counsellor in the office of secretary of state during the war and now a practicing attorney in New York city. He said the former kaiser's statement "soft 57 Members of Wilhelm's Family Arrive at Doorn To Celebrate 70th Birth Anniversary.

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
Chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press.

Doorn, Holland, January 26.—(AP) The largest family reunion of the house of Hohenzollern which has gathered since the outbreak of the world war in 1914, assembled here today to celebrate ex-Kaiser Wilhem's 70th birthday tomorrow. All told, there were, including the former emperor himself, 57 members of the family present.

The general family joy was dampened by two cases of illness and the strained relations with Wilhem's oldest sister, Princess Victoria, because of her marriage to Alexander Subkoff. She was among the absentees. Another absentee was Prince Henry, brother of the exiled ruler. He was kept at Kiel by an attack of influenza, but he sent his oldest son, Prince Waldemar, and the latter's wife, to represent him.

Hermine Is Ill.

The deepest shadow of Wilhelm's happiness was cast by the sudden illness today of his present wife, Princess Hermine. She was seized with chickenpox shortly after breakfast and isolated in her room. This misfortune cheated her out of the first opportunity since her marriage to be ranked as "empress" before the whole clan of Hohenzollern.

The ex-kaiser found solace in the fact that all six of his children and all 19 of his grandchildren had arrived here. The other relatives consisted of two sisters, one sister-in-law, two brothers-in-law, four nephews, one niece, three step-children and eighteen cousins of varying degrees of kinship.

Frederick August III, ex-king of Saxony, was also present. But he was the only one of the former kings of German states in attendance on the ex-emperor. The royal families of Bavaria and Wurtenberg were conspicuously absent.

Wilhelm's favorite child, his daughter Victoria Louise—now the wife of the Duke of Brunswick—followed her usual method of travel and arrived with her family in an automobile which she had driven herself across snow-covered Germany and Holland. She contracted a heavy cold on the journey and was almost a member of the sick list tonight.

Full Dress Affair.

There was an informal dinner at Doorn castle tonight for the grown-ups of the family, but tomorrow the children will be present at all functions.

Divine services are to be conducted by the Rev. D. R. Vogel, of Potsdam, who was court chaplain in the old days.

The former kaiser himself selected the text for the sermon and asked that it be based on the sixteenth verse of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, which is:

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

All participants in the celebration have been ordered to appear in Doorn tomorrow in full regalia. The men are to wear military uniforms, all their decorations, plumed helmets and long boots. The ex-kaiser himself will don the uniform of his old first regiment of royal guards.

ROYALIST AND LABOR WANT KAISER BACK.

Berlin, January 26.—(AP)—Monarchists, not only in Berlin but in many other centers of the country, held meetings tonight in anticipation of the celebration at Doorn tomorrow of the seventieth birthday of the former Em-

U. S. SENATOR SAYS FRANCE IS GUILTY

Owen Quotes Diplomatic Exchanges in Defending Wilhelm, Who Was at Sea on 24th.

Washington, January 26.—(United News.)—The former kaiser is right in denying Germany's war guilt, former Senator Robert L. Owen, democrat, said in an interview tonight with the United News.

A study of world war origins was made by Owen when he was in the senate, where he served on the foreign relations committee. Later he made a sensational speech in the senate, denying that Germany started the war, for which he was attacked in his own state, Oklahoma. Senator Owen recently published a book on war guilt, which received international attention.

"The substantial truth of what Wilhelm states on his birthday as to the origin of the world war," continued Owen, "can no longer be suppressed or denied.

Russian-French Combine.

"A multitude of disinterested scholars of the highest class have exhaustively examined and reported on the truth disclosed by the secret archives and personal statements from statesmen of Russia, Serbia, Belgium, France and Great Britain.

"The truth is that a few leaders of Russia and France entered into a secret combine to attack Germany if Austria should mobilize, with an understanding that they would put the blame of the world war on Germany.

"This treaty was interpreted by the Czar Alexander III and by General Boisdeffre, who said to the czar, 'Mobilization is war.' Alexander III replied, 'I so regard it.' In other words, if Austria mobilized, it was an act of war by a member of the Triple Alliance, which justified an attack on Germany.

"Russia backed a Pan-Slav intrigue of Serbia against the Austro-Hungarian empire, which meant the disintegration of that empire unless checked. This Pan-Slav intrigue resulted in the murder of Ferdinand, crown prince of the Austro-Hungarian empire, with the connivance of Serbian officials and with the knowledge of the highest authorities in Serbia.

Britain Ready for War.

"The part of the intrigue of Russian and French leaders was to cover up mobilization and war with diplomatic negotiations pretending to favor peace. The truth of this matter is fully disclosed now and all informed historians know it.

"On the 24th of July the British naval forces were completely mobilized and ready for war. The British regulars were marching to the front on Sunday morning, August 1, through the streets of London, under a secret agreement to cooperate with France. On the 24th Belgium was completely mobilized, and the Belgian foreign office so advised its ambassadors in a circular issued as of that date.

"On July 24 the French fleet had been withdrawn from the defense of the French coast on the Atlantic and called into the Mediterranean in reliance on British protection of the French Atlantic coast. On the 24th the French took the initial steps for mobilizing their forces and ordered their African troops to Europe. On the 24th Serbia took the active steps beginning its mobilization. On the 24th the Russian council met at St. Petersburg and General Dobrorolski, in

STATE EDUCATORS ASK FULL SURVEY OF SCHOOL SYSTEM

Association of Georgia Colleges Requests Governor To Call for Thorough Probe.

Unanimous passage of a resolution requesting Governor Hardman to include in his message to the general assembly of Georgia an urgent appeal for the enactment of a bill providing for a "thorough comprehensive and impartial study of the educational system of Georgia to acquaint the people and their representatives with the present conditions and the best possible procedure for their improvement" featured the Saturday afternoon session of the thirteenth annual meeting of the Association of Georgia Colleges.

The appointment of a committee to make recommendations in regard to a state survey followed an open discussion of the question at the opening session Friday night, at which time R. H. Powell, of the Georgia State Woman's college, the presiding officer, President M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, and President Spright Dowell, of Mercer, all urged the need of such a survey in the near future.

Sanford Named Chairman.

Dr. S. V. Sanford was appointed chairman of this committee, and its report Saturday afternoon met the unanimous approval of the assembly. The preamble states that the present school facilities in Georgia do not measure up to what the people of Georgia desire for their sons and daughters, and that the people of this state wish to know the true conditions and the needs of the state as a whole.

It was therefore resolved that the governor request the necessary legislation to provide for this survey by a "non-political education commission to consist of ten outstanding men in business and the professions, school men excepted, and well known for their public-spiritedness, to be appointed by the governor from the state at large and to serve until the said commission, through the governor, shall have submitted its final report, including an appropriate bill embodying the recommendations."

A committee consisting of five men, headed by Dr. Sanford, was then appointed to take the matter up with Governor Hardman at an early date.

Powell Presides.

The morning session Saturday opened at 10 o'clock, with President Powell presiding. Following the roll call, reading of the minutes and the appointment of committees, Dr. Sanford spoke on "A Uniform Freshman Curriculum for Georgia Colleges," and Dr. Leon P. Smith gave a talk on "Group Insurance for College Faculties."

The afternoon session opened with the annual report on high schools by Dr. J. S. Stewart, who gave statistics showing the comparative grades for freshmen in 16 Georgia colleges with seniors in high schools.

The report of the commission on junior colleges by Dr. L. L. Hendren resulted in the passage of four resolutions covering the status of junior colleges, conditions governing the transfer of advanced credits, and the definition of a junior college.

The election of officers, which closed the meeting, resulted as follows: President, W. D. Furry, of Shorter college; vice president, Major G. P. Butler, of Augusta Junior college; secretary and treasurer, W. D. Hooper, of the University of Georgia.

JOHN MARTIN, 72, ENGINEER, PASSES

Native of Scotland Was One of Pioneers in Georgia Gold Mining and Was Large Landowner.

John Martin, prominent Georgia engineer and capitalist, died Saturday afternoon at his residence, 21 Glenwood drive, in his seventy-third year, after an extended illness. Mr. Martin had lived in Atlanta since 1912 and was identified with the engineering division of the Georgia Railway and Power company from the time of its organization until about three years ago, when he was forced to retire because of ill health.

A native of Dundee, Scotland, he was the son of Alexander T. and Jean Cooper Martin. He was educated in several Scotch and English schools, and as a young man worked for some time on the Dundee Courier, one of the oldest and best known of the Scotch newspapers.

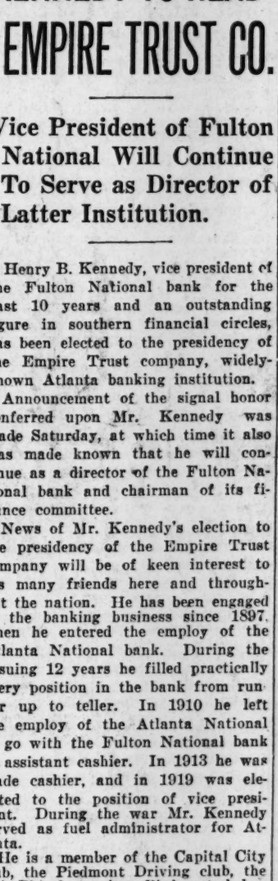

Studied Engineering.

Leaving his journalistic pursuits in 1882, he took up the study of electricity and engineering in London. In 1885 and again in 1887 he visited the United States, and on each trip came to Georgia before returning to London. His final trip to the state so impressed him that he decided to make his home here. Accordingly he returned to the state again in 1889 and took up his residence in White county.

Bank President

HENRY B. KENNEDY,
Newly-elected President of the Empire Trust Company.

KENNEDY TO HEAD EMPIRE TRUST CO.

Vice President of Fulton National Will Continue To Serve as Director of Latter Institution.

Henry B. Kennedy, vice president of the Fulton National bank for the past 10 years and an outstanding figure in southern financial circles, has been elected to the presidency of the Empire Trust company, widely-known Atlanta banking institution.

Announcement of the signal honor conferred upon Mr. Kennedy was made Saturday, at which time it also was made known that he will continue as a director of the Fulton National bank and chairman of its finance committee.

News of Mr. Kennedy's election to the presidency of the Empire Trust company will be of keen interest to his many friends here and throughout the nation. He has been engaged in the banking business since 1897, when he entered the employ of the Atlanta National bank. During the ensuing 12 years he filled practically every position in the bank from runner up to teller. In 1910 he left the employ of the Atlanta National to go with the Fulton National bank as assistant cashier. In 1913 he was made cashier, and in 1919 was elevated to the position of vice president. During the war Mr. Kennedy served as fuel administrator for Atlanta.

He is a member of the Capital City club, the Piedmont Driving club, the Chi Phi fraternity, Piedmont lodge, F. & A. M., Scottish Rite Masons and the Yaarab Temple Shrine. He also is chairman of the bond sinking fund commission of the city of Atlanta and president of the Bell House.

Company Formed in 1911.

The Empire Trust company, which he now heads, is known throughout this section as a strong institution. It was organized in 1911 in a conservative way under the name of the Empire Trust & Safe Deposit company, the name being changed to the Empire Trust company in 1917. With offices in what was then known as the Empire building, now the Atlanta Trust company building—it had assets of $100,000. The late W. B. Stovall was elected president and remained president until his death on December 8, 1928.

The company maintained an insurance and real estate department; later organized a mortgage loan and trust department, and following this a bond department was established which handled largely Liberty loans and other government bonds. This department has never engaged in actively handling general market securities. The company does a large business in the mortgage loan department and in addition to representing several life insurance companies, for which it acts as agent in making loans, it has hundreds of clients both locally and in other states.

In 1923 a savings department was established which has grown steadily. At the present time the company has over $350,000 in savings accounts, and during the nearly 12 years of its existence its assets have grown to more than $850,000, the present capital and surplus being $236,000.

In May, 1927, the business of the company had incerased to such an extent that it had to have more commodious quarters and it was moved from the Atlanta Trust company building to 54 North Broad street, the new location being much larger and one which readily lent itself to remodeling to such an extent as to meet the company's growing needs.

Trustees and Officers.

Trustees of the company are as follows: Dameron Black, chairman of the board, Empire Trust company; secretary-treasurer Trust Company of Georgia, and comptroller, Atlanta and Lowry bank; Charles N. Dannals, general manager, Atlanta Milling company; Mr. Kennedy, G. C. McWhirter, vice president and treasurer; Dr. O. L. Miller, Charlotte, N. C.; Dr. Stewart R. Roberts, Atlanta; Luther Z. Rosser, chief judge, municipal court of Atlanta; Charles B. Shelton, member Dorsey, Shelton & Dorsey, lawyers; Frank E. Shumate, vice president, Georgia Power company; West-

175 NEW OFFICES OPEN DURING 1928 BUREAU HEAD SAYS

Every Part of Country Represented in Concerns; Local Pay Rolls Augmented by $7,000,000

BRIGHT INDUSTRIAL FUTURE IS PAINTED

Summary by Bureau Shows That 585 Concerns Have Located Here Since Its Organization.

The growth of Atlanta's commercial and industrial interests during 1928 show the city and its surrounding territory enjoying a rapid and steady development probably unequaled by another section of the country, the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce says in its annual report made public Saturday.

The report, submitted by the bureau's chairman, Ivan Allen, says that during 1928 175 new business concerns have chosen Atlanta as the location for a factory, warehouse or zone headquarters. Every section of the country is represented and these concerns have or will furnish employment to more than 3,000 persons with an estimated annual payroll of $7,000,000.

The results of the efforts of the bureau, the report says, like those of the Forward Atlanta advertising campaign, are not confined to Atlanta's corporate limits but make themselves visible in all sections of Atlanta's trade territory. The great southeastern territory for which Atlanta serves as a gateway contains raw materials and manufacturing advantages of a highly diversified nature and offers attractive fields for investment. Many of the prospects now in the files of the industrial bureau will not locate in Atlanta because of certain advantages peculiar to local conditions elsewhere in the city's trade territory.

Big Gains in Four Years.

In a summary of its four years of activity the bureau reports that since January, 1925, when it was organized, 585 new concerns have located in the city giving employment to more than 15,000 persons and providing annual pay rolls totalling more than $26,000,000.

Mr. Allen's bureau also foresees the remarkable growth of Atlanta as a manufacturing and distribution center as evidence of the recognition that the city and the south have received from leaders in national commercial affairs, adding that at no period in Atlanta's history has the future held forth so many important developments.

Of the 175 new companies locating in Atlanta during 1928 the bureau's report shows that four occupy sites purchased and seven occupy buildings especially erected. Of the remainder 45 are in ground floor stores, 12 occupy second floors and lofts, 96 have space in office buildings, six occupy special sites and only five have not determined upon a permanent location.

The following types of businesses are represented:

Ten building and electrical contractors; 16 manufacturers; seven wholesale distributors; 13 retail distributors; 89 sales offices; two transportation agencies; 25 consular and service offices and 13 insurance and investment concerns.

Nine Cover Country.

Nine of these companies have the entire country for marketing territory while 15 cover the entire south and 108 confine their activities to the southeastern states. Twelve companies operate only in the state of Georgia and 31 in Atlanta and its environs.

The booklet, "Key to Atlanta," issued by the industrial bureau, has become not only an Atlanta institution but is well known through the east and middle west, where it has been distributed to various executives, libraries and research agencies. It was published during the past year and the demand for it has been heavy, the report says.

A total of 2,083 mail inquiries were handled by the bureau during 1928. One hundred and fifty-five of these, coming from industrial prospects, required special surveys giving an accurate and complete description of Atlanta's manufacturing and distributing facilities and data on the southeastern market as pertaining to each of these manufacturers. Some of the more comprehensive surveys were supplied to rubber tire manufacturers, paper, chemical, machinery, ceramic, pulp, wire, furniture, tobacco, textile, hosiery, rayon, lumber, confectionery, knit goods, motor, beverage, hospital supplies, paint and varnish and other nationally-known manufacturers. A great amount of research necessarily is done by the industrial bureau and the information developed is available for ready reference. Several prominent local engineers and chemists have contributed their services to the bureau gratis on many occasions.

In addition to the 2,083 inquiries received through the mails, approximately 5,100 persons made calls to the offices of the bureau seeking information of all kinds, and approximately 3,750 calls are answered over the telephone. These inquiries were in a number of cases out-of-town people who were making surveys for various research agencies, insurance companies and banks who are actively interested in the territory by virtue of investments or otherwise. Many Atlantans

INDIANA OIL HEAD ANSWERS CHARGES HURLED IN SENATE

Use Cloak of Immunity To Slander Without Restraint, Says Antagonist of Rockefeller.

BORAH INTIMATES JOHN D. SMEARED

Nye Demands Entire Industry Clean House To Secure Public Confidence and Esteem.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Colonel Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, imputed "falsehoods" and "slander" to his accusers tonight in a statement answering the renewed charges by Senator Nye, of North Dakota, that Stewart had given false testimony before his senate committee.

"Senators Nye and Norris set themselves up as superior to courts and juries," he declared, recalling that he had been tried and acquitted in the courts of the perjury charge that followed his apperance as a witness in the Continental Trading company investigation. "They arrogate to themselves the position of advisers to private investors and private corporations. Behind their cloak of senatorial immunity, they slander and abuse individuals without restraint."

Turning to Senator Nye's comment on Colonel Stewart's assertion that the profits in the Continental Trading company bond transaction went into dividends for the Standard oil stockholders, he said:

"The Standard Oil company, of Indiana, and its stockholders have much to boast of and nothing to apologize for. Neither Nye nor Norris have ever before had the temerity to charge that the Standard Oil company, of Indiana, had ever received any illegitimate profits from any sources. Heretofore, Senator Nye has said to the newspapers that it appeared that the time had come to attack the Standard Oil company, of Indiana."

Recovery of title to Stone Mountain property for the "sole purpose of enabling the public to carry the monument to completion" is sought in a petition filed Saturday in DeKalb superior court by S. H. Venable, Coribel Venable Orme and Robert Venable Roper against the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association. The plaintiffs allege that the monumental association not only has failed to carry out provisions specified in the deed regarding completion of the main group of the monument within 12 years, but that the defendant association has squandered several times the amount necessary to complete the work and now is hopelessly involved.

Although the main portion of the central group of the monument could have been easily completed within the 12 years specified at a cost not exceeding $250,000, the defendant was forced to abandon all work on the monument in May, 1928, on account of lack of funds with which to meet its payroll and other obligations, after having collected and spent the "stupendous sum of $1,195,845, besides incurring an indebtedness of approximately $260,800," the petition charges.

Confidence Lost, Charge.

"While these funds were collected from a generous and responsive public for monumental purposes, and have all been spent, there is nothing on the mountain to show for it, except the mutilated bust of a man, intended as a likeness of General Lee, but to whom it bears no resemblance," the plaintiffs allege. The petition charges that "the defendant has so completely lost the confidence of the public that it would be utterly impossible for it to complete said monument, even if an extension of time were granted to it."

The Venables declare in the petition that "it is the dominating desire of their lives to see a monument carved on said property in accordance with the original designs, and they, therefore, bring this suit for

"DICK" GALLOGLY'S TRIAL FOR MURDER TO OPEN TUESDAY

Alleged Accomplice of Condemned Harsh To Face Jury in Slaying of Willard Smith.

Richard Gray (Dick) Gallogly, alleged accomplice of George R. Harsh, condemned collegiate thrill slayer, will go on trial before a Fulton superior court jury Tuesday. Gallogly is charged with murder in connection with the deaths of S. H. Meeks and Willard Smith, slain in holdups. He probably will be tried for the Smith murder. Judge Virlyn B. Moore will preside.

Harsh, convicted of first degree murder by a jury a week ago Saturday and under sentence to die in the electric chair at Milledgeville March 15 and whose attorneys are expected to file a plea for a new trial Monday, will be the state's chief witness against Gallogly, Solicitor General John A. Boykin stated Saturday.

Harsh To Be Main Witness.

"George Harsh will be our main witness against the man he named as his accomplice," Mr. Boykin said. "We will have others to substantiate his testimony and I have no doubt, but that the verdict will be a vindication of the law to its fullest extent."

The solicitor general refused to go into details concerning the persons he expects to put on the stand against Gallogly, asserting, however, that he expected the chief substantiation of Harsh's testimony to come from William Mahoney, a friend and confident of both Harsh and Gallogly who, the former, in his confession of the murders of Meeks and Smith, said, was with him at the McRoberts drug store, 802 Boulevard, N. E., the night Smith was slain.

Mahoney Not On Stand.

Mahoney, who has turned state's evidence, testified before the special grand jury session which indicted Harsh and Gallogly for the murders of Meeks and Smith. He previously had made a signed sworn statement to Chief of Detectives A. Lamar Poole and though subpoenaed as a state's witness at the trial of Harsh was not put on the stand, Solicitor General Boykin declaring in his final argument before the Harsh jury that "Mahoney was not put on the stand because we have another case in which he will be a more important witness and in which his testimony will be needed more than it is now."

The solicitor general also announced that he had several other witnesses who definitely will place Gallogly on the scene of the crime and also that he intends to use F. Morgan Sutton and Jack D. Wright, both of whom Harsh appealed to the night of the Smith murder. Gallogly, Harsh said in his confession, was with him when he approached Sutton and Wright for assistance in treating a wound he had received at Smith's hand when the drugstore manager resisted the attempt to rob his store.

Other Witnesses Available.

If the state should elect to try Gallogly for the murder of Meeks, which is improbable, the solicitor general said he also had a number of witnesses who would identify the accused youth as the man who acted as lookout for Harsh while the now condemned slayer of Smith entered the A&P store at 1004 Hemphill street on the night of October 6 on a robbery mission which resulted in a gun battle and wounds fatal to the clerk, Meeks.

Reuben and Lowry Arnold, counsel for Gallogly, Saturday were reluctant to discuss their plans.

"We are going to make a determined fight for our client," Lowry Arnold, speaking for the defense, said. "We have a number of witnesses and know pretty well what the state will offer. We are ready to combat it. We are hopeful of a favorable verdict."

Robberies Rocked City.

The series of robberies which resulted in the deaths of Meeks and Smith startled Atlanta early last October, and the arrest several weeks later of Harsh and Gallogly shocked the entire city. Harsh made an immediate confession, but despite determined efforts on the part of Chief Poole, Solicitor General Boykin and Detective John W. Lowe, central figure in the police's investigation of the case, Gallogly has refrained from making any statement, save a "few in-

America Returns With Heroes and Wreck Survivors

New York Pays Homage to Stalwart Crew as Blushing Rescuer Tells Modest Story of Feat.

BABY BOY BORN AS VESSEL SINKS.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—A nine-pound boy was born on the liner America while the big ship was racing through boisterous seas to the rescue of the freighter Florida.

The baby was born in the steerage and was named George Fried Kajowski as a tribute to the America's gallant master. A small white dog named "Smiles," a cat and a canary, ship's pets, went down with the ship.

BY W. W. CHAPLIN,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—The liner America came steaming home today with the 32 Italian sailors it had saved from the ocean's fury and full details of the actual rescue were told for the first time by Harry Manning, the diminutive chief officer who was in command of the life boat.

Half-coated in ice and her high flanks smeared from the gale-whipped seas that had battered her during the rescue, the America dropped anchor at quarantine just at noon and a hundred reporters and cameramen swarmed aboard.

After Captain George Fried had been welcomed by his wife and Manning by his mother they met the newspaper men in a saloon on the boat deck and Captain Fried smilingly pointed Manning out as the real hero of the occasion.

Manning Tells Story.

Manning is less than average height and weighs 130 pounds. Seeing him there in the luxurious saloon, his face the fresh color of a boy's and his dark hair curling neatly backward from a placid brown, it was hard to think of him as the man who had flung himself into the face of almost certain death to save the crew of the Italian tramp steamer Florida.

This little sailor in blue and brass had pitted his knowledge and courage against all the force of the sea and storm, and he had won. With Senators Believe Majority Sufficient To Force Time Limit Is Now Assured.

CHAMBERLIN SEEKS TO ASSUAGE U. S.

British Leader Says Empire Is Anxious To Accord Parity to United States.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The senate today voted to stand by the house provision in the cruiser construction bill requiring that eight of the proposed 16 new warships be built in government yards.

This cleared the way for a showdown next week on the big controversy raised by President Coolidge's desire to eliminate a clause to require a start on the naval program by 1931.

While the senate argued today over the navy yard question leaders were busy counting noses for the voting engagement on the dominant issue of whether the president should be given authority to initiate and carry out the cruiser program as he might deem best.

Friends of the bill insisted tonight that Mr. Coolidge again faced defeat. The house last year rejected his proposal to knock out the time limitation provision and he has a divided party now in the senate on this point. A final vote on the bill during the coming week was freely predicted.

Senator Bingham, republican of Connecticut, offered the amendment to strike out the house provision to give the navy yards half of the 16 warships. He proposed instead that it be left to the discretion of the secretary of the navy where the ships should be built. Senator Johnson, republican, of California, remarked this would mean that the government yards probably would get none of the vessels.

The bill was amended, however, after a protest by Senator McKellar, democrat, of Tennessee, to provide that material parts not ordinarily manufactured in government plants might be manufactured for the ships at other places. The measure as amended by the senate naval committee, would have left this to the discretion of the secretary of the navy with power to purchase any part outside of government yards if the saving in cost was material. Senator Swanson, democrat, of Virginia, offered the substitute proposal which was accepted.

Of the proposed ships, 15 are cruisers and one is an aircraft carrier.

CHAMBERLAIN ANXIOUS TO REACH AGREEMENT.

Birmingham, England, January 26, (AP)—Sir Austen Chamberlain, British foreign secretary, in a speech here tonight expressed the conviction that the problem of naval armaments, which is the "only difference" with the United

Sight of Injured Girl Fatal to Aged Woman

Accident led indirectly to tragedy early Saturday night, when Mrs. G. Z. Rutherford, 72, of 3035 Mayson-Turner road, dropped dead at her home as Miss Ruby Croft, of 950 Ponce de Leon avenue, victim of an accident, was brought into the house to receive emergency treatment. Doctor gave the probable cause of death as apoplexy induced by shock.

Miss Croft suffered possible internal injuries and cuts about the face, when the car in which she was riding overturned on the Mayson-Turner road, near Mrs. Rutherford's home. E. E. Daniel, of a Tenth street address, the driver of the car, also suffered possible internal injuries and less serious bruises and cuts. He told officers that he was forced from the road by a speeding car which was being driven along the middle of the road and which did not dim its glaring lights when approaching his machine. He also stated that the car sped on after his auto crashed into a ditch.

Miss Ruby Brown, of a Tenth street address, and Hugh Mason, of Lithia Springs, passengers with Daniel, also were slightly injured.

Daniel was removed to Grady hospital by passing motorists, while Miss Croft was carried to the house in which Mrs. Rutherford lived with her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Cochrane. According to witnesses, the aged woman collapsed on sight of the injured girl.

JAMES HOLLOMON RITES CONDUCTED

BY RALPH T. JONES.

Funeral services for James A. Hollomon, associate editor of The Constitution, were held Saturday afternoon in the Central Congregational church. Mr. Hollomon died Thursday night of injuries suffered when he fell two stories down the stairwell at the Henry Grady hotel 48 hours earlier.

Following the funeral rites, the body was taken to Kernersville, N. C., for interment, leaving the Terminal station at 7:30.

Facing the gray casket in which all that was mortal of their friend and co-worker lay, with a great mass of floral tributes backing the casket and draped upon the pulpit, leaders in state and city government, famous figures in national life, fellow newspapermen, friends and admirers of the popular editor paid silent tribute to

Ellaville Boy And Teacher Being Sought

Ellaville, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—A search for Mrs. M. M. Wellons, 35-year-old school principal, and Edwin Chapman, a 17-year-old pupil, figures in a suspected elopement, today extended to Akron, Ohio, on information gleaned from school children.

Night Police Chief J. H. Holloway said he had learned that Chapman recently approached a boyhood friend with a suggestion of a trip to Akron. The student protested he had no money, the chief said, and was told that Chapman "had a way to go."

Sheriff E. C. Rigsby announced that he had information of a recent loan of $300 on the Wellon farm and payment of back salary to Mrs. Wellon amounting to $200. Her husband, a farmer who came with his wife from north Georgia five years ago, told the sheriff he had no knowledge of the whereabouts of his wife or the money.

Ellaville residents told Chief Hol-

FULTON, DEKALB MERGER PUSHED

Movement for Unification of Two Counties Gets Support of Civic and Political Groups.

Merger of DeKalb county with Fulton in which all the governmental functions of DeKalb would be absorbed by Fulton county as proposed by two grand juries of DeKalb, will be pushed by civic clubs and political leaders in that county, it became known Saturday.

There are 272 square miles of territory in DeKalb county and only 185 in Fulton. Population of Fulton county, however, is about six times as great as DeKalb, the census giving the latter 50,000. Councilmen William E. Saunders, of the twelfth ward, Kirkwood, DeKalb county, and George Lyle, of the eleventh ward, Saturday strongly advocated the change, stating that the consolidation would be mutually beneficial.

The Kirkwood Improvement club, headed by Ernest P. Titshaw, and other civic organizations in DeKalb

Dr. Woodward, of Public Welfare Division, Says Situation Is Better.

Various aspects of jail life in Georgia, notably those of general cleanliness and grouping of prisoners, have shown decided improvement during the past few years, according to Dr. Comer Woodward, acting executive secretary of the Georgia department of public welfare. The delinquency division of the department recently has finished a survey of county jails and has issued a statement in comparison with conditions encountered in surveys made in 1922 and 1924.

Another conspicuous improvement is the better attitude of jail officials, who now frequently call on the welfare department for suggestions and aid, the report states.

The accompanying table shows the percentage increase in the number of jails making outstanding improvements in certain factors:

General cleanliness, 219 per cent; window fly screens, 218 per cent; requiring prisoners to bathe, 342 per cent; heavy window screens, 175 per cent; metal painted light color, 141 per cent; hospital ward, 92 per cent; wall bunks, 79 per cent; grouping of prisoners, 43 per cent.

Additional to these improvements were noted in such significant things as the provision of adequate bedding, waterworks, residence with jails, regular laundering of bedding, discipline, meals, transfer of prisoners and various other important factors.

criminating admissions," which Chief Poole said Gallogly made verbally to him immediately after his arrest.

Members of the Harsh defense counsel refused to comment on the plea they would file Monday before Judge E. D. Thomas, who presided over the condemned youth's trial last week. William Schley Howard, Walter T. Colquitt and Ben Conyers completed their appeal Saturday and said that its formal filing before Judge Thomas was being delayed only by the absence from the city of James A. Branch, also a member of the Harsh legal staff, who is expected to return to Atlanta Monday morning.

New York Physician Perfects Simple and Easy Method of Reducing Weight

Dr. R. Newman, a licensed practicing physician, of 286 Fifth Avenue, New York, announces that he has perfected a treatment which has quickly rid fat people of excess weight. What is more remarkable is the Doctor's statement that he has successfully treated thousands of patients for fat reduction without unnecessary change of diet or burdensome exercise. He also says that fat people who suffer from chronic rheumatism, gout, asthma and high blood pressure obtain great relief from the reduction of their superfluous flesh. The Doctor has offered to send without charge to anyone who will write him, a free trial treatment to prove his claims, as well as his "Pay-when-reduced" plan. If you want to rid yourself of superfluous fat, write him today, addressing Dr. R. Newman, 286 Fifth Avenue, New York City, Dept. R.—(adv.)

C. C. Smallwood, Alleged Assailant of P. L. Dill, Sought by Police.

A quarrel believed to have been one of long standing resulted early Saturday night in the shooting of P. L. Dill, of 470 Savannah avenue, by C. C. Smallwood, of 563 Pinell street, according to police reports. Dill was struck in the right shoulder by a charge from a shotgun. He was removed to Grady hospital, where doctors did not regard his condition as dangerous.

Dill was found lying in an alley at the rear of his home at about 7 o'clock by three neighbors, L. W. Brown and Fred Sanders, of 167 Savannah street, and D. H. Bodie, of 390 Berean avenue.

Call Officers Floyd and Ratledge were summoned and went to the hospital with the wounded man. Dill admitted to them that he had been with Smallwood, but was unable to give a clear account of the shooting, and did not say definitely that Smallwood had shot him.

Patrolman Wiley, who is stationed at the hospital, later reported, however, that the wounded man confessed to him that Smallwood had shot him after they had quarreled again over a family matter which had been the cause of trouble before.

Officers went to Smallwood's home, where they found a single-barreled shotgun which, they said, had recently been discharged. Smallwood was not found, and police late Saturday night were searching for him.

modest hesitation he told how it was done.

"How did you select the eight men who went with you in the lifeboat?" he was asked. "Did you call for volunteers?"

"Everyone volunteered," he said. "I could have filled 40 boats. I chose eight whom I had worked with and knew.

"The trip to the Florida from the America wasn't so bad, except that we didn't dare to go very close because of the deckload of lumber that might have come tumbling down on us. But we got a line over and the men from the Florida began pulling themselves through the water to us.

Captain Last Rescued.

"Most of them had taken off what clothes the storm had left them so they could swim better. Some of them were badly injured and you could hear them groaning as they crawled along through the waves. We yanked them in and they lay there on the bottom of the boat, exhausted, dazed, silent.

"Captain Favoloro, of the Florida, came last. He seemed reluctant to leave his ship but at last he, too, stepped into the sea and came over. And then the real battle began. The storm was increasing and as the waves got higher my hopes went lower. I really never thought we'd make it."

It was only a 30-foot boat and it had 41 men in it. Manning said that the six oarsmen were unable to make any progress and six of the rescued Italians had to be asked to help. They responded eagerly, though they were spent with days of struggle, and in a little more than an hour the quarter mile between the two steamers was crossed.

In Nick of Time.

"If we had been minutes later," said Manning, "I don't believe we would have made it."

This point in the rescue, Manning said, marked the only instance when anyone showed any signs of being unnerved. A couple of the rescued men leaped from the lifeboat to cargo nets let down the America's side, instead of waiting to be assisted. But they were too weak and fell back, one on top of Manning, injuring his back, and the other across the lifeboat's gunwale.

They were finally all hoisted aboard and then Manning himself started up a ladder. But he was so worn with the struggle of the past two hours that he could not summon energy to pull himself up. He would have fallen into the sea, he said, had not Assistant Engineer King, of the America, dragged him up to the deck, ladder and all.

Met By City Greeters.

"It was all a matter of cooperation," he said. "The Italians did just as they were told and helped at every opportunity and everyone worked together. It was a perfect example of cooperation."

The America was met at quarantine by the city tug Macom with relatives of the heroes and city and diplomatic officials aboard and was hailed all the way up the bay by the whistles of other craft. At its Hoboken pier, Captain Fried and his wife and Manning and his mother were taken off by Police Commissioner Whalen and escorted by motorcycle police to their homes, there to rest until the official welcome ceremonies at city hall on Monday.

State and Defense Ready for Gallogly Trial

The second of Atlanta's legal battles of the decade opens Tuesday morning before Superior Court Judge Virlyn B. Moore, when Richard Gray (Dick) Gallogly goes on trial for the murder of Willard Smith, slain in a holdup on the night of October 16, 1928. The state charges Gallogly with being an accomplice of George Harsh, condemned to die in the electric chair for the murder of Smith. Gallogly is shown at the upper left and Judge Moore at the upper right. In the center is Solicitor General John A. Boykin, who will prosecute Gallogly, and below are Lowry and Reuben Arnold, noted Atlanta lawyers, who will defend the accused youth. The Fulton county courthouse is in the background.

Rescue Side Lights

BY LORENA A. HICKOK,
Associated Press Staff Writer.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—To mathematics — old-fashioned, prosaic mathematics—the crew of the Italian steamer Florida owe their lives, Captain George Fried said today as he brought them up the bay on the liner America.

His instruments and books having been washed away, Captain Giuseppe Favoloro, of the Florida, was unable to give Captain Fried his position, but he did put on the wireless his "altitude," an observation as to how high in the sky the sun had gone at a given hour. From this information Captain Fried was able to figure out where he was.

"I worked it out from that," Captain Fried said, "and I figured that I should be alongside the Florida at 6 p. m. Wednesday. We arrived at 6:04."

Captain Favoloro chose a typically Latin means of showing Chief Officer Manning's mother his gratitude to her gallant son. He kissed young Manning on the cheek.

"With your son I am now great friends," he said as he was presented to Mrs. Manning. "It is like I have known your son 20 years."

The kiss followed.

Captain Favoloro's greeting to Mrs. Fried was more formal. Very pale, with a bruise on his face and his hand in a sling, and wearing a grey suit presented to him by one of the America's passengers, the young captain of the Florida bowed low over her hand.

"I am very, very happy to meet Mrs. Fried," he said huskily. Mrs. Fried was all sympathy.

He told Mrs. Fried that he hoped to get another ship right away. "I am like a fish out of water when I am on land," he said.

Captain Favoloro is only 33 years old. He has followed the sea since he was 12, and was made a captain five years ago.

"Aren't you tired of welcoming me?" Captain Fried asked Police Commissioner Grover A. Whalen, chairman of the mayor's welcoming committee, as they met on the swaying gangplank that led from the Macom into the America.

"I never get tired of welcoming you, Captain Fried," Whalen replied.

"It was a pitiful sight to see that little lifeboat battling her way back to us through that sea Wednesday night," Captain Fried told Commissioner Whalen. "It was a horrible thing to look at. When they finally came alongside, I saw that Manning had the rescued crew packed into the bottom of the boat like sardines. He'd had to pack them down that way for ballast."

"That radio operator on the Florida was a dandy," Captain Fried said. "From the time we got their first S. O. S. he never left his instrument. Whenever we gave him a tick he was right there."

"That radio operator," Munzio di Gangi, turned out to be an exceedingly modest young man.

"No, I was never afraid," he said. "The captain was always right there with me, and we all had faith that we would be saved."

Di Gangi denied reports that there had been disorder among the crew and that they had threatened him.

As the reception committee was boarding the America for the trip to quarantine, Captain Fried's old command, the President Roosevelt, passed her, putting out to sea. With blasts from her whistle, the Roosevelt saluted her former captain. Captain Fried commanded the Roosevelt three years ago when he rescued the 25 men of the sinking British freighter Antinoe.

Other ships paid their tribute to the America during her triumphant journey up the harbor.

Passengers on the America said the launching of the lifeboat from the America last Wednesday night was one of the most solemn scenes they had ever witnessed. In spite of the cold and rain nearly everyone was on deck silently watching.

As the boat went over Captain Fried called out: "Good luck," and Chief Officer Manning replied: "Thanks."

There were no cheers when the little boat came back. The condition of the Florida crew was so miserable, the passengers said, that cheering seemed entirely out of place.

Spanish Vendetta Claims

:: VENGEANCE IS OATH OF FAMILIES ::

Lives of Two at Wedding

Dixon, N. M., January 26.—(AP)—Above the wailings of a grief-stricken Spanish family as two of their men lay dead and another dying, the result of a feud, today arose the cry for revenge upon Juan and Antonio Lovato, whose bullets felled a father and two sons at a wedding dance here Thursday night.

Most of the 400 population of the Dixon vicinity in remote Rio Arriba county, where telephones have yet to penetrate, had gathered for the celebration of a young couple of Dixon.

Celebration of the wedding festivals had hardly started when through the doorway Jesus Medina, 55, the father, received a bullet in the heart, and his sons, Daniels, 26, and Alberto, 28, fell with gun shots in their bodies as the Lovatos settled a family difference of two years' standing.

Daniel had been the best man, the wedding was over and the bridal party, guests had filed to the dance hall for the grand ball, and two dances had passed.

The firing started apparently without warning. Seven or eight shots were fired and the thing was over so quickly that District Attorney Jack Kenney was unable to learn definitely how many men had used guns. There was a wild scramble for safety. Two of the wedding guests were seared by stray bullets.

Daniel died within a few minutes.

The Lovatos, District Attorney Kenney said, went to Dixon creek and surrendered to the constable.

They were taken to the New Mexico penitentiary at Santa Fe for safekeeping, and District Attorney Kenney said he probably would hold a preliminary hearing at Dixon next week.

FULTON, DEKALB MERGER PUSHED

will actively support the proposal, they declared.

"We feel that the logical thing to do is to merge the two counties in the interest of efficiency, economy and good government," Mr. Saunders said.

"Two DeKalb county grand juries have asked for the merger, declaring it to be the best thing for all concerned, and some action should be taken at the next session of the Georgia legislature looking towards consummation of the proposal. Some of the leading citizens of DeKalb county have voiced themselves as favoring the proposition. There is really no logical objection to the merger plan."

No DeKalb Funds.

Mr. Saunders is chairman of the board of firemasters, which Friday served a notice on DeKalb county officials that portions of DeKalb county lying outside the city limits of Atlanta will not receive fire protection from the Atlanta fire department after February 15.

L. T. Y. Nash, DeKalb county commissioner, declared that under the law, he could not appropriate funds of the county to fire protection and therefore he could not establish a fire district or pay the Atlanta department for its services. In the past the Atlanta department has attempted to protect outlying districts.

Members of the fire board held that restricted funds prevent a continuance of the service.

Measure Loses in Fight for Place on Senate Calendar.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The prospect of senate passage at this session of the bill to reapportion the house membership became less favorable today when the republican steering committee failed to give it a place on the senate calendar in advance of other legislation.

The committee decided upon the following order after the pending 15-cruiser bill has been disposed of:

The bill of Senator Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, to prevent the sale of cotton and grain in future markets.

The proposal of Senator Jones, republican, Washington, to increase the penalties under the prohibition act.

The resolution of Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, proposing a survey for a canal through Nicaragua.

All of these measures are expected to cause considerable debate. The Edge Nicaraguan canal bill has drawn opposition from middle western senators who believe the Panama canal has been detrimental to western commerce, although Senator Edge declared recently that he believed a favorable vote would be obtained with little delay.

Color and brilliance conspicuously marked the recent opening ball of Il Circolo Italiano di Atlanta, which dedicated its new quarters, comprising the entire top floor of the Zahner building, at Peachtree and Tenth streets. More than 250 Atlantans, members of the circle and their guests, assembled for the occasion.

A feature of the dedication ceremonies was the presentation of beautiful silk and Italian flags to the society. The American flag was presented by little Miss Emma Griffin Hardman, young daughter of the governor, while the Italian flag was presented by Giovanni Maria Bollati, the tiny daughter of Cavalier Attilio Bollati, the Italian consul to Atlanta.

Cavalier Bollati delivered a brief address on the significance of America and Italy joining hands in token of friendship, the preservation of peace and the advancement of commerce and social welfare. At the conclusion of his remarks he presented Mrs. Hardman with a volume of Roman Art, of beautiful Italian hand workmanship.

An attractive musical program was directed by Emilio Volpi, vice president of the society, and one of the south's leading maestros. Guido Negri, president of Il Circolo Italiano, and one of the leading Italian citizens of the country, presided at the meeting, which was concluded by a ball.

REUBEN BRAININ, WRITER, TO SPEAK IN ATLANTA TODAY

Reuben Brainin, journalist of the modernistic school who has attained a position of prominence among liberal writers in practically all the capitals of Europe and western Asia, will be in Atlanta today to deliver an address on colonization work in Russia.

In addition to his universal interest in the political and literary fields, Mr. Brainin is a Jewish scholar of note, and has been invited to Atlanta to speak under auspices of the local Jewish Colonization in Russia organization. He will lecture at 7:30 o'clock tonight at the Jewish Woman's club. The gathering is open to the public.

While known to the general public as a publicist, author and editor, Mr. Brainin has been a leader among his fellow religionists in many movements of interest to world Jewry. He was co-founder of the first political Zionist body which issued appeal for political action to regain Palestine, he was originator of the Hebrew university in Jerusalem idea, which since has materialized, and is now honorary vice president of the World Zionist organization.

Since inception of the plan, he has been a warm supporter of Jewish colonization work in soviet Russia, which will be the subject of his address here.

FORESTRY LEADERS TO HOLD MEETING IN JACKSONVILLE

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The American Forestry association announced today that its annual meeting would be held at Jacksonville, Fla., February 27 and 28.

George D. Pratt, of New York, president of the association, will preside and speakers will include Roger Babson, the statistician, and Dr. Charles H. Herty, of the Chemical Foundation, New York.

The association said the meeting would mark the first time that a national forestry convention of such a scope has been held in the far south and that it would bring together specialists for the purpose of furthering southern forest conditions.

GEORGIA OCCUPIES SEVENTH PLACE IN ROAD MILEAGE

Georgia now occupies seventh place in total highway mileage, following the completion of the 1928 building program, according to the current issue of Georgia Highways, official publication of the state highway department. The year just past has broken all records for both construction and paving, the magazine states.

loway they saw Chapman join Mrs. Wellon in her automobile last Sunday and drive off toward Atlanta. No word has come from either to friends or relatives since.

Chapman is the son of a farmer. W. C. Chapman, whose antecedents have been residents of Ellaville for three generations. Mrs. Wellon, who lived near Glenn Holly, a settlement five miles away, took up the duties of principal of the Glenn Holly school last September. Chief Holly said Chapman, a tenth grade pupil, probably had not known the teacher before she started to the Glenn Holly school last September.

Sheriff Rigsby broadcast telegrams to police in Georgia and Ohio when Chapman's parents told him they suspected the teacher and pupil of an elopement. He said he had several replies but none of them gave direct information as to the whereabouts of the couple.

U. S. BANKER SAFE AS HYDROPLANE RUNS INTO ROCKS

Athens, January 26.—(AP)—Charles Holder, an American banker of Paris, and his daughter escaped injury when an Italian hydroairplane of the Piraeus-Brindisi service hit rocks on the northwest coast of Corfu before dawn today. Two other persons in the plane were killed and two were injured, the second pilot and the telegraph operator being the victims.

Mr. Holder and his daughter were at a hotel in Corfu tonight and they expected to embark on a steamer for Brindisi tomorrow. He had been advised by friends not to take the air trip but had insisted upon going.

The accident was ascribed to a dense fog which led the pilot to descend. He was unable to pick out a suitable landing place and the machine hit the rocks instead of open water. The accident occurred near the famous monastry of Palaiokastrizza.

"HOT DOG" VENDOR IS READY TO AID IN FIGHT ON FLU

West Palm Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Tired of fighting life as a "hot dog" vendor, Bert Miller has offered himself as a specimen to scientists searching for an influenza serum.

His savings lost in unwise transactions during the Florida real estate inflation, the 60-year-old sandwich man has decided he "has nothing left to live for."

"Easy money" lured Miller here several years ago from Flora, Ind., where he had been in business 18 years. But his transactions wer unfortunate, and his savings soon dwindled away.

"Last summer my wife died," Miller said. "I have no children, no one depends on me, and I'm too old now to start making back what I lost. If sacrificing myself will do anything for humanity, I'm willing."

Gov. Johnston Impeachers Balk at Calling Woman Aid, Prominent Figure in Quiz

Oklahoma City, January 26.—(AP)—Showing no abatement of interest in the versatile part played by Mrs. O. O. Hammonds in the administration of Henry S. Johnston, suspended governor, whom she has served as confidential secretary, the house of representatives investigating committee today evinced no eagerness to interview her personally.

Although Mrs. Hammond's appeared punctually yesterday at the hour designated by the committee and asked for the privilege of using her own stenographer, in addition to the regular committee clerk, to record her testimony, she was excused and the committee today showed no disposition to recall her.

Committee members would not comment on deductions of local newspapers that she would not be called.

Much of the evidence taken by the committee today centered about the family loyalty of the woman secretary. Her husband, Dr. O. O. Hammonds, is state health commissioner, an appointment of Johnston. Her brother, Reed Scott, has been a salesman for a road machinery company which witnesses testified has enjoyed a flourishing business with the state highway department. Her uncle, James W. Armstrong, an advisor to Johnston, has acted as attorney for a bonding company which underwrote contractors doing business with the highway department.

R. L. Seaman, former secretary of the highway commission, testified today that he once refused to show requisitions for machinery, sent in by divisional engineers, to Scott. Seaman, who was discharged by the commission several months ago, declined to answer the interrogative speculation of a committee attorney that a two weeks absence of Mrs. Hammonds from the governor's office just preceding his discharge might have been a "strike on the woman secretary's part to force his dismissal.

Seaman said the highway commission commended him for his work after it discharged him.

AUTO RUNS 59 MILES ON GALLON OF GAS

Automobile engineers who worked for years in an effort to reduce gasoline consumption have found the solution in a marvelous invention that fits all cars. An actual test made by one of the engineers showed 59 miles on a gallon of gas. Thousands of car owners have already installed this new invention. They not only report amazing gas savings, but are also surprised to find quicker pick-up, instant starting, smoother running motors and disappearance of carbon. E. Oliver, 999-1817 W. Third St., Milwaukee, Wis., for a limited time is offering a free device to those who will help introduce it. They also need men everywhere to make over $100 weekly in their own territory taking care of local business. Write him at once for free sample and big money making offer—(adv.)

E. A. VAN VALKENBURG WEDS MISS JOHNSON

New Bern, N. C., January 26.—(AP) Edwin A. Van Valkenburg, former editor and publisher of the Philadelphia North American, and Miss Louise Johnson, of Philadelphia, were married here today at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas G. Hyman. The ceremony was performed by Dr. N. D. Wilson, pastor of Centenary Methodist Episcopal church, south, in the presence of the immediate household.

After a luncheon to which a few intimate friends were invited the couple left for a motor tour to southern resort cities.

Mrs. Van Valkenburg for 17 years was head of the bureau of nurses for the division of medical inspection for the Philadelphia board of education.

Mr. Van Valkenburg was editor and publisher of the Philadelphia North American for 30 years. When the paper was sold to the Public Ledger he retired from active newspaper work and moved to his country estate near Wellsboro, Pa.

ALUMNI EDITION OF MERCER CLUSTER NOW ON CAMPUS

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The first issue of the alumni edition of the Mercer Cluster, student newspaper, under the editorship of Fred Shaw, of Tifton, appeared on the campus yesterday.

The alumni section contained articles about Courtland Gilbert, of Atlanta, writer for the United News; Herbert Bradshaw, Norman Felder, I. E. Norman and June Ellis, all of Waycross; Wiley Jordan, of Macon; Henry Jones, editor of the Okemah (Okla.) Daily News; Malcolm M. Johnson, formerly a reporter of the Macon Telegraph and now on the staff of the New York Sun, and Dr. John G. Harrison, professor of philosophy at Mercer and an alumnus of the university.

WIFE OF OBREGON ASSASSIN GIVES BIRTH TO A SON

Mexico City, January 26.—(AP)—The wife of Jose De Leon Toral today gave birth to a son. The father, who assassinated President-elect Obregon last July, has an appeal now pending in the supreme court for an order to prevent the death sentence being carried out upon him.

I. C. C. TO ASK COURT FOR CARGO COAL RULE

Test of Right To Control Situation Will Be Made Soon.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Although danger of an immediate rate war between northern and southern railroads on cargo coal for lake ports was temporarily ended recently by an agreement between them, the interstate commerce commission has completed arrangements to test out in the supreme court its right to control the situation.

The commission filed today with the court a brief in a case it instituted to set aside an order of a federal court at Charleston, W. Va., prohibiting it from compelling the southern carriers to cancel a reduction of 20 cents in their rates.

Since the decision in the lower court the carriers have agreed upon rates which gives the northern railroads an advantage of 35 cents per ton in rates over their southern competitors. This is 10 cents a ton less than the commission would enforce.

The commission declared that when it prohibited the southern carriers from reducing their rates 20 cents a ton to meet a reduction of 20 cents a ton which it had authorized the northern carriers to make, its action was not in recognition of the economic advantages of the southern coal fields and their ability to produce cheaper than the northern coal fields. It asserted the commission had "expressly declared that it was without power to regulate or equalize industrial conditions under the guise of regulating rates."

The southern carriers failed to show that their earnings warranted the proposed reduction, the brief said. Emphasis was placed upon the injury which the commission said the Baltimore and Ohio, the Pennsylvania and other northern carriers would suffer from the proposed reduction.

In summarizing the argument, it was stated that the commission had the power to make the order which the federal court had set aside and that the court had exceeded its jurisdiction in substituting its own judgment for that of the commission.

OUTLAWS BLAMED AS FOUR BRAZILIAN SOLDIERS ARE SLAIN

Rio de Janeiro, January 26.—(AP)—War against outlaws was the explanation given in a government statement today referring to newspaper dispatches from Asuncion saying that Paraguayan civilians had been attacked by Brazilian troops.

The newspaper dispatches said that four Brazilian soldiers were killed in the encounter but no direct word was received in Rio Janeiro of any casualties.

The government statement said that the band of outlaws was composed of both Paraguayans and Brazilians in that state of Matto Grosso. Such bands are not uncommon in the sparsely settled regions and frequently clash with the authorities.

PECULIAR HOLE IN TRAIN TICKET CLUE IN KILLING

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The peculiar hole left in a commutation ticket by a conductor's punch became a factor today in the investigation of the Laura Buchholz slaying.

Police had arrested Leonard Mitchell, a negro, and said several circumstances led them to believe he may have had knowledge of how the 26-year-old clerk was clubbed to death near her home in Blue Island Wednesday night.

L. Postweiler, conductor on the train which carried Miss Buchholz from Chicago to Blue Island the night she was slain, identified Mitchell as having been a passenger.

"He's got a ticket in his pocket," the conductor said. "Let me see it."

The ticket was produced. "That's my punch," the conductor said, explaining that each conductor's punch makes a different mark.

Police said parts of Mitchell's account of his whereabouts the past several days were contradictory.

ROMANCE ENDED, MRS. M'CORMICK IS GOING TO RENO

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The Herald and Examiner said today that Mrs. Leander J. McCormick has taken a residence at Reno, Nev., but that she had declined to say whether it was for the purpose of obtaining a divorce.

Mrs. McCormick, distinguished for her titian beauty, has been a leader of Chicago Gold Coast and Lake Forest society since her debut as the youngest of three daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Cudahy. Her marriage in November, 1917, to the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Hamilton McCormick was a war time society event.

When Captain McCormick returned from Europe in 1919, he went to the home of his parents, and both families said the couple had separated. There was a reconciliation in 1920.

Mr. McCormick, who is understood to be in Europe, is a brother of Allister McCormick.

Hingham, Mass., January 26.—(United News.)—The body of an attractive young woman, excellently dressed, was found late today on the Brewer estate.

She had been shot three times in the head and authorities believed she had been dead at least two days. Her body was covered with snow and there was a pool of blood nearby. No weapon was found but a cartridge was found close by the girl's body.

RATIFIES KELLOGG PACT

Czecho-Slovakia Forwards Official Papers to U. S.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The Czecho-Slovakian minister informed Secretary Kellogg today that ratification of the war renunciation treaty had been completed by his country and that the instrument of ratification was being forwarded to Washington for deposit. Czecho-Slovakia is the second of the 15 original signatory nations to complete ratification of the treaty.

With the appointment of general committee for the Atlanta good health exposition by President Jonathan H. Woody, of the junior chamber of commerce, everything is in readiness for swinging into action Monday in preparation for the big affair, which will be staged in the city auditorium the week of April 8, it was announced from exposition headquarters in the chamber of commerce building. The exposition and good health educational campaign which will accompany it, is expected to be the biggest and most important movement of this kind ever undertaken, being statewide in its scope and marking the beginning of a national movement in the interests of better health and living standards.

The general exposition committee is headed by First Vice President Joe W. Ray, of the junior chamber, as chairman and consists of Cyril F. Dieter, vice president; Frank Shaw, treasurer; George Yancey, secretary; Boyd White, John N. Armour, Luther S. Turner and Frank Hall, all of whom have taken leading parts in the activities of the junior chamber that enabled the Atlanta aggregation to win four out of five cups at the last national convention and giving it the place of honor among the junior chambers of the United States for its civic activities and leadership.

Baby Show to Feature.

One of the outstanding features of the good health exposition will be the baby show to be made a part of the program. The baby show will be given a prominent part in the exposition in an effort to arouse greater interest in healthier and finer babies and thousands of youngsters from Atlanta and other parts of the state are expected to be entered in the contest, which is expected to be one of the prettiest and most appealing spectacles ever seen in Atlanta.

Another big feature, from a purely entertainment standpoint, will be the fashion revue, which will have a place on the entertainment program. This feature will combine color, art, grace and beauty in one gorgeous spectacle and will serve to balance off a program intended to be both educational and entertaining. Attention will be paid to the beauty of the numerous models as well as the beauty of the costumes, in other words, as Chairman Ray expressed it.

"There will be beautiful girls to be glorified and beautiful clothes to glorify them."

The entertainment part of the program will also include a number of other features, which will be announced later, it was stated.

The purpose of the good health movement, as stated by those in charge of preparations, is to arouse greater interest in knowledge and matters pertaining to the health of the nation, with the aim of preventing much of the sickness that now prevails and thus lengthening life. It is conceded by medical authorities, it was pointed out, that practically all human ails can be avoided or prevented simply by putting into daily practice the knowledge given to the world in recent years by science, and it is the purpose of this movement to place this knowledge before everyone and urge its application in dialy life.

Typhoid Terror Gone.

As examples of the truth of this, it was pointed out that typhoid fever, once a dreaded scourge, was robbed of its terror when science discovered the germ that causes it and gradually taught the people how to avoid it by destroying flies (carriers of the germ) being careful about food and water supplies. Later when anti-typhoid serum was perfected, science added another victory to its credit.

Yellow fever, another bygone terror of the human race, was practically wiped out when science finally discovered that the germ was carried by a certain species of mosquito, and by the mosquito alone. The remedy was simple, and consisted in getting rid of the mosquito.

So it is with practically all diseases. There is a cause and a preventative for almost everything, even common colds, but nothing can be accomplished, it was pointed out, without the cooperation of every man, woman and child. For this reason it is urged by leaders in the movement that everyone take a genuine interest in the good health movement, follow its activities closely and help to reduce unnecessary sickness and suffering, as well as add a few more years to the present average lifetime.

Albany, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Taking the initiative in what state board of health officials hope will be a statewide movement for malaria control, the Dougherty county board of health today recommended that a program of control advocated by the United States public health service be inaugurated, and called on the board of county commissioners to levy any tax necessary to carry on the work.

Dr. L. L. Williams, assistant surgeon general of the United States public health service, presented to the board a plan for county control work and offered to have government experts supervise the work for a year. L. E. Clarkson, chief sanitary engineer of the state board of health, offered full cooperation of that body.

A mass meeting of Albany citizens earlier in the week had called for a tax levy to provide funds for malaria eradication, and the health board meeting today was attended by 50 business and professional leaders who endorsed the action taken.

Alabama Glee Club Will Give Concert At Piedmont College

Demorest, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The University of Alabama Glee club, composed of 30 male voices and directed by Tom Garner, will give a concert at Piedmont college, February 6, in the college auditorium at 8 p. m.

The Crimson Warblers will stop over here en route to Greenville, S. C., where they will participate in the southern intercollegiate glee contest. They won second place last year, and this year, winning out in preliminaries held in Mississipi, Louisiana and Alabama. The winners of the contest in Greenville will entrain for New York city, where the finals for America will be held. The winners of the New York finals will then go for an extended trip in Europe.

SON OF OIL KING MARRIES HEIRESS; SOCIETY ATTENDS

Cleveland, January 26.—(AP)—Henry Huddleston Rogers, Jr., youngest member of the family of Colonel Henry P. Rogers, oil multimillionaire, and Miss Virginia Lincoln, daughter of Dr. William R. Lincoln, wealthy Cleveland physician, were married here late today at the First Unitarian church.

Included in the guests were Mrs. H. H. Rogers, Sr., Millicent Rogers Ramos, sister of the younger Rogers, and the former Countess Salm, and her husband, Arturo Ramos; besides other society leaders.

Rogers, a graduate of Oxford university, met his bride while working as a mechanic in an electric plant here. Miss Lincoln was a student and collector with the Gage galleries.

Abandon N. Y. Flight.

Para, Brazil, January 26.—(AP)—President Leguia, of Peru, has ordered the Peruvian good-will fliers, Carlos Martinez de Pinillos, and Lieutenant Carlos Zagarra, to return to Lima following the same route which they used in their flight from the Peruvian capital to Para. The orders will make it necessary for the two fliers to abandon their hope of ending the trip in New York.

BILL SETS COMPROMISE IN FAILURES OF BANKS

George Proposes Shareholders Be Liable for Part of Losses.

Washington, January 26.—(By Staff Correspondent.)—Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, laid before the upper chamber today a bill authorizing receivers of national banks to accept a compromise from shareholders as to liability in cases of national bank failures.

The present law on the subject has never been clearly defined with the result that it has become the set policy of the comptroller general to decline such a compromise prior to judgment in bankruptcy.

Senator George explained that his bill is the outgrowth of condition in south Georgia following the failure of national banks there. He said it was intended to avoid the multiplicity of suits over liability of stockholders, which often result in no benefit either to depositors or creditors.

"If judgments are obtained against the shareholders," he said, "and their goods and chattels reduced to cash the consequence is often the complete destruction of their business and yet at the same time no good is accomplished; for the amount obtained finally is, in many cases, practically nil. By a revision of the present statutes in a manner to give the comptroller general and national bank receivers greater power of compromise an improvement in the general situation should be accomplished."

Habibullah Khan Is Fighting Desperately To Retain His Throne.

Moscow, January 26.—(AP)—Kabul was menaced today by the Jalalabad tribes. Habibullah Khan was fighting desperately to retain his seat upon the throne which he ascended scarcely more than a week ago.

The Jalalabad forces were under the leadership of Alliajmethan (presumably Ali Ahmed Khan, former governor of Kabul and one time ally of former King Amanullah.) Habibullah sent an advance guard to deal with this threat to his reign. The two forces fought a pitched battle near the summit of Khakijevar and the king's forces were routed, fleeing precipitantly toward Kabul.

Following up this advantage, the main Jalalabad force reached Jegdalik, 30 miles from Kabul on one of the main routes. They sent out a flanking column which crossed the region of the Tarao and attacked Jebulserap. This created a new menace to the north of the capital.

To the south of Kabul the population of the fertile Logar river valley has not submitted to the new government and in this lies a possible further threat to Habibullah.

The soviet foreign office today denied reports that Leon Trotzky had an army under him near the Afghan border characterizing the reports as sheer nonsense.

Mohammed Nadir Khan is willing to return to Afghanistan and attempt to rule from the troubled throne "despite anything" if called by popular vote.

Nadir, who has been occupying a villa near Nice, France, which was formerly the residence of Frank Harris, Irish-American writer, has been proposed by some of his countrymen as possibly a satisfactory ruler of the Afghans.

Second Attempt Made To "Crash" U. S. Pen By Breaking Window

Why people pick on the windows at the United States postoffice in endeavoring to obtain the position of free boarders with Uncle Sam has not yet been fully determined, but the fact remains that just such an incident came to light for the second time Saturday afternoon, with the arrest of George Ethridge, 56, of 1140 North avenue, N. E., who was detained by Officers V. H. Whitley and T. C. Watkins for hurling a bottle through one of the postoffice windows. He told the officers that he wanted to get into the pen for the winter, it was reported, and he is being held at the police station in default of $2,000 bond on a charge of disorderly conduct. The case has been set for a hearing before Recorder Murphy M. Holloway Monday.

A similar procedure was attempted approximately a year ago by one Lawrence Aber, who attempted to crash the pen gates by smashing a postoffice window with a crutch.

Tallahassee, Fla., January 26.—(AP) The state motor vehicle department underwent a sharp reorganization today.

D. B. Pinkston, appointed by Governor Carlton yesterday to succeed W. F. Allen, who resigned, announced that 30 employees of the department had been suspended and that other requests contained in a letter received by him from the chief executive, asking revisions in the bureau's operation would be carried out.

The announcement by Mr. Pinkston came simultaneously with an exchange of letters between the governor and Mr. Allen, in which the retiring commissioner tended a formal written resignation and the chief executive accepted it.

Mrs. Milton Klein has been appointed chairman of the special ladies' committee, to handle arrangements for the large number of women visitors to the convention. Mrs. J. N. Reisman is vice chairman.

SUTTON PRAISES WORK OF PUPILS IN HEALTH DRIVE

Expressing gratification over the growing perfection of teeth and health among the school children of Atlanta, Willis A. Sutton, superintendent of public schools, Saturday addressed a letter to the girls and boys of the city urging their continued care in this regard.

Superintendent Sutton's message follows:

My Dear Boys and Girls:

These warm January days make us know that February and Valentine's day are on the way. Hundreds and thousands of you were thoughtful enough to give me a Christmas present of your perfect teeth and health certificates. I wish to ask another favor of you, and that is that every boy and girl in the entire system may have their health certificate and dental certificate by Valentine's day. I think if you could read my heart you would find written on it the desire that every boy and every girl in the Atlanta school system would measure up to a perfectly healthy standard of living; that each of you would have a scholarship record commensurate with your ability and that each of you would maintain in character those high standards which would make you useful men and women.

So I am writing today to ask that you will commence to think of Valentine's day and to think of the big red heart that you are going to send me with the good news written on it that every child in your grade has his health certificate, his teeth certificate, that he is up to standard in weight and that his scholarship is beyond the passing grade. This is my message for the week. Will you not try to make it a reality by February 14?

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

NEWLY-CREATED FARM CONGRESS WIDELY PRAISED

Responses from all sections of the south are pouring into the offices of the newly-established American Chamber of Agriculture as a result of invitations broadcast to the farm and business interests of this section for the first agricultural congress to convene here on Thursday, according to announcement Saturday by W. C. Chase, executive vice president and secretary of the agricultural congress movement.

While the program for the congress is still on a tentative basis, permanent arrangements are expected to be completed early in the week, Mr. Chase said. The congress, which marks the first important action of the American Chamber of Agriculture, will be featured by address of leading citizens of the country and election of permanent officers of the chamber.

The heavy responses to the invitations sent out indicate the widespread interest in the movement, Mr. Chase pointed out. The congress will continue for three days, opening with Richard B. Russell, chief justice of the supreme court of Georgia, presiding.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Otto T. Bannard, banker, who died recently at sea, left $2,100,000 of a $5,000,000 estate to Yale university, his alma mater, under the terms of his will filed for probate today.

Among the relatives and friends who are to receive shares of the estate are Hubbard Francis Bannard, a nephew, San Francisco, Calif.; Louis O. Bannard, nephew, Sawtell, Calif.; Frederick Raymond Bannard, nephew, Sawtell, Calif.; Elizabeth Hadhams Pearson, Atlanta; Helen Bannard, sister-in-law, Sawtell, Calif., and Ephriam W. Dickson, Omaha.

Moultrie Negro Must Die For Burt Murder

Moultrie, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—James Crumady, negro, must die in the electric chair February 22 for the murder of George Burt, young merchant, whose charred body was found in the ruins of his store following a fire last October.

After evidence had been presented indicating that Crumady had gone to the store to "see a fellow" shortly before the fire occurred, the case was given to the jury. It was stated that the negro was armed. The jury started its deliberations last night and a verdict of guilty was returned this morning.

A heavy guard was on duty throughout the one-day trial, but there was no disorder.

JOHN COOLIDGE MAY BE UNABLE TO VISIT FIANCEE

Miami Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Only a possibility remained tonight that John Coolidge would be able to visit his fiancee, Miss Florence Trumbull, during her Miami Beach visit with her parents, Governor and Mrs. Trumbull, of Connecticut.

Miss Trumbull had expected that John would arrive here today following her arrival with her parents and Mrs. and Mrs. Herman Dann, from St. Petersburg last night, but it was understood that John's duties as a "railroad man" had prevented this.

Governor Trumbull said today that he and his party expect to return to St. Petersburg next week prior to his departure Friday for his home to prepare for a session of the legislature.

He was asked if he expected to exercise his license as an airplane pilot while here, but declared that he wanted to see horse racing at Hialeah track before he indulged in the other mode of entertainment.

Governor Trumbull is the only governor who is a licensed plane pilot.

MORE PUBLICITY URGED IN ACTION ON NOMINATIONS

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Senator Jones, of Washington, the republican whip, gave notice today that he would attempt to have more publicity attend consideration of nominations by the senate.

The senator said he would propose that all executive nominations be considered in open session unless two-thirds of the senate voted to close the doors. Under the present rules a two-thirds vote is necessary to order open sessions.

A number of senators complained about the recent consideration of the nomination of Roy O. West as secretary of the interior, in executive session.

H. W. ROHRER NAMED Y. M. C. A. SECRETARY

Former Louisville Man Has Had Years of Experience in Association Work.

H. W. Rohrer, formerly of Louisville, has been chosen state secretary of the Young Men's Christian association for Georgia, Eugene R. Black, chairman of the state committee, announced Saturday. The new secretary already has arrived in Atlanta and Monday will assume charge of the association's offices in the Thrower building.

Mr. Rohrer has had many years experience in Y. M. C. A. work and is said to be exceptionally well-fitted for his present task, both by endowment and training. A native of Ohio, he is a graduate of Juniata college and of the University of Pennsylvania and began his Y. M. C. A. experience as president of the college association. After graduation he served as director of instruction of the West Philadelphia Y. M. C. A., and then became general secretary at Ardmore, Pa. From that position he was called to Kentucky to become district Y. M. C. A. secretary and then state secretary of city and railroad work. From each of these positions he comes highly recommended as an able leader.

Mr. Rohrer also is a noted churchman—a Southern Baptist, active in Sunday school and church work.

Dean of Atlanta-Southern Dental College Made Board Chairman.

Dr. Ralph R. Byrnes, executive dean of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college, and a prominent business man and clubman, has been named chairman of the board of directors of the Atlanta chapter of the American Red Cross, it was announced Saturday.

George A. Bland is the new vice chairman; Miss Cleveland Dahner, secretary, and Henry W. Davis, treasurer.

Dr. Byrnes announces the following members of the board to serve with him on the executive committee: Herbert N. Hutchinson, George K. Selden, George A. Bland, and C. A. Rauschenberg.

Came Here in 1920.

Dr. Byrnes came to Atlanta in 1920, and since his residence here he has identifed himself with the progress of the city. He is an alumnus of Vanderbilt university, and moved to Atlanta from Richmond, Va., in which city he was in charge of the school of dentistry, Medical College of Virginia. At various times during his professional career he has also held important posts in the business world, having been president of the Virginia Casualty company, director of the Central National bank, Central Trust company and of Bellevue Park, Inc., all of Richmond, Va.

He is the author of scores of articles on dental and accounting subjects. In recognition of his services to the dental profession, in 1922 he was made a Fellow of the American College of Dentists, is an honorary member of many state societies, and is at the present time supreme worthy master of Delta Sigma Delta international Greek letter fraternity. In Atlanta he is an active member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Rotary, Capital City, Druid Hills Golf club, and is prominent in Masonic circles. Although Dr. Byrnes was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, most of his life has been spent in Georgia, he being a resident of Savannah for a number of years.

Chapter's Work Outstanding.

According to Miss Ruth Sheafe, executive secretary of the Atlanta chapter, the work of the Atlanta chapter for the past year has been outstanding. The major concern of the local chapter is the care of the disabled, compensable veterans of the world war. During 1928 the Red Cross here has been instrumental in obtaining from the veterans' bureau hospitalization and hospital pay for numberless veterans who for reasons of disability and unfamiliarity with government routine have been unable to prosecute their just claims. This feature of Red Cross activity is called "home service."

Another major project of the Atlanta Red Cross chapter is the disaster relief program. During 1928 remarkable results were accomplished, especially during the Florida disaster. The chapter raised $51,000 to meet the emergencies of that disastrous event, and over 300 cases of clothing, in excellent condition, were sent to the storm area, each case containing from 300 to 1,200 garments. In addition the Red Cross here raised $750 by the sale of certain articles of clothing, originally intended for distribution in the tropics, this amount supplementing the $51,000 previously sent to the storm area. The Atlanta chapter made the best showing of any of the Red Cross chapters in the south during the Florida disaster, and it has been complimented by high officials of the national Red Cross for its work during that time.

Other Activities Pushed.

Other activities of the Red Cross which are being vigorously prosecuted here, and which accomplished exceptional results during the past year, are concerned with first aid service, home hygiene for the care of the sick (a course in this subject being conducted at the present time in the Red Cross building here), the Junior Red Cross, with an enrollment of 40,000 school children; the motor corps, which, in time of distress, collects and distributes food and clothing; the hospital entertainment committee, which gives an entertainment once a week at hospital 48, and instruction for the blind.

One of the most important accomplishments of the local chapter during the past year was the inauguration of a milk station at the Egleston Memorial hospital, for the benefit of premature infants. Mother's milk is collected twice a day, from maternity patients, is thoroughly tested, prepared, and is sold at the hospital, for an exceedingly small cost, and in many instances to mothers of Atlanta, with premature infants. As a result of this unique and beneficial service during 1928 it is reported by Red Cross authorities that the lives of at least 12 infants were saved during the past year.

The Atlanta chapter is financed by the Community Chest. The Red Cross officials here report that during 1928 332 families received material relief, 1,241 visits to homes were made, and 1,945 office interviews were held with applicants receiving benefits at the hands of the local chapter.

Following are the chapter's directors: Dr. R. R. Byrnes, George Bland, H. W. Davis, Miss Cleveland Zahner, Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, Mrs. William Rawling, Mrs. J. E. Sommerfield, George K. Selden, Mrs. A. H. Latham, Mrs. Hamilton Douglas, Miss Jane Van de Vrede, Mrs. Albert Thornton, Jr., Mrs. Spencer R. Atkinson, Mrs. Arthur I. Harris, Mrs. Samuel M. Inman, Mrs. Marcus Beck, Mrs. Paul Seydell, Herbert N. Hutchinson, G. H. Phillips, Robert S. Parker, Dr. David Marx, Rev. N. R. H. Moor, Dr. M. Hines Roberts, Chris A. Rauschenberg, John K. Ottley, Jr., Frank B. Saunders, Mrs. St. Elmo Massengale, Robert G. Stephens, Edward L. Pugh, Elfred S. Papy, W. L. Percy and John M. Slaton, Jr.

"Sargon Is Wonderful—There's No Doubt About That," Says Well-Known Atlanta Railroad Man.

"Since my return from the World War I have hardly known what a well day was, and my condition was steadily getting worse until I began taking the Sargon treatment. This wonderful medicine has made a new man out of me, and I feel that the luckiest day I ever had was when I found Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills," said E. A. Adams of 836 Dixie avenue, Atlanta, recently.

"Mr. Adams is in the employ of the Atlanta Joint Terminals, is a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, the Masons and the Presbyterian church.

"About three years ago my condition began to grow worse," continued Mr. Adams. "I had reached a point where I could not eat anything without suffering with indigestion. I was troubled greatly with gas, bloating and dizzy spells. Frequently my food would not stay on my stomach, and I was so nervous I could not get a good night's sleep. The misery that I would go through was awful, and I was not able to retain enough food and get enough sleep to keep up my strength. I was also losing weight, and a man who has my kind of work to do can not keep going long with such a condition of health.

"I cannot say too much for Sargon. When I started taking it I only weighed 132 pounds. I have only taken two bottles and have gained four pounds, and the aches and pains that bothered me so much are gone. I can eat anything I want without it hurting me in any way. And sleep! Why, I sleep fine and wake up in the morning feeling as good as I used to when I was a boy. That certainly is worth a great deal to a fellow, who before taking Sargon, would roll and toss most of the night and get up feeling as tired as when he went to bed.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills are the best laxative I have ever taken. They cause no sickness and bring about a perfect bowel movement. I started with three pills at a time, but now I need only one and they keep me as regular as a clock. The Sargon treatment is wonderful; there's no doubt about that."

Scores of people are calling daily at Jacobs' main store, 6 and 8 Marietta street, where a special representative of the Sargon laboratories has established headquarters and is explaining the merits of the celebrated medicines, Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills, which may also be obtained at the other Jacobs' stores all over Atlanta. —(adv.)

the purpose of recovering said property, in order that it may be re-dedicated to its original purpose and that national interest in the same may be rehabilitated."

G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association, who is in New York on a business trip, was quoted in a press dispatch from that city Saturday night as denying the charge of extravagance and insolvency brought against the association. Mr. Willis was quoted as saying that allegations of insolvency "against an association backed by the united south" were "ridiculous." He also defended, according to the dispatch, the statue of Lee which has been carved upon the mountain side. "Lee's nearest relatives declare it a good likeness," Mr. Willis was quoted as saying.

Coincident with the filing of the suit by John I. Kelley and James A. Branch, as attorneys for the plaintiffs, S. H. Venable gave out a statement declaring that in return for the donation of the necessary space on the mountain and his own time and at least $10,000 of his own funds to the monument, "we have received nothing except heart-aches and the sad spectacle of seeing a noble conception perish through waste and mismanagement."

The Venables have seen the side of the mountain and the natural beauty of its contour, along which Lee would have led his men in imperishable granite, blown away until it has been reduced to a scar, according to the statement.

S. H. Venable's Statement.

Mr. Venable's statement follows:

"In order that Atlanta, the south and the nation may not be further discredited by the shameful waste and mismanagement of public donations to the Stone Mountain Confederate Monumental association for the carving of a monument to the heroes of the Confederacy, we are bringing suit for the recovery of the Stone Mountain property, in accordance with the reversionary clauses in our deed of 1916. This action is prompted by the sole purpose of enabling the public to carry the monument to completion.

"With the written understanding that the association would carve within a period of twelve years a gigantic panorama consisting of five groups of colossal sculpture, we deeded the property in 1916. The first or central group was to consist of seven figures on horseback, the second and third groups were each to represent a section of infantry, the fourth, a group of cavalry, the fifth a group of artillery. The total length of the entire panorama was to be approximately 1,200 feet and the height of the central group was to be approximately 200 feet. The association recognized that the central group could be completed within three years at a cost of $250,000 and actually entered into a contract to that effect.

Statement by Auditors.

"Inasmuch as the association has repeatedly made the statement that its failure to complete the monument and its being forced to suspend all work was due to the fact that interminable controversy had made it impossible to get funds with which to carry on its operation, the attention of the public is called to the statement of the income and expenses of the association for the three years ended March 31, 1928, as tabulated in the audit of March 31, 1928, by Peat, Marwick Mitchell and company. This audit has been timorously withheld from the public.

"The statement shows the total income of the association for those three years to have been $877,235.71, or more than three times enough to have completed the central group. The statement of expenses for the same three years shows $650,242.45 to have been spent for things other than carving. Among items of expense are the following:

"Traveling	73,014.45
"Campaign expenses for individuals	57,065.81
"Publicity	54,462.44
"Telephone and telegraph	20,765.65
"Postage	18,043.37
"Office and supplies	18,436.63
"Rent	12,391.65
"Auditing (not intended for public to see)	7,969.03
Parenthesis mine.
"Commissions	35,604.90
"Entertainment	10,427.96
"Legal	3,665.48
"Gifts	1,630.55
"Souvenirs	13,056.78
"Automobile expenses	2,129.30
"Unveiling expenses	1,998.59
"Miscellaneous	9,738.07

Work Discontinued.

"Is it any wonder that the association was forced to discontinue all work on the mountain in May of last year on account of the lack of funds with which to meet its payrolls and current expenses?

"In view of these stubborn facts, is it surprising that the association tried to palm off on the state of Georgia, during the last session of the general assembly, the responsibility for the building of the monument? The legislature wisely refused to become responsible for the money that had been squandered and wasted and the association was soon forced to suspend all work on the mountain.

"In donating this property to the association, we were actuated by the patriotic desire of seeing a monument carved on the mountain which would forever enshrine in its eternal granite, the likenesses of those immortal heroes of the Confederacy whose glory belongs to history and to the ages. In addition to donating my share of the necessary space on the mountain, I gave unsparingly of my time and contributed at least $10,000 toward the expense of the monument.

Mismanagement Charged.

"In return we have received nothing except heart-aches and the sad spectacle of seeing a noble conception perish through waste and mismanagement. We have seen the side of the mountain and the natural beauty of its contour, along which Lee would have led his men in imperishable granite, blown away until it has been reduced to a scar. We have seen the scale of the monument decreased to about two-thirds of its original size and an uncompleted figure of Lee on horseback carved in the face of the mountain is all there is to show for more than twelve years of time and an expenditure of approximately one and a half million dollars.

"Under the circumstances, there is nothing left for us to do, except to insist upon a forfeiture of the property as provided in our deeds. The work already done will not be disturbed but upon a recovery of the property, we yet hope, under proper management, to see a monument completed as originally planned and in accordance with our deed.

"(Signed.) S. H. VENABLE."

Owned By Venables.

The petition seeks to show that prior to the conveyance to the defendant, S. H. Venable owned fee simple title to one-half interest in the property, while Coribie Venable Orme (then Kellogg) and Robert Venable Roper each owned a quarter interest, in accordance with the devises of the will of their father, W. H. Venable.

The action claims that the reversionary clauses in the deeds of April and June of 1916 executed to the defendant association by the plaintiffs have been breached, the clauses dealing chiefly with the time limit of 12 years set for the completion of the monument. Conditions which the plaintiffs allege the defendants have violated were as follows, according to the petition: that no part of the property should be used for any commercial purposes, nor should any stone be quarried therefrom for the purpose of financial gain to any person; grantee or its assigns should within 12 years from the date of the execution of the deeds cause to be carved in the side of the mountain a tomb to the memory of the late W. H. Venable, this memorial to be among the first to be carved; grantee or its assigns should carve upon the face of the mountain a permanent memorial to be of the extent and according to the general character and plans contemplated by Gutzon Borglum, the sculptor, to be completed within 12 years; that the property should never be used except for the purpose of the memorial.

Clauses Violated Claim.

The plaintiffs seek to show that the 12 years specified have expired since the execution and delivery of the deeds to the defendant, and that the main portion of the permanent memorial, as proposed to be constructed, has not been finished nor has the permanent memorial been completed. Further, the petitioners seek to show that the defendant has failed to complete or finish a single figure of the permanent memorial. It is alleged by the plaintiff, Robert Venable Roper, that the defendant has "continuously and persistently used said property for commercial purposes by vending for profit various articles of merchandise such as soft drinks, cigars, candies, cigarettes, post cards and the like," and that the defendant has wholly neglected and failed to carve a tomb to the memory of his father, W. H. Venable, within 12 years.

The petition recites that, according to the audit of the defendant's affairs made by Peat, Marwick, Mitchell and company up to March 31, 1928, the defendant had spent $506,720.51 for salaries, traveling expenses, publicity, telephoning and telegraphing, postage, printing, stationery and office supplies, and $120,788.51 for commissions, entertainments, attorneys' fees, campaigning and gifts, including Christmas gifts for employees, while $18,788.51 was spent by the president of the association as traveling expenses during the three years preceding the date of the audit.

Judgment against the defendant for the recovery of the property and return of the undivided interests of the plaintiffs is asked in the suit. Attached to the petition are the deeds executed by the plaintiffs to the defendant.

G. F. WILLIS DENIES WASTE, INSOLVENCY.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Monumental association, tonight denied charges of extravagance and insolvency brought against the association in a suit in Decatur, Ga., today.

Mr. Willis said that allegations of insolvency against an association backed by the united south were "ridiculous." He also denied that the figure now carved on the mountain bears no resemblance to General Lee.

"Lee's nearest surviving relatives declare it a good likeness," he said.

"Possibly to an uninformed observer, the work done on the mountain to date does seem to represent an excessive sum of money," Mr. Willis said, and continued, "the first sculptor employed by the association, after spending a great deal of money and time in preparing models, laying out the work and partially executing one figure on the mountain became involved in various controversies, which ended in his suddenly destroying his models and leaving the state."

(He referred to Gutzom Borglum).

New Models Required.

"Following this it was necessary to contract with the present sculptor, Augustus Lukeman." Mr. Willis continued. "It was also necessary to spend a great deal of money making new models, laying out the work and removing the partially completed figure from the mountain."

As to the charges that the "mutilated bust" not on the mountain bears no resemblance to General Lee, Mr. Willis said, "this opinion, I am glad to say, is shared only by Mr. Venable and a small partisan group. As a matter of fact, some of the world's foremost sculptors have pronounced the Lukeman design one of the greatest masterpieces in the modern world of art. This opinion is also shared by General Lee's nearest living relatives."

Mr. Willis said the executive committee of the association had received written opinions "from two of the great law firms of Atlanta and the south," to the effect that the association's title to the site "was perfectly valid."

Success In Courts Seen.

"We have every assurance that we shall be able successfully to defend our title in the courts," he said.

"It is unfortunate that any individual or group should see fit to take by action that might retard the completion of a work whose development every man and woman in the south has followed with keenest interest," he said, "but since Mr. Venable has decided to oppose the memorial, the executive committee welcomes the final test because we have felt the controversy could only be settled satisfactorily to all parties in the court."

Mr. Willis leaves for Atlanta tonight.

States, could be settled amicably. "Do not be discouraged if we have not solved the problem at once," he counseled.

"As we seek to be loyal to other friends," he said, "so will we seek to be loyal to that nation which is nearest and most akin to the racial and moral outlook of all the nations of the world."

The existing difference he said is "as to how we shall apply a limitation of naval armaments fairly and justly to our different circumstances and condition. . . . We admit freely and willingly the parity between the United States forces and our own. It is an admission which we have never made to any other nation and which we would have made to no other nation.

Two People Alike.

"Such differences as have occurred have not therefore been differences of principle but merely differences arising out of the difficulties of applying that principle to very different circumstances and needs of the two countries."

The foreign secretary believed that the "passing difficulty" looms larger than similar differences with any other country because of the common thought and outlook of the two people.

"The problem is to find some conclusion whereby we can measure naval strength so that the parity which both nations desire may be reached, and reached at a level which will mean not an increase in the armaments of the world but a reduction."

United States Ambassador Alanson B. Houghton, who had preceded Sir Austen in speaking at the dinner, said that too much already had been said about the relations of the two nations. This had created a sensitive state, but nevertheless the relations remained fundamentally unimpaired.

'Champions' Fox Movietone To Be Shown Free Monday

What goes on behind the scenes in the club house between halves of a crucial football game? What does a coach say to his men that so crystalizes their determination to win that they come back in the second half and completely upset the opposing team.

Those who have sat in the stands and wondered about this phase of football psychology will have opportunity to step "behind the scenes" while Coach Knute Rockne, of Notre Dame, exhorts his men in the plot of the Fox Movietone production, "Champions," which is to be presented on Monday, January 28, from 5:30 to 10 p. m., at the Yarbrough Motor company, 560 West Peachtree street.

The public is invited. The audience sees and hears the fiery Notre Dame mentor talk to the members of his 1928 squad just before sending them for the second half of an important contest.

One of the outstanding football "upsets" of the 1928 season was the defeat of the Army by Notre Dame. Gridiron critics watching the game agreed that Notre Dame played practically perfect football during the first half yet seemed to make little progress against the heavier, more experienced soldiers. At the start of the second half the "Irish" came back with a spirit which admitted no defeat and scored two touchdowns to win.

What Rockne said to his men between halves to kindle the spirit which won the game is revealed in "Champions" for the first time. Appearing with Rockne in this production are several of the renowned members of the "Fighting Irish," including Chevigny, whose touchdown beat the Army; Niemic, Law, captain-elect for 1929; Brady, Leppig, Collins and Ransavage.

The plot of "Champions" is replete with action. Ann Pennington of "The Scandals; the Howard sisters of "Whoopee"; motor cars soaring around the Atlantic City speedway; presentation of the latest authentic Paris fashion creations by a Vogue fashion show; Flo Ziegfeld, the man who glorified the American girl—all are elements in its unique plot. The cast includes, in addition to those named above, such national celebrities as Eva LeGallienne, famous emotional actress; Quin Ryan, the voice of WGN; Ab Jenkins and Ralph Hepburn, racing drivers; Oscar Amundsen, a relative of the famous polar explorer; Elinor Sherwin, artist's model, whose face has charmed millions of Americans from billboards all over the country, and several Ziegfeld follies beauties. Roxy's famous orchestra furnishes the musical scoring.

Rain, Warmer Weather Today, Forecast Says

Rain and higher temperatures is the official weather forecast for Atlanta and vicinity today.

After a frigid Saturday, which saw the mercury indicator drop six points below freezing level and fail to rise above the 51-degree mark at the warmest moment of the day, the Sabbath will witness a rise in temperature of nearly 10 degrees, according to predictions of the local station of the United States weather bureau.

However, the Sunday skies will be marred by threatening clouds and a considerable quantity of rainfall is expected, the meteorology officials stated.

The mercury column in the early morning hours will start its upward cycle for today at the minimum temperature of 34 degrees, it was predicted, the high of the day is expected to be about 60 degrees.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS ARE "NUISANCE," SAY PROFESSORS

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—The impatient motorist has long felt that the stop-and-go traffic lights were a positive nuisance, and today he had corroborative statements from two University of Illinois professors.

Professor C. C. Wiley and Professor J. S. Crandell told the Illinois Society of Engineers that the green and red lights, the no-left-turn rule and other regulations were unnecessary and ineffectual. Twenty per cent of traffic has been forced to make unnessary stops because of the lights, they said. The signals were of actual value during only one or two hours of each day, and a handicap the rest of the time, they said.

trol of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana was called to the attention of the senate today by Senator Nye, republican, of North Dakota, who assailed Stewart's connection with what he described as the "Shady Continental Trading company."

Senator Nye today declared that Stewart "defied the senate, misled the senate, lied to the senate, and then proceeded to explain successfully his record to the satisfaction of a District of Columbia jury."

Referring to a recent statement by Stewart, the senator declared that in this Stewart had said that his share of profits from the Continental Trading company was "partly the source from which the steady stream of cash dividends has been paid to the stockholders of the Indiana company."

Stockholders Get "Stealings."

"It looks to me," interposed Senator Norris, republican, of Nebraska, "that some of the stockholders want Stewart reelected because he gave them the benefit of his stealings."

"If Mr. Stewart's claim is correct," asked Senator Borah, republican, Idaho, "then the stockholders benefited by that transaction, did they not?"

"Yes, that is true," Nye replied.

"Yes, he is."

"Has there been any effort made by any stockholders to return this money derived through the Continental Trading company?"

Senator Nye said he was not aware of any such attempt.

Industry Must Keep Clean.

Senator Norris read a letter he said he had received from one of the oil stockholders denouncing the manner of Stewart in soliciting proxies and describing Rockfeller's method as "just and proper."

In his prepared address, Senator Nye declared that the senate's investigations of the oil industry had saved the government billions of dollars and "ought to have created a determination in the circles of the oil people of the land to cleanse the industry of agents and officials who, by their methods, bring the entire industry into bad repute."

"Not often are business battles," he continued, "accorded such liberal publicity as is now being accorded the Rockefeller-Stewart tilt. Watching it from day to day, my conviction grows that if Mr. Stewart's press agents remain at their game long enough we will yet gain that desired complete story of the Continental Trading company and its affairs."

PASTOR DENIES AIMEE PAID JUDGE LEGAL FEE

$2,500 for Lectures and Advice in Church Dispute, Probers Told.

Los Angeles, January 26.—(AP)—An investigating committee of the state legislature learned today that a $2,500 check given Judge Carlos S. Hardy by Aimee Semple McPherson was for "lectures, radio talks" and advice offered in a church dispute.

The testimony came from a nervous little pastor who kept the books of Angelus temple. The witness, the Rev. J. W. Arthur, while denying the money was given for "legal advice" admitted that it was drawn from the "legal and defense fund" of the evangelist.

Questioned about the word "legal" penned upon the check, the pastor-bookkeeper replied it was there because that "was the best way I could think of to designate the expenditure." It was before a crowd that far exceeded the limited seating capacity of the committee's special chambers in a downtown office building that the first move in the investigation thus was made today.

As the committee, charged by the legislature to "disclose facts that will either vindicate Judge Hardy or give grounds for impeachment proceedings" adjourned until Monday, it curtly told Mrs. McPherson that her proposed tour of Canada must be delayed.

The evangelist, appearing but a few moments before adjournment, was questioned only momentarily. Mrs. McPherson informed the committee that she had planned to leave Los Angeles Monday for Canada. The committee answered by saying: "Be in these rooms at 9:20 o'clock Monday morning."

With Mrs. McPherson, the session brought Judge Hardy to the chambers. He told reporters he had nothing to say about what testimony he might make, but said that he would testify "willingly."

the man they had loved and honored in life, as the pastor of the church, the Rev. D. Witherspoon Dodge, voiced the regard in which he had been held.

Characteristics Beautiful.

Dr. Dodge told, forcefully and tenderly, of the many beautiful characteristics of Mr. Hollomon's personality and referred to the splendid service he had rendered his city, state and nation, through the trenchant editorial writings he has contributed to The Constitution for years past.

Following Dr. Dodge's words, Dr. Edwin M. Poteat, brother to Dr. W. L. Poteat, president of Wake Forest college, where Mr. Hollomon was educated, rendered the prayer. A second solo softly sung whispered through the gothic arches of the old church and the service was ended.

Two solos were rendered by Mrs. Laura Lombard, while Mrs. R. G. Sawyer presided at the organ.

The honorary escort filed through the door. Pallbearers bore the casket to the waiting hearse between the double rank of escort, and the last honor to a great newspaperman, a writer who ever held his pen true to his beliefs and highest ideals, was paid.

Among the magnificent array of floral tributes which surrounded the casket and banked around the pulpit, were gifts from the following:

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Christian, Paul W. Jones, Ralph Lee Edwards, Constitution Publishing company, Georgia Press association, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard Bryan, Alice Wilson and Elizabeth, Mr. Holloman's associates on The Constitution, General Outdoor Advertising company, Atlanta Safety Council, Miss Marion Upshaw, Frank Stanton, Mr. and Mrs. George Ripley, Mr. and Mrs. George Glozier, W. R. Neal, Mrs. William Pinckney Hill, the Hallman family, Hoke Smith, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Bonnell Stone, the Old Guard, by W. L. Hancock, adjutant; Gladstone and Sarah Orr Williams, Washington; Colonel T. L. Huston, Brunswick; officers and directors, Atlanta & Lowry National bank; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew C. Erwin, Athens; John Paschall, Mr. and Mrs. James R. Holliday, H. C. Bagley and boys, Atlanta "Hoo Hoo" club, number 1; Lee Worsham, Sam Tate, L. K. Starr, Chief Justice and Mrs. Richard B. Russell, Sam W. Small, Civic club of Atlanta, Georgia Manufacturers association, by J. P. McGrath, secretary-treasurer; Mrs. Frank L. Stanton, Albert E. Thornton, Frank E. Shumate and Mrs. Samuel M. Inman.

Active Pallbearers.

The honorary escort consisted of Governor L. G. Hardman, Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, Chief Justice Richard B. Russell, Clifford Walker, Hugh M. Dorsey, John A. Boykin, William C. Edwards, L. O. Moseley, Sam Slate, W. Tom Winn, W. R. Neel, Joseph P. Glozier, Benjamin S. Barker, Judge Shepard Bryan, John L. Westmoreland, Bonnell Stone, Major Clark Howell, Jr., Ralph T. Jones, Lewis C. Gregg, Robert Moran, P. W. Hammond, H. H. Trotti, Dr. Horace Grant, Frederick J. Paxon, J. S. Kennedy, William Candler, F. H. Abbott, M. D. Gleason, Channing Cope, Willard Cope, J. R. Bachman, Paul S. Etheridge, Charles J. Haden, Walter C. Hill, J. Henson Tatum, Platt Young and Walter G. Cooper.

A special escort from the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce included George W. West, Alfred C. Newell, Milton Dargan, Jr., Horace Russell, W. R. Tucker, J. H. Woody, L. H. Beall, W. D. Hoffman, Ivan Allen, G. C. Bowden, Frank L. Butler, Roy LeCraw, N. Baxter Maddox and Milton W. Bell.

From the Georgia Press association a special honorary escort was appointed by Miss Emily Woodward, president, consisting of Miss Emily Woodward, president, Vienna News; James Kempton, Fulton Daily Report, John Paschall, Atlanta Journal; James B. Nevin, Atlanta Georgian; V. L. Stanley, Dublin Courier-Journal; Evelyn Harris, Southern Telephone News; Lauren Foreman, Southern News Bulletin; Brown Tyler, Fulton Review; J. A. Hall, DeKalb New Era, and E. D. Shirey, Western Newspaper Union.

Mr. Hollomon was vice president at large of the Bankhead National Highway association, with executive offices in Birmingham. A special honorary escort from this organization was named as follows:

J. A. Rountree, Birmingham, director general; M. J. Abney, Athens, vice president for Georgia; Tom Winn, Atlanta; J. A. Manderville, Carrollton; C. M. Ferguson, Winder; A. N. Alford, Hartwell; Judge C. E. Roop, Carrollton; Mrs. R. K. Rambo, Atlanta; Mrs. Ruth Kumner, Carrollton, and Mrs. Stewart D. Brown, Royston.

Leaders of State and City Pay Tribute to J. A. Hollomon

Tribute to the rare ability, magnificent service and warmly human character of James A. Hollomon, associate editor of The Constitution, poured into the office of the paper and to his home on Piedmont avenue following announcement of his death.

Mr. Hollomon died Thursday night of injuries received in a two-story fall suffered Tuesday night, down the stairwell of the Henry Grady hotel.

Telegrams and letters expressing the admiration and love of friends and admirers in every walk of life have come to The Constitution since his death. Fellow workers in southern newspaperdom have voiced their sorrow at the sudden passing of a dear friend; leaders in political and business circles in many states have sent their condolences and expressed their realization of the loss to Georgia and the south his death entails; and others who base their sorrow on no other ground than that of the loss of a kindly, helpful friend, add their messages of sympathy to the list.

Sam W. Small, for years his colaborer and closest friend on the editorial staff of this paper, sends a beautiful personal message from Washington, and other newspapermen, including many from Georgia papers, add their tributes to list.

Lauded by Senators.

United States Senators William J. Harris and Walter F. George wired their condolences to Mrs. Hollomon. Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman sent a telegram of sympathy. Mayor I. N. Ragsdale, of Atlanta, issued a formal statement of appreciation of his life and sorrow in his death.

Among others who sent telegrams or letters were:

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, through C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary; W. G. Sutlive, of Savannah; Joe P. Johnston, postoffice inspector in charge, Atlanta; Hiram Gardner, Albany, Ga.; J. A. Rountree, director general Bankhead National highway, Birmingham; Mrs. Max M. Kuttner, Rome; Clarence H. Leavy, Brunswick; D. G. Bickers, Savannah; Hugh Rowe, Athens; Dr. Robert P. Adams, Winder, Ga.; Ernest Camp, Monroe, Ga.; John A. Thurston, Thomaston, Ga.; J. C. McAuliffe, Augusta; Willis M. Ball, of Jacksonville; J. H. Eve, Savannah; B. M. Gaddis, Valdosta; Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone Williams, Washington; Peter V. Rice, Elberton, Ga.; A. F. Dean, Gainesville; Louie D. Newton, Atlanta, and J. W. Williamson, Jacksonville.

Dr. Small, from Washington, sent the following telegram:

"Washington, January 26.—(Special.)—My loyal friend and affectionately-valued co-worker has passed on into that other life ahead of us who thought we would precede him thither. His going has brought to my spirit that peculiar pain which the heart produces when it is baffled for expression.

"During the long years of our association there grew in both of us a brotherly love akin to blood devotion. Neither of us was blind to the laches of the other, but we were always moved by charity and solicitude for each other. Our hearts and aims were at one in the ambition to do human service in ungrudging spirit.

Gifted in Mind and Spirit.

"The message telling me of the shattering fall which he suffered last Tuesday and the wound from it shocked me inexpressibly. Looking back to my recent experiences from a lesser similar accident, and the aftermath which still hampers me, I was not unprepared for the fatal consequence. But that did not lessen by a shred the acute pain of the closing event. His spirit is not far ahead of mine, possibly, and I know in my soul that we shall meet again—how soon, God knows.

"Jim Hollomon, as known to his closest associates and admirers, was gifted in mind and spirit. He used his talents with diligence and integrity. He served his duties with loyalty and honesty. He obstructed no one, from envy or malice. He helped to the measure of his ability and the full strength of his benevolence whoever appeared to need his aid. He had a high sense of the demands of the public welfare and gave it his unstinted promotion. I found in him abundant reasons to love and honor him.

"Dear Jim—may our Father, our Elder Brother and 'the spirits of just men made perfect' welcome you to eternal peace, and rest, and joys.

"SAM W. SMALL."

From Governor and Mrs. L. G. Hardman came a message reading:

"We are deeply grieved in this sad hour. James A. Hollomon was of the highest type of southern manhood. His service and contribution to humanity will remain a monument to his memory."

Other telegrams included the following:

"Profoundly grieved to learn of Mr. Hollomon's death. There can be no doubt that Atlanta and Georgia have lost one of our most useful citizens.

"(Senator) WALTER F. GEORGE."

"His death removes one who was doing splendid work for Georgia. His passing is a personal loss to me. I admired him and valued his friendship.

W. G. SUTLIVE.
"Savannah."

"I am distressed at the passing of Mr. Hollomon, of whom I have been very fond for many years and whose friendship I prized very much. His death is a great loss to Georgia, to Atlanta and the hosts of good fellows who were proud to call him friend.

"JOE P. JOHNSTON."

"The state of Georgia and the south has lost a great leader. Good roads and the Bankhead national highway has lost a great advocate. His place will be hard to fill.

"J. A. ROUNTREE, Birmingham"

"We were greatly shocked and grieved to read of the death of Mr. James A. Hollomon. He was a fine type of citizen and his passing will be mourned by the host of friends who knew him personally and through his writings in The Constitution.

"C. V. HOHENSTEIN,
"Executive Secretary Atlanta Retail Merchants' Association."

"I suppose somebody will take Mr. Hollomon's place, but it will be a long search. I have followed his writings with a great deal of pleasure. My sincere consolation is offered.

"ROBERT P. ADAMS,
"Winder."

"Great Blow to Georgia."

"The death of James A. Hollomon is not only a great blow to his family and friends but to the state of Georgia, which he loved so well. It removes one of the ablest and most constructive forces in Georgia journalism and a man loved by thousands throughout the nation, with whose affairs he kept in such interesting luminous touch. For years he had been one of my most devoted and cherished friends.

ERNEST CAMP.
"Monroe, Ga."

"We will miss the illuminating column of 'Just in Passing.'

"JOHN A. THURSTON,
"Thomaston, Ga."

"Mr. Hollomon's death is a great shock to me. He was a forceful newspaperman and in his passing Georgia loses one of its greatest and most constructive journalists.

"J. M. McAULIFFE,
"Augusta, Ga."

"It is with sincere regret we note the death of James A. Hollomon. He was a splendid newspaperman, a great Georgian and a true Southerner. Accept the true sympathy of the Gainesville Eagle in your loss.

"A. F. DEAN,
"Gainesville, Ga."

"Mr. Hollomon loved people. He loved Atlanta. He loved Georgia. He loved his country.

"He worked hard to see Georgia go forward and he has not labored in vain. Though dead he yet speaketh. All the high notes he sounded, all the forward looks he gave us, all the impelling appeals he made to Georgians to do more and to do better—these all live on in our hearts. His soul goes marching on.

"LOUIE D. NEWTON,

J. W. Williamson, of Jacksonville, was private secretary to Mr. Hollomon during his life in the Florida city as a real estate man, from 1905 to 1916. He sends a message of personal appreciation, relating many anecdotes of their days together and ending:

"All who were associated with him in his enterprises loved him if they did their duty. I, for one, feel I have lost the best friend I had next to my mother. His gentle kindness and his character have always been an incentive to me to do better and treat others better. I loved him. I shall miss him."

FRENCH PEASANTS NOW ORGANIZING THEIR OWN PARTY

Paris, January 26.—(AP)—French peasants have begun organization of their own party similar to that now in power in Rumania and to the peasant parties in Czecho-Slovakia and Germany.

At an organization meeting today messages of sympathy were read from the heads of various peasant parties throughout Europe. The temporary president of the meeting, M. Fleurant-Agricola, then made an address in which he declared that 48 per cent of the French population was agricultural and that it would have more representation in the country's affairs.

The new party will be called the agricultural and peasant party and will begin contesting seats.

NORTH CHINA STAR EXPECTED TO LOSE MAIL PRIVILEGES

Shanghai, China, January 26.—(AP) The ministry of communications of the nationalist government announced today that it is planning to deprive the North China Star, an American newspaper published in Tientsin, of its mailing privileges. The reason given was that the paper had "published rumors detrimental to the kaumintang and the national government."

The publisher of the newspaper is Charles J. Fox, a former correspondent in Washington.

C. OF C. WILL GIVE BANQUET THIS WEEK

Members Urged To Make Reservations for Annual Dinner.

Members of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce who have not made reservations for seats at the sixty-third annual dinner of the organization next Thursday night are urged to write or telephone early this week, in order that efficient service may be provided.

The dinner will begin at 6 o'clock, and members are urged to arrive early, in order that everyone may be seated quickly and the program begun.

Indications are that it will be necessary to seat more than 100 members and guests in the street floor dining room, while the second floor assembly hall will be used for the official program, with 300 person accommodated. Plans are being made to provide decorations, music and other entertainment for the overflow meeting, and after dinner is served all those in the street floor dining room will be invited to hear the speakers in the main assembly hall.

Judge Shepard Bryan has accepted the post of general chairman in charge of arrangements, with Sam C. Rothberg as vice chairman. Details will be discussed at a meeting of the committee to be called this week.

A feature will be a humorous address by Dr. D. W. Daniel, of Clemson college, who has several times spoken in Atlanta with great success. He has a national reputation as an after-dinner speaker and humorist.

The officers will be installed for the year, as follows: Philip H. Alston, president; Horace Russell, Frank L. Butler and Gregory C. Bowden, vice president; Henry W. Davis, treasurer, Milton Dargan, Jr., retiring president, will discuss the work of his administration, and B. S. Barker, executive vice president, will submit a condensed report of the year's activities.

Magazine Tells Of Girl's Great Fight for Career

A story of remarkable persistence, with the ultimate reward at last responding to a young girl's determined effort to overcome all handicaps in her fight for recognition in her chosen art, is told in the January issue of the Louisville and Nashville employees' magazine.

The girl is Miss Eleanor Speer, of Atlanta, daughter of K. W. Speer, an engineer employed at the Atlanta joint terminals.

Miss Speer, handicapped by serious eye troubles, determined to become an organist and, under the tutelage of Dr. Ben J. Potter, organist at Trinity church, head of organ and choral department of Brenau college at Gainesville and an associate of the Royal College of Organists of London, finally achieved public recognition as a splendid performer when she gave her debut recital at Trinity last fall.

Miss Speer is now planning to go to Europe to continue her studies there, but has been delayed by recurrence of her eye trouble.

Miss Speer began studying the piano when nine years of age and continued this for eight years. An attack of influenze brought about the serious handicap to her work by leaving her with imperfect eyesight.

She graduated from a college preparatory course at Girls' High school and arranged to study under Dr. Potter. She has been a member of his choir at Trinity and is now assistant organist there.

After she studies in Europe Miss Speer plans to continue her efforts toward the goal she has set of concert organist.

Sewanee Glee Club Here February 3 on Annual Tour

JULIAN ROBERT DE OVIES, Son of the Very Rev. Raimiundo de Ovies, of Atlanta.

A. W. JOHNSON, Son of Mr. and Mrs. George Johnson, of Atlanta.

The Sewanee Glee club, hailed by critics as one of the best in all Dixies, and which, with the exception of the Yale and Notre Dame clubs, has traveled more miles in two weeks than any other like unit, will start its annual winter tour this month, appearing at Egleston Memorial hall February 5.

The club will present much new material on its trip this season as well as number of old favorites. Among the numbers especially singled out for praise last season was "O Lovely Night" (Barcarolle, Offenbach-Spicker and at the request of the cities visited the number will be included in thi. season's program.

The program consists of ensemble, classical and semi-classical numbers interspersed with vocal solos, selections from the orchestra, and skits.

The "Tin Can Quartet" has a technique all its own and presents in a most singular fashion. "Chords and Dischords" is their act. "Ab" Johnson's imitation of a sawmill when the saw strikes a knot must be heard to be appreciated.

"The Dizzy Dumb Dora" is the title of a skit especially written for the Sewanee Glee club by Ruth C. Bassette, a professional New York artist and playright.

John Ashmore Gowen, baritone soloist of the club, was trained in the studio of John Itherspoon, formerly of New York, now of Chicago. Gowen is better known in the New England states than in the south, for his chief concert and radio broadcasting performances have been in Connecticut.

A real impersonation of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde will be seen when Jack Walthour, director, will not only appear as the leader of the club, but will present a stage novelty under the nom de plume of Banjovial Jack.

The Sewanee Syncopators., orchestra of the University of the South, will appear with the club in their own performance. The syncopators are able to hold their own in any battle of jazz. Each man is able to play several instruments.

One of the features of the Sewanee Glee club is the informality with which the program is presented. This is a distinct departure from the average glee club tradition and has been warmly welcomed and highly praised since its inception.

"ALTHOUGH most people may not think so, painting is really hard work. I mean not only work of the mind, but actually physical work. Often I stand before my easel for hours without a rest, without a single pause...That's why comfortable shoes are indispensable to the artist. Inspiration flies away quick enough when shoes hurt!

"I wear Cantilevers. They are marvelously comfortable, caressing, pleasing to one's eye and pleasing to one's style sense. Cantilever shoes have become almost as much a part of my tools as my brushes and my palette."

A Lawyer pleads for comfort . .

"The profession of law is an especially exacting one. Pleading and defending keeps me on my feet for hours at a stretch. Comfortable shoes are an absolute necessity to me. It is equally important that a lawyer look her best at all times. A good appearance makes the best impression on both the client and the Court.

"That is why I have worn Cantilever Shoes for the last two years. For my work, they are the ideal shoes, comfortable, soft and flexible ... trim and smart-looking as well."

Miss LILLIAN R. BASSMAN

Cantilever Shoes are so comfortable because they are perfectly proportioned to fit the foot. With every step you take they yield gracefully and support the foot naturally.

The new styles are particularly attractive—charmingly fashioned and designed for the gentlewoman's taste.

Among the enthusiastic Cantilever wearers in this community are:

Miss Emily H. Clay, Miss Mary Allen, Miss Ethel Clark, Mrs. G. B. Kornegay, Mrs. T. C. Erwin, Mrs. I. T. Irvin, Jr.

Doctor Found Women and Children Sick More Often than Men

As a family doctor at Monticello, Illinois, the whole human body, not any small part of it, was Dr. Caldwell's practice. More than half his "calls" were on women, children and babies. They are the ones most often sick. But their illnesses were usually of a minor nature—colds, fevers, headaches, biliousness—and all of them required first a thorough evacuation. They were constipated.

In the course of Dr. Caldwell's 47 years' practice, he found a good deal of success in such cases with a prescription of his own containing simple laxative herbs with pepsin. In 1892 he decided to use this formula in the manufacture of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and placed it on the market.

The preparation immediately had as great a public success as it previously had in Dr. Caldwell's private practice. Now, the third generation is using it. Mothers are giving it to their children who were given it by their mothers. Every second of the working day someone somewhere is going into a drug store to buy it. There are thousands of homes in this country that are never without a bottle of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, and we have many hundreds of letters from grateful people telling us it helped when everything else failed.

While women, children and elderly people are especially benefited by Dr.

W. B. Caldwell M.D.
AT AGE 83

Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, its mild, gentle action is promptly effective on the most robust constitution and in the most obstinate cases. Containing neither opiates nor narcotics, it is safe for the tiniest baby. Children like it and take it willingly. Every drug store sells Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.—(adv.)

FAMOUS SYMPHONY WILL VISIT ATLANTA

The Minneapolis Symphony orchestra, one of the five greatest symphony organizations in the world will give two concerts today at the auditorium on Wednesday, February 6, it was announced Saturday by S. Russell Bridges, president of the Southern Musical bureau.

This event marks the most important musical engagement for Atlanta during the year, with the exception of grand opera.

Conductor Widely Known.

Henri Verbrugghen, famous European conductor who came to take over the direction of the Minneapolis orchestra some years ago, will conduct the concerts here. The entire personnel of the orchestra will be present. Incidentally, it is interesting to note that many of these musicians have been with the orchestra ten years or more and five have been with it ever since its inception, 25 years ago. The importance of this long service by symphony players is recognized by all critics, as it is the blending of each player, both mechanically and spiritually, that creates the perfect whole, like one great instrument, upon which the conductor plays.

Conductor Henri Verbrugghen.

The annual tours of the Minneapolis Symphony have been a high-light of American musical life for the past 20 years and the orchestra is known from the Atlantic to Pacific, from Canada to the Rio Grande. It has contributed an inestimable portion of the musical tradition which has accumulated in this country during the past quarter century.

No Seat Sales Yet.

The orchestra is supported by generous contributions from public spirited citizens of Minneapolis, thus making it possible to give its concerts at admission prices no higher than those usually charged for first-class attractions, despite the tremendous costs in maintaining such an organization. Figures disclose that these Minneapolis contributors have given in excess of $2,500,000 toward permanently maintaining the orchestra.

Mr. Bridges stated that details as to seat sales, etc., had yet to be arranged and would be announced as early as possible.

HEADS BIBLE CLASS

Mrs. C. J. Buhman Elected by Good Samaritans.

Mrs. C. J. Buhman has been elected president of the Good Samaritan Bible class of the First Baptist church, it was announced Saturday. The election took place Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. H. B. Emerson, on Peachtree Hills avenue.

Other officers elected were: Mrs. R. D. McDowell, first vice president; Mrs. Fuller Mynatt, second vice president; Mrs. J. B. Franklin, third vice president; Mrs. J. M. Staples, recording secretary; Mrs. Alex Bealer, corresponding secretary; Mrs. C. L. Collier, publicity chairman; Mrs. J. H. Coin, teacher.

A suit asking $50,000 as damages for injuries alleged to have been received when she fell from the doorway of a Stewart avenue street car on October 28, was filed Saturday in the city court of Atlanta by Miss Vinnie Hughes, 65, against the Georgia Power company.

Miss Hughes alleges that the accident happened when she was waiting for the door to open at the end of the Stewart avenue line, and charges that the motorman opened the door and stopped the car suddenly, the momentum throwing her into the street.

The plaintiff recites in the petition that her injuries consist of a fracture pelvic bone, and fractured left hip and thigh bones. Poole and Fraser filed the petition as attorneys for Miss Hughes.

MACON MAN GETS YEAR FOR DRUG ACT VIOLATION

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—A. W. Rogers, who was arrested Friday on the charge of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic law, was brought before Judge Bascom S. Deaver, in United States district court today and entered a plea of guilty. Judge Deaver sentenced him to a year and a day in the Atlanta federal penitentiary.

$200.00 Paid for One Penny

J. D. Martin, of Richmond, Va., is the proud possessor of a check for $200.00 paid him for an old copper cent. The Numismatic Company, Dept. 901, Fort Worth, Texas, who purchased this penny from Mr. Martin, says there are thousands of old coins, bills, medals and stamps for which they will pay big cash premiums. So that everyone will know the value of old coins and stamps and what to watch for in their change, the Numismatic Company will send for only 4c to any reader of The Constitution who writes them, a large illustrated coin folder describing many of these wanted articles and the big profits to be made. Better write them today for their large folder so you can post yourself and know what to look for. Remember that Mr. Martin's knowing the value of his penny meant a difference of $199.99 to him. Without knowing its value that penny might still be in circulation, passing through the hands of thousands until someone like Mr. Martin, who knows old coins, recognized its value. It pays to be posted. Send 4c now for their illustrated coin folder. You have nothing to lose, everything to gain. —(adv.

Victim of Accident, H. B. Jones, Once Accused in Wife's Death.

Identification of the man who Friday night sustained fatal injuries when he was run down by a street car was established Saturday by H. B. Jones, 45, of 10 Springer street, who several months ago was tried and acquitted on a charge of murdering his wife on April 22, 1928. Jones was lying on the street car tracks at the time he was struck.

Relatives Saturday morning identified the body of the man shortly after he died at Grady hospital.

It was alleged by police in the trial of Jones several months ago that he had shot his wife to death at their residence on DeFoor avenue, off Crooked road a Sunday afternoon while in a drunken condition. He was indicted by a Fulton county grand jury but subsequently was acquitted on trial.

Jones was run down at Pearl and Fair streets by a car operated by J. T. Brock, who has been released by police on $1,000 bond for disorderly conduct charges.

Brock said he saw what he thought was a bit of rubbish lying on the track and did not stop until the car had passed over it. Jones was rushed to Grady hospital. Two brothers of the dead man, M. W. and G. F. Jones identified the body at the funeral parlors of Blanchard Brothers Saturday morning.

DANDRUFF
Soon Destroys the Hair

If you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for it will starve your hair and ruin it if you don't.

It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop, and your hair will look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. Four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This simple remedy never fails.—(adv.)

When your Children Cry for It

Mothers, who take one simple precaution, are seldom worried. With a bottle of Fletcher's Castoria in the house they can do what their doctor would tell them to do, when baby is fretful, feverish, colicky, constipated or stuffed-up with cold—give a few drops of this pure vegetable, pleasant-tasting preparation. It comforts Baby and soothes him to sleep in a jiffy. It's perfectly safe for the youngest infant. Use it freely—and as often as needed, specialists advise. A more liberal dose is all it takes to comfort and relieve older children, when feverishness, bad breath, no appetite, colds, etc., show they need a good purging. The mark of genuine Castoria is the Fletcher signature on the wrapper. Look for it to avoid imitations.

Frigidaire Officials and 600 Salesmen Of Southeast To Assemble Here Thursday

F. G. BIECHLER,
President and General Manager.

R. F. CALLAWAY,
Manager of Branches.

J. A. HARLAN,
Sales Manager.

E. D. DOTY,
Advertising Manager.

MISS VERNA MILLER,
Director of Experimental Kitchens.

Climaxing months of preparation by officials of Frigidaire Corporation at Dayton, Ohio, 600 selling men of the General Motors subsidiary will meet in Atlanta January 31, opening the first of 10 regional conventions to be held all over the United States and in Canada. Business sessions will be held at the Forsyth theater and a banquet has been arranged for the evening at the Ansley hotel.

E. G. Biechler, president and general manager, will head 30 factory representatives who will arrive here the morning preceding the opening of the convention. C. F. Kettering, vice president of General Motors in charge of research, will accompany the party to Atlanta, according to information received by E. H. Danforth, local branch manager.

Mr. Kettering, who will be one of the principal speakers at the banquet, is regarded as one of the outstanding research engineers and inventors in the United States. He is the inventor of the automobile starter and founder of the Delco-Light company. Besides developing an individual electric lighting plant he has played a prominent part in the development of ethyl gasoline, the duco process, and numerous other scientific achievements. His philosophical addresses on scientific subjects have won him national recognition.

Elaborate Program.

Details of the convention program, which will afford opportunity for the discussion of outstanding accomplishments of the electrical refrigeration industry during 1928 and additional developments anticipated in 1929, will be under the personal supervision of J. A. Harlan, sales manager.

Every detail of the convention program has been timed so accurately that every event is scheduled as accurately as a vaudeville program. This arrangement enables a program to be presented in a few hours which would ordinarily take several days to encompass.

Stage scenery, electrical effects, loud speakers, displays and numerous other pieces of equipment will be carried to the convention cities in a special car which will make the 10,000-mile tour necessary to reach 8,000 field men in the Frigidaire organization. The convention paraphernalia will be set up at the Forsyth theater the day preceding the convention so that all will be in order when the meeting convenes.

Although it takes approximately six hours to install the convention equipment, the stage properties can be dismantled so quickly that the party is in readiness to continue its journey within half an hour after the final session. The Frigidaire executives are making the convention trip in a private car, directly ahead of cars bearing the stage equipment and helpers, stage assistants and professional entertainers.

Products on Exhibit.

Various products of the company will be on exhibition at the Ansley hotel for the information of the salesmen in attendance. Signal honor will be accorded at the convention to members of the 1928 quota club, composed of salesmen who have reached or exceeded the quota of sales assigned them for the year. These outstanding salesmen will be presented with gold purses and otherwise honored by the entire convention. Additional ways in which the company plans to honor individual selling accomplishments will be announced at the meeting. Four Frigidaire salesmen of this city will be presented with $100 in gold each at the convention. They are J. A. Woodliff, Allen Stewart, R. W. Goodrich and W. E. Hudson.

Accomplishments of the past year will be briefly reviewed in a series of short speeches and the program for the next 12 months will then be outlined in detail. R. F. Callaway, manager of branches, will discuss recent price reductions and tell of plans for 1929 activities. Sales points will be emphasized by playlets, taking but a few minutes to enact but affording a medium to present points which would take a speaker an hour or more to discuss. Charts and motion picture projectors will be employed.

L. S. Keilholtz, chief engineer, will speak on the company's products, telling of their quiet operation and other engineering developments and refinements. Household and commercial refrigeration equipment as well as electric water coolers will be discussed at this time.

Other Speakers.

The practical uses of Frigidaire to the busy housekeeper will be discussed by Miss Verna L. Miller, home economist in charge of Frigidaire experimental kitchen, and recipe book author.

Other convention speakers will include T. B. Fordham, works manager; E. D. Doty, advertising manager; G. A. Ames, of the General Motors Acceptance corporation; R. L. Lee, head of the sales promotion department; J. E. Houser, chief inspector; H. F. Lehman, installation and service manager; T. H. "Dusty" Miller, Ohio newspaper publisher and humorist, and S. A. Long, Wichita distributor, who will represent the field organization.

The banquet program will include a cabaret performance by the professional entertainers. All these participating in the convention, comprising salesmen from Georgia, North Carolina, Florida, Tennessee and South Carolina, will attend the banquet, which will constitute the final event of the Atlanta meeting. Holding of the convention here represents the second time that Atlanta has been chosen as the convention city for this territory.

BIG MASS MEETING CLOSES CHRISTIAN-JEWISH CONCLAVE

With a mass meeting and musical recital at 3 o'clock this afternoon at the Baptist tabernacle on Luckie street as the principal service, the Jewish Christian conference will come to a close today. Sessions will be held at the Atlanta Gospel tabernacle this morning and tonight.

Alexander Kaminsky, noted Russian violinist, will render a special musical program at the mass meeting and tell the story of his conversion.

Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Rev. Henry Singer, of Detroit, will speak at the Gospel tabernacle, his subject being "Personal Reminiscences," and Sunday night at 7:45 his topic will be "The Passover."

FOUR CONVENTIONS IN ATLANTA THIS WEEK

B'nai B'rith and Frigidaire Gatherings Hold Center of Interest.

Four conventions and special events to be staged in Atlanta this week were announced Saturday by Fred Houser, executive secretary of the Atlanta Convention and Tourist bureau.

Beginning today, and continuing for three days, will be the fifth district convention of the grand lodge, Independent Order of B'nai B'rith, with headquarters at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel. About 75 official delegates and many other visitors are expected to be in attendance.

About 600 sales representatives of the Frigidaire corporation will assemble in Atlanta on Thursday for one of a series of regional sales conferences being conducted by the organization. Headquarters for the conference will be at the Ansley hotel. A corps of workers from the home office, in Dayton, Ohio, have been in the city for about a week completing local arrangements.

Though small in number, the Council of Associations of Community Chests, which convenes for a two-day session at the Ansley hotel, Friday, February 1, is one of the most important conventions to be scheduled in some time, it was stated at the convention bureau. The gathering will be composed of representatives and directors of Community Chests throughout the country.

The Burrough's business show, comprising an exhibit of the same display that has attracted wide attention in New York, is scheduled as an event of the week to be held at the Henry Grady hotel. In addition to salesmen of this territory, a large number of visitors are expected to view the show, G. W. Eakins, local manager, stated.

Program for Meetings at First Christian Church Announced.

A six-day training school for Christian leadership will open this afternoon at the First Christian church under direction of the Rev. E. B. Quick, of Atlanta, southeastern superintendent of religious education for the Christian church.

The Sunday session will be held at 2:30 o'clock while daily sessions will run from 5 o'clock until 9 o'clock with an hour taken for dinner between 6 and 7 o'clock. This meal will be served at the church to permit those who wish to come directly from their work to the school.

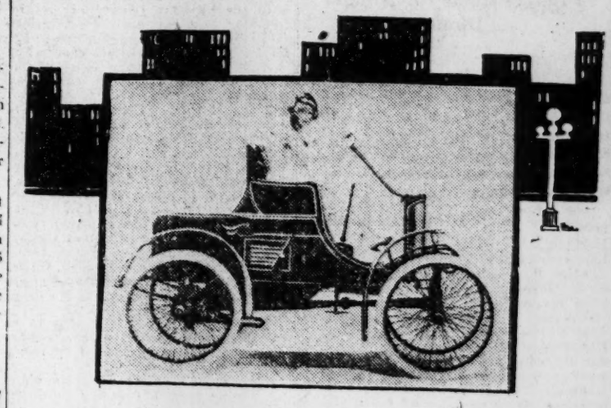

At the daily sessions the hour from 5 to 6 o'clock will be devoted to group discussions, led by faculty members, on such subjects as leadership training, adult work, fine arts in religious education, the worship program, educational evangelism, training in stewardship, Christian endeavor, and young people's conference.

J. C. Cook To Speak.

John C. Cook, great sachem of Georgia, will be the principal speaker at "homecoming" of the Red Men of Natahalie Tribe, No. 98, at 7:30 o'clock Monday night, in the Red Men's wigwam, 160 Central avenue. The entertainment feature of the program will be selections by members of the mandolin club of M. Rich & Bros. company.

GALLSTONES KILL MILLIONS ANNUALLY

According to eminent medical authorities, Gallstones exact even a greater toll of lives than modern warfare. It is estimated that every year millions of people die directly or indirectly from Gallstones or kindred ailments. An old German doctor, Dr. Hildebrand, devoted years in an effort to find a Gallstone cure. His efforts were spured on by the fact that he was a sufferer himself. After numerous experiments he at last found a treatment that cured him of his Gallstones. The old doctor then prescribed this treatment to other sufferers. The amazing results they report is convincing evidence of the merit of his treatment. For a limited time through the Dr. Hildebrand Laboratories, Dept. 719, 155 N. Union Ave., Chicago, Ill., sufferers everywhere may obtain a test of this marvelous treatment free. Anyone troubled with Gallstones, Liver or Stomach ailments should send their name at once.—(adv.)

2 ATLANTA STUDENTS HONORED AT WESLEYAN

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—L. H. Fowler and H. H. Cobb, both of Atlanta, made an average grade of "B" in the Mercer university law school here last term, thus placing themselves on the list of honor men for the term, Dean J. A. McClain, Jr., announced yesterday in compiling grades of the students for the fall term.

J. Q. Davidson, of Fort Valley, broke all scholastic records at the school by establishing an average of 91.4. The record was held by Scott Russell, former United States district attorney, and now with a local law firm, when he made a grade of 89.9 in 1925.

Charles C. Cork, of Macon, made the second highest average of the term. Other honor men in the senior class are Mr. Fowler, of Atlanta; E. L. Benton, Macon; W. E. Smith, Fitzgerald; Harvey Jay, Fitzgerald; Pollard Jent, Macon; Fred W. New, Oneida, Tenn.; Oliver C. Custer, Bainbridge.

The junior honor men are S. C. Callaway, of Ashburn; R. F. Scarborough, Eastman; Mr. Cobb, Atlanta; C. H. Baldwin, Macon; O. H. Middlebrooks, Macon; T. R. Watkins, Lexington; J. A. Hammack, Coleman.

CENTRAL VIADUCT OPENING TO AWAIT OTHER PROJECTS

Although the Central avenue and Wall street viaducts will be ready for traffic the earlier part of this week, they will not be opened for about 30 days, when the Pryor street bridge and the Alabama street approach are completed, according to announcement Saturday by the bridge committee of city council, of which Alderman W. Guy Dobbs is chairman.

Ceremonies marking the formal opening will be arranged by Mr. Dobbs and Frank H. Neely, chairman of the Atlanta bond commission.

"It is correct," Alderman Dobbs said Saturday, "that the Central avenue bridge is practically ready for traffic now, and that the Wall street link will soon be so, but these portions of the viaduct system are being used to a great extent in the construction of the Pryor street bridge and the Alabama street approaches. To open the completed parts to traffic immediately would possibly delay completion of the other links.

"Since the viaducts will probably be complete in all details within a month, we see no reason why any links should be opened until the entire system of splendid bridges is ready for the public."

LUNCHEON MONDAY

C. of C. Woman's Division Will Hold Monthly Meeting.

The monthly luncheon of the woman's division of the chamber of commerce will be held at 12:30 o'clock Monday afternoon in the Chamber of Commerce building. A full program has been arranged which will include several talks and a number of musical selections.

ST. LOUIS

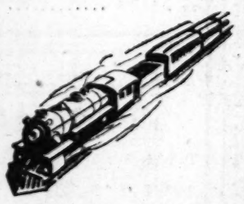

The Convention of the American Retailers' Association, which opens in St. Louis February 4th, offers Retailers invaluable instruction on the most modern merchandising methods, as well as contacts with successful Merchants from all parts of the country.

Visit the* NEW ST. LOUIS

"WHERE MERCHANTS BUY AT THE SOURCE"

St. Louis, the merchandise manufacturing center of the Mid-West, brings Merchant and Maker close together. It offers goods from their source; consequently better prices ... greater varieties ... fresher showings ... quicker deliveries. And because its manufacturers know your particular trade as no others know it, St. Louis presents practical merchandise that your trade will buy.

Reduced fares on all railroads to St. Louis during the week of the American Retailers' Convention, beginning February 4th. Get a Validation Certificate from your Local Ticket Agent.

The annual Spring merchandise and style showing is ready here. It includes every variety of goods; a display complete and comprehensive. Now is the time for Retailers to visit St. Louis,—primarily to inspect the new styles while the showings are complete; to talk with the makers in many lines—to exchange viewpoints with retailers from all over the country; to get a broader picture of market trends, nation-wide demands and new merchandising ideas;—and, incidentally, to have the time of your life!

St. Louis with its entertaining clubs, shows and myriad attractions, offers interesting relaxation of every sort. You will want to see the St. Louis Auto Show. No one who sells can afford to miss the instructive meetings of the American Retailers' Association. Both come during the week beginning February 4th.... Nearness; low freights; fast package car deliveries; splendid passenger car service; friendly, personal contacts with sources of supply,—all these say:—"COME TO ST. LOUIS!"

Following the report of the Union station committee, a resolution was unanimously adopted urging immediate action in the construction of a new station and the committee was instructed to put forth every effort to get the work under way as soon as possible. The auditorium committee, consisting of Reuben R. Arnold, Gordon Burnett, John A. Sibley, Wade H. Davis and J. J. Haverty, was continued and given instructions to cooperate with the convention bureau in securing an adequate auditorium for the city. A new committee was appointed to cooperate with the committee of council in the matter of a proposed new bond issue for Atlanta.

D. I. Cooper, of Cooper and Cooper, architects, urging a uniform movement in the construction of the viaducts area, agreed to prepare a sketch to be published in the near future, showing an outline of the uniform reconstruction of the fronts of buildings in this section.

The association went on record as indorsing the proposal to change the name of Decatur street to East Marietta street, also as advocating the merging of Washington street, Courtland street and Juniper street into one great thoroughfare to be known as Washington boulevard.

Psychology Lecture.

"Open Secrets of Personality, Success and Prosperity" will be the subject of the lecture in practical psychology to be given by Mrs. Rose Mae Ashby, psychologist, Sunday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock in the mahogany room of the Ansley hotel. The public is invited.

DRINK WATER FREELY IF KIDNEYS BOTHER

Flush your kidneys by drinking a quart of water each day, also take salts occasionally, says a noted authority, who tells us that too much rich food forms acids which almost paralyze the kidneys in their efforts to expel it from the blood. They become sluggish and weaken; then you may suffer with a dull misery in the kidney region, sharp pains in the back or sick headache, dizziness, your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine gets cloudy, full of sediment, the channels often get sore and irritated, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night.

To help neutralize these irritating acids, to help cleans the kidneys and flush off the body's urinous waste, get four ounces of Jad Salts from any pharmacy here; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days, and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate sluggish kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Rushing emergency medical supplies is becoming one of the most important missions of modern aviation. A notable instance of this valuable humanitarian work was written recently, when influenza was epidemic throughout large sections of the country.

Washington, D. C., was severely hit. The demand for remedies was so heavy that a large chain of drug stores completely exhausted its supplies of Vapex, a germicidal inhalant discovered in England and recently manufactured in this country.

The president of the chain received insistent calls from all his 31 stores to the effect that supplies had disappeared. Faced with a heavy loss of sales unless fresh shipments were immediately available, new supplies were ordered rushed by plane from New York. The sister ship of Colonel Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" tuned up at the Newark airport; supplies of Vapex were rushed to the flying field and two hours and 10 minutes later had arrived in Washington, 230 miles away. Trucks of the People's Drug Stores were waiting at the Washington airport and distributed the shipment immediately. The whole transaction, from the actual order to delivery of the supplies in Washington, required only a few hours.

"I have often said that thrift may rightly be termed as the mother of many virtues. Three-fourths of the heartaches of the world have their source and origin in financial difficulties. The Bible has rightly said that the love of money is the root of all evil, and a parallel passage might have read as follows: The lack of money is the source of many troubles. Realizing in my own personal experience the need of such training in youth and having suffered from the lack of it in my own life, it has been one of my chief concerns as an educator to provide the opportunities for the formation of the habit in the children of this generation.

"The first act of my school administration about eight years ago was to call together the principals and to formulate plans for a system of thrift teaching in our public schools. This plan was presented to the board of education and adopted, and since that time there has been a regular weekly banking day in the public schools of Atlanta. The pupils of the schools now carry a balance of more than $200,000 in the Fulton National bank and during that time have taken in more than a million dollars in the Atlanta public schools. And these figures represent the smallest result of our work.

Real Benefits.

"The inculcation of the habit of thrift, the idea of having a regular day to bank money, the training in banking methods and procedure—all these are the real benefit accruing to the boy or girl who gets in the habit of knowing that there is a banking day and that he or she should make a deposit regularly and who keeps up this practice for 13 years of school life will not be likely to forget or neglect it throughout the remaining days of life. In fact, I believe that no habit consistently followed through the 13 years of school life will be able to be broken in after life. The thrift habit, therefore, is the greatest of moral advantages as far as our banking system is concerned.

"The boy or girl who cultivates the habit of thrift will throw no money away on cigarettes, cigars, tobacco or alcoholic drinks. He will have thoroughly mastered the idea of saving money. He will know that the expenditure of money for these things will cut down the amount of his deposits, the amount of his accumulation. Therefore, the boy or girl who becomes accustomed to saving money regularly will in time eliminate these wicked and unwholesome habits.

Budgeting of Time.

"The student who cultivates the habit of thrift in money soon comes to apply the same principle to his time. He who budgets his money will have created in his brain an impression that will make him able to budget his time. He who has saved time has saved life. So that the thrift habit is the mother of the time-saving habit in life. And so we might apply this same principle to all of the moral virtues, and so we will find that the boy or girl who has acquired the habit of thrift will not be extravagant in clothes, in what he eats, nor will he spend his money on useless luxuries, knowing that he is lessening his opportunity for accumulating.

"Therefore, I think we might rightly say that thrift is the mother of virtues."

Morehouse college, local institution for the training of young negro men, is launching this week a campaign for $300,000 to match a like amount recently offered the institution conditionally by the general education board, of New York city. Roy H. Tolleson, a specialist in this line, is in charge of the work and has opened headquarters at 409 Palmer building, where he is rapidly shaping up far-reaching plan for the campaign which will be conducted in several stages. There will be first, a campaign among the faculty and students; then the local alumni and the colored people of Atlanta will be appealed to; then the white people of Atlanta; and finally a general campaign among alumni and friends of the institution north and south.

The campus campaign will begin Monday, under the chairmanship of R. W. Riley, assisted by Vice Chairmen J. H. Wheeler and O. M. Beverly, eight captains and a working organization of sixty. A campus goal of $15,000 has been adopted, and advance subscriptions and the interest manifested indicate that this amount will be oversubscribed. Immediately following the campus campaign the citizens of Atlanta will be given an opportunity to assist. The program is under the general supervision of the board of trustees, which is headed by Dr. Carter Helm Jones.

Morehouse college, with an enrollmen of 400, is one of the most important negro educational institutions in the country. Established in 1867 by William J. White, of Augusta, a former slave, with an enrollment of 40, it has steadily grown to a position of major influence. Its alumni number many of the most prominent negroes in the nation, among them being ten college presidents. The school consists of the college of arts and sciences, school of religion, the academy, an evening extension division, and a summer school. The institution is given high rating and its graduates are accepted at the leading universities of the country.

The present head of Morehouse is Dr. John Hope, a native of Augusta, who has administered the affairs of the college since 1906. It now has an endowment fund of $320,000, which will be increased to $920,000 on the successful termination of the present campaign.

Accused Negro Loses Clothing Fleeing Police

The comic strip characters jump out of their shoes and clothes when registering astonishment or similar emotions, but the creations of pen and ink were outdone Saturday morning when Adolphus Battle, negro, heard pistol bullets whizzing through the air, according to county police.

County Patrolmen Willard Vinson and E. W. Wilson told the story of Adolphus' frantic endeavor to lighten himself so he could run faster. The negro was discovered carrying a gallon of "cawn" under his coat, attached to a wire looped around his neck, the officers said. When relieved of the illicit load, Adolphus took to his heels, and a couple of bullets fired into the air by Wilson only hastened his steps, the officers related.

As the negro ran, he shed a shoe, his hat, coat and sweater, but to no avail, for he was collared after a 200-yard dash, and lodged in Fulton Tower to await a benefactor who could post $200 in bond, the officers said.

STATE 'KIT' OFFERED BY WOMEN VOTERS

Information for Government Study Is Issued in Compact Form.

Believing that the reorganization of the state government is a paramount issue in Georgia, the Georgia League of Women Voters has given it first consideration and to provide ready information for its members and for other interested organizations has compiled a kit containing information, compiled by experts on government, interesting and accurate, which places the situation squarely before the mind of the reader.

The kit, in its completed form, contains the following:

A foreword, by the Georgia League of Women Voters.

A reprint from the Georgia Voter—"What About Georgia?"

A chart—a proposed plan for reorganization.

Questions and Answers—Are You Interested in What Becomes of Your Money?

Questions and Answers—Does Georgia Need a New Constitution?

A model Charter—prepared by a committee of experts for the National Municipal League.

A pamphlet by Sam Slate, Georgia state auditor, setting fourth conditions existing in the government now and offering plans for reorganization.

A statement on the need for a short ballot.

Suggestions for accomplishing reorganization.

Speakers' bureau.

Many Prominent Speakers.

In the speakers' bureau are:

Mrs. R. L. Turman, third regional director—National League of Women Voters, Atlanta.

The chief virtue of the kit is "compactness." Some of the material contained therein has appeared in the press at one time or another, but newspapers are easily destroyed—thus, when the individual wishes to refer to an article, and the paper is not to be found, his attention is likely to be diverted in the time that will be consumed in writing to the state capitol for the required information.

The kits will be distributed by the Georgia league to organizations wishing to undertake a study of the simplification of state government, as well as to individuals. Details of distribution will be worked out at once and announced through the press.

HARALSON COUNTY FARMER WILL GET AWARD THURSDAY

Charles N. Long, of Bremen, Haralson county, farmer who was awarded the Southern Railway System's corn cup as the producer of the best 10 ears of corn in the south in 1928, will receive the handsome trophy from the hand of Governor L. G. Hardman in the executive offices in the state capitol at 11 o'clock Thursday morning, January 31. Sanders McDaniel, well-known Atlanta attorney, who is division counsel for the Southern, will act as master of ceremonies.

After winning first prize at the Southeastern fair, Mr. Long entered his exhibit in the competition for the Southern's cup. Exhibits from the eight states of the south served by the Southern were collected in the office of Roland Turner, general agricultural agent, at Atlanta, on December 11 and were judged by a committee of experts, consisting of Dr. Tait Butler, editor the Progressive Farmer; Memphis, Tenn.; Dr. H. W. Barre, director experiment station, Clemson College, S. C., and C. A. Cobb, editor the Southern Ruralist, Atlanta.

The cup will remain in the possession of Mr. Long until the winner of the 1929 competition is announced and his name will be engraved on it along with those of Willie Pat Boland, of Newberry, S. C., winner in 1925; James A. Patterson, of China Grove, N. C., 1926, and Dan Bickley, of Irmo, S. C., 1927.

3 WILL BE GRADUATED FROM NORMAL SCHOOL

Graduation exercises for the senior class of the Atlanta Normal Training school, which will be suspended at the close of the current semester, will take place at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon, Miss Emma Wesley, principal, announced Saturday.

Margaret Winstandly Kelley will receive a certificate of graduation from the normal school, while Margaret DeMonier Bowling and Emily Bealer Calhoun will be graduated from the kindergarten primary course. The certificates will be presented by George W. Powell, president of the board of education. The presentation will be preceded by a short program participated in by students, former students and teachers at the school.

The normal training school was launched in Atlanta in 1906, teachers with wide experience offering their services in instructing other teachers who sought a wider knowledge of their work than they had obtained in college or in practical experience. By 1914 the school had become an important unit in teacher training and was given permanent quarters in the Lee street school with Miss Azile Simpson as director of training. Miss Kate Massey was assistant principal from 1915 to 1919, when Miss Simpson assumed the duties of the position, which she still holds.

When Dr. Willis A. Sutton became superintendent of Atlanta city schools he realized the good being brought about by the training school and immediately launched an effort to widen its scope. After much work by Dr. Suttson, in cooperation with the teachers, the school attained its present standard, now being ranked among the leading teacher training institutes in the south.

WARS ON GAME WASTE

Commissioner Twitty Issues Booklet to Wild Life Lovers.

Two conservation booklets, urging Georgians to avoid waste of the game life and pointing out the need of replenishing the stores of wild life as they are used up, have just been issued by the state department of game and fish, under the direction of Peter S. Twitty, commissioner. One of the pamphlets is titled: "Suppose We Never Planted Anything?" while the other bears on its cover the words: "What God Gave to Georgia. What Are You Doing With It Today?"

As explained by the booklets: "Conservation does not mean idleness or non-use. Nature never intended anything it created, on the earth, or in it, to be a thing of non-use; a purposeless something. At the same time the abundant creation of none of the resources given to us was to encourage wasteful abuse or extravagant consumption."

MOTORISTS MUST GET NEW LICENSES, CARSWELL WARNS

Warning that all motorists driving their automobiles after February 1 without 1929 license tags will subject themselves to prosecution was sounded Saturday by George H. Carswell, secretary of state, in calling attention to sales so far this year amounting to slightly more than 32 per cent of the total for last year, although but five days remain in which cars may be operated without 1929 tags.

The attorney-general's office, in an interpretation of the motor vehicle license law, said that February 1 is the last day upon which automobiles may be driven without liability to penalty, if they do not carry the new plates.

Mr. Carswell said that sales so far this year showed a total of 92,721 tags and $1,305,435.91 in receipts, as compared with 70,143 tags and $943,982.95 in receipts up to the same day last year. He added that he did not consider the sale of tags as far advanced as it was a year ago, due to a change in the law which shortened the time in which cars may be used with old licenses.

King Winter Lays Barrage of Snow For Zero Attack

All Sections of Country Held in Icy Grasp of Boreas' Worst Blow in Decade.

ROADS IN WEST BLOCKED BY SNOW

Eighteen-Year-Old Youth Freezes in Dakota; Blizzards Sweep Across Western Plains.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Winter today had encased the north, south and middle west in snow and subzero weather and pelted the east with snow, sleet and rain.

In some areas the weather was moderating but for the most part a continuance of the cold wave with more snow and freezing temperatures was predicted.

The heavy snowfall afforded employment to many, who supplemented regular street, road and track crews of cities, state highway departments and railroads.

The storms' widespread intensity brought discomfort and hardship in several states and accounted for the eighth death of the week in the northwest. Two men were dead in the east, two in Chicago and one at Gary, Ind. Icy pavements, when they were not buried in snow, caused many accidents.

Roads Piled With Snow.

In many rural districts of the midwest, driving was impossible with roads piled high with snow. Telegraph and telephone wires were down in many communities.

Wisconsin, one of the states hardest hit, experienced the worst snowstorm in years. Men worked throughout the night opening roads to isolated towns. Miles of communication lines were down in northern counties where all highways were reported blocked.

Passengers on the Milwaukee train, No. 46, were marooned at Deansville, Wis., near Waterloo, Iowa. They suffered no hardship.

Freight service of the Northwestern road between Milwaukee and Madison, Wis., was cancelled and ticket sales on the Superior, (Wisconsin) division were stopped as were ticket sales on the northern division between Horigon and Oshkosh. Freight trains marooned on both divisions were forced to wait for the wind to abate before relief could reach them.

Bus traffic in Superior was at a standstill and workmen dug through huge drifts in the streets. At Lacrosse, almost completely isolated, all traffic was suspended.

The frozen body of an 18-year-old youth was found near Linton, N. D., and state highway crews labored overtime opening blocked roads in Minnesota and the two Dakotas. The temperature was below zero.

Twenty-two persons in passenger cars and motor busses were marooned for 36 hours in a blizzard on the Red desert until cowboys rescued them. They arrived safely at Rock Springs, Wyo., although some suffered from exposure and hunger. Three women and two children were among the victims that suffered in the 30-below weather.

Seven inches of snow fell at Boise, Idaho, in 24 hours and roads were blocked in the vicinity of Salt Lake City and Bingham, Utah. A near-by mining town was isolated.

In Montana more snow and continued cold was promised today but slightly warmer weather was predicted for Missouri, Kansas, Oklahoma and west Texas.

BLIZZARDS SWEEP WESTERN RANGES.

Salt Lake City, January 26.—(AP) Blizzards swept across the sheep ranges of northeastern Utah today, marooning large flocks and leaving scores of animals frozen to death or starving in snow drifts.

From Mada, in the center of the sheep country, came a report that the mercury dropped to 38 degrees below zero, bringing the coldest weather ever recorded there. Sheepmen reported their flocks were starving and freezing to death and it was impossible to reach them.

Fifteen inches of snow fell at Dragon, in southern Unitah county. Ten inches of snow fell at Ouray, 35 miles south of Vernal.

A heavy snow was falling in Salt Lake City today. The state highway department had emergency crews attempting to keep the highways open.

CANADA SUFFERS COLDEST MONTH.

Winnipeg, Manitoba, January 26. (AP)—January apparently will be set down as the coldest month on record in Manitoba. Sub-zero temperatures have prevailed through western Canada, and particularly in this province, for several weeks. The forecast is for continued cold weather. At Minnedosa yesterday and today the temperature was 40 below, the lowest mark in the western dominion.

12 MINERS KILLED IN COAL WORKING IN WEST VIRGINIA

Kingston, W. Va., January 26.—(AP)—Twelve miners were known to be dead and two were unaccounted for tonight following an explosion in the mine of the Kingston Pocahontas Coal company here today. Sixty-nine men were in the workings at the time of the blast and of this number 55 escaped. Rescue workers who found the bodies of the 12 men believed the two missing workers had perished, as the bodies located were scorched and in some instances badly burned.

Fifty-three of the underground workers fled to safety through an entry on the opposite side of a mountain from the main shaft and walked two miles back to the mine offices. Two were later found by rescue crews who said the miners were slowly working their way to the entrance when picked up. One of the latter men, G. W. Williams, was suffering from after-damp and shock.

While the mine employs 500 men, only 69 were on duty when the blast rocked the workings early today. It was some time before it was known that anyone had escaped and then the 53 men appeared over the brow of the mountain after their long tramp in the cold.

Rescuers carrying oxygen helmets advanced cautiously into the gas-filled entrys soon after the detonation. They were still searching the workings tonight. R. M. Lambie, chief of the West Virginia department of mines, was in charge of the rescue work. He was aided by safety squads from near-by mines.

NEW HEALTH CODE ASKED FOR STATE

Revision of Statutes Is Called for in Resolution of Georgia Associaton of Health Officers.

Recommendations calling for a redraft of Georgia's public health laws along strictly modern lines, with the object of raising the state's health standard, were adopted at the closing session of the Georgia Health Officers' association convention here Saturday.

A committee was appointed to study the situation and submit its findings to the incoming legislature in time to insure action this year, if possible, and a program discussed which would make personnel and standards as high in country districts as in towns and cities.

Would Amend Statute.

According to the resolution adopted the Ellis health law, which creates and regulates the public health movement in this state, would be amended so as to divide the state into about sixteen health districts, with practically ten counties to a district. A health officer would be appointed by the state board of health to take charge of each district, and at least one trained nurse would be employed by the county board of education and the county board of health in each county with offices connecting with the county superintendent of schools. Their duties would be prescribed by agreement with the state board of education and the state board of health."

The suggestions for change were made by Joseph S. Stewart, professor of secondary education and state examiner to medical colleges, of Athens.

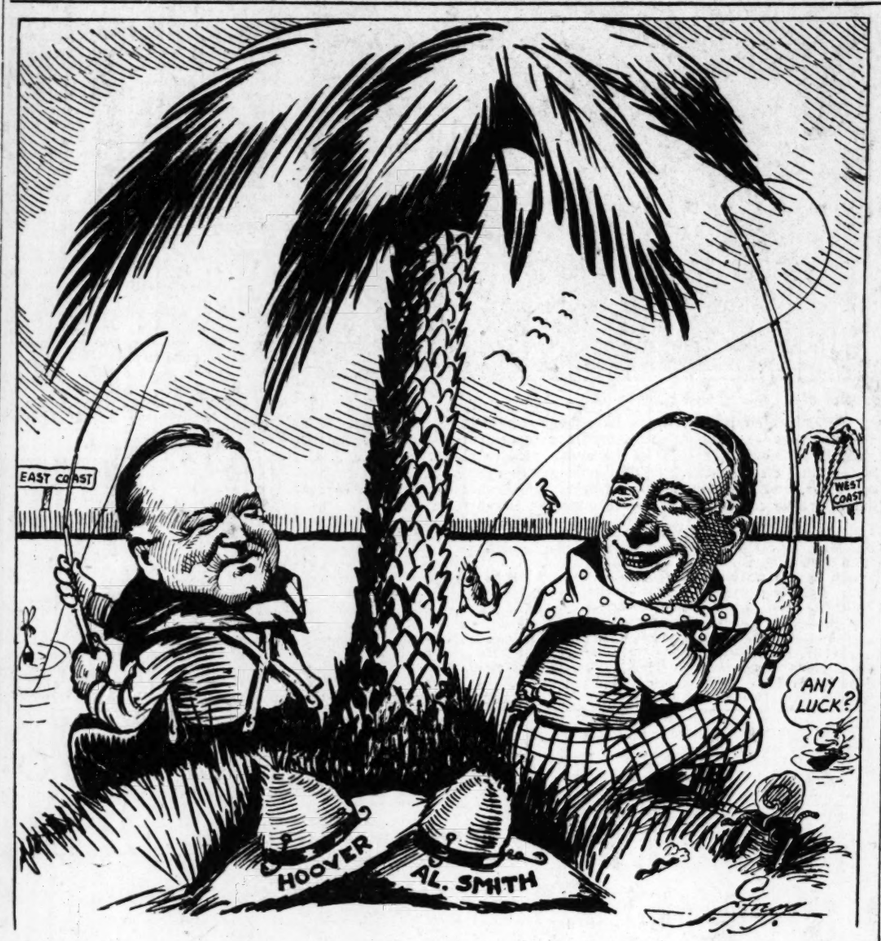

It was further recommended that perhaps three-fifths of the salary of the nurses would be paid partly of board of education funds, the remainder to be paid by the county commissioners from county funds. The sixteen medical officers would be paid by the state board of health from funds appropriated by the legislature for that purpose. Cities and large communities would still be permitted to furnish special medical officers working in cooperation with district medical officers. All teacher training institutes, it was recommended, would be required to give a two semester hour course in health so that graduates could cooperate more intelligently with the nurse and medical officers.

Ellis Heads Committee.

The committee named to redraft the present law to make it conform with the recommendations was made up of: Colonel R. C. Ellis, author of the Ellis health law, of Americus; Governor Hardman, Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, state commissioner of health; State Superintendent of Schools M. L. Duggan; Dr. Alan H. Bunce, of the Georgia Medical association, and Mr. Stewart. They are expected to report their findings at a mid-year meeting of the association in Macon this May.

Before adjourning the association voted to consider entrance into the American Public Health association. The principal speaker in the final session was Mayor Gordon Saussy, of Savannah.

"Who Said Politics?"

Kaiser's Birthday Revives Wrangle Over War Guilt

DIPLOMATS DENY KAISER'S VIEWS

Girard, Clemenceau and Polk Disagree With Many Historians as to Germany's Position.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—Diplomats today refused to lift from Germany the burden of responsibility for the world war in their comment on the statement of Kaiser Wilhem that Germany was not prepared for war in 1914 and that Germany wanted peace.

One of the most outspoken of the diplomats was James W. Gerard, American ambassador to Germany at the time the mobilization orders were given.

He pointed out that the former kaiser declared Germany was fighting a defensive warfare, that he had claimed Germany wanted peace and that he maintained France was the aggressor.

Georges Clemenceau, war-time premier of France, dismissed the statement as "childish" and "not worth wasting my words on."

Statement Childish.

The statement was read to Clemenceau and he paid keen attention to the reading. Now and then a smile flitted across the face. Occasionally he would shrug his shoulders. His bushy eyebrows arched noticeably at two or three of the statements.

"It is not worth wasting my words," he finally responded and added that the statement was "childish."

When it was pointed out that since he was one of the few statesmen living who was familiar with the diplomatic and political background of the events leading to the war, the "Tiger" grinned and said:

"I already have said more than I intended."

"The fact is that the kaiser claimed falsely that France invaded Belgium and that French flyers flew over Nuremburg," said Mr. Gerard. "The kaiser, under the constitution, could not declare an offensive warfare, but on this basis he declared a defensive war.

"Germany was so ready for war that she put an enormous force into the field. I was told by German generals that she had 12,000,000 men under arms. They all appeared on the day of the mobilization order in brand-new uniforms, guns and equipment. It looked as if Germany was getting ready for warfare."

Hid Behind Queen.

But seated in the quiet study of his Fifth avenue home Gerard, with a gesture, urged that all this war talk cease and that talk of responsibility only tended to stir up bitter embers which the peoples of the world should forget.

Gerard spared the German monarch none. He urged that those who spoke of the kaiser as the German "war lord" and a great militarist would be silent.

"He proved himself because, after parading around in a uniform all of his life with an enormous sword about four and a half feet long, instead of putting himself in charge of a troop of cavalry and charging the American lines he sought refuge behind the skirts of the Queen of Holland. That might have been prudent of a college professor, but it certainly destroyed his reputation as a warrior," Gerard said.

Historian from Germany.

Gerard's statement was supported somewhat by Frank L. Polk, counsellor in the office of secretary of state during the war and now a practicing attorney in New York city. He said the former kaiser's statement "soft 57 Members of Wilhelm's Family Arrive at Doorn To Celebrate 70th Birth Anniversary.

BY LOUIS P. LOCHNER.
Chief of the Berlin Bureau of the Associated Press.

Doorn, Holland, January 26.—(AP) The largest family reunion of the house of Hohenzollern which has gathered since the outbreak of the world war in 1914, assembled here today to celebrate ex-Kaiser Wilhem's 70th birthday tomorrow. All told, there were, including the former emperor himself, 57 members of the family present.

The general family joy was dampened by two cases of illness and the strained relations with Wilhem's oldest sister, Princess Victoria, because of her marriage to Alexander Subkoff. She was among the absentees. Another absentee was Prince Henry, brother of the exiled ruler. He was kept at Kiel by an attack of influenza, but he sent his oldest son, Prince Waldemar, and the latter's wife, to represent him.

Hermine Is Ill.

The deepest shadow of Wilhelm's happiness was cast by the sudden illness today of his present wife, Princess Hermine. She was seized with chickenpox shortly after breakfast and isolated in her room. This misfortune cheated her out of the first opportunity since her marriage to be ranked as "empress" before the whole clan of Hohenzollern.

The ex-kaiser found solace in the fact that all six of his children and all 19 of his grandchildren had arrived here. The other relatives consisted of two sisters, one sister-in-law, two brothers-in-law, four nephews, one niece, three step-children and eighteen cousins of varying degrees of kinship.

Frederick August III, ex-king of Saxony, was also present. But he was the only one of the former kings of German states in attendance on the ex-emperor. The royal families of Bavaria and Wurtenberg were conspicuously absent.

Wilhelm's favorite child, his daughter Victoria Louise—now the wife of the Duke of Brunswick—followed her usual method of travel and arrived with her family in an automobile which she had driven herself across snow-covered Germany and Holland. She contracted a heavy cold on the journey and was almost a member of the sick list tonight.

Full Dress Affair.

There was an informal dinner at Doorn castle tonight for the grownups of the family, but tomorrow the children will be present at all functions.

Divine services are to be conducted by the Rev. D. R. Vogel, of Potsdam, who was court chaplain in the old days.

The former kaiser himself selected the text for the sermon and asked that it be based on the sixteenth verse of the first chapter of the Epistle to the Romans, which is:

"For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

All participants in the celebration have been ordered to appear in Doorn tomorrow in full regalia. The men are to wear military uniforms, all their decorations, plumed helmets and long boots. The ex-kaiser himself will don the uniform of his old first regiment of royal guards.

ROYALIST AND LABOR WANT KAISER BACK.

Berlin, January 26.—(AP)—Monarchists, not only in Berlin but in many other centers of the country, held meetings tonight in anticipation of the celebration at Doorn tomorrow of the seventieth birthday of the former Em-

U. S. SENATOR SAYS FRANCE IS GUILTY

Owen Quotes Diplomatic Exchanges in Defending Wilhelm, Who Was at Sea on 24th.

Washington, January 26.—(United News.)—The former kaiser is right in denying Germany's war guilt, former Senator Robert L. Owen, democrat, said in an interview tonight with the United News.

A study of world war origins was made by Owen when he was in the senate, where he served on the foreign relations committee. Later he made a sensational speech in the senate, denying that Germany started the war, for which he was attacked in his own state, Oklahoma. Senator Owen recently published a book on war guilt, which received international attention.

"The substantial truth of what Wilhelm states on his birthday as to the origin of the world war," continued Owen, "can no longer be suppressed or denied.

Russian-French Combine.

"A multitude of disinterested scholars of the highest class have exhaustively examined and reported on the truth disclosed by the secret archives and personal statements from statesmen of Russia, Serbia, Belgium, France and Great Britain.

"The truth is that a few leaders of Russia and France entered into a secret combine to attack Germany if Austria should mobilize, with an understanding that they would put the blame of the world war on Germany.

"This treaty was interpreted by the Czar Alexander III and by General Boisdeffre, who said to the czar, 'Mobilization is war.' Alexander III replied, 'I so regard it.' In other words, if Austria mobilized, it was an act of war by a member of the Triple Alliance, which justified an attack on Germany.

"Russia backed a Pan-Slav intrigue of Serbia against the Austro-Hungarian empire, which meant the disintegration of that empire unless checked. This Pan-Slav intrigue resulted in the murder of Ferdinand, crown prince of the Austro-Hungarian empire, with the connivance of Serbian officials and with the knowledge of the highest authorities in Serbia.

Britain Ready for War.

"The part of the intrigue of Russian and French leaders was to cover up mobilization and war with diplomatic negotiations pretending to favor peace. The truth of this matter is fully disclosed now and all informed historians know it.

"On the 24th of July the British naval forces were completely mobilized and ready for war. The British regulars were marching to the front on Sunday morning, August 1, through the streets of London, under a secret agreement to cooperate with France. On the 24th Belgium was completely mobilized, and the Belgian foreign office so advised its ambassadors in a circular issued as of that date.

"On July 24 the French fleet had been withdrawn from the defense of the French coast on the Atlantic and called into the Mediterranean in reliance on British protection of the French Atlantic coast. BIG INDUSTRIAL GAIN IN ATLANTA DISTRICT IS SHOWN BY REPORT

Unanimous passage of a resolution requesting Governor Hardman to include in his message to the general assembly of Georgia an urgent appeal for the enactment of a bill providing for a "thorough comprehensive and impartial study of the educational system of Georgia to acquaint the people and their representatives with the present conditions and the best possible procedure for their improvement" featured the Saturday afternoon session of the thirteenth annual meeting of the Association of Georgia Colleges.

The appointment of a committee to make recommendations in regard to a state survey followed an open discussion of the question at the opening session Friday night, at which time R. H. Powell, of the Georgia State Woman's college, the presiding officer, President M. L. Brittain, of Georgia Tech, and President Spright Dowell, of Mercer, all urged the need of such a survey in the near future.

Sanford Named Chairman.

Dr. S. V. Sanford was appointed chairman of this committee, and its report Saturday afternoon met the unanimous approval of the assembly. The preamble states that the present school facilities in Georgia do not measure up to what the people of Georgia desire for their sons and daughters, and that the people of this state wish to know the true conditions and the needs of the state as a whole.

It was therefore resolved that the governor request the necessary legislation to provide for this survey by a "non-political education commission to consist of ten outstanding men in business and the professions, school men excepted, and well known for their public-spiritedness, to be appointed by the governor from the state at large and to serve until the said commission, through the governor, shall have submitted its final report, including an appropriate bill embodying the recommendations."

A committee consisting of five men, headed by Dr. Sanford, was then appointed to take the matter up with Governor Hardman at an early date.

Powell Presides.

The morning session Saturday opened at 10 o'clock, with President Powell presiding. Following the roll call, reading of the minutes and the appointment of committees, Dr. Sanford spoke on "A Uniform Freshman Curriculum for Georgia Colleges," and Dr. Leon P. Smith gave a talk on "Group Insurance for College Faculties."

The afternoon session opened with the annual report on high schools by Dr. J. S. Stewart, who gave statistics showing the comparative grades for freshmen in 16 Georgia colleges with seniors in high schools.

The report of the commission on junior colleges by Dr. L. L. Hendren resulted in the passage of four resolutions covering the status of junior colleges, conditions governing the transfer of advanced credits, and the definition of a junior college.

The election of officers, which closed the meeting, resulted as follows: President, W. D. Furry, of Shorter college; vice president, Major G. P. Butler, of Augusta Junior college; secretary and treasurer, W. D. Hooper, of the University of Georgia.

Native of Scotland Was One of Pioneers in Georgia Gold Mining and Was Large Landowner.

John Martin, prominent Georgia engineer and capitalist, died Saturday afternoon at his residence, 21 Glenwood drive, in his seventy-third year, after an extended illness. Mr. Martin had lived in Atlanta since 1912 and was identified with the engineering division of the Georgia Railway and Power company from the time of its organization until about three years ago, when he was forced to retire because of ill health.

A native of Dundee, Scotland, he was the son of Alexander T. and Jean Cooper Martin. He was educated in several Scotch and English schools, and as a young man worked for some time on the Dundee Courier, one of the oldest and best known of the Scotch newspapers.

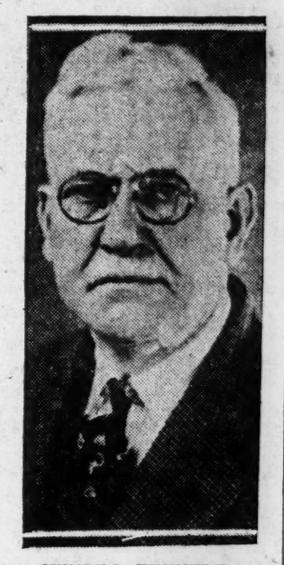

Studied Engineering.

Leaving his journalistic pursuits in 1882, he took up the study of electricity and engineering in London. In 1885 and again in 1887 he visited the United States, and on each trip came to Georgia before returning to London. His final trip to the state so impressed him that he decided to make his home here. Accordingly he returned to the state again in 1889 and took up his residence in White county.

Bank President

HENRY B. KENNEDY,
Newly-elected President of the Empire Trust Company.

KENNEDY TO HEAD EMPIRE TRUST CO.

Vice President of Fulton National Will Continue To Serve as Director of Latter Institution.

Henry B. Kennedy, vice president of the Fulton National bank for the past 10 years and an outstanding figure in southern financial circles, has been elected to the presidency of the Empire Trust company, widely-known Atlanta banking institution.

Announcement of the signal honor conferred upon Mr. Kennedy was made Saturday, at which time it also was made known that he will continue as a director of the Fulton National bank and chairman of its finance committee.

News of Mr. Kennedy's election to the presidency of the Empire Trust company will be of keen interest to his many friends here and throughout the nation. He has been engaged in the banking business since 1897, when he entered the employ of the Atlanta National bank. During the ensuing 12 years he filled practically every position in the bank from runner up to teller. In 1910 he left the employ of the Atlanta National to go with the Fulton National bank as assistant cashier. In 1913 he was made cashier, and in 1919 was elevated to the position of vice president. During the war Mr. Kennedy served as fuel administrator for Atlanta.

He is a member of the Capital City club, the Piedmont Driving club, the Chi Phi fraternity, Piedmont lodge, F. & A. M., Scottish Rite Masons and the Yaarab Temple Shrine. He also is chairman of the bond sinking fund commission of the city of Atlanta and president of the Bell House.

Company Formed in 1911.

The Empire Trust company, which he now heads, is known throughout this section as a strong institution. It was organized in 1911 in a conservative way under the name of the Empire Trust & Safe Deposit company, the name being changed to the Empire Trust company in 1917. With offices in what was then known as the Empire building, now the Atlanta Trust company building—it had assets of $100,000. The late W. B. Stovall was elected president and remained president until his death on December 8, 1928.

The company maintained an insurance and real estate department; later organized a mortgage loan and trust department, and following this a bond department was established which handled largely Liberty loans and other government bonds. This department has never engaged in actively handling general market securities. The company does a large business in the mortgage loan department and in addition to representing several life insurance companies, for which it acts as agent in making loans, it has hundreds of clients both locally and in other states.

In 1923 a savings department was established which has grown steadily. At the present time the company has over $350,000 in savings accounts, and during the nearly 12 years of its existence its assets have grown to more than $850,000, the present capital and surplus being $236,000.

In May, 1927, the business of the company had incerased to such an extent that it had to have more commodious quarters and it was moved from the Atlanta Trust company building to 54 North Broad street, the new location being much larger and one which readily lent itself to remodeling to such an extent as to meet the company's growing needs.

Trustees and Officers.

Trustees of the company are as follows: Dameron Black, chairman of the board, Empire Trust company; secretary-treasurer Trust Company of Georgia, and comptroller, Atlanta and Lowry bank; Charles N. Dannals, general manager, Atlanta Milling company; Mr. Kennedy, G. C. McWhirter, vice president and treasurer; Dr. O. L. Miller, Charlotte, N. C.; Dr. Stewart R. Roberts, Atlanta; Luther Z. Rosser, chief judge, municipal court of Atlanta; Charles B. Shelton, member Dorsey, Shelton & Dorsey, lawyers; Frank E. Shumate, vice president, Georgia Power company; West-

175 NEW OFFICES OPEN DURING 1928 BUREAU HEAD SAYS

Every Part of Country Represented in Concerns; Local Pay Rolls Augmented by $7,000,000

BRIGHT INDUSTRIAL FUTURE IS PAINTED

Summary by Bureau Shows That 585 Concerns Have Located Here Since Its Organization.

The growth of Atlanta's commercial and industrial interests during 1928 show the city and its surrounding territory enjoying a rapid and steady development probably unequaled by another section of the country, the industrial bureau of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce says in its annual report made public Saturday.

The report, submitted by the bureau's chairman, Ivan Allen, says that during 1928 175 new business concerns have chosen Atlanta as the location for a factory, warehouse or zone headquarters. Every section of the country is represented and these concerns have or will furnish employment to more than 3,000 persons with an estimated annual payroll of $7,000,000.

The results of the efforts of the bureau, the report says, like those of the Forward Atlanta advertising campaign, are not confined to Atlanta's corporate limits but make themselves visible in all sections of Atlanta's trade territory. The great southeastern territory for which Atlanta serves as a gateway contains raw materials and manufacturing advantages of a highly diversified nature and offers attractive fields for investment. Many of the prospects now in the files of the industrial bureau will not locate in Atlanta because of certain advantages peculiar to local conditions elsewhere in the city's trade territory.

Big Gains in Four Years.

In a summary of its four years of activity the bureau reports that since January, 1925, when it was organized, 585 new concerns have located in the city giving employment to more than 15,000 persons and providing annual pay rolls totalling more than $26,000,000.

Mr. Allen's bureau also foresees the remarkable growth of Atlanta as a manufacturing and distribution center as evidence of the recognition that the city and the south have received from leaders in national commercial affairs, adding that at no period in Atlanta's history has the future held forth so many important developments.

Of the 175 new companies locating in Atlanta during 1928 the bureau's report shows that four occupy sites purchased and seven occupy buildings especially erected. Of the remainder 45 are in ground floor stores, 12 occupy second floors and lofts, 96 have space in office buildings, six occupy special sites and only five have not determined upon a permanent location.

The following types of businesses are represented:

Ten building and electrical contractors; 16 manufacturers; seven wholesale distributors; 13 retail distributors; 89 sales offices; two transportation agencies; 25 consular and service offices and 13 insurance and investment concerns.

Nine Cover Country.

Nine of these companies have the entire country for marketing territory while 15 cover the entire south and 108 confine their activities to the southeastern states. Twelve companies operate only in the state of Georgia and 31 in Atlanta and its environs.

The booklet, "Key to Atlanta," issued by the industrial bureau, has become not only an Atlanta institution but is well known through the east and middle west, where it has been distributed to various executives, libraries and research agencies. It was published during the past year and the demand for it has been heavy, the report says.

A total of 2,083 mail inquiries were handled by the bureau during 1928. One hundred and fifty-five of these, coming from industrial prospects, required special surveys giving an accurate and complete description of Atlanta's manufacturing and distributing facilities and data on the southeastern market as pertaining to each of these manufacturers. Some of the more comprehensive surveys were supplied to rubber tire manufacturers, paper, chemical, machinery, ceramic, pulp, wire, furniture, tobacco, textile, hosiery, rayon, lumber, confectionery, knit goods, motor, beverage, hospital supplies, paint and varnish and other nationally-known manufacturers. A great amount of research necessarily is done by the industrial bureau and the information developed is available for ready reference. Several prominent local engineers and chemists have contributed their services to the bureau gratis on many occasions.

In addition to the 2,083 inquiries received through the mails, approximately 5,100 persons made calls to the offices of the bureau seeking information of all kinds, and approximately 3,750 calls are answered over the telephone. These inquiries were in a number of cases out-of-town people who were making surveys for various research agencies, insurance companies and banks who are actively interested in the territory by virtue of investments or otherwise. Many Atlantans

Chicago Cops Renew Raids On Hoodlums as Check-Up Starts on 400 Prisoners

Two Holdups Foiled by Second Throwing Out of Dragnet; Swoop Down on Vice Resorts.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Hoodlums of Chicago gasped today at the second solar plexus blow delivered within a week by police.

It might have been expected that the arm of the law would be sufficiently tired, after rounding up more than 4,000 prisoners, to take a reasonable rest. The pain of so sudden a follow-up punch to sore spot was surprising there as the cells of the city lock-up again began to be filled.

The bureau of identification resumed its day and night schedule, abandoned recently, so police could begin immediately the work of checking up the 400 odd prisoners.

Police squad cars moved again last night among the poolrooms, restaurants, soft drink places and vice resorts in the various parts of the city. Many of those they picked up had been taken in the raids of last Sunday.

Two holdups, detectives reported, were nipped in the bud by the second throwing out of the dragnet. A taxi driver was saved from robbery and a squad car drove into a north side garage just in time to take two stick-up men into custody.

Figures compiled at a meeting of municipal judges in Chief Justice Harry Olson's chamber revealed that 20 of the 2,430 who were arraigned in the police courts, following the first raids, were convicted mostly on vagrancy charges. The remaining 2,410 were dismissed.

In an attempt to speed up justice and eliminate red tape from the present criminal court procedure in Cook county, a new system of holding suspected criminals to the grand jury will be started as soon as the new criminal courts building is available for occupancy.

Offenders will be arraigned in a special municipal court in the new building and, if found guilty, will be taken before a grand jury immediately.

Immediate employment of 250 policemen and employment of 500 more by July 1 was recommended by a subcommittee of city council as the first step in increasing the police department for a concerted campaign against crime.

William F. Russell, commissioner of police, who is asking for 5,400 more policemen, expressed little satisfaction over the recommendations.

"I believe the people are up in arms over the situation," Commissioner Russell said, "and the 250 will be of little use. Chicago is looked upon as the home of criminals, bootleggers and what-not, buyers are afraid to come to the city and business is suffering. Persons living in residential districts are afraid to go into their alleys. I made a complete survey and on that I based my claims for 5,400 more policemen."

PROHIBITION SQUADS SWEEP KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, January 26.—(AP)—Acting under the special powers granted in Governor Clyde M. Reed's new law enforcement program, which became a law late yesterday, authorities today were busily engaged in drying up the largest city in Kansas.

Raiding by county officers and three special assistants to the attorney general, which began here late last night and continued until today, resulted in more than 50 arrests and seizure of a considerable quantity of alleged liquor.

Twenty-five of the persons arrested in the crusade against liquor and gambling resorts were charged with prohibition violation, while others were picked up as frequenters in alleged saloons and gambling halls. Many were released on $1,500 bonds.

First action under Governor Reed's program, designed by the chief executive to make Kansas the "dryest" state in the union, came less than a half dozen hours after he had signed the legislative bill legalizing his program, which he outlined in a message to the state legislature about three weeks ago.

The bill authorized a fund of $40,000 to be spent under his direction, and empowers the governor to appoint attorneys with the powers of special attorneys general, to investigate violations of liquor and other criminal laws and secure evidence and assist in prosecutions. Both branches of the legislature earlier this week approved the measure by large majorities.

Part of the appropriation was made available immediately.

Sons of Freedom Rout Canadian Police Officers

Grand Forks, B. C., January 26.—(AP)—Two provincial police officers reported here today that they had been forced to flee from an army of naked, angry Doukhobors when they had sought to arrest three of their number at a ranch near here.

The policemen declared that they had been confronted by about 100 of the colonists who danced about in a frenzy when they approached. They said the Doukhobors defied the whole police force of British Columbia to arrest them and that the group was being reinforced by other colonists of that sect in the vicinity.

Sub-zero weather failed to interfere with the unclad army, the officers said.

The Sons of Freedom, as these particular colonists call themselves, recently withdrew their children from schools at Brilliant and Glade, B. C., and other educational institutions in the Grand Forks area, but finally consented to permit their return.

The Doukhobors are Russians who believe that Christ was wholly human. They are opposed to priest rule and are communistic in their manner of living. Nakedness is one of the characteristics of the sect called the Sons of Freedom.

COAST GUARD FEARS TRAWLER IS LOST

Boston, January 26.—(AP)—Fear that the steam trawler Seiner had gone down with her crew of 20 was expressed by coast guard officers today after a three-day search by a fleet of patrol boats had failed to reveal any trace of the missing craft. The Seiner has not been sighted or heard from since January 13.

TANKER REACHES BERMUDA BOAT.

Hamilton, Bermuda, January 26.—(AP)—The American tanker Dannekaike, which was disabled by storm when only a few miles from the Italian freighter Florida, which she was seeking to aid, arrived at Five Fathom Hole, Bermuda, this morning. A tender met her and took off Third Mate Johnson, who suffered fractures of both legs.

PRESIDENT GARFIELD RESUMES VOYAGE.

Havana, January 26.—(AP)—The Dollar liner President Garfield, delayed by several days on a Bahama reef, left at 5 o'clock this afternoon on her round-the-world cruise.

Officials of the Dollar line stated that the boat was not damaged.

BRITISH STEAMER SENDS OUT S O S.

Boston, January 26.—(AP)—The coast guard cutter Tampa was under orders to leave the Boston navy yard at 7 o'clock tonight and proceed to the assistance of the British steamer Silver Maple, disabled 780 miles east of this port.

EMPTY BARGE IS PICKED UP.

Washington, January 26.—(United News.)—The cutter Pallapoosa picked up the empty oil barge Florida Power Company No. 2 about 200 miles southwest of Charlotte Harbor, Fla., and is towing her into Tampa, coast guard headquarters advised tonight.

COL. SULLIVAN, BOGALUSA MAYOR, DIES SUDDENLY

Bogalusa, La., January 26.—(AP)—A sudden heart attack early today proved fatal to Colonel W. H. Sullivan, millionaire lumberman and mayor of Bogalusa since incorporation of the city.

Searching the virgin Florida parishes of southern Louisian twenty-two years ago as the representative of a group of eastern capitalists, Colonel Sullivan selected Bogalusa as the site for an extensive lumber mill, which became the great Southern Lumber company.

Named vice president and general manager of the mill, Colonel Sullivan soon became recognized as a factor in the lumber industry and as the one and only mayor of Bogalusa, he kept the section always at the front in industrial, civic and community development.

Colonel Sullivan died at his home here at 12:45 o'clock surrounded by relatives. His health had been impaired since the death of his wife last December and he had remained away from his office since last Tuesday because of illness.

SENATE COMMITTEE NAMED TO CONSIDER RITTER NOMINATION

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—A subcommittee of the senate judiciary committee has been named to consider the nomination of Halstead L. Ritter to be federal judge of the southern district of Florida. It was reported today that some protests against Ritter have been received but the nature of these and the number was not available.

Senator Waterman, republican, of Colorado, was named chairman of the subcommittee.

Senators Trammell and Fletcher, democrats, Florida, said today they had received both recommendations and complaints against Ritter's nomination. The chief complaint they said was that Ritter had been a member of the Florida bar for a comparatively short time. However, neither senator was ready to state, pending further investigation, his position in the matter.

At the senate judiciary committee it was said protests had been received and that these had been turned over to the subcommittee.

AGRARIANS WIN UNDER NEW RULE OF MEXICAN COURT

Mexico City, January 26.—(AP)—Conflicts created by seizure of lands for distribution among inhabitants of towns lacking communal lands, hereafter will be speedily settled, in view of a ruling by the supreme court, whereby landowners are only entitled to indemnity in accordance with the agrarian laws.

Heretofore landowners have customarily filed an amparo or injunction with the federal courts, seeking to restrain the action of the agrarian authorities in order to prevent distribution of their lands.

The supreme court, however, after debating an injunction filed by Maria Olvera against a local agrarian committee which seized and distributed a portion of her ranch in the state of Mexico, has handed down a decision supporting the committee.

SEARCH PLANNED FOR RARE PLANTS IN SOUTH AMERICA

Jacksonville, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—An extensive botanical expedition to South America in search of rare Brazilian and Peruvian plants, will start from here tomorrow when Dr. B. E. Dahlgren, curator of botany at the Field museum, Chicago, sails aboard the steamer Bangu for Para, Brazil.

Dr. Dahlgren will be accompanied from here by his assistant, E. Sella, and upon their arrival in Brazil will meet other members of the party. The expedition, the fourth of its kind for the botanist, is expected to last about five months. They will penetrate the wilderness of Brazil and Peru in search of rare plant life, especially certain species of orchids.

Besides the usual scientific equipment, the expedition will take with it preservatives for sustaining the life of plants after removal from their native soil, in order that they may be brought to this country for examination and study.

U. S. BUILDING PLANS HELD UP FOR WEEK

Cities Will Not Be Announced Until Program Is Ready.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—A schedule for the third year of the government's building program which will include recommendations for an appropriation of approximately $12,000,000 for federal structures throughout the country will be sent to congress by the budget bureau next week.

Director Lord of the bureau asked the treasury-postoffice committee which has charge of the program to have it ready today, but the committee found it was unable to do so and it probably will be February 1 before it is submitted to congress. Each project must be approved by congress before any further work can be done. The cities in which the new buildings will be located will not be announced until plans are submitted.

For several weeks the treasury-postoffice committee, headed by Assistant Secretary Schuneman, of the treasury, and Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett, has been preparing the program. The committee made inspection trips through the south, the middle west, the eastern and New England states.

The projects will include new federal buildings in a large number of cities, purchase of sites and improvements and extensions of present buildings. After the program is approved by congress it will be necessary to call for bids for sites and then for construction.

ATLANTA MAN CHOSEN STATE LENDERS' HEAD

Savannah, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Robert R. Lanham, Atlanta, was re-elected president of the Georgia Industrial Lenders' association at the close of the convention this afternoon at the De Soto hotel. Charles T. Dismer, Atlanta, was reelected secretary, and T. E. Winslow, Savannah, treasurer. The other members of the executive committee for the coming year are E. H. Levert, Jr., E. B. Zachary, B. L. Lassiter and A. B. Madison, all of Atlanta.

Stephen N. Harris, on behalf of Mayor Gordon Saussy, delivered the address of welcome. John R. Cornell, president of the Savannah Clearing association, and Judge A. R. MacDonell, of the municipal court, made addresses at the luncheon. The place for holding the next meeting is to be decided later by the executive committee.

Everett F. Moore, Philadelphia, Pa., southern supervisor of the Beneficial Operating bureau, gave talks at the morning and afternoon sessions.

KING PROGRESSES SLOWLY; DOCTOR WITH HIM AN HOUR

London, January 23.—(AP)—"The king continues to make slow progress," was the text of an official medical bulletin given out at Buckingham palace tonight. For the first time since King George was stricken with pleurisy, the official pronouncement was signed by only one doctor, Lord Dawson of Penn. He was with the royal patient less than an hour this evening.

Sir Hugh Rigby saw the king this morning. Sir Stanley Hewett, the third member of the regular medical staff, was kept at home by a heavy cold.

Steady progress of the king has brought general satisfaction. It was announced that no bulletin would be issued tomorrow.

SECOND MISTRIAL RESULTS IN CASE OF W. H. SHANKS

Frankfort, Ky., January 26.—(AP)—The second mistrial in efforts to convict William H. Shanks, former state auditor of misappropriating state funds, resulted today when the jury reported that it could not agree on a verdict and was discharged.

Wade H. Whitley, commonwealth's attorney, said he did not know yet whether he would bring Mr. Shanks to trial on any of the remaining nine counts all of which charged misappropriation of state funds. The jury today stood 8 to 4 for acquittal on each ballot on the count charging that Shanks misappropriated $208 last January. He claims he paid it to his wife legally as salary for clerical work in his office.

At the previous trial of Shanks, in September, when the jury also failed to reach a verdict, it was said they stood nine to three for acquittal. The count on which he was tried last September also charged misappropriation of funds and nine other such counts remain on the docket.

NOTED BANDIT SLAIN

Corsican Terror Is Laid Low at Last.

Bastia, Corsica, January 26.—(AP)—Six times sentenced to death by default, Francois Marie Castelli, one of the worst surviving Corsican bandits, has been laid low at last. A bullet from the gun of an unidentified person ended his career at Chintra; to the relief of the district he has terrorized for 18 years.

His criminal record began in 1907, when he was sentenced to five years' imprisonment for homicide. On release he took to the bush and carried on a vendetta against the witnesses who appeared against him at his trial and their families, exterminating most of them.

One of his worst crimes was the murder of the young daughter of a man whom he suspected of giving information about him to the police. He shot the girl as she was drawing water at a fountain and forbade the villagers to bury her under pain of terrible reprisals, saying "crows will dispose of the body."

Rigid enforcement of Atlanta's traffic laws, with its attendant relief from congestion and added safety, has grown to be a matter of personal contact, according to Lieutenant Jack Malcolm, head of the traffic squad.

Addresses to scores of leading business firms operating large fleets of motor driven vehicles is one of the novel plans inaugurated by Mr. Malcolm in his drive for enforcement, and in less than two weeks marked improvement has been noted in downtown congested areas, according to members of the traffic committee of city council, headed by Councilman James Wells, of the eighth ward.

Drivers are requested to cooperate with the department in its efforts to make Atlanta's streets safe for motorists and pedestrians alike. They are given copies of the city code governing traffic, and their aid is solicited.

Lieutenant Malcolm Saturday visited headquarters of the Greyhound lines, operators of a fleet of large intersectional motor busses, and discussed congestion relief at the terminal on Peachtree street. J. C. Steinmetz, southern district manager, and Kenneth Toppen, of Chicago, who has been detailed to Atlanta as chief of drivers, promised unlimited cooperation.

Lieutenant Malcolm has visited a score of the larger operators of motor driven vehicles during the past week, including Black & White Cab company, bakeries, department stores, etc. He will include M. Rich & Brothers company and the Yellow Cab company and others in his itinerary this week.

"We have been exceedingly fortunate in encountering a fine spirit of cooperation among those we have talked to," Mr. Malcom said. "Furthermore, they are doing just what they promised—cooperating. It is much more pleasant to have the law observed than it is to have to book cases for failure to obey the ordinances. Our officers do not wish to book cases, but our instructions are to demand absolute compliance, and we will carry out those orders.

"There still are many violations, but we are taking necessary steps to correct them as rapidly as possible. Traffic congestion has improved about 50 per cent, according to reports in the downtown area, and when the Pryor street and Central avenue viaducts are opened to the public it will be still further relieved. Our men are doing their best. They are ordered to book cases and violators may expect cases to be docketed if they violate regulations."

MISS FRANKIE NEW SLIGHTLY INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTO

Miss Frankie New, of 409 Peachtree street, was slightly hurt early Saturday night when she was struck down at the intersection of Spring and Mitchell streets by an automobile operated by B. S. Jefferies, of 589 Archer street. Miss New was standing on the curb and was hit as Jefferies was attempting to make a turn from Mitchell to Spring street, it was reported. No case was made against the driver by Patrolman Walker, who investigated.

REMOVAL ACTION FACES WISCONSIN CHIEF EXECUTIVE

Madison, Wis., January 26.—(AP)—Attorney General John W. Reynolds today appointed special counsel to bring removal action against Governor Walter J. Kohler in the name of the state.

The attorney general said he was convinced the governor had violated the corrupt practices act in his primary election campaign. The request for his action was made in a petition by four progressive republicans, members of the faction led by Robert M. La Follette. Governor Kohler is a conservative republican.

"Miss Summertime" in Paris

:: FRENCH LASSIE TO HAVE PLENTY OF "ALLURE" ::

Sunburned With Lots of "It"

BY HAZEL REAVIS,
Staff Writer, the Associated Press.

Paris, January 26.—(AP)—"Miss Summertime" came to Paris this week decked in a wardrobe that brought visions of leafy bowers and made the winter costumes of the best dressed women in the fashion capital look drab enough for an old clothes sale. Every leaf in the new frocks and fripperies was signed with a costly name, but "Miss Summertime" has thousands of them ready for use.

The summer girl, as revealed at the first fashion show this year, is to be a sunburned lassie with plenty of "allure," as the French term what in America is generally called "it." She will have a little more covering on her bones than last year, but a little less on her back. She will advocate all that is feminine without necessarily being frail.

Fashion statistical experts have had trouble in measuring her skirts because "Miss Summertime" changes costumes so rapidly that no two measures read alike. In the main, however, about as much silk stocking is to show as last year. Arms will be covered sometimes at dinner, but the formals which have sleeves possess only scant backs.

Some of the most important dressmakers have been hanging back on the summer style shows because they agreed to exhibit their ideas a little later than usual in order to circumvent design bootleggers. They hope also to better the status of Paris as leader of the fashion industry.

While the old line houses were thus hesitating, the new house of Maggy Rouff in the Champs Elysees, formally introduced its conception of "Miss Summertime.'" The party was attended by several hundred of the sartorially important people of Paris and the affair was embellished with three jazz bands.

250 COLLEGE GIRLS DRIVEN TO STREET AS FIRE HITS HALL

Belton, Texas, January 26.—(AP)—Two hundred and fifty girl students in scanty attire were driven out into freezing weather here early today when fire destroyed Luther hall, the largest and oldest dormitory at Baylor College for Women.

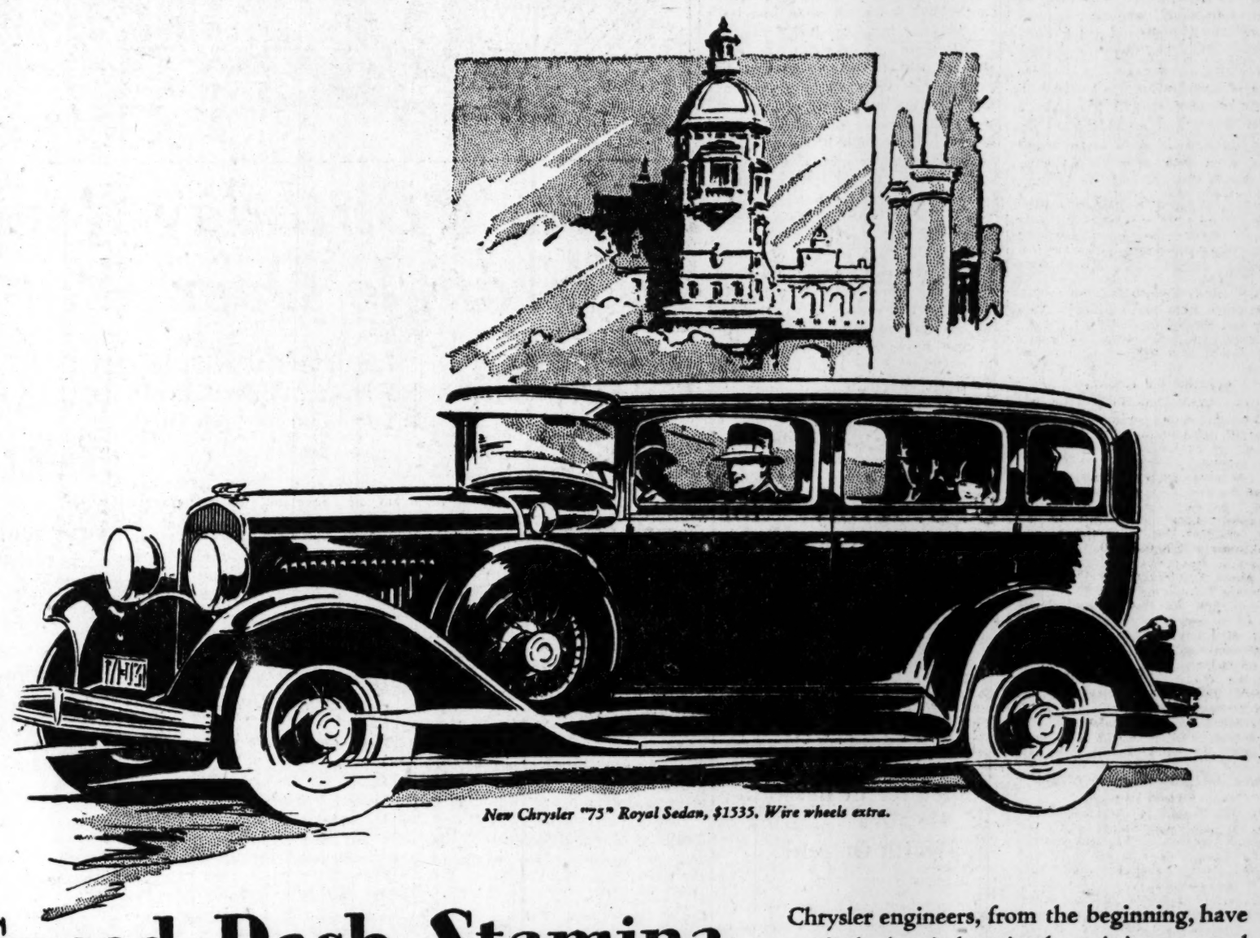

Only one student, Dorothy Williams, of Dallas, was injured. She suffered bruises when she jumped into a blanket from a third story window.

A watchman gave the alarm and the building was cleared in three minutes.

None of the girls saved any of their effects. They will housed in other buildings of the school.

Property loss was estimated at $150,000.

A CHRYSLER MOTORS PRODUCT

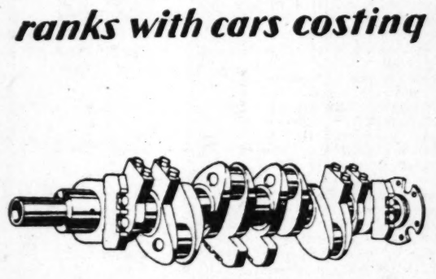

New Chrysler "75" Royal Sedan, $1535. Wire wheels extra.

In Speed, Dash, Stamina, the public knows

CHRYSLER

ranks with cars costing hundreds of dollars more

All Chrysler engines are provided with counterweighted 7-bearing crankshafts. An expensive feature, but one that provides an almost incredible engine smoothness and remarkable long life.

CHRYSLER popularity is due not only to the public acceptance of Chrysler originality in style and beauty, but to the acclaim of the freshness of Chrysler engineering and performance.

Chrysler engineers bring to the task of developing their new cars the same originality and the same enterprise which characterize their achievements in style and beauty.

Chrysler engineers, from the beginning, have applied what is best in the existing art and practice of the industry, but have not been content to accept even such features without subjecting them to their own improving touch.

In addition, they have devised and developed so many entirely new features that Chrysler cars are in no sense like anything else that runs.

That is why the speed, the dash, the stamina you find in Chrysler can scarcely be equaled, much less surpassed, in cars costing even as much as a thousand dollars more. 112

Preston Arkwright Defends Light and Power Industry Advertising Expenditures

Declares Rival Companies Are Anxious to Render Full Service to Public They Serve.

New York, January 26.—(Special.) The address Friday night by Preston S. Arkwright, of Atlanta, president of the National Electric Light association, in which he defended advertising programs of the industry and told of the eagerness of rival companies to render full and economical service to their patrons, was the subject of much favorable comment in electric light circles in New York today. Mr. Arkwright spoke on the subject "The Public Pays," asserting that the public does not pay in full for service rendered, and, furthermore, that the industry does not want the customer to pay all that the service is worth to him.

"We want the customer," said Mr. Arkwright, who also is president of the Georgia Power company, "to get a greater benefit out of our service than we get from his money."

"Does Not Pay in Full."

Speaking before the Metropolitan New York section of the National Electric Light association at a meeting at the Hotel Roosevelt, Mr. Arkwright countered the assertion that "the public pays" with the question "How much does it pay?" "It does not pay in full," he declared. "The earnings on the fair value of the property of electric light and power companies devoted to public service do not exceed 6 per cent, and it is not a fair return, is not a full measure of all we are entitled to and is not all the law allows. Therefore, to the extent that it is not the return the law allows these costs come not out of the pockets of the public but out of the pockets of the stockholders, out of the profits they otherwise would make.

"Now, I am not complaining of furnishing the service," he continued. "I do not want, and the industry does not want, the customer to pay all that the traffic will bear, nor does anyone want him to pay all that the service is worth to him. We want him to get a greater benefit out of our service than we get from his money.

"I never saw an industry where there was as much eagerness and rivalry between companies to render a full service, an economical service, a service at a low rate, than there is in the electric light and power industry. There is a competition between companies not directly competitive to see who can render the most beneficial service. The public pays, of course, but the public profits many times over what it pays.

"Why, only the benefits the public derives from light alone justifies their paying the whole $1,900,000,000 we get for everything, light, household appliances, power and everything that we furnish."

Defends Advertising.

Without mentioning the name of the federal trade commission, Mr. Arkwright referred to what he termed criticism of the electric light and power industry because of money spent for advertising.

"The figures I have found on the subject," he said, "show that the total amount spent last year by all public utilities for advertising was approximately $30,000,000. Of that the electric light and power industry spent about $10,000,000.

"We are a business institution. We have no right to throw our money away or to waste it. We are justified in spending our money only for business reasons within our own judgment of course. I say that for every dollar we spend for advertising the customer gets many times the advantages of it himself for it helps us to increase the consumption and production and thereby reduces the cost. If it does not do that it is not justified and that is the precise basis on which everybody else advertises.

Public Favor Necessary.

"We are criticized for public relations expenditures other than advertising. Well, our business is peculiarly subject to public favor or ill will and is regulated and controlled everywhere by commissions, city councils, legislatures and juries. Their attitude is influenced by prejudices which arise largely out of unfamiliarity with the business. We therefore should acquaint them with the business. If we are going to perform our public duty we have got to expand every year. We have got to get the money for expansion from somebody else and we can't get it if the community is prejudiced against us. So it is our business to see that the industry is understood, for one reason so that we can get the additional finances we need in order that the public may benefit in better service at a smaller cost. That is only one of the benefits from public relations. We want the public constantly to benefit in better treatment, greater consideration, more universal service and economical rates."

Mr. Arkwright pointed out that since the electric light business started 47 years ago the trend of prices for electric service has been downward. "From 1920 to 1927," he said, "there was a reduction of 33 per cent in the cost of lighting. During that period the total paid for light was $7,000,000,000. Except for the reduction the light would have cost the American people $9,000,000,000."

Benefits Greater Than Costs.

Speaking again of "the public paying," Mr. Arkwright declared that the public buys electricity because its benefits are greater than the costs.

"There is not a factory," he said, "that could not build its own power plant at a reasonable cost but when they buy from us they do so because we furnish them service at less than they could furnish it themselves, considering the great advantages and benefits they get from the service we render."

"Let's keep in mind the fact that we are the sole custodians of service in our territory and that we have a great obligation to the public. The public pays of course but it does not pay in full and we want the customer to get a greater benefit out of our service than we get from his money."

A. T. O. CONCLAVE SET FOR FEBRUARY 22-23

The Atlanta Alumni association of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity is making elaborate plans for the conclave of Province 1 of the fraternity, which will be held in Atlanta on Friday and Saturday, February 22 and 23. The active chapters at Emory university and Georgia Tech will serve as joint hosts, cooperating in the entertainment of the visitors with the alumni association.

The Atlanta Biltmore will be headquarters for the conclave, the official program for which calls for registration and a short business session on Friday afternoon, in the Pompeian Grill. The annual conclave ball will take place at the Piedmont Driving club at 9 o'clock that night. Another business session of the gathering will be held Saturday morning, followed by luncheon in the Pompeian Grill. Immediately following the Saturday afternoon business meeting, the visiting delegates will be taken on a motor tour of the city and its environs, including Stone Mountain.

The official program will come to an end Saturday night, with the farewell banquet at the Biltmore hotel, at which Judge Sheperd Bryan will act as toastmaster. Sidney B. Fithian, of Meridian, Miss., chairman of the high council and one of the most prominent and active collegiate fraternity officials in the country, will be the principal speaker. A model initiation also will be staged. Other national officers who will take part in the conclave are Julian J. Jones, member of the high council, and Roy LeCraw, chief of province 1, both of the Atlanta council.

Alumni officers stated Saturday that many prominent members of the fraternity from Georgia and Florida and other nearby states are expected to attend, as well as active members from the chapters in the province, which comprises Emory university, Georgia Tech, University of Florida, University of Georgia and Mercer university.

U. S. Army Pilot Leaps to Safety As Plane Burns

Dayton, Ohio, January 26.—(AP)—Lieutenant J. B. Haddon, flight test section, Wright field, became a member of the famous "Caterpillar Club" late today when he leaped to safety from his burning plane near New Carlisle.

Haddon was saved by his parachute when he jumped from the burning plane at altitude of 3,000 feet. He was testing the plane when the accident occurred.

Only persons whose lives have been saved by a parachute leap from a crippled plane are eligible for membership in the "Caterpillar Club," which now embraces about 40 pilots, headed by Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, who has three leaps to his credit.

Lieutenant Haddon was piloting a pursuit plane equipped with a supercharger when a connecting rod is believed to have broken, igniting the ship.

The plane was at an altitude of 3,000 feet when the fire started. Haddon had been flying at between 25,000 and 28,000 feet during the test and had dropped to a lower altitude for other test work.

Witnesses reported that Lieutenant Haddon jumped from the plane when the flames enveloped it and his parachute opened immediately. The plane crashed about half a mile from where Haddon landed and was demolished.

I KILLED, ANOTHER DYING AS TRAINS CRASH IN CHICAGO

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—One man was killed, another probably fatally injured and 30 other persons were hurt, several seriously, today when a train of wooden passenger coaches on the Chicago & Northwestern railway suburban service was wrecked by a steel train backing into the Northwestern terminal.

The man killed was William H. Henderson, of Elhurst, a suburb. Edward Gathke, address undetermined, is expected to die. Both his legs were amputated.

Several men and women passengers are in critical condition but are expected to recover. Virtually all were residents of western suburbs en route home from work, for the Saturday afternoon holiday.

The wrecked train had left the station and was about clear of an interlocking switch when the steel train broke through the switch and crashed into two of the rear coaches. One coach was completely wrecked and toppled over.

Utica, N. Y., Yarn Mill Plant To Be Moved To Gulfport, Miss.

Gulfport, Miss., January 26.—(United News.)—The cotton yarn mill of Walcott and Campbell company, located near Utica, N. Y., will be removed to Gulfport, Miss., according to an announcement here tonight. The new plant here will cost approximately a million dollars, it was said.

New Astrology Class.

Inauguration of a beginner's class in astrology will feature the meeting of the Rosicrucian fellowship at 8 o'clock Tuesday night. The gathering will be in room 216 of the Zahner building, 1000 Peachtree street. The public is invited to attend.

Cured His Rupture

I was badly ruptured while lifting a trunk several years ago. Doctors said my only hope of cure was an operation. Trusses did me no good. Finally I got hold of something that quickly and completely cured me. Years have passed and the rupture has never returned, although I am doing hard work as a carpenter. There was no operation, no lost time, no trouble. I have nothing to sell, but will give full information about how you may find a complete cure without operation if you write to me, Eugene M. Pullen, Carpenter, 3320 Marcellus Avenue, Manasquan, N. J. Better cut out this notice and show it to any others who are ruptured—you may save a life of at least stop the misery of the rupture and the worry and danger of an operation.—(adv.

Calhoun Falls Project Under Way

Top photo (left to right) shows William Gray, of St. Louis, vice president of syndicate; William H. Evers, of Cleveland, chief engineer; Senator F. D. West, of Abbeville, S. C.; Governor John G. Richards, of South Carolina; Rev. S. L. Morris, of Atlanta, secretary of Presbyterian Board of Home Missions, who delivered the invocation; S. S. McClure, of New York, chairman of the board of Calhoun Falls, Inc.; W. A. Neel, chief engineer of Georgia highway commission, who represented Governor Hardman, of Georgia, owing to latter's illness; A. L. Connolly, of Cleveland, general contractor; Philip Miner, Cleveland, president.

30 CITIES TAKE PART IN BIG CEREMONIES.

Elberton, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Cultural, agricultural and industrial development on both banks of the Savannah river here was begun yesterday when 30 South Carolina and Georgia cities joined in the formation of the Georgia-South Carolina Piedmont federation.

Governor Richards, of South Carolina, officially started construction work on a proposed model industrial city on the South Carolina side of the river by beginning work with a steam shovel. Chief Engineer W. A. Neel, of the Georgia highway department represented Governor Hardman, of Georgia, who was unable to attend.

The organization perfected yesterday has as its purpose the gaining of federal support for the section, including a geological survey, aid in a road building program and attraction of tourists and vacationists.

Opposite the industrial site on the South Carolina side, the sponsors of the project, S. S. McClure, Philadelphia publisher and Philip Miner, propose a year-round resort on the Georgia side. Contracts already awarded for development work are said to total approximately $14,000,000.

Ceremonies yesterday were held on both sides of the river, with more than 300 persons attending.

Corn Average 20 Bu. to Acre In Georgia Contest Reveals

Results of the state-wide five-acre corn production contest staged during the past three years by the Georgia State College of Agriculture on funds provided by banks and business concerns of the state revealed that 20 bushels of corn to an acre is an easy accomplishment if a little more attention is given to the planting and cultivation of corn, H. Lane Young, vice president and executive manager of the Citizens and Southern National bank, declared Saturday. Mr. Young said:

"This will mean an additional income of $20,000,000 a year for Georgia."

In a statement giving the reasons why the Citizens and Southern National bank has been putting up prize money to promote the corn club contest, Mr. Young said that Georgia is not producing corn, the basic food crop of the south, at satisfactory prices. While 1928 was an unfavorable year, due to adverse weather conditions, 1927 was a good crop year, and the farmers devoted 39 per cent of the acreage to corn, the 3,893,000 acres planted in corn having an average yield per acre of only 14 bushels. On the basis of this low yield, it is estimated that the average to the Georgia farmer for producing corn is 90 cents per bushel, which only returns a profit of 8 cents per bushel, or a profit of around $1.15 per acre.

Average Is 64.35.

Farmers who completed the five-acre production test averaged 64.35 bushels per acre at an average production cost of 41 cents, as compared with 92 cents per bushel for the state as a whole, Mr. Young said. The average profit per acre was $37.86 as compared with $1.15 for the state as a whole. "This proved in a most encouraging way that Georgia land properly planted and cultivated will produce at a profit," Mr. Young pointed out. "It is true that in a contest of this kind, the best land is selected, and 64 bushels per acre cannot be expected for the entire state, however, it leaves no doubt but that 20 bushels to an acre is an easy accomplishment if a little more attention is given to the planting and cultivation of corn."

The results of the contest were announced during the 22d annual farmers' week and marketing conference held at the State College of Agriculture last week, when the manner in which the banks and business concerns of Georgia have been putting up money to support Dr. A. M. Soule and his organization in their effort to promote greater prosperity for Georgia farmers was brought out.

Offer $1,000 Each.

The Citizens & Southern, through Mr. Young, and Swift & Co., of Moultrie, Ga., contributed $1,000 each in 1926 for the contest, 762 farmers entering and producing an average of 65.36 bushels per acre, while the average yield for the state was only 14.5 bushels. In 1927 the Citizens & Southern and Swift & Co., again put up $1,000 each to continue the contest, and 325 farmers entered, producing an average yield of 64.35 bushels per acre, as compared with the average yield of 14 bushels per acre for the state as a whole. In 1928 the Atlanta Clearing House association, composed of the Atlanta-Lowry National bank, Atlanta Trust company, the Citizens & Southern National bank and the Fourth National bank, put up $400, in addition to which the Citizens & Southern contributed $600, making a total of $1,000 in prizes put up to continue the contest. Due to a late, cold spring, followed by frequent and excessive rains during much of the growing season, the corn crop was seriously affected, however, contestants averaged 50.48 bushels per acre, compared with an average of 10.5 bushels per acre for the state as a whole.

Dr. Soule said that there is no danger of over-emphasizing the production of corn, and that if the state of Georgia alone increased her production from an average of around 50,000,000 to 100,000,000 bushels a year, "we would have or could easily develop a profitable home market for this great increase in the volume of the corn crop."

NAPIER IS HOME

Attorney General Returns From Motor Trip to Florida.

Attorney General George M. Napier returned to Atlanta Saturday night from a motor trip to Florida on business for the Georgia Securities commission. Accompanying Mr. Napier were Sam Adams, of Atlanta, and J. S. M. Patton, of Union City.

Following the conclusion of his business in Jacksonville, Mr. Napier and his two friends enjoyed a day's fishing at Eustis, Fla., where they succeeded in landing some tasty bass, the catch being large, although running less than three pounds each.

Senate Votes $25,000 For Extra Policemen At Hoover Inaugural

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The senate adopted a joint resolution today to authorize an appropriation of $25,000 to maintain order during the inauguration of President-elect Hoover, but not without objection from the democratic side. Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, said that "it is a reflection on the American people that we have to hire policemen to enforce order" after the "magnificent vote" given Hoover. Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the minority leader, added that "we have to have more policemen to take care of the republicans."

Two hundred policemen are to be brought from Baltimore.

Marsh Is Confirmed.

Washington, January 26.—(United News.)—The senate today confirmed the nomination of Charles H. March, of Minnesota, for membership on the federal trade commission.

CIVIC SUBCOMMITTEES PLANNED BY MADDOX

Chairman To Outline Special Talks for Sections of Commission.

Robert F. Maddox, chairman of a special citizens' advisory commission named by Mayor I. N. Ragsdale to assist local officials in introduction of more economical and businesslike methods in administration of the city government, announced Saturday that he probably would divide the commission of 25 into subcommittees preparatory to making surveys of all important departments this week.

Mr. Maddox is a former mayor of Atlanta, and other members of the commission are leaders in their respective fields and are large taxpayers. Completion of the surveys and application of probable recommendations are expected to take about a year.

The mayor named the commission following an address here some time ago by William J. Casey, vice chairman of a similar commission in Baltimore. Mr. Casey related how the commission had made recommendations which the Baltimore council adopted and which resulted in a reduction in city taxes.

One of the most important matters which will come before the commission will be some solution of the financial problem with which the city is involved in operation and maintenance of the Atlanta public school system. That one department alone this year is to receive 32 per cent of the receipts of the city, including interest and sinking funds and purchase of free textbooks. The total amount they will get, however, will be $894,000 less than the $3,726,485 asked by the board of education ,for the department.

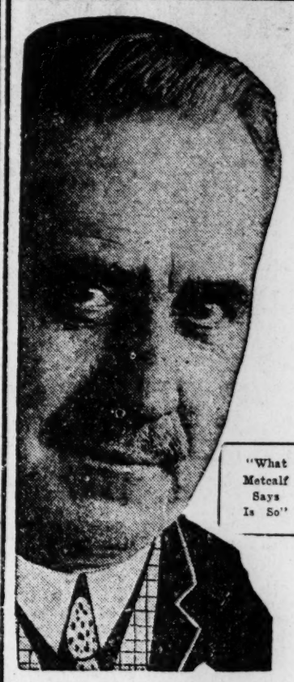

Councilmen Wiley L. Moore, Nelson T. Spratt and Ellis B. Barrett and Alderman J. Charles Murphy compose the subcommittee from the finance committee, while George W. Powell, John T. Hancock, Dr. McIntosh M. Burns and W. W. Gaines have been named from the board. Mr. Maddox and three others who he is to name will complete the composite committee.

EXTEND PAPAYA SHOW

Exhibit in Miami To Continue Through Week.

Miami, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Miami had planned to conclude its first annual papaya show tonight, following a week of exhibits and programs having to do with the product, but city officials in charge of the exhibit announced tonight that the affair would be continued through next week.

Public interest in the papaya show was given as the reason for time extension.

QUESTION MARK ENDS LAST LAP OF LONG HOP

Record-Breaking Plane Greeted by Party Headed by Secretary Davis.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The Question Mark, the army's endurance record-breaking airplane, arrived at Bolling field here at 5:05 p. m. today.

The tri-motored plane came from Greensboro, N. C., completing the last lap of its continental flight.

Major Carl Spatz, commander of the plane at the time of its record flight on the Pacific coast, was accompanied by Captain Ira C. Eaker, chief pilot, and Hans J. Adamson, a member of the ground crew attending the plane at the time of its endurance test.

Second Lieutenant Elwood R. Quesada, one of the pilots, and Staff Sergeant Roy W. Hooe, a mechanic, arrived earlier in the day in the plane used to transfer fuel and food to the Question Mark during its famous flight.

Secretary of War Davis, Assistant Secretary Davison (for aeronautics), Major General Fechet, chief of the army air corps, Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of the naval bureau of aeronautics, and Mrs. Eaker, wife of Captain Eaker, were among the welcoming party.

When the plane came to a halt and was brought up to a temporary stand Mrs. Eaker rushed to the side of the huge airship and entered a door to greet her husband on the inside.

A crowd immediately gathered around the aircraft to get a sight of and speak a word to the aviators who stood patiently while nearly two score photographers clicked away with their machines.

Major Spatz said he did not know when the members of the crew who established the record would go to New York for a dinner to be given there in their honor. The flight from Greensboro, he added, was uneventful.

An elaborate program had been planned for the reception of the aviators but early today this was called off when it was learned the ship would not reach here on schedule. The only thing in the nature of a ceremony was the congratulation of the fliers by Secretary Davis.

PRIZES ANNOUNCED FOR TWO CONTESTS

The Georgia Home Economics association and Georgia Tuberculosis association Saturday announced a state-wide contest in which prizes totaling $50 will be awarded the student or group of students submitting the best original play on the health subject. The contest is open to all school children in the junior and senior high schools of the state. It will close on March 1.

The purpose of the contest is to interest high school students in good health habits as are applicable to their own lives. The plays submitted in the contest must be presented in the schools and to the contest committee for judging.

Rules Are Announced

Following are the rules:

1—The contest is open to Georgia junior and senior high schools.

2—Plays must deal with some aspect of individual or community health or hygiene.

3—Plays must be produced before an audience and must run no longer than 30 minutes.

4—Plays must represent the combined efforts of a class or group of high school students; the contest is not intended for individual students.

5—Plays must be accompanied by a statement signed by the principal of the competing school that the play as submitted has been produced before an audience.

6—Three typewritten copies of the play must be sent to Georgia Tuberculosis association by March 1, 1929.

For a sample play and single instructions on play writing, children are asked to write to the Georgia Tuberculosis association, Atlanta, Ga.

A Cotton Contest, Too.

The Home Economics association Saturday also announced that during 1929 it will sponsor an education campaign to promote greater uses of cotton in Georgia homes. An essay contest, open to all high school students in the state studying home economics, will be conducted. Prizes of $25, $15 and $5 will be awarded for the best essays.

"There are a great many uses for cotton in the homes which are not being practiced," Liela Bunce, president of the association and home economics supervisor for the Fulton County High school, said in announcing this contest. "It is the purpose of our contest and our campaign to bring all these uses before the people in the hope that they will be adopted and thereby not only aid those who use them but the cotton industry in general."

Other details of this contest will be announced later.

Majestic Star

Marie Morrissey, who will be heard from 8 to 9 o'clock tonight over the Columbia system during the Majestic theater of the air.

Marie Morrissey, of the "golden voice," delightful contralto and charming in personality, will add to her host of admirers and friends by a number of songs during this program. She enjoys great popularity among music lovers, who appreciate her ability and talents, which include practically every attribute that all singers long for. It is an interesting fact that she is a descendant of settlers who drove across our country in "covered wagons," was a poor girl and made her own way to the high position as an artist that she occupies today.

STATE LABORATORIES HAVE BUSIEST YEAR

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

The laboratories of the state board of health reported today that 1928 was the busiest year in the history of this phase of the state's health work. The laboratory has shown an increase in interest in its work each year since its inauguration in 1905, according to a comparative table presented in the report made by T. F. Sellers, director, to Dr. Thomas F. Abercrombie, state health commissioner.

Commenting on features of the report, Mr. Sellers said that all phases of the work have increased in quantity, with the greatest increase in bacteriological specimens examines, this showing a gain of 21.8 per cent over 1927.

Analyses of the three general classes of specimens, bacteriological, Wassermann tests and water, went to the following totals for the years indicated, the report said: 43,620 in 1924; 45,990 in 1925; 48,285 in 1926; 54,316 in 1927 and 60,107 in 1928. Bacteriological specimens, starting at 17,994 in 1924, dropped slightly in 1925 and were off further in 1926 but picked up in 1927 somewhat above the 1926 total, and mounted to 19,195 in 1928, the peak for the period covered by the table.

Others Show Increases.

The other two classe sof specimens have shown gradual increases each year, running approximately 60 per cent higher in 1928 than in 1924.

Increases were shown generally in the number of vaccine and antitoxin treatments issued by the laboratory during the past year as compared with other years, but Mr. Sellers said these increases were not necessarily due to gains by diseases. He pointed out that the difference each year has been slight, although for illustration he cited the steady growth of the bacteriological departments. In 1905, only 447 specimens of this class were examined, but in 1928 the total reached was 51,995. Water analyses jumped from seven in 1905 to 8,152 in 1928.

The laboratory's work in rabies control showed the smallest proportionate growth. A total of 10 animal heads was examined in 1907, when this work was begun, while in 1928 only 623 were examined. Rabies treatments were furnished in 665 human cases and no animal cases in 1909, and in 1,260 human cases and 212 animal cases in 1928.

Typhoid vaccine furnished in 1912, the year its manufacture and distribution was begun by the laboratory, amounted to 1,737 doses, and 320,705 doses were sent out in 1928. The highest number of doses was issued in 1927, when the total reached 348,135.

Antitoxin in Demand.

In 1909, the laboratories distributed 3,400,000 doses of diphtheria antitoxin over the state, 35,999,000 went out in 1928, and 1927 was the peak year with a total of 57,296,000.

Other bacteriological products distributed in 1928 were 713,000 doses of tetanus treatment, 39,710 doses of toxin-antitoxin on 32,400 of smallpox vaccine. The biggest year for smallpox vaccine was 1927, when 73,198 doses went out. Toxin-antitoxin hit its high mark in 1925, when a total of 76,555 doses was distributed.

The report set out a contradiction of a recent announcement that hookworm disease is no longer of public health importance in the southern United States, saying that Georgia health authorities "have reason to believe that there is not only a considerable amount of clinical hookworm disease in certain sections of south Georgia, but in addition a large percentage of children in these sections are abnormal as a result of moderate or even light infestations, even though they do not exhibit clinical symptoms of hookworm disease."

A total of 1,684 specimens examined showed positive cases, the tabulation of tests showed.

Attention was directed in the report to the appearance in Georgia of tularemia, contracted by humans in the handling of infected wild rabbits. The comment said there is very little likelihood of this disease becoming epidemic, except that increased infection in wild rabbits may result in increasing numbers of human cases. Twenty cases were diagnosed in the laboratory in 1928, it was said in the report.

Twenty-five positive tests, indicating the presence of undulant fever, were reported. The laboratory director said, in discussing this disease, that he did not know just how long it has been incident in Georgia.

"Diagnosis of, made almost entirely by laboratory test," the report said. "This technique was introduced in our laboratory in May, 1928, and since then several hundred tests have been made. The interest among the medical profession has been widespread and in 1929 all liquid blood specimens will be tested for undulant fever."

Evidence that milk of cows infected with contagious absorption is the source of undulant fever in man, has been indicated in some instances, according to comments in the report, while four strains of the causative organism, which were isolated from human blood cultures have been found to be of the pork type.

"This would suggest that infected pork may be an important source of infection in man," it was also said "It is possible, however, that the porcine type can infect cows and in turn infect man through dairy products."

Approximately $20,000 was spent in 1928 in rebuilding and reequipping the laboratories, the director declaring Georgia now has "a system of laboratories that will compare favorably with the best in the United States."

Mary Pickford Contest

:: Atlanta's "Best Girl" To Enter Gay Whirl for Week ::

Enters Last Drive Stage

Following a day of rest on Sunday, the 35 young business women who are entered in this paper's contest to select this city's "best girl" to pay a week's visit to Mary Pickford in Hollywood will again take the field Monday with only a day and a half remaining before the close of the event.

At noon Tuesday the competition will be over, and the contestant who turns in the largest number of new, six-month subscriptions to The Constitution will be declared the winner. This is the only feature involved in the dignified contest, and the winner's reward will be great indeed.

She will leave Atlanta for Chicago on February 8 in company with a woman staff writer of The Constitution, and will plunge into a gay whirl of entertainment arranged specially for her benefit as the winner of The Constitution's Mary Pickford "Coquette" contest, conducted in connection with the celebrated star's filming of an all-talking version of the Broadway hit.

In Chicago she will board a luxurious special Mary Pickford Santa Fe train, which will arrive in Los Angeles on February 12. Mayor George Cryer and his staff will receive Miss Pickford's guests at the city hall and they will motor to the Roosevelt, Hollywood's newest and finest hotel, which will be their home during their stay. A gala dinner will be given in their honor by the United Artists theater, after which they will attend the magnificent United Artists theater, Los Angeles' newest and most pretentious playhouse.

Whirl of Galeties.

Wednesday, February 13, Miss Pickford's party will be guests of Hollywood's famous Breakfast club, the mecca of all celebrities who visit the west coast. They will motor to Pasadena, where the chamber of commerce will entertain with a lawn lunch fete on the grounds of the Huntington hotel. They will then entrain for the summit of Mt. Lowe, one of the beauty spots of the entire world, and their day will end with a theater party at the El Capitan theater.

On Thursday, February 14, the Chamber of Commerce of Beverly Hills, America's most beautiful suburb, homeland of the stars, will be host at an elaborate luncheon at the exclusive Beverly Hills hotel. At night they will be honor guests at a dinner-dance at the world famous cocoanut grove of the Ambassador hotel.

The next day the young women will leave to enjoy the wonders of Catalina island, the show place of southern California.

Visit Sound Stage.

On Saturday, February 16, they will visit the United Artists' studio. Here they will have the opportunity of watching Miss Pickford actually working before the cameras in scenes for "Coquette." They will visit the sound stages, where no guests are permitted to enter, and meet officials and celebrities on the lot. In the afternoon the Wasps, Women's Association of Screen Publicists, will be hostesses at a tea in honor of Miss Pickford's guests. In the evening they will be the guests of the magnificent Metropolitan theater.

The feature event of Sunday, February 17, will be a tea at Miss Pickford's own home, Pickfair. They will spend the evening as guests of the Carthay Circle theater.

At noon on Monday will come one of the high spots of the whole trip, when the Paramount studio tenders a luncheon. On the Paramount lot are many celebrities whom the young indies will be glad to meet as they visit the stages of this interesting studio. There will follow a swimming party at the famous Ambassador hotel plunge and in the evening, the climax of the week's entertainment will be a theater party at the sumptuous Chinese theater.

On Tuesday, February 17, the Mary Pickford Special will leave for home.

Rules of Contest.

The following rules and regulations will govern the competition to select the business girl for a trip to Hollywood as the guest of Mary Pickford:

(1) Candidates must be residents of Atlanta or its immediate suburbs, the latter including such suburbs as College Park, East Point, Hapeville, Decatur, Buckhead and intervening points, etc.

(2) Candidates must be 18 to 25 years old.

(3) Candidates must be regularly employed in some gainful occupation and should be able to furnish recommendations of ability and proficiency from their employers.

(4) The winning candidate is to be determined by the highest vote recorded, the count of which is to be made by an impartial committee and their count is to be final and conclusive. A complete and accurate list of subscriptions will be kept of each candidate. After the result has been published any contestant desiring to investigate the records may have this privilege, thus guaranteeing fair and impartial consideration to all candidates.

(5) Votes will be based on new subscriptions to The Daily and Sunday Constitution. The subscriber is to agree to take The Constitution for six months in order to secure the following votes for candidates:

(A) For one new six-month subscription (not paid in advance) 2,000 votes.

(B) For one new six-month subscription (paying $5 in advance) 2,000 votes.

(C) For one new yearly subscription (paying $9.50 in advance) 4,000 votes.

(D) Contract subscriptions will not be accepted for a longer period than six months.

(6) With each nomination on the regular entry blank the candidate will be credited with 5,000 votes.

(7) No votes will be received and credited to candidates after noon January 29, 1929—at which time the committee of judges will begin counting the votes of all candidates. Announcement of winner will be made on February 2.

(8) No employee of The Atlanta Constitution, nor member of his or her family will be eligible for the competition.

(9) All subscriptions submitted in the competition are subject to verification and acceptance of The Atlanta Constitution. All subscriptions must be new, meaning those not now receiving The Constitution through regular carrier or dealer, and who have not been a regular subscriber in the past thirty (30) days, and which does not replace any other subscription. Any fictitious subscriptions turned in by any candidate eliminates that candidate from further participation in the contest. The decision by The Constitution as to whether a subscription is new is final and those entering the contest agree to this.

(10) All contestants in this contest who turn in to The Atlanta Constitution ten or more acceptable subscriptions in accordance with the rules printed above, and fail to win the trip, will be paid 25 cents for each subscription accepted. This rule applies to ten or more and not less. This assures any active contestant that her work or that of her friends will not be wholly in vain.

The contest subscription blank follows:

DO NOT SIGN THIS CONTRACT IF YOU ARE ALREADY A SUBSCRIBER, FOR IT WILL ONLY DISAPPOINT THE CONTESTANT PRESENTING IT. REMEMBER IN SIGNING THIS CONTRACT YOU POSITIVELY AND LEGALLY BIND YOURSELF TO TAKE AND PAY FOR, AND NOT TO DISCONTINUE, THE CONSTITUTION FOR SIX MONTHS OR MORE.

BISHOP M'CONNELL HERE THURSDAY NIGHT

A feature of the continuous program of evangelism which Atlanta churches have been participating in since October will be the appearance here Thursday night of the Rt. Rev. Francis J. McConnell, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church. Bishop McConnell will speak to a union meeting at the Wesley Memorial church. His subject will be "Evangelism."

The program began with a series of home prayer meetings covering a week. Then followed evangelistic services in the churches. At the Christmas season, in the many services, special emphasis was laid upon the real significance of the day. Hundreds attended the union sunrise service on Christmas morning at the Baptist tabernacle.

Many churches participated in the observance of the universal week of prayer, the theme of which period was personal evangelism. Union prayer services at noon were held during this period, the first week in the new year, at 110 North Forsyth street.

Beginning Monday, and continuing each week day through March 29, union services will be held downtown at the noon hour. Outstanding leaders in the various denominations have been secured for these meetings in which all of the denominations are uniting. During this period there will also be held throughout the city home prayer meetings and special evangelistic services in the churches.

The program is being planned and promoted through the interdenominational organization of the churches—the Christian Council of Atlanta.

Here in a few words is the story of the latest Majestic Achievement:

To build a product better, finer and for less money than has ever been asked for the highest quality merchandise before, is no easy task. All this, and more, was accomplished by MAJESTIC Electric Radio in 1928—an achievement that set the world to talking, thinking and buying MAJESTIC. Since last June, when the first MAJESTIC receiver left the factory, over 600,000 MAJESTICS have been produced, and are giving such consistently good performance that this, too, has amazed the world.

To make a product better than those that have gone before was a real achievement—but how to make the best product that could be made for the money still better, was a task that might well appear impossible.

Yet MAJESTIC has done it. Under the guiding hand of William C. Grunow, a genius of production, whose foresight, imagination, and ability to weave the finest technical achievements into mass production of radio receivers, has brought him international fame—A new and finer MAJESTIC has been created.

Its performance is astonishing, its beauty outstanding, its price amazing.

When you see and hear these new MAJESTIC receivers, you forget all but quality—quality of performance, quality of appearance that you can really feel. You only know you want to own one of these new models—to have it for your very own—to add breathless beauty to your home and give you matchless performance which puts a new song of happiness in your heart.

Forget all but quality, yet receive your greatest thrill when you learn the price. For MAJESTIC'S newest achievement, the radio with quality you can feel, is within reach of every purse.

southern radio circles and a poineer in the sales department of this great industry, the Capitol Electric company has attained phenomenal success in its distribution of the popular Majestic radio line.

This company, of which Mr. Brimberry is vice president in charge of the radio department, is located at 7 Auburn avenue and is Majestic distributor for the state of Georgia.

Since August of last year it has placed with dealers a total of 32 carloads of the products of the Grigsby-Grunow company of Chicago. Six of the cars have been received since the beginning of the year.

Mr. Brimberry stated Saturday that while he is proud of this record, he believes Majestic faces an even brighter prospect in future.

"We expect confidently to sell 10,000 sets in this territory during 1929," he declared, "and we find that Majestic's already wide popularity is increasing daily."

W. M. Hicks, Georgia director of the Sterchi Furniture company, announced recently that the Sterchi store at Whitehall and Mitchell streets here and 22 other Sterchi stores have become dealers in Majestic sets and expect to do a record radio business this year.

Shield-Grid Combination Sets To Be 1929 Offering

Several New Things in Receivers Expected To Be on Market During Present Year.

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD,
Associated Press Radio Editor.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—This month-old year is to see several new things in the way of radio receivers before it ends its trek into history.

Outstanding will be two sets. One will be built around the new AC shield grid tube expected to be in production after April 1. The other will be a combination short wave and broadcast receiver.

Otherwise, it is planned to continue the models which proved successful in 1928 with the refinements deemed necessary. These will include six, seven and eight-tube sets.

A number of manufacturers have made tentative plans to supplement the AC lines with a four-tube receiver that will use the shield-grid valve. This tube of necessity will mean somewhat of a change in circuit design.

Like other new tubes, it probably will require some time to determine all of its capabilities. Besides there is the question of its popularity. If the listener "takes" to it like he did the socket power receiver, its name will be made quickly. It is more difficult to manufacture than other types of tubes and its efficiency is determined alone by the circuit with which it is used.

The short wave-broadcast receiver will have a single audio section, with a switch to cut from one tuning section to another.

Along with the four-tube trend there is a more decided swing toward the use of a single stage of audio amplification. Better audio tubes which deliver greater power with the consumed energy are mainly responsible. Many of the designs call for a single stage of push-pull amplification to give quality and to supply the output required for dynamic speakers.

Compactness of the receiver and elaborate cabinet design are other things that will attract the eye of the 1929 buyer. There is an effort to get away from the table model and make the receiver a unit that will stand alone.

To satisfy the listener who desires to tune his receiver in any room, several schemes for remote control have been put forward. Basically it consists of a motor driven dial which operates when a button is pushed or a knob is turned in another room. The two units are connected by wire.

All in all, the effort of the manufacturers is toward simplified radio. This was indicated in 1928 when the push-button tuner appeared in a factory-built model.

Takes Air "Leads"

Rosaline Greene, Eveready hour's popular leading lady over WSB every Tuesday night.

Radio's first leading lady, who was playing "leads" while still in her schoolgirl 'teens a few years ago, has now cemented her claims to her unique title more closely than ever.

Rosaline Greene, who was the leading lady of the famous little band of WGY players at Schenectady during her college days in Albany, is now the full-fledged leading lady of the Eveready hour, which has been the medium for the introduction by radio of a long list of stage and concert stars during the five years of its existence. Supported by a regular stock company, which includes a number of actors and actresses well known to legitimate theatergoers, she has already received warm critical approval for her work in three recent Eveready hour "continuity" productions and will soon be heard in other ambitious undertakings which that pioneer program has scheduled for this new year.

Although, in the interim following her work with the WGY players and before her appearance in the Eveready hour studios, she played in stock and on Broadway, Miss Greene possesses no desire to win triumph upon the "visible stage" in preference to her radio successes. She admits frankly that she likes radio better than the stage, and that she would far rather play to an invisible audience of a million or more listeners, than before a visible audience of a few hundred in even the most exclusive theater in New York.

RADIO-ING THE AIR WAVES

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

California Spanish folk song will be introduced to the American radio audience by Mary Lewis, famed soprano of the Metropolitan Opera, who, with Beatrice Harrison, cellist, will present the recital in the Atwater Kent Radio Hour over WSB and the N. B. C. system at 8:15 tonight, assisted by the orchestra under Josef Pasternack.

Mary Lewis.

In California the troubadour spirit of Spain had cast its spell over the life of the people who were convivial and gay and proud of their Castilian blood, according to Eleanor Hague, who has collected these Spanish folk song.

Two musicians were brought from Spain "to make gayety for the populace" only 20 years after the landing of Columbus, and with the soldiers, laborers and priests colonizing Spanish America came the musicians and descendants of the troubadours. The simple colonial life of the isolated settlements was conductive to the development of folk-song.

Un Pajarito is one of the love lyrics of the old Spanish that Miss Lewis also includes Ballatella from "Pagliacci", Serenade Francaise, An Oriental Romance, Serenade of Gounod, The House That Jack Built, and Nocturne. She will sing Little Bit of Fellow with violin obligato and will close with the Beautiful Blue Danube of Johann Straus, perhaps the most popular Viennese air.

Beatrice Harrison.

Beatrice Harrison is England's best-known woman cellist. She will present in her program, which studied in the Royal College of Music and later won the Mendelssohn prize in Berlin, where she made her debut, and toured Germany, Austria, Hungary, Holland and Scandinavia. Her program includes Adagio, Allemande, A Wistful Song and Pastorale and Reel.

The orchestra will open the concert with the March and Procession of Bacchus, from Ballet "Sylvia," and as the Interlude will play Ronde d'Amour and the Slavonic Dance in E Minor of Antonin Dvorak.

HYMN AMONG ENNA JETTICK SELECTIONS.

The well loved hymn, "Abide With Me," by William H. Monk, will be sung during Enna Jettick Melodies, broadcast through WSB and the N. B. C. system at 7 o'clock tonight.

Thomas Moore's song, "Believe Me, If All Those Endearing Young Charms," based on an old Irish melody, will be sung as a soprano solo by Betsy Ayres.

Metcalfe's "Come, Sweet Morning" and "Oh, Miss Hannah!" will be presented by a mixed quartet with instrumental accompaniment.

RGA'S ATLANTA OFFICE WILL AID RADIO SERVICE

The home no longer has the distinction of being the only institution which enjoys the educational and entertaining benefits of radio broadcast programs. Hotels, hospitals, schools, apartment houses and similar buildings are demanding permanent and efficient facilities for radio reception not only as a convenience, but as a practical necessity of modern life.

The Radio Corporation of America has recognized this situation for the past two years and now is pleased to announce that not only has a special division headed by George E. Cole, been organized to handle this work exclusively, but has made available a line of apparatus to meet the requirements of the wide-spread demand.

A centralized radio specialist has been appointed in the new Atlanta office of the Radio Corporation of America at 101 Marietta street for consultation with architects and others interested in this activity. Owners of apartment buildings, particularly, will be pleased to know that with this new and ultra-modern apparatus, it is now possible for any number of tenants in a building to operate their own receivers from one single antenna and thus do away with unsightly groups of wires, as well as actually provide more efficient reception. This method is additional to straight centralized radio reception whereby a single receiving unit is able to furnish a program to any number of outlets through appropriate loudspeakers located in each room of the building.

Modern buildings are now being wired for radio as logically as they are wired for lights and future developments of the radio. Art will undoubtedly suggest other uses for the radio wiring distribution systems now being installed in addition to the present highly developed art of broadcasting.

COOLIDGE TO TALK

President Will Be Heard on Chain Monday.

The voices of President Coolidge and Brigadier General H. M. Lord, director of the budget, will be heard over a coast-to-coast network of radio stations associated with the National Broadcasting company from 5:30 to 7 o'clock Monday evening.

The occasion is the broadcast of the semi-annual business meeting of the government. The financial status of the United States and governmental economic problems will be discussed by the president and the director of the budget. The meeting will be held in Memorial Continental hall in Washington, D. C. Music by the United States army band will open and close the program. President Coolidge will be the first speaker.

REDFERNE HOLLINSHEAD IS MAJESTIC TENOR.

REDFERNE HOLLINGSHEAD

Redferne Hollinshead, popular tenor, who is on the air weekly in the Majestic Theater of the Air, has captured the permanent role of Majestic tenor, and will be known under that title in the Majestic coast - to - coast broadcast over the Columbia system tonight at 8 o'clock.

Redferne Hollinshead, son of a clergyman, was born in England came to Canada with his family at an early age. While living in Manitoba he overheard an argument about a tenor who could sing a top C, and fired with vanity and youthful pride, he sang a few notes for the assembled multitude and so thrilled them with the quality and sweetness of his voice that he was taken to Winnipeg and, in a short time, became soloist of Winnipeg's largest church.

Since that time his career has been a most successful one. He has appeared many times in recital in New York, and his weekly appearances with the Majestic Theater of the Air have contributed towards making this hour one of the outstanding ones in the radio field.

PRYOR'S COMPOSITION IN DE FOREST HOUR.

Arthur Pryor will feature one of his own compositions in the broadcast that the De Forest hour will present over the Columbia system tonight at 9 o'clock.

"The Baby Parade" is the number chosen by Mr. Pryor as his contribution to the De Forest program, in the hour that this famous bandmaster and composer now conducts weekly.

Among other outstanding numbers will be heard Mussi's "Reminiscences of Italian Opera," Weber's "Invitation to the Dance," and a contralto solo of Bower's song, "Chinese Flower."

CAPITOL FAMILY FEATURES PIANIST.

Jasques Pintel, Russian pianist associated with the Capitol theater music staff for the past year, will be the featured soloist of Major Bowes' Capitol Family over WSB and the N. B. C. system tonight at 6:30 o'clock.

Pintel was born in Odessa. At four he began to play the piano, and when six Rubinstein heard him and became so interested that he offered to take the child with him to St. Petersburg where he was then director of the conservatoire. Meanwhile Jacques continued to progress, and two years later began giving concerts in Odessa.

At the age of 15 Pintel entered the Paris conservatoire by competition. In 1900 he carried off the "Premier Prix" at the conservatoire.

He has been associated with many stars as solo pianist, and has played in Australia, India, Burma and China.

He has given many concerts as soloist with the London Symphony orchestra and the Edouard Colonne orchestra in Paris.

POLING SPEAKS ON "FENCED SPACES."

Dr. Daniel A. Poling will speak on "Fenced Spaces" during the young people's conference broadcast through WSB and the N. B. C. system this afternoon at 2 o'clock.

In the ancient days of Israel there was a space outside each temple which was open to all worshippers, but the inner space was accessible only to the high priests, and to them but once a year. People need, Dr. Poling feels, to learn early in life the discipline of selection. It is a fine art to exclude from the mind vulgar thoughts, to keep out pettiness and doubt, he believes.

In closing, Dr. Poling exhorts his hearers to keep a fenced space for tryst with God and loved ones, and with memories and thoughts that are sacred and supreme.

"Love Divine, All Love Excelling," "Sing Them Over Again to Me" and "O God, Our Help in Ages Past" will be included in the musical program.

The complete program for this broadcast follows:

"THE LARK" BY PEERLESS REPRODUCERS.

Glinka's composition "The Lark," scored for flute, viola and 'cello, will be heard during the half hour of harmony by the Peerless Reproducers over WSB and the N. B. C. system at 12:30 o'clock today.

The symphony, directed by Harry Horlick, will open the program with Tschaikowsky's Valse, "Sleeping Beauty," in a special orchestration. Rachmaninoff's "Serenade" follows, especially scored for 'cello, and Sarasate's "Spanish Dance" will be heard in another new arrangement for strings.

Edward Wolter, baritone soloist, will sing Homer's "Uncle Rome" and Dix's song, "The Trumpeter."

MONTE CARLO SCENE LA PALINA HOUR.

Monte Carlo will be represented in the musical hour that La Palina will broadcast over the Columbia system tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

The selection most typical of this spot will be "The Man Who Broke the Bank at Monte Carlo," but Massenet's march, "Scenes Pittoresque," Drigo's "Serenade" and Lacome's "Mascarade" will also bring to mind this principality that abounds in beautiful country as well as gambling halls and casinos.

Olive Kline, famous concert and radio artist, will add to the enjoyment of this hour by the rendition of three vocal solos, one of the loveliest of which will be Hahn's "Si Mes Vers Avaient des Ailes."

Freshman Radio Leaders Name Polk Distributor

J. A. Frye, salesmanager of the Freshman Radio company, of New York, shown at left, and A. P. Solomon, service manager, were visitors last week to James K. Polk, Inc., at which time the latter concern was appointed distributor for most of the southeast for this popular-priced set. Mr. Frye reports that Freshman is looking forward to a banner production year and was favorably impressed by the enthusiasm for Freshman products evidenced by officials of James K. Polk, Inc. The Polk company is one of the biggest distributors in the southeast for musical goods.

Zenith Enters Southeast; Polk Named Distributor

James K. Polk, Inc., widely-known Atlanta musical supply house, last week was appointed southeastern distributor for the famous Zenith radio line, marking the first major introduction of Zenith products to this part of the country. The appointment was made by H. W. Croucher, left, assistant salesmanager for Zenith, and A. L. Tuttle, service manager, who conferred here last week with P. C. Brockman and J. K. Beach, of the Polk organization, and arranged the association. Mr. Croucher said while visiting Atlanta that Zenith is the world's largest manufacturer of high grade radios and he pointed to the outstanding feature of its products, automatic tuning. "This is the latest and greatest achievement of the radio world," he declared, "and is an exclusive Zenith feature. This and the other many notable advantages of Zenith, we feel sure will popularize our products immediately through the Polk company in this section."

Drug Addicts and Defectives Add To Social Problem Here

Drug addicts, striving by guile and misrepresentations to obtain the narcotics they crave, and scores of mental defectives for whose training and care there is no institution, present serious problems for social workers in Atlanta, said Frank Miller, executive director of the Atlanta Community Chest, in a review Saturday of the aims and needs of social welfare organizations here.

After explaining that Community Chest agencies seek first of all to provide remedial treatment looking to permanent relief, much in the manner of a physician undertaking the treatment of a case of illness, Mr. Miller said there are certain kinds of cases for which no treatment at present is provided here.

"A baffling problem is furnished by the drug addict," he said. "Four of our relief societies recently accounted for 47 known addicts among their clients. Adequate treatment of these cases is far beyond the purse of the social welfare society. Food, shelter, fuel, merely sustains life, does not cure addicts.

Solicit Private Citizens.

"Many of those addicted to the drug habit solicit private citizens, rehearsing pitiful stories of want and illness, stating that the Chest refuses to aid them. Their purpose in this kind of solicitation is to secure money for their drug. They are unscrupulous in the interest of getting their dope. It is almost impossible to follow up their lies and tricks.

"We have no treatment for the drug habit. There is, however, some relief in sight. The Porter bill has become a national law, creating a narcotic division of the public health service, to have charge of health farms where addicts may be treated. Two institutions for this purpose will be located by the attorney general, the secretary of the treasury, and the secretary of war. Treatment on these farms will not only be given to federal prison addicts but to all other persons suffering from the drug habit. The drug addict is considered not a criminal, but diseased.

"Another problem is raised by the feeble-minded, for whose care we have no place. Unfortunately some feebleminded are mingling with normal persons in our institutions and some are being maintained in the poor families to which they belong. There are some feeble-minded that can be trained, but there are others that are hopeless cases and will always be dependent. For these latter there is no adequate provision, and we are unable to dispose of scores of mental defectives suitably.

"Social workers have to handle a number of mentally unstable persons, eccentric and erratic, not insane. That they are mentally unstable is due to any of several causes, among them infection, shell shock, sleeping sickness, neurasthenia, for which there is no specific treatment provided. We can give them food, shelter, fuel, but there is no institution where they can be sent for treatment and cure.

"All the social organizations and institutions in the Chest are equipped to give specific kinds of treatment for personal and social maladjustments. We have a home for incurables, a home for old women, a home for unmarried mothers, an emergency home for lone women and children, a children's home-finding society, a shop for employment of the handicapped, a health clinic for examination and treatment of infants and adults, a county sanatorium for tuberculosis patients, a city hospital, alms house, etc. All of these organizations and institutions enable social workers to find suitable treatment for a considerable variety of cases investigated, but there are certain types of cases, as explained, for which there is at present no means of treatment.

"All of us interested in a thorough social welfare program should give thought and support to measures calculated to furnish means for the treatment of persons presenting these problems to the agencies of the Community Chest. When approached and solicited by persons who say the Chest agencies will not help them, citizens should reserve judgment until they have communicated with us for a correct statement of the case."

YOUTH, ACCUSED IN DEATH OF WIFE, REPORTED BETTER

Ernest Eich, who is in Grady hospital in a serious condition with bullet wounds in his abdomen, and who has been charged by a coroner's jury with the murder of his 17-year-old wife, late Saturday was reported to be in a slightly improved condition.

Meanwhile, the office of Solicitor-General John A. Boykin is preparing to lay the case of Ernest Eich before the grand jury on the recommendation of the coroner's jury, after it found that the girl came to her death "of bullet wounds inflicted by Ernest Eich."

Eich told police after the shooting, which took place at the home of the husband's parents, 283 Washington street, that his wife had shot him and then committed suicide. Mrs. Eich was killed. The shooting came as the result of a series of domestic quarrels and several separations.

Funeral services for Mrs. Eich will be at 2 o'clock this afternoon at the chapel of J. Austin Dillon. The body will be taken to Sylvester for burial. Pallbearers will be R. R. Cheek, C. A. Cheek, W. D. Venable, W. S. Thurmond, Carl Philips and Sam Evans.

Mrs. Eich before her marriage was Miss Elizabeth Buchanan, daughter of Mrs. C. D. Barrett, of Atlanta, who survives her.

"Too Drunk for Safety," Man "Arrests" Self And Is Given Light Fine

Courtesy and consideration for others are worthy qualities and deserving of reward even when evidenced by a person under the influence of spirituous liquor, one may judge from the fact that A. H. Lowry, of Birmingham, Ala., escaped with the minimum penalty when he appeared before Recorder A. W. Callaway Saturday on drunk charges.

It seems that Lowry "arrested" himself to save the officers trouble. At least, according to Lowry's testimony in court, as corroborated by Call Officer Harper, the Alabaman was making a visit to Atlanta Friday and when he indulged a bit too much and found that he was staggering, decided he should be taken into custody.

Accordingly, he inquired for the location of police headquarters and started in that direction rather than send for officers and give them the trouble of taking him in. After some difficulty he arrived at his destination, found Call Officer Harper, told him that he was pretty drunk, that wasn't safe for him to be on the streets and that he would like to be locked up.

As a result he escaped with a five dollar fine instead of the usual $11 penalty.

Plane Supplants Dog Sled

Bethel, Alaska, January 26.—(AP)—Cutting 24 days from previous similar trips by dog sled, a plane hopped off from here yesterday with a prisoner who is to be tried on a murder charge in federal court at Fairbanks. The plane was to stop en route at Sleetmute to pick up witnesses. Those aboard were E. E. Bennett and Tom Gerard, pilots; Deputy Marshal Wiseman, the native prisoner and an interpreter.

STROMBERG-CARLSON TONES ARE FAITHFUL

Jazz, Grand Opera, the Great Symphonies Charm Listeners.

BY THE DIAL TWISTER.

What does the radio audience want in this day of great programs and exceptional ether entertainment? Jazz still seems to reign as king. Dance orchestras are more numerous than any other one kind of entertainment. They have large followings.

The music of the old masters, also, claims its hundreds of thousands of listeners. Specialties and novelties keep in the race.

The question of what the listeners want can only be answered, it seems, by saying that everything on the air has its followers. Were that not true, the unwanted programs would be discontinued.

Music being a component part of almost every program and being an incidental part of every other program, the radio audience has left off looking for this and that program, and has turned its attention more than ever before to the receiver and loud speaker which makes it possible to have the broadcast reproduced in the home.

Tonal quality has become the most sought factor in reception. Distance is available, selectivity is being improved with experience in the use of A. C. tubes and volume is at one's command. The Dial Twister has found that the claims of the Stromberg-Carlson engineers are fully met in the performance of the new S.-T. receivers and loud speakers.

Liquid tones, the highest notes and the lowest bass, instrumental or vocal, are faithfully reproduced with a reality which eliminates anything mechanical. During these winter evenings, New York, Chicago, San Antonio, Cincinnati, New Orleans and many other cities are but a twist of the dial away. Grand opera from the Chicago stage, reproduced with human feeling, the dance orchestras of Broadway, the symphony organizations from a dozen other places, all these the Stromberg-Carlson brings. Nothing in this electrical age could offer more pleasure.

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR PRESS CONFERENCE

Athens, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—An invitation to deliver three lectures on newspaper technique to the second annual Georgia Press institute has been accepted by Dr. Willard G. Bleyer, director of the school of journalism, University of Wisconsin.

Other speakers who have been invited to address the institute to be held here Ferbruary 20-23, with the Henry W. Grady school of journalism as host, include Julian Harris, of the Columbus Enquirer-Sun; Robert Lathan, of the Asheville, N. C., Citizen, and Grover C. Hall, of the Montgomery, Ala., Advertiser. These men are the three southern winners of the Pulitzer prize.

Sponsored by the Georgia Press association, the institute will be given the benefit of instruction by teachers of journalism in the state. Assisting Dr. Bleyer will be Dean S. V. Sanford, Professor John E. Drewry and Mrs. M. H. Bryan, University of Georgia; Professor John D. Allen and Mrs. Willie Snow Ethridge, Mercer university; Miss Virginia Garner, Wesleyan college; Professor George M. Sparks, Georgia Tech; Professor R. P. Nixon, Emory university; Dr. W. F. Melton, Oglethorpe university, and Dr. R. L. Brantley, Bessie Tift college.

Miss Emily Woodward, first woman president of the press association, will preside.

COOLIDGE AND WIFE WILL VISIT FLORIDA

President Will Attend Dedication of Bird Sanctuary.

Mountain Lake, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—President and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge will join the ranks of notables including the president-elect and the defeated democratic candidate in Florida next week, although their visit will be very brief. They are to come here direct from Washington for the formal dedication of Edward Bok's carillon and bird sanctuary on Friday, February 1, arriving in mid-afternoon and departing for the capital before nightfall, according to announcement made here tody.

The sanctuary was created and the tower built by the Philadelphia philanthropist out of respect to the memory of his grandparents and as a gift to the people of this ountry to which he immigrated at the age of six years.

The announcement set the time for the president's arrival on a special train at 3:30 p. m., 15 minutes before the hour arranged for the ceremonies to start. Arrival of the visitors at the foot of the wooded slope on the crown of which is the tower will be signalled by the "breaking out" of a huge American flag from a ball atop a flagstaff, and eight trumpeters, former service men, from the American Legion post at Fort Myers, are to sound "to the colors." The president of the United States will be welcomed by Governor Doyle E. Carlton, of Florida, and make a dedicatory address himself. A chorus of 500 voices will welcome the Coolidge's with an outburst of song, to be followed by "America" played by Anton Brees on the carillon. The chorus is to follow with "The Glory of God in Nature" and the hallalujah chorus from "The Messiah." The carillon program is to wind up the program, the final selection being "Our United States."

Mrs. Coolidge will have an opportunity to view and feed the nightingales, flamingos and other feathered residents of the preserve, before she and the president board their train for the return trip.

KAISER'S BIRTHDAY REVIVES WRANGLE

peror Wilhelm. The nationalist league and German national labor league both sent congratulations to the former ruler.

At the meeting of the nationalist league speakers urged on their hearers the idea that the first task of the German people must be restoration of the old form of government. They lauded the ex-kaiser as a man who sacrificed his crown for the welfare of the fatherland and who led the German people to affluence and political recognition throughout the world.

The German national labor league adopted a resolution expressing its "deepest gratitude to the kaiser who convened the first international conference for working men's protection and introduced social insurance."

At Hamburg the nationalists manifested their devotion to the kaiser by naming a special delegation to go to Doorn. Resolutions adopted there said that more than 1,000 men and women "demanded the return of his majesty to the fatherland, deeming that the right of every German to reside in the fatherland cannot be denied."

EIGHT MEMBERS OF GRAND FASCISM COUNCIL NAMED

Rome, January 26.—(AP)—Premier Mussolini has named eight members of the newly-formed Grand Council of Fascism for a three-year period. Those named were Signor Bottai, undersecretary for corporations; Dr. Alessandro Chavolini, Professor Enrico Corradini, Professor Albert de Stefani, Lando Ferretti, director of the premier's own press bureau; Edmondo Rossoni, Attilio Terucci and Count Volpi, negotiator of the Italo-American war debt settlement.

HEFLIN ANXIOUS FOR ADDITIONAL COTTON STATISTICS

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—A bill to authorize the director of the census to collect additional cotton statistics was ordered favorably reported today by the senate agriculture committee.

The bill, introduced by Senator Heflin, democrat, Alabama, would separate the number of bales of cotton and bales of linters, now being carried as a single item in the cotton reports.

Sound-Proof Booths New Lyon & King Feature

Lyon & King, operators of the radio department of the King Hardware company at 53 Peachtree street, have just completed outstanding improvements in their department with the installation of sound-proof booths where patrons may hear Brunswick Panatropes and Brunswick records without sound interference from outside. Lyon & King also have commodious display space for showing and demonstrating the several lines of radio products they represent. Above is a view of the new arrangement of this popular radio company, the radios being displayed in the forefront of the department and the sound-proof booths being located in the background at the left. Ed King, member of the firm, stated Saturday that the installation of these improvements is in line with the heavy volume of business which his company now is enjoying, and he added that he expects a constantly-growing radio demand throughout 1929.

U. S. SENATOR SAYS FRANCE IS GUILTY

charge of Russian mobilization, in his book declares pointblank that the Russian leaders then and ther determined on war.

"Kaiser Tells Truth."

"On the 24th of July Wilhelm II was still on his summer vacation cruising in the waters of the Baltic and did not return until July 26. Within 48 hours he was vigorously putting pressure on Austria for a peaceful adjustment of its affairs with Serbia.

"Even the archives of the United States now disclose through the dispatches of Charge d'Affaires Wilson at St. Petersburg (now Leningrad) to our state department that the Russians were already mobilizing on July 25 and anticipating war with Germany. These events took place on the 24th and 25th of July, 1914, before Serbia had even replied to the Austrian ultimatum.

"The world is entitled to know the truth of this matter.

"Unwise leadership brought about this European war, killing and wounding over 30,000,000 people. It ought not recur and the people of the world should be informed of the truth to enable them to protect their future against another such catastrophe.

"The kaiser has spoken the truth. He is entitled to a respectful hearing. He is already fully supported by the leading historians of the world."

ervelt Terhune, southern manager, Columbia Phonograph company, and George B. Brown, secretary of the company.

Officers are: Mr. Kennedy, president; Mr. Terhune, vice president; Mr. McWhirter, vice president and treasurer; Mr. Brown, secretary; Trent S. Logan, assistant treasurer; Mrs. R. T. Permenter, assistant treasurer, and W. S. McDaniel, assistant secretary and trust officer.

Discusing the election of Mr. Kennedy to the presidency of the Empire Trust company, Ryburn G. Clay, president of the Fulton National bank, Saturday said: "The Fulton bank is proud that Mr. Kennedy has been selected for this important position, even though it means his departure from his present post as vice president here. We will continue to have his valuable assistance as director of this bank and as chairman of its finance committee, and in his new place he will continue to be in a position where we can be mutually helpful.

"Mr. Kenedy has been on the staff of this bank ever since it was organized, and our congratulations to him are from his closest friends and associates."

pedals" the fact that Germany was militaristic in 1914.

"That is the outstanding omission in the kaiser's commentary," Polk said. "I do not contend that he was fully responsible for the nation being militaristic, but I do feel that his advisers and the high command were pushing the country into war."

Professor Charles Seymour, Yale historian, added to this:

"No sober historian believes that Germany was solely responsible for the war. The kaiser's picture of Germany in the pre-war years, however, hardly will be accepted by those who remember her refusal to accept the offer of British friendship in 1901, her brusque tone in 1905, 1908 and 1911 and her refusal to accept Grey's offer of mediation in 1914. It is not true that the Versailles treaty was based on the assumption of German responsibility for the war."

Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes, of Smith college, also a noted historian, disagreed with the others.

"If we are going to indict the former kaiser it must be for something other than responsibility for the world war," he said. "Germany did not want a European war in 1914. This is proved beyond question by historical facts now available. And Germany took no active steps to produce war.

JOHN MARTIN, 72, ENGINEER, PASSES

hard work he turned to the development of gold mines in that section of the state and became one of the most successful of the pioneers in th's industry. He expanded his holdings gradually and when he left White county in 1904 to go to Clarkesville he was the owner of approximately 50,000 acres of ore and timber lands.

Married Miss Conley.

In the same year in which he took up his residence in Clarkesville he married Miss Lulu Conley, daughter of John W. Conley, of Gainesville.

He soon became identified as a founder or backer of many of the now thriving businesses of Clarkesville and Habersham county. His chief interest lay in the Northern Contracting company, and when this company became a part of the newly-formed Georgia Railway and Power company he continued his association with the new company.

This connection was actively continued after his removal to Atlanta. One of the pieces of work in which he was active was the putting through of the right-of-way for the road from Tallulah Falls to Atlanta. He also headed various other rights-of-way jobs.

Throughout his life he was interested in education and enducational institutions and it was largely through his efforts that the agricultural and mechanical school was located near Clarkesville.

Few Social Interests.

Retiring by nature, he was never actively identified with social groups in the cites where he made his home. His only interests in Atlanta, outside of his home and business, were the Scottish association, of which he was a founder, the Burns club and the West End Presbyterian church.

Surviving Mr. Martin are two sons, John Martin, Jr., and A. C. Martin, both of Atlanta, and a sister, Miss Annie R. Martin, of Carnoustie, Scotland. Mrs. Martin died in 1922.

The body will lie in state at the chapel of the Barclay & Brandon company until Monday noon, at which time it will be removed to Gainesville for funeral services and burial there Monday afternoon.

175 NEW OFFICES OPEN DURING 1928

require authentic information concerning the development of the city in their business and when making trips to other cities. They are supplied with the facts by the industrial bureau.

Much Due to Advertising.

The largest majority of industrial prospects come from the advertising campaign; the chamber of commerce proper in their daily routine also receives many inquiries, which have the possibilities of a prospect. During 1928, 501 inquiries were referred to this bureau by the chamber of commerce, of which 42 developed into good prospects which are being vigorously followed up. Many of Atlanta's business men have valuable contacts over the country and occasionally uncover leads that are valuable to the bureau as prospects. During the year 70 such leads were communicated to the bureau, of which 18 have been listed as prospects. These business men constitute one of the most valuable sources of prospects and the industrial bureau is glad to cooperate with any individual along this line. The direct mail activity constantly carried on by the bureau has also produced many valuable prospects.

Supplementing the national advertising campaign of the Forward Atlanta commission this bureau has prepared a number of stories and special articles dealing with Atlanta's advantages for use in some of the leading periodicals; photographs and cuts are also supplied for use in conjunction with these stories. This constitutes valuable publicity for this city and section. Sales Management, Travel, Commerce and Finance, The Industrial Realtors Survey, Boston Post, Forbes Magazine, Arthur Brisbane, New York Title & Mortgage company's bulletin, Financial Advertising association, Manufacturers Record, London Morning Post and others carried these stories.

The secretary of the industrial bureau was appointed special agent for the United States census bureau of the department of commerce, at a compensation of $1 a year, to supervise the taking of the manufacturers' census for the government in Atlanta and Fulton county. This work was started in January and completed in June. The Atlanta Chamber of Commerce furnished desk space and telephone service to the government employees engaged in the detailed work of collecting and compiling the records. The director of the census commended the secretary of the bureau here for the service it rendered in this work.

During 1928 many nationally-known persons visited Atlanta either as delegates to conventions or for business or pleasure purposes. The executives of the Hearst newspapers, Mayor Walker and party, B. C. Forbes, Southeastern Foreign Trade conference, "The German Spinners Tour," Railway Accounting Officers association, Shriners en route to Miami convention, National Manufacturers Sales conference and the International Medical association met in Atlanta and many of the interested delegates were supplied with literature by the industrial bureau.

Many of the railroads operating in and out of Atlanta maintain offices in New York and Chicago and other large industrial centers; also the Georgia Power company operates a New York office. Literature and advertising matter is supplied these various agencies for limited distribution and valuable contacts have been made for the bureau in this manner.

The forward Atlanta commission publishes a monthly bulletin entitled "Forward Atlanta," which is mailed monthly to the subscribers by the Industrial bureau. This bulletin contains a resume of business conditions and other items of interest to the subscribers, in addition to a record of each of the branch offices, warehouses and factories established in Atlanta by out-of-town concerns. One hundred and seventy-five new concerns were listed in these bulletins during the year; broadsides, reprints and other matter were also distributed to the subscribers at intervals by the bureau, keeping them posted on the activities of the forward Atlanta commission.

The original industrial survey of Atlanta was made for this bureau in 1924 by an eminent engineer and has been constantly in use since that time. Much of the statistical data and current information require constant revision and is kept up to date by the bureau. Detailed records are also kept of the 1,123 branch organizations maintained in Atlanta by out-of-town concerns. This record includes the location of the home office and factories, names of the Atlanta officials, the products handled, the territory covered from Atlanta, all of the shipping points, the date of establishment in Atlanta, the number of employees, etc. Also a similar record is maintained on the 595 factories in Atlanta's metropolitan area, giving the names of the officials, date of establishment, products manufactured, territory served and number and analysis of employees. These records constitute a valuable source of information for the bureau in preparing surveys and advertising matter.

Many Casually Interested.

A large percentage of the inquiries received by the Industrial bureau are from people only casually interested in Atlanta and such inquiries are not actively followed up. However, if there is any evidence of a prospect in an inquiry it is followed up regularly until it either develops into a prospect or shows that it is not. Those inquiries that develop into active prospects are kept in separate files and treated individually at regular intervals—they are not promiscuously circularized. The bureau constantly supplies them with printed matter and advises them of happenings and other items of interest to their particular business. In this manner the most cordial relations are established between the officials of the various companies and the Industrial bureau. To date over 400 prospects are on file, all of whom are actively planning investments in Atlanta in the way of sales offices, warehouses and factories in the very near future. Among this list are numbered many of the largest business organizations and industrial enterprises in the United States.

To eliminate duplication of effort, the industrial bureau cooperates to the fullest extent with the industrial agents of the Atlanta railroads, the Atlanta Association of Building Owners and Managers, the community of employment service, the Atlanta real estate board, the industrial agents of the Georgia Power company, and the Georgia association. These organizations all have specialized activities. When the bureau receives inquiries for office space, they are referred to the Association of Building Owners and Managers; inquiries for employment are referred to the community employment service; inquiries of an agricultural nature are handled by the Georgia association, etc. Through branch offices maintained over the country by the railroads and the Georgia Power company, the bureau is sometimes enabled to reach immediately by personal contact any interested parties, which eliminates a great deal of the time and expense of traveling. Where matters must necessarily be handled in the utmost of confidence the secretary or another member of the industrial bureau makes the trip.

It is interesting to note that during the year a great many inquiries were received from foreign countries where Atlanta's advertisements have reached. The following countries were heard from: Philippines, Canada, Germany, Hawaii, Cuba, Trinidad, Porto Rico, England, Spain, Switzerland, Tasmania, Ireland, France and Japan.

Eight thousand six hundred and fifty-four letters were dictated and sent out by the industrial bureau during the year 1928 to leads developed through the national advertising campaign, follow up of prospects and to inquiries from various sources. In addition to this a total of 36,650 pieces of follow-up literature were distributed to prospects and interested parties in all parts of the country and many abroad. The recipients of this advertising matter include a list of several thousand manufacturers in the east and middle west who are doing business on a national scale and whose business in the southeast has grown to such an extent that the establishment of a branch in Atlanta is a logical development. The response from this activity has been gratifying.

Many Praise City.

The report cited numerous expressions from people all over the United States received in the mail and in personal interviews indicating that the advertising campaign of the Forward Atlanta commission and the follow-up work of the industrial bureau are considered outstanding examples of community advertising and development. Many community advertising campaigns inaugurated by other cities since the start of Atlanta's campaign have been patterned after ours and there is hardly any city that does not consult the bureau before launching a campaign. There is ample evidence that the whole country is now Atlanta-minded. The nation's leaders are getting a new vision of the southeast with its great future.

Perhaps the most important single enterprise announced this year was the coming of the central accounting offices of the Southern railroad to Atlanta. This move brought 1,200 people here with their families. Almost at the same time this move was announced the assembly plant of the Chevrolet Motor company started production, employing about 1,200 men with a normal production of 350 cars per day.

Among smaller industries opening here this year are the Southern Dairies, Mavis Bottling Works, the Tri-State Culvert Manufacturing company, The Atlanta Textile Supply company, the Textile Electric Sign company, the Lee Baking company, Southern Advertising and Publishing company, the Blud-Life company, the Made-Well Lingerie company, the Wright Glass company, Sinclair and Valentine, Pierson-Larkin Refrigerator company, and the Electrical Research, Inc.

As this is being written the $2,000,000 plant of the National Biscuit company is almost ready to go into production. The Printz Dress company, manufacturers of silk dresses, the Hi-Quality Shoe Manufacturing company, the Imperial Bedding company, the Paris Apron Manufacturing company, and the Atlanta Rubber company are just starting in. Several other industrial enterprises will get underway within the course of a few weeks.

The Atlanta plant of the Cluett-Peabody & Co. has been in operation over a year and the officials are delighted with the success they have met with here. The Georgia-Louisiana corporation, manufacturers of filter alum and textile chemicals, are utilizing Georgia bauxite and other minerals in their plant. The large plant of the Oak Manufacturing company, which began operations early in the year, is rapidly building up its production on all kinds of knit goods.

HOPE HELD FOR PEACE IN SALVATION ARMY

Justice Eve Urges That All Litigation Be Dropped.

London, January 26.—(AP)—Hope was held in some quarters today that there would be an amicable settlement of differences which arose in the Salvation Army when the high council ousted General Bramwell Booth from command.

Justice Eve, when a hearing was held on the temporary injunction obtained by the general to prevent the election of his successor, expressed the hope that matters might be adjusted without pursuing the litigation. He added, "One cannot but appreciate that its continuance is calculated to affect prejudically" the Salvation Army.

This morning's newspapers said that these remarks were taken to heart by both parties to the dispute and led to a peace conference.

The Daily Herald said that General Booth was much better and might make a dramatic appearance when the hearing is resumed on Tuesday. The paper added that it was not improbable that a settlement would be announced.

The Daily Mail said that belief in a possible settlement was based upon the universal esteem and affection with which every member of the Army regarded General Booth and upon the offer of concession which he made in a letter to the high council while it was in session at Sunbury.

FIRST STEP TAKEN FOR EXAMINATION OF MANY STREAMS

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—A house bill to authorize the secretary of war to make preliminary examinations of streams in 16 states with a view to control of floods, was passed today by the senate and sent to conference.

The streams to be surveyed include west branch of Susquehanna river, Pennsylvania; Anglaize, Blanchard, and Ottawa rivers and their tributaries, Ohio, and Saint Mary's river, Ohio; Kootenai river, Idaho; Mouse river, North Dakota; Black river, Arkansas; Mud river, (Kentucky; Lumber, Little Pee Dee and Lynchs river, South Carolina; Mayfield creek, Kentucky; Missouri river, near Elk Point, South Dakota; Salmon river, Alaska; Choctawchee river, and its tributaries, Florida, and Alabama; Brazos and Colorado rivers, and their tributaries, Texas; Rough river, Kentucky; Canadian river and its tributaries, New Mexico; Roanoke, James and Staunton rivers, Maryland, and Yellowstone river, Montana.

CHICAGO OPERA STARS TO COME TO BIRMINGHAM

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Nine performances in 19 cities are scheduled for the Chicago Civic Opera company, which will leave early Sunday morning on a national tour of 8,977 miles to be concluded March 26.

The company, which closes its season here tonight, will go first to Boston for 16 performances, starting Monday night. Thereafter the itinerary will include, in order, Buffalo, Detroit, Columbus, Ohio, Nashville, Tenn.; Birmingham, Jackson, Miss.; Dallas, San Antonio, El Paso, Phoenix, Los Angeles, Fresno, Cal.; Sacramento, Oakland, Amarillo, Tulsa, Lincoln, Neb., and Minneapolis.

BIG IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN CONDITION OF MARSHAL FOCH

Paris, January 26.—(AP)—Marshal Foch showed marked improvement during the night, so much so that his doctors probably will not visit him before Monday unless called for.

The marshal, through semi-official sources, has issued a message to the French people declaring that he was profoundly moved by the expressions of their sympathy and thanking them from the bottom of his heart.

1,000 USES OF COTTON LISTED WITH BUREAU

Director of Survey Surprised at Wide Utilization of Product.

Washington, January 26.—(Special.)—In the midst of its survey of new and extended uses of cotton and cotton goods the department of commerce, through Dr. Julius Klein, director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce, reports that approximately one thousand uses for such fabrics already have been listed although the compilation is but preliminary and the governmental study is proceeding.

Dr. Klein says in his preliminary summary that until the inquiry was under way it was not generally supposed there were so many uses for cotton fabrics. And in his forecast of additional uses there is suggested that even the "talkie," or motion picture with sound is a potential outlet for cotton fabrics.

Under an $120,000 appropriation secured by Senator Harris, of Georgia, member of the senate appropriations committee, both the department of commerce and the department of agriculture are now investigating further uses to which cotton may be put. The object of the Harris proposal was to assist in the disposal of the cotton surplus and the maintenance of higher prices. Senator Harris has conferred several times with Secretary Hoover and has had his cooperation. Director Klein reported to Senator Harris on the progress of his bureau's investigation and revealed a remarkable story of cotton and its uses; a story heretofore not fully known either to the southern cotton producer or the manufacturer.

"A study of this sort has never been made before and the work had to be begun literally from the ground up," Director Klein advised Senator Harris. "Information was lacking not merely with regard to possibilities for new uses for cotton and cotton products but even with regard to the extent of the present uses."

Director Klein then outlines the contact of the department of commerce investigators with manufacturers and distributors of cotton and manufacturers generally. The survey, incomplete as it is, already has covered a range from manufacture of automobiles, athletic and sporting goods to tents over citrus trees and the motion picture studio. The first of several bulletins on "Cotton Fabrics and Their Uses," has been compiled.

A few extracts from the voluminous preliminary report of the director of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce indicate the wide field of exploration before the government investigators foretell many additional uses to which cotton may be put. For instance, Director Klein informs Senator Harris, in part:

"In the rubber footwear manufacture, as well as in the leather footwear manufacture, millions of yards of cloth of various kinds are used for a number of different purposes. There is a possibility, however, of increasing the quantity of cotton used by increasing the cotton content of the other fabrics used. It is believed that the blending of cotton with other fibers would result in a cheaper and yet more suitable cloth than some of the expensive fabrics now used.

"A larger quantity of cloth is used in the awning industry and there seems to be a possibility of increasing it materially. Plans have been studied and recommendations submitted to national organizations concerned to include awning specifications with the architect plans for buildings which, it is believed, would bring about sizes and styles of awnings in greater harmony with other features of the building than is now the case."

Director Klein adds that to determine the present trend in the demand for awnings questionnaires, prepared in cooperation with the Cotton Textile institute and the Awning Manufacturers' association, have been nationally distributed and the data obtained soon will be published and may tend to increase the use of awnings and improve the style, construction and finish.

Senator Harris upon receipt of the Klein summary expressed appreciation and satisfaction respecting the progress of the cotton-use inquiry, which is to be supplemented soon by the report of the department of agriculture regarding its phase of the movement to bring about new uses for "King Cotton" and its fabrics.

REVOLUTION SONS WILL CONVENE AT SAVANNAH FEB. 5

Savannah, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Arrangements for the annual dinner and state?wide meeting of the Society of the Sons of the Revolution in the state of Georgia, to be held here February 5, were launched today at a meeting of the board of managers.

A committee composed of Harris M. King, chairman; Brigadier General Robert Travis, and Thomas S. Russell, was appointed to take charge of plans by T. P. Ravenel, president.

Four new members were admitted at the meeting today, which was held in the office of William Harden at the county courthouse. They were Colonel Charles C. Fishburne, Brunswick, Ga.; Colonel G. B. Pritchard, Cheyenne, Wyo.; M. Martin, Hinesville, Ga., and D. C. Collier, Athens, Ga.

How to Darken Gray Hair

By BERYL WEST

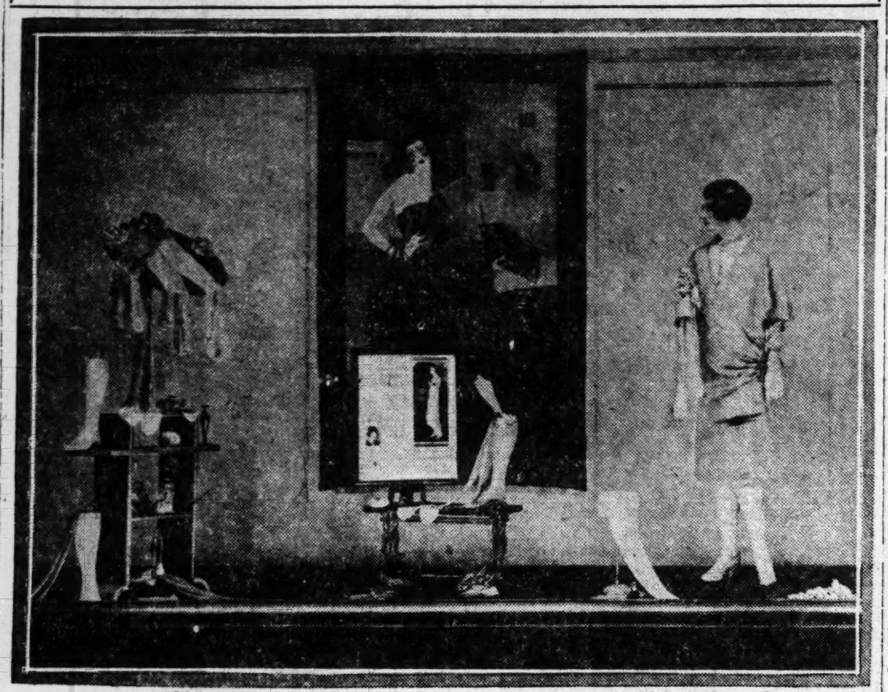

I repeat what I have often said—there's no excuse today for a woman submitting of gray hair and looking older than she feels. Gray, faded or streaked hair may be so perfectly restored to color that it need be only your own boudoir secret. Nothing more or less than a mixture of sage tea and sulphur is the magic.

One may either prepare the mixture at home, or as most people prefer to do, buy it already prepared and ready to use. Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur is the name of the ready-to-use preparation and since all druggists sell it at 75c a bottle, there is really no need of going to the trouble of making it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush with it, and draw it through the hair, one strand at the time. One application banishes the gray and one or two more completely restores your gray, faded or streaked hair to its original color. There is no artificial, dyed look. The whole effect is one of perfect naturalness. My readers would be surprised if they knew of the thousands of men and women who use this preparation.—(adv.)

Attractive Hoisery Display Draws Attention

This attractive window display of Holeproof hosiery was staged by M. Rich & Bros. Co., attracting wide attention.

An attractive window display of the famous Holeproof hosiery created widespread attention Saturday at the M. Rich & Bros. company, which department store handles the beautiful and stylish Holeproof products.

In addition to a showing of the newest shades in Holeproof hosiery, the window had as its central feature a reproduction of a big gravure advertisement of Holeproof appearing in The Constitution. The Holeproof line of fine women's hosiery features style, with close expert attention devoted to the development of new and beautiful colors to match the smartest of feminine costumes. The celebrated stylist, Lucile of Paris, creates the new shades for the manufacturers of Holeproof.

The result has been a wide color range woven in shimmering silk, and the Holeproof line has won widespread approval among Atlanta women, as was evidenced by the big display staged by the Rich company.

INTERSTATE LINES NAME J. B. PRICE TRAFFIC MANAGER

J. B. Price was appointed division traffic manager of the Interstate Air Lines, Inc., for the Atlanta district, it was officially announced Saturday. Mr. Price was southeastern branch manager of the Chicago Association of Commerce, which recently established headquarters here, and will maintain headquarters of the large aviation company in Atlanta.

J. B. PRICE.

The Interstate Air Lines is one of the five concerns constituting the United Aviation corporation, a $20,000,000 organization. It operates the air mail and passenger route between Atlanta, Evansville and Chicago, as well as spur lines to St. Louis and Louisville.

Mr. Price's duties with the Interstate corporation will be concerned with promoting business in this territory for the passenger, mail and express services. He will serve as the principal contact between aviation concern, which has its headquarters in Chicago, and local interests.

Mr. Price came to Atlanta from Chicago when the association of commerce of that city opened branch headquarters here last year. Subsequently, when the Interstate Air Lines, Inc., established its route from Chicago to Atlanta, Mr. Price aided in forming contacts for the Chicago concern and acted in a tentative capacity of traffic manager for this district.

EGMONT TO LEAVE RANCH IN CANADA TO CLAIM HIS TITLE

Calgary, Alta., January 26.—(AP)—The Earl of Egmont announced today that he planned to leave Preddis for England within a fortnight. He is waiting a letter from the family heirs.

"I have decided to go to the old country with my son," he said, "and will take up residence at Avon Castle, about eight miles from London. We shall make that our home in the future."

The earl said it did not mean that he was giving up his ranch here in Alberta.

The new earl has been ranching near here for thirty years. He received a vast estate in Great Britain recently when he inherited the title. The good fortune was such a surprise to him that at first he announced he would remain on his ranch.

TEACHER WARNED TO BE CAREFUL "WHO YOU FLUNK"

New Orleans, January 26.—(AP)—Roy Heindel, teacher in the Warren Easton high school, was sleeping peacefully in his home last night when a large chunk of concrete crashed through the window into his room.

He arose and investigated. To the concrete was attached a note which said: "Beware who you flunk." It was signed "The Fox" and a postscript added: "Don't take this as a joke." Underneath was the outline of a fox's paw.

The teacher said he was not worried about the threat.

It was a Warren Easton high school boy who recently gave part of the school a vacation by circulating a false notice that Nicholas Rauer, superintendent of schools, was dead. Several of the teachers dismissed classes. The identity of the boy was learned and he was suspended.

Southern Book Exposition To Be Held Here in March

A southern book exposition designed to promote acquaintance with and appreciation of the literary efforts of writers of this section will be staged during the week of March 16 to 23 in the book department on the sixth floor of M. Rich & Bros. Co.

This interesting cultural movement came to light last week with a luncheon in Rich's tea room at which the department store was host to a big group of Atlanta and Georgia literary notables, including writers, representatives of schools, colleges, libraries, publishing houses, civic and improvement organizations and other kindred institutions.

Miss Agnes Kendrick Gray, prominent Atlanta author, will be in charge of the book exposition as director, and the display will feature books by southern writers, books on southern subjects, books published in the south, and rare volumes, first editions, manuscripts and other material relating to the south and southerners.

It was announced at the luncheon that notable southern writers will be invited to visit Atlanta during the exposition and aid in the city and section-wide movement to secure universal love of southern literature, both past and contemporary.

In addition, many plans are under way to provide unique and interesting articles intimately associated with great southern writers, including portraits of Frank L. Stanton, Joel Chandler Harris, Sidney Lanier and others; original manuscripts from famous pens, and rare and treasured first editions from many sources throughout this section.

Walter Rich, president of the Rich company, presided at the luncheon and expressed pleasure on behalf of his organization at being enabled to sponsor a cultural movement of the importance of the book exposition. Many Atlantans and Georgians noted for their literary works expressed approval of the event and extended assurance of their cooperation in its successful presentation to the general public.

Groom Overcomes Deep Snow, Takes Plane to Wedding

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Miss Mildred B. Wetten was not without a bridegroom today, thanks to the persistence of her intended husband in overcoming climatic obstacles.

When Thomas C. Ingersoll, of Manitowoc, Wis., found his city snow bound and isolated this morning with trains neither arriving nor departing, he was determined that this should not interfere with plans for his wedding in Miss Wetten's lake shore home here at 4:30 p. m., so at 10 a. m. a crew had cleared the drifts from the Manitomoc airport and Ingersoll wept aloft in a well ventilated open monoplane while the mercury, at sea level, was at or about zero.

At Milwaukee the plane was forced down, but rose again. At Racine it was forced down, and this time Ingersoll boarded a Chicago-bound train and arrived at the nuptial scene just a half hour before the time to exchange vows.

DR. EDWIN MIMS COMES TO EMORY FOR CONFERENCE

Information has just been received by Dr. C. B. Gosnell, director of the Southeastern Citizenship conference at Emory university February 12-16, that Dr. Edwin Mims, a professor at Vanderbilt university, will attend the conference. He will be an important figure on the lecture staff of the conference.

Dr. Mims will deliver two addresses to the conference, both regarding the south. At 12 o'clock February 14 he will speak on the subject, "Functions of Criticism in the South." His subject for the evening lecture at 8:30 will be "Adventurous Democracy."

AL SMITH FINDS 'REPUBLICAN' TIGER IN ZOO IN FLORIDA

Sarasota, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Former Governor Alfred E. Smith, of New York, is certain the Ringling zoo here harbors a "republican" tiger. He was convinced of this yesterday, when soon after his arrival in Sarasota, he paid a visit to the winter quarters of the Ringling Brothers' circus, with William F. Kenney, of New York, and John J. Raskob, chairman of the democratic national committee.

As Mr. Smith stopped before the cage of a large Bengal tiger, the animal, apparently alarmed by some movement in the crowd, leaped through a door in his cage into an outer pen.

"He must have seen a republican," Mr. Smith said.

FATHER OF JAPANESE EMPRESS VERY ILL

Tokyo, January 26.—(AP)—Prince Kuni, father of Empress Nagako, was critically ill today. It was announced that the empress would go to Atami tomorrow to be at her father's bedside.

Celebration of the emperor's fifth wedding anniversary, which was to have taken place at the palace today, was cancelled because of the prince's illness.

Prince Kuni, second of his line, was born on July 23, 1873. During the Russo-Japanese war he served as a major, being attached to the staff of General Kuroki. He studied in Germany from 1907 to 1910 and was made a full general in 1923 and a supreme war councillor.

John D.'s Golf, Edison's Tests Vying at Beach

Ormond Beach, Fla., January 26.—(United News.)—John D. Rockefeller is improving his golf game this winter.

Any sunny day Rockefeller may be found on the Ormond Beach course and his 12 seasons of golf in this section have brought about a gradual improvement in his game. His drives are long and his putting is good. His only worry, apparently, is on the approach shots.

Rockefeller usually goes around with General Adelbert Ames, who is a few years his senior, and this winter John D. seems in better spirits than ever. He has given away numerous dimes.

But Rockefeller is not the only prominent man who is enjoying the Florida winter season. Over at Fort Myers Thomas Edison is vacationing in the only manner he knows—by working hard. He is up at 6 a. m. and spends most of the day, with various inventions and particularly on his investigation of a means of growing rubber on American soil.

Music is represented by Irving Berlin and his wife, the former Ellen Mackay, who are at Miami Beach with their daughter. Bathing is their chief diversion.

W. L. Mellon, nephew of the secretary of the treasury, shuns the gay life of Miami and every season his $1,000,000 yacht, Vagabondia, may be seen cruising through the waters off Miami.

Firestone in the north generally is associated with rubber, but in Florida it is associated with polo. Harvey Firestone has a palatial place on Miami Beach and his four sons, Russell, Leonard, Raymond and Harvey, Jr., may be seen every week playing polo with the famous Chagrin team. The elder Firestone also likes golf but has other hobbies, such as golf and surf bathing.

John Hertz, founder of Yellow Cab and race enthusiast, also is at Miami with his wife and they are now awaiting arrival of an amphibian plane. They prefer this to ordinary travel. Hertz usually can be seen at the important polo matches and is a daily race attendant.

NICARAGUA SURVEY BILL IS BLOCKED BY SENATOR DILL

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Another attempt by Senator Edge, republican, New Jersey, to bring up his bill for a survey to determine the feasibility of a canal across Nicaragua failed in the senate today when Senator Dill, democrat, Washington, objected to its consideration "so long as the marines are kept in Nicaragua."

Senator Edge, however, has received preferred legislative status for his bill so it may still come to a vote in this session.

HOUSE VOTES BILL FOR DEATH OF BOY KILLED BY SHELL

Washington, January 26.—(By Staff Correspondent.)—The house has passed the bill of Senator Harris, of Georgia for the relief of John B. Moss, of Marietta, because of the death of a son, Neal Moss.

This bill appropriates $2,500 as compensation. Moss was killed on April 1, 1926, by the explosion of a shell while plowing at Camp Black Jack, which was used for artillery practice during training for the war.

ELECTRIC LIGHT BILLS ARE READ IN SENATE

Senator Norris Claims Exorbitant Prices Are Charged in United States.

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—Electric light bills of housewives living in cities on either side of the Canadian-American border were read in the senate today by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, to demonstrate, he said, that exorbitant prices were charged in the United States for electrical energy.

A comparison made by the Nebraska senator was of bills for electricity in Niagara Falls, N. Y., and in the Canadian city of the same name just across the river.

The bill of a housewife on the American side, he said, was $6.40 for 256 kilowatts of power supplied by a private company and used in a seven-room house which employed a vacuum sweeper, an iron, a washing machine and a range. He said there was no discount for prompt payment but an addition of 10 per cent if the bill was not paid within 10 days.

Just across the river, a citizen would have paid $3.28 for the same amount of power supplied by the government-owned power company, using power "generated from the same river, the same service, the same Niagara Falls," he said. In addition, he said, a discount of 10 per cent was allowed for payment within 10 days.

Senator Norris also read the charges of bills for electricity in International Falls, Minn., supplied by a private company, and those for power supplied by a government-operated company just across the boundary river in St. Frances, Ontario. The Royal theater in St. Frances, he declared, paid $1.80 for a month's supply of power for lighting purposes, whereas the same amount of power would have cost $7.20 in International Falls.

CHINESE STUDENT JAILED FOR DEBT IS GIVEN LIBERTY

Victoria, B. C., January 26.—(AP)—After spending 20 months in jail for failing to pay a debt judgment obtained by a fellow countryman, Paul Wise, Chinese student, was free today on orders of the court of appeals.

The plaintiff, Ping Lee, of Toronto, who had obtained a judgment of $3,788 against Wise, had been required to pay weekly at the rate of $1 a day for Wise's maintenance.

Justice McPhillips questioned the legality of the arrest, contending that as Wise had been admitted to the country as a student he should have been permitted to leave at the conclusion of his studies. Wise was about to board a liner at Victoria when arrested.

Wagner Company Presents 'Night Hostess' This Week

:: DISTINGUISHED NEW ARTIST AT ERLANGER ::

Featured by the addition of a distinguished new artist, Gerald Bowman, and seven Atlanta people who will be seen in minor roles for the current production, the popular Charles L. Wagner Producing company, playing at the Erlanger theater, this week will present "The Night Hostess," Broadway success which is playing in Atlanta for the first time outside of New York, according to the announcement Saturday of Lewis Haase, managing director of Erlanger theaters in the southeast.

Thrills, unleashed by one of the finest companies ever to play in Atlanta, are scheduled to begin chasing themselves up and down the spines and about various other parts of local theater-goers' anatomies at 8:15 o'clock Monday night when the Erlanger curtain will make its initial ascent upon one of the most widely-hailed plays of the year.

Largest Wagner Cast.

Quite the largest cast the Wagner company has presented since its opening vehicle, and certainly one of the most exciting plays ever presented to an American audience will be revealed and unless something superhuman is found in the person of local theatergoers, it is probable that by the time the curtain drops for the last time Monday night, there will be many a soul in the audience limp and suffused with intense and enjoyable excitement.

Mr. Bowman, who has acquired an enviable reputation in theatrical circles for a person so young, will have the role of "Rags" Conway this week. Mr. Haase has added seven local people to the cast, Robert More, Oswald Gotjen, Lillian LeConte, Margery Dunaway, Paul Hayne, Volney Aiken and Pratt Brown, who will mostly have "atmospheric" roles as guests of the New York night club, in which the play takes place.

"The Night Hostess' tells a vivid, gripping and graphic story of the night life of New York from the viewpoint of those night club hostesses and operators who provide the fuel for the revelers to turn night into day.

Leneta Lane, leading lady, will be seen as the wife of a detective, who has been stolen away by Russell Hardie, partner of Frank Sylvester, proprietor of the Little Casino night club. Hardie uses Miss Lane as bait to lure the big winners from the gambling tables outside, where Hardie's gunmen rob them.

But, even as the attractions of one woman have made him rich, so do the physical attributes of another and younger star, Barbara Hastings, destroy him. Miss Hastings is seen as a hostess at the club who fills the crooked proprietor with a desire to possess her. The obstacle to the realization of this desire is Miss Lane and Hardie realizes he must rid himself of her. Following a violent quarrel, Hardie chokes his paramour to death and places her body in a large trunk used in transporting liquor.

"With a thrilling climax, full of all the thrills, heart throbs and wild gayety of the white way, 'Night Hostess' is indeed the safest and most inexpensive way to get a real insight on New York's mad, gambling, night life," Mr. Haase said.

The author of "The Night Hostess" is Philip Dunning, co-author of that brilliant success, "Broadway."

Completing the cast of "The Night Hostess" will be other brilliant members of the Wagner company, including Kenneth Thomson, Marguerite Wolfe, Robert Memminger, David Munroe, Harold Selman, Leonard Batson, Carleton C. Young, Frank Sylvester, David Goldwasser, Fred Brigman, G. W. Barrow, Walter Plinge, George Spelvin, Jr., and Phoebe Tressider.

Jerry Bowman, who joins the Wagner Players this week at the Erlanger in "The Night Hostess."

COOLIDGE MAY MAKE COMMENCEMENT TALK

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—President Coolidge is considering attending the mid-year commencement exercises at George Washington university on February 22 and may make an address. The president understands that the university intends to confer honorary degrees upon him and Mrs. Coolidge at the exercises.

HALE AGAIN CONVICTED IN KILLING OF INDIAN

"King of Osage Hills" Alleged To Have Terrorized Tribesmen.

Pawhuska, Okla., January 26.—(AP)—W. K. Hale, known as the "King of the Osage Hills," and alleged by the government to have been responsible for a reign of terror among Osage Indians several years ago, again was convicted of murder and sentenced to life imprisonment in federal court here late today.

Hale was tried for complicity in the killing of Henry Roan, an Osage tribesman, on whose life he carried a $25,000 insurance policy. He was convicted on the same charge previously but won a re-trial on an appeal.

Nearly a score of mysterious and violent deaths were visited upon the wealthy Osage Indians over a period of several years until government agents finally brought about the arrest of Hale.

The reign of terror, as it became known, threw members of the tribe into a panic. Some of the Indians strung lights about their homes and posted guards at night to protect themselves from harm.

It was charged by the government that Hale was the directing head of a ring that plotted the deaths of Indians in order to obtain their wealth.

John Ramsey, cowboy farmer, is serving a life sentence for the slaying of Roan. In one confession Ramsey said Hale employed him to kill the Indian. Roan was shot to death at a lonely spot in the Osage hills.

PACT WITH JAPAN TO END RUM FLOW VOTED BY SENATE

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—A treaty between the United States and Japan to aid in the prevention of smuggling alcoholic beverages into the United States was ratified today by the senate.

The senate also ratified a treaty between the United States and Czecho-Slovakia providing for reciprocal relations regarding the naturalization of the nationals of those two countries.

A third treaty providing for a convention between the United States and the republic of Panama for the amicable adjustment of any claims by citizens of each country against the other, also was ratified.

The liquor anti-smuggling treaty with Japan gives the United States the right to board Japanese ships outside territorial waters for the purpose of making inquiries which might lead to the detection of liquor intended to be smuggled into this country. If any liquor should be found the United States authorities would have the right to bring the ship into American port where seizure would be made under regular process of law.

Desperate Rally Gives Tech 38-37 Victory Over Georgia

Bryan Grant Retains First Place in Southern Tennis Ranking

Daniel Murray Rated Second By Committee

Grant and Courts Second to Murray and Sutter in Men's Doubles; Cram Honored.

Memphis, Tenn., January 26.—(AP) Bryan Grant, of Atlanta, was given first place in the men's singles of the Southern Lawn Tennis association for the record consecutive year, according to the 1928 rankings announced tonight by Walter McDonald, of Memphis, president of the association.

Second ranking went to Daniel Murray, of New Orleans, 1927 champion and runner-up last year. Donald Cram, of Nashville, state and southern intercollegiate champion, rated for the first time in the senior group. He was third.

Clifford Sutter, of New Orleans, was ranked first in the junior singles, with Wilmer Hines, of Columbia, S. C., second. This pair also were given first ranking in the junior doubles.

Miss Pickens First.

First ranking in the women's singles was given to Miss Julia Pickens, of Clemson, S. C., while Miss Beatrice Bryant, of Enterprise, Miss., rated second. Third place went to Mary Will Wakeford, of Rome, Ga.

In the men's doubles division, first ranking went to Murray and Sutter, both of New Orleans. Second position was given Grant and Malon Courts, both of Atlanta.

Miss Bryant and Miss Elizabeth Garth, of Columbus, Miss., ranked first in the women's doubles, with Miss Pickens and Miss Florence Hays, of Nashville, second.

Kendall Cram, of Nashville, national boys' indoor champion, was given first ranking in the southern boys' singles list, with Thomas Anderson, of Nashville, second. This combination also headed the boys' doubles division.

Lewis Hardy, of Louisville, was placed first in the veterans' singles list. Wahard Dabney, of Jackson, Miss., was given second place.

The committee making the selections included: McDonald, chairman; James A. Means, Jr., Louisville, Ky.; Frank C. Owens, of Atlanta; Robert L. Alexander, Jr., of Nashville, and J. M. Newton, of New Orleans.

The singles rankings follow:

MEN'S SINGLES.

1—Bryan Grant, Jr., Atlanta.
2—D. K. Murray, Jr., New Orleans.
3—Donald Cram, Nashville.
4—Gustave Feuer, Miami.
5—Jack Mooney, Atlanta.
6—Malon Courts, Atlanta.
7—Arthur Watters, New Orleans.
8—Edward Pfeiffer, Louisville.
9—Maurice Bayon, New Orleans.
10—William Clines, Louisville.

8—Miss Nellie King, Memphis.
9—Miss Ruth Davis, Memphis.
10—Miss Florence Hays, Nashville.

Pointer Crowned Champion of U. S.

Grand Junction, Tenn., January 26.—(AP)—Mary Blue, white and liver pointer, owned by W. C. Teagle, of New York, was crowned national bird dog champion at the close of the championship field trials here today. Junedale Allie, a pointer, owned by Dr. F. H. Lahey, of Boston, Mass., was the runner-up.

The winner, handled by C. H. Harris, of Hayneville, Ala., and the runner-up, handled by Henry Gilchrist, of Thompson, Ala., were pitted together in the final heat today, Mary Blue winning the title after a close race.

In winning the stake, Mary Blue not only is crowned champion, but her owner receives a leg on the Colonel Merriman trophy, donated by Louis Lee Haggin, Lexington, Ky., sportsman, and $1,500 prize money.

Mary Blue beat out Junedale Allie when she showed better judgment and found more birds. The winner found one more bevy than the runner-up, and also had the edge in speed and range.

Twenty-one dogs were entered in the stake which began six days ago, four dogs being cast daily. One dog, Eagle Ferris, owned by Dr. H. E. Longsdorf, of Mount Holly, N. J., was withdrawn because of injuries.

PaavoNurmiRuns Away From Field

Boston, January 26.—(United News.)—Paavo Nurmi, fleet-footed Finn, ran away from a flashy field to win an easy victory in the Leo Larrivee two-mile special race at the William C. Prout memorial games in the Boston garden tonight.

Nurmi's time was 9 minutes, 12 seconds, considerably slower than the world record of 8:58 1-5, which he established in 1925.

Olaf Anderson, of the Finnish-American A. C., of New York, was second, and Harry L. Richardson, of the University of Maine, was third. Nurmi lapped every one in the field except Anderson.

Gus Moore, of the Brooklyn Harriers' A. A., set the pace at the start, but proved no match for the "Flying Finn," finishing a poor fourth.

It was announced that Nurmi would run again in Boston next Saturday at the Boston A. A. games.

Army Meets Defeat At Hands of Pittsburg

Pittsburgh, January 26.—(AP)—The Army, playing its first game away from home after winning nine straight on its West Point court, tonight took a bad beating at the hands of the University of Pittsburgh basketball team, 69 to 16. Hyatt and Baker, Panther stars, each scored 19 points. Krueger, forward, made three of the Army's four field goals.

HAWK-EYE-ING SPORTS

by DICK HAWKINS

Our Daily Moral.

THIS BEING SUNDAY morning it might not be amiss to reach down in the jeans and pull out a nice juicy little moral to rant about. That terrible basketball game between Tech and Georgia Saturday night furnished one; ready made and all garnished with concentrated spirits of college.

The moral is two-fold, being both physical and mental, so to speak. The first or physical point of the moral is: "Do not squeeze a basketball under your opponent's goal." The second or psychological portion of the moral is: "Never believe what the score board says. If the durn thing says you are licked don't believe a figure on it."

THE UNIVERSITY OF GEORGIA underwear boys illustrated the value of this first moral when they passed across the court under the Tech goal with less than a minute to play and little Red Williamson came from nowhere to somewhere and flipped the ball into the basket for the two points that won the game. That ball wasn't intended for Red Williamson but he didn't know it.

Tech's negligee lads proved that one moral is of great value when they looked at the score board at the end of the first half and saw they were beaten but didn't believe a figger of it. "Figgers lie," said they—and proved it. What Tech's basketball team of 1929 lacks in technique it more than makes up in spirit of college.

A Problem.

NOW THAT COACH DON MILLER has decided to ride his horse around Columbus, Ohio, for a few years and leave the world's championship backfield without a mentor, athletic authorities at Georgia Tech are faced with the unenviable task of selecting a successor to the famous "horseman."

In one way this task will be easy and in another way it will be most difficult. Applications for the position of backfield coach at Tech will not be lacking. Applications from good men will not be lacking. But there are a number of things to be considered besides the ability of the applicant.

ONE OF THE MOST IMPORTANT of these factors does not appear important except under close scrutiny. There will be scores of applications from southern, eastern, middle western and even western stars and coaches for the position. Much pressure will be brought to bear by friends of applicants from the south and other sections. The location from which the fifth man on Tech's staff comes is an important factor.

The southern conference has proven conclusively in the past few years that Dixie plays just as good football as any other section. In fact, Dixie has "made 'em like it" for several years on end. But that doesn't mean that this section of the United States can live within itself and disregard the rest of the nation completely in the matter of football ideas.

TECH'S STAFF as it now stands is made up entirely of southern conference players, and it is as capable a staff as any college in the United States can boast. Performance tells the tale and Tech's performance in the past few years has been the envy of the nation. BUT WITHOUT EXCHANGE OF IDEAS THIS EFFECTIVENESS IS SURE TO BE WEAKENED IN TIME.

The east, west or north can't send a man down here who will be any better coach than some man the southern conference can offer, but the east, west or north can send a man in here with eastern, western or northern ideas which may do much to improve the general play of Tech's Tornado. A man coming in here from another section will bring with him the perspective of another section, and while it may be weaker than the local perspective, it will at least furnish opposition under which coaching methods always thrive. Each locality has certain weaknesses and certain fortes in fundamentals and fine points. For example, in the west the linesmen do not know how to use their hands as they do in this section. Don't you suppose a Fincher-trained line coach would help a Pacific coast team? Certainly. And so it is throughout all departments of the intricate game of football.

No Change.

IN VIEW OF THE FACT that comparative figures mean no more in boxing than they do in football—which is nothing at all—the two fights of Friday night, which involved the two opponents of the Miami Beach imbroglio, indicated very little.

But the followers of William Lawrence Stribling certainly have no reason to cry salty tears over the outcome of the Sharkey-Christner fight in the big city. Stribling's victory over Smith doesn't mean much because the ability of the westerner is questionable, to state it in the most charitable manner.

IF SHARKEY had put away the Akron tire and tube man in a couple of rounds he would have been called a setup and Sharkey's stock would not have risen noticeably. But he battled on nearly even terms with the Lithuanian until he tired in the last few rounds and Sharkey's victory looks more impressive than it would have otherwise.

Sharkey looking impressive just now is a great boost for the fight. And it won't do Stribling any harm. The Macon boy is entirely confident that he can beat the talkative sailor from Boston, and in case Sharkey had made a very poor showing against the rubber peddler Stribling might have become overconfident. The dangers of such a feeling are too well known to need enumeration.

BARRING ACCIDENT and bad weather, the success of the Miami Beach battle is assured now. Stribling looks just as good as he did before the Sharkey-Christner fight, but he doesn't look any better. It is fortunate that Strib doesn't look any better or the gate might suffer.

Navy Gains Revenge On Duke's Matmen

Baltimore, Md., January 26.—(AP)—Naval academy wrestlers gained revenge today for the defeat handed them last season by the Duke university wrestling team by winning four decisions and a fall for a 17-to-6 victory over the North Carolina aggregation of matmen.

The Naval academy, with almost an entirely new team from the one which Duke defeated last year, won, although Bray was the only one of the Tars able to get a fall from his opponent. He threw Johnson, of Duke, in the 145-pound class.

Judges Are Announced For Trials of Bird Dogs

Petersburg, Va., January 26.—(AP) Selection of Dr. T. Benton King, of Brownsville, Tenn., and Thomas P. Baldwin, of Washington, D. C., as judges of the national field trials of the Amateur Field Trials Clubs of America was announced here today.

The trials will be run at Camp Lee, near this city the week February 11.

Both judges are men of national recognition in the judging of pointers and setters.

Atlanta Athletic club vs. Furman at A. A. C.

BY CLARENCE NIXON.

Atlanta this week will be host to three of the outstanding basketball teams in the country when the Cleveland Rosenblums, Haskell Indians and the Penn-Dixie fives and the Elberfield sisters come here for a series of games with local teams.

Opposing local cage talent these teams will hold the spotlight during the middle of the week which will be capped by two stellar attractions Saturday night when the two major teams of the city entertain visiting quints.

Starting with two games this afternoon basketball fans of Atlanta will be as busy during the coming week as a hungry pup in a butcher shop.

Local courts will fairly buzz with games during the week in which some of the best and most colorful basketball talent in the country will be competing. The card will also see a variety of ball probably never witnessed here in one week before.

Enght Games Booked.

Eight top-notch games are on the books for the coming week with two games opening activities this afternoon at Fort McPherson. This game will see a new and independent quintet taking court for the first time. This team is carrying the colors of Parks-Chambers company and is known as the Bluebirds. The Birds will play the twenty-second infantry five at the fort following a preliminary game between girls of the Southern railway and College Park.

Tuesday night. Fans will have a chance to see for the first time Atlanta's first professional basketball outfit in action when Tubby Walton's All-Stars take the floor against the world famous Indian quintet, a team made up mostly of former Haskell players. This game will take place at the city auditorium. The time is set for 8:30 o'clock.

J. P. C. and Dalton.

Wednesday night the Jewish Progressive club basketeers will be host to the Dalton Athletic club cagers on the J. P. C. court. The Progressives have a good team this season and fans will see the usual good game out on South Pryor street. Little is known of the Dalton outfit but it is expected that a strong team will face the J.'s.

Then comes the big night of the week. Wednesday evening the Cleveland Rosenblums will engage the Penn-Dixie quint from Chattanooga, Tenn., in what should be the outstanding game of the week. The Rosenblum team is made of mostly of former Celtic players. Every basketball follower knows what that means. Nothing but that some of the greatest players ever to aim at a basket will be seen in action. Last year practically the same bunch played in Atlanta under the name of the New York Celtics and the local fans were amazed at the uncanny way in which the boys went about their business of winning another game from the Chattanooga Railites. This game will be played on the auditorium court. The time is to be announced later.

Girls' Preliminary.

As a preliminary to this contest, the famous Elberfeld sisters, of Chattanooga, will see what they can do with the Western Heights girls, a leading amateur quint of Atlanta. This game should prove a suitable eye-opener for the big game.

That ends activities until Saturday night, when the Yellow Jackets of Georgia Tech take on Vanderbilt's Commodores in the Tech gym, and the Atlanta Athletic club meets Furman at the club.

The Jackets' perfect record in the southern conference will be at stake when they meet the Nashville outfit and they will use every trick in their bag to prevent the Commodores from marring their clean slate. Tech holds one victory over Vandy this year.

It will be just another game for the powerful A. A. C. five when Furman comes here for the club team is much stronger than last year, when it finished with but one defeat and that in the last game of the season with Albany.

That layout of basketball games gives Atlanta probably its most enjoyable week of cage entertainment in many years.

Wide Subdues Field at New York

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—Edwin Wide, speedy Swedish schoolmaster, made his American debut of 1929 here tonight by completely subduing a special field in the 1,500 meters run of the annual Masonic games. His time was 4 minutes, 3 1-5 seconds.

Wide finished a third of a lap ahead of Jerry Hickey, of New York university, who finished second, and nearly a half lap in front of Walter Gegan, N. Y. A. C., third.

REINSTATEMENT OF TILDEN SEEN BY HENNESSEY

Jacksonville, Fla., January 26.—(AP) "Big Bill" Tilden, suspended last summer by the United States Lawn Tennis association for violation of the player-writer rule during the Wimbledon matches, will be reinstated at the next meeting of the association, in the opinion of John Hennessey, of Indianapolis, fourth ranking player in the United States.

Hennessey based his opinion on a conversation he had in Louisville recently with Tilden, who was appearing on the stage as star in a play.

The Hoosier net star, said however, that Tilden would not enter the Davis cup play this year. He plans, Hennessey said, to play in all of the tournaments as well as in the Wimbledon, French and Dutch championships in case he is reinstated.

The next meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association is scheduled in Boston February 9 at which time Hennessey expects Tilden's amateur status to be restored. He expressed the belief that the association would reinstate Tilden because it thought he had been punished enough.

Hennessey has been here several days and will visit other points in the state before returning to the north. He expects, however, he said, to play in only a few of the tournaments in this state this winter.

"I will defend my title in the southeastern championships," he added. This tournament has been set for some time in March at St. Augustine. Previously it had been held here for several years.

Hare Race Is Won ByCarletonNunan

Carleton Nunan, sophomore halfmiler on the track team, won the third hare and hound race at Emory university Friday afternoon. Louis Bates was second and Fullerton was third. Others finished in the following order: Gordon, Kasy, Jacobs, Wells, Brown, Dobson, Rutland and Ivy brought in the bag.

The race started in front of the Y. M. C. A. building and the sack was hid at the corner of Clifton and Oxford road, making the final stretch about one mile.

Louis Bates is now leading the field in individual points with 32, Chippy Westenberger is second with 30 and Jalouk and Fullerton follow with 29 each.

Nunan and Bates will carry the sack in the race next week.

Gus Novotny Wins In Pan-American

Edgewater Park, Miss., January 26.—(AP)—Gus Novotny, of LaGrange, Ill., western amateur runner-up, won the Pan-American amateur golf championship title from Don Armstrong, Aurora, Ill., defending champion, two up, on the Edgewater Gulf Hotel golf course here today.

In taking the title from Armstrong in a spectacular 36-hole final match, Novotny avenged his defeat last year by Armstrong in the same tournament finals and on the same course. Last year Armstrong won the Pan-American, 5 and 4.

Armstrong was defeated today by the fact that he was not hitting his shots and could not hold his putts consistently. The western runner-up found it a fairly easy matter to maintain a lead through the afternoon round.

Mobile Club Buys Two More Players

Mobile, Ala., January 26.—(AP)—Purchase of Pitcher Ernest Koob and Don Rutherford, an infielder, by the Mobile Southern Association club from the Louisville American association was announced today by local officials. Koob is a southpaw and is a veteran of the American association. Rutherford was with Wichita Falls of the Texas league last year.

STARS TRAILING IN TEXAS OPEN GOLF TOURNEY

San Antonio, Texas, January 26.—(AP)—Frank Walsh, of Appleton, Wis., unheralded in the present tournament, slipped in with a 69 tonight to lead the field in the Texas open golf tournament. Henry Cuici, of Bridgeport, Conn., and Horton Smith, of Joplin, Mo., were tied for second with 141s. Joe Kirkwood, of Albany, Ga., and Danny Williams, of Shackamaen, N. J., were one stroke behind with 142.

All scores of 156 or better qualified for tomorrow's play over the 36-hole route. This qualified a field of 66 as there were several tied at the top figure.

Willard Hutchison, of Pasadena, Calif., was next with 143, and Bill Mehlhorn, of Fennimore, N. Y.; Dennis Shute, of Columbus, Ohio, and John Dawson, of Chicago, an amateur, were tied at 144.

Ed Dudley, of Los Angeles, one of the leaders yesterday, dropped back today with a 76 for 145.

In addition to Dawson, Lewis Levinson, of San Antonio, with 147; Ossie Carlton, of Houston, with 150; Clarence Hubby, of Waco, and Logan Van Zandt, of Tulsa, with 155s, and Bob Meneffee, of San Antonio, with 156, all amateurs, were in the field.

Walsh's 69 was not the best score for the day, however, as Joe Kirkwood turned in a 68, missing the course record by one stroke and Hutchinson and Mehlhorn each had 69.

The players were favored by better weather than that which greeted them yesterday, but the air was still cool and it took most of them some time to hit their stride.

Most of the prominent pros survived the elimination, but a few well-known players were eliminated, including Cyril Walker, of Paramus, N. Y.

Tomorrow's play will start at 8 o'clock in the morning and two in the afternoon, each man touring the course twice. The 30 finishing with the best scores will divide the $6,500 prize money, the medalist of the 72 holes taking $1,500.

Generals Defeat V. P. I. by 44 to 25

Lexington, Va., January 26.—(AP)—Washington and Lee ran its string of Southern Conference basketball victories to three and its victories within Virginia to five here tonight when the Generals downed Virginia Polytechnic institute by the score of 44 to 25. The game was the most ragged display of basketball seen in Doremus gymnasium this season.

The Generals nearly lost their shooting eyes for 10 minutes near the middle of the game and were in the end, held to the lowest score they have made this season.

After the Generals had run up a 13-to-3 lead early in the game, Tech, with Ownes leading the assault, battled until the count stood 17 to 10. In the second half, after the first period had ended, 22-to-11, the Gobblers again spurted and came to within seven points of the Generals. The work of the two quintets was so ragged that at one time the score remained unchanged for over three minutes.

Tarheels Secure Revenge on S. C.

Columbia, S. C., January 26.—(AP) The Terrible Tars from North Carolina tonight secured revenge from the South Carolina Gamecocks for an earlier season defeat, handing the home team a 45-to-33 beating.

For the first sixteen minutes of the contest South Carolina led, but after Hackney took a swift pass under the basket to make the score 14-13 in the Tar Heel's favor, the home team was never in the van and only once thereafter were they tied.

Hamm, Young Begin Work for '29 Games

Tech Broad Jump Ace and Bulldog Star Given Taste of Competition on Board Tracks at Tech.

BY HERB CLARK.

Coach Hal Barron, mentor of the Georgia Tech track squad, Saturday staged the first of a series of meets which are to be run on the new board track at the Flats.

The meet had a dual purpose. It was designed, first, to give Ed Hamm, Jacket sprint and broad jump ace, and Bob Young, Bulldog distance runner, a taste of timed running on the boards in preparation for their coming appearances at the Millrose games in New York, which will be run off on February 9.

The second purpose of the event was to get the Jacket squad as a whole used to the wood, which is similar to the track at the University of Virginia. The Jackets are to make a trip to Richmond on February 22 for the Virginia indoor meet. This event is somewhat of an experiment in the realm of soutern track, but this type of competition has been popular in the north for many years, and there is no reason for believing that the idea will not take in this section.

Only two events were stressed Saturday. Bob Young turned in a very creditable performance in the two-mile run, with a time of 9.56. Young also ran and won the mile run in 4:50.2.

Ed Hamm took two tries at the 50-yard dash. His first effort netted him a time of 5.7 seconds, while his second attempt lowered this time by two tenths of a second.

Young and Hamm will leave for New York soon. It is expected that Young will remain in that district for the running of the Meadowbrook games in Philadelphia shortly after the Millrose events. He may also enter the New York A. C. games.

Tornado Wins See-SawGame As Time Ends

Bulldogs Stall Beneath Own Goal and Engineers Snatch Ball for Shot.

BY BEN COTHRAN.

Tech defeated Georgia at basketball Saturday night in a game as hair-raising as a drunk driving an automobile.

It was a game that saw Tech, trailing at the half by 23-14, come back, take the lead, relinquish it and then win when Williamson intercepted a Georgia pass beneath his own basket and dropped the ball in, to give Tech a lone point margin as the whistle blew.

They have contended for years and years that Tech-Georgia games are close, but it was never more forcefully brought out than last night. The game wasn't close during the first half, because Georgia, with two forwards planted at opposite corners of the court at its own basket, was passing through the Tech defense and sinking points with enough regularity to keep ahead by a comfortable margin.

Tornado Comes Back.

But these Jackets got the idea in their heads that they weren't going to be defeated, and though they had to pull a Merriwell to win the game, they did. Georgia had just taken the lead by one point when Palmer rang the basket to put Georgia ahead, 37-36. There were something like 40 seconds left to play, and the Bulldog naturally began hanging on to what he had. He made a mistake, however, in being under Tech's basket. For the pass that Williamson intercepted was cross-court, exactly beneath his basket, and his shot was inevitable.

Tech lost three of its regulars—Hudson, Goldin and Heeke—by the foul route. Hudson went out early in the first half, and Heeke and Goldin in the second. The substitutes, however, proved suitable.

Defense Baffling.

Georgia trotted forth not only the good offense, which was granted the Bulldog, but a defense that through the first half had Tech rather mystified. The Georgians used the man-to-man defense, and used it well. Only a few times could Wilson and Coker break away from their guards to race into the hole for a twisting try at the basket.

The thing began with Georgia assuming a lead which it didn't relinquish until about 10 minutes before the game was over. Harris dropped in a field goal and Palmer made it 3-0 on a free try. Then Hank Heeke charged in with two points for Tech. Sanford, who is rather adept at the art of slapping someone else's goal try in for the two points, added a couple in this manner. Palmer followed him, then Reeder, Anderson and Palmer again sunk shots before Heeke added two for Tech to make it 11-4, Georgia.

Jackets Worried.

Everyone was becoming quite concerned, the Jackets among them. People had expected a stubborn battle from the Bulldog, but taking the lead and holding same hadn't been anticipated. But the Bulldog had it, he kept using the man-to-man defense and he held his lead.

Reeder, Harris and Palmer kept adding points while Coker, Heeke and Williamson—who went in for Hudson when the latter was banished—brought Tech's score gradually up. The half ended, Georgia 23, Tech 14.

They came back for the second half, after all present had rambled outside for a cigarette and a dope. Reeder sank a free shot and it seemed that Tech was nailed. But not quite.

The Jacket was playing better ball and getting through to the basket more frequently. Goldin sank a field goal, then Wages and Coker counted one each on charity chunks. Reeder made a successful try from the field and Georgia had 26 points.

Tech Offensive.

It was here that Tech put on its real offensive. Points began popping with the regularity of oaths from a straw boss. First Goldin added a point on a foul shot. Then it was Heeke with a field goal. Red Williamson made another one. Coker charged in with a field goal and Tech was one point behind. And Williamson, the lad who won the game, put in one more field goal, and the Jackets were ahead by 27 to 26. The same Williamson made it a three-point lead with another goal, jumping up almost level with the basket and dropping the ball in.

Georgia scoring picked up at this point and Harris counted on a charity chunk. Then Sanford, Palmer and Martin—who had just come in for Sanford, made it 33-29. Five minutes were left. Coker made a field goal; 33-31. Coker made another one to tie it at 33-33.

Tech Goes Ahead.

Tech went ahead again when Wilson dropped in a two-pointer. Sanford tied it up at 35-35. People leaned forward in their seats or stood up. Something was happening.

Palmer broke the tie and put Georgia ahead with his field goal. Wages

Epworth All-Stars Lose in Alabama

Birmingham, Ala., January 26.—(Special.)—The Birmingham Epworth Star basketball team rushed the Atlanta Stars off their feet in the second half, after the Atlanta contingent had kept affairs close as 11 and 8, Birmingham, in the first period, and the Slagtown outfit romped to victory by a 33-to-15 margin here tonight.

The Stars, of Atlanta, were on their toes during the entire first half and kept things hustling to a high degree, Freeman played a fine floor game, being ably supported by Forster and Smith.

Boys' High and Smithies Meet in Feature Prep Game of Week

Macon Will Give Young Stribling Hilarious Send-Off Monday

Seven Court Tilts Booked For Atlanta

G. M. A. Takes on Purple Hurricane Tuesday; Tech and Decatur Also Play.

Atlanta's prep basketball teams will be mixed in seven games this week, all of them more or less family affairs with one exception when Decatur plays Marietta.

The card follows:

Monday.

Boys' High vs. Commercial at J. E. A.

Tuesday.

Boys' High vs. G. M. A. at College Park.

Decatur High vs. Tech High at Henry Grady .

Commercial vs. U. S. B. at U. S. B.

Friday.

Boys' High vs. Tech High at Henry Grady.

U. S. B. vs. Marist at Marist.

Marietta vs. Decatur at Decatur.

It is a rather imposing list of names and the feature one seems to be that involving those two ancient enemies, Tech High and Boys' High, bitter rivals in everything from cutting classes to football.

They say, these people who seem to know about such things, that Tech High is to win. Boys' High was beaten by Lanier, Lanier lost to G. M. A. and G. M. A. in turn lost to Tech High, which proves something. Tech High has a great star in Buster Mott, who seemingly cannot be checked in his mad rush of making goals.

Boys' High, however,, has a good team and it should be a hard battle from start to finish. The Purple will have two games beneath its belt before playing Tech High, meeting Commercial Monday and then taking on the tough G. M. A. Cadets Tuesday at College Park.

Tuesday will be a busy day with the Purple-Cadet clash; Decatur tangling with Tech High and Commercial and the Bluebirds mixing freely.

There will be a lull until Friday, when the Smithies and Boys' High meet. That will be just one of three, with U. S. B. running into a tough foe in Marist and Marietta playing Decatur.

EMORY CAGE TEAMS CLASH ON SATURDAY.

Six of the seven basketball teams at Emory university will see action next Saturday afternoon when the regular intra-mural season gets under way. The Freshman, Soph, Junior, Med and Theolog teams are scheduled to start then and the Law team will play its first game the following Wednesday.

The champion Med team of last year, reinforced by several stars in the freshman class, is the favorite of the pre-season dope to repeat its last year's triumph. Kells Boland, Maxie Dell, Cy Strickler, Hodges, Barnett, Armstrong are all back, while Venable and Logan will be welcome additions from the freshman Med class.

The Sophs appear to have a strong team, in spite of having lost J. L. Heard, the star of last year's team. Thrasher, Virlyn and Gip Moore, Lange, Mackey and Floyd are the members of the team that was the sensation of the league last year that are back.

The other teams are of a doubtful or unknown quality. The Theologs have been practicing religiously and may prove a dark horse. The Freshmen have a good squad practicing, which includes several men who made an enviable record in prep school. If this material can be whipped into shape, the Rats will have a contending team. The Juniors and Seniors appear to be woefully weak, while the strength of the Law team is entirely unknown as yet.

ChicagoHasHopes For Track Success

Chicago, January 26.—University of Chicago track prospects continue to look good, and the Maroons expect to make the best showing of a decade this season. Ned Merriam, brought to the midway last year by Director Stagg as an assistant coach, has been placed in full charge of the team. Stagg retired because of the numerous duties of his position as athletic director and football coach. In point of service he was the oldest track coach in the country, for he had directed the Maroon team since 1896. Merriam, a Chicago graduate, was three times conference champion in the 440-yard run, and twice winner of the 220-yard low hurdles, and a member of the 1908 Olympic team. He has coached successfully at Ames, DePauw and Yale.

Merriam will have a strong two-mile and distance medley team for relay carnivals, and a squad that will be strong in all events except the pole vault. Virgil Gist, star half-miler, who is captain of the basketball team, will not be available until the opening of the outdoor season, but even without him the Maroons will have good strength in the middle distances. Gist holds the N. C. A. A. 880 title.

The Maroons will have some of the best shot putters in the conference, with "Buck" Weaver putting the weight over 46 feet, and Vin Libby and Warren Klein close behind him.

Gus Feuer Wins Title In Florida Tourney

Ormond Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Gus Feuer, University of Florida star, won the Ormond Beach tennis championships here today by defeating John Millen, of Philadelphia, in an uphill battle, 6-3, 3-6, 3-6, 6-3, 6-3.

In the doubles finals Feuer, paired with Nick Polites, of Jacksonville, won over R. Moorehead, Daytona Beach, and Gordon Apgar, Daytona Beach, 6-4, 6-2. Feuer and Polites went to the finals by defeating D. R. Howe, of Daytona Beach, and Gamble Rogers, former Dartmouth star.

In his singles match today Feuer came from behind after solving the sizzling flat drives served up by Millen.

Undefeated in '28.

Finishing with five victories in 1927 and undefeated in 1928 the Lancaster High school, of Western New York, drew much attention to the little village.

A BRIGHT FUTURE

If they so choose, Warner Mizell and Stumpy Thomason can always be in the light from this time forward. The Acree-Kornegay Furniture company made this certain when they presented the two backfield stars of the Golden Tornado with floor lamps recently. The furniture house awarded the lamps as prizes in a popularity contest and the pretty donor is Miss M. L. Elder, of the firm.

EPWORTH ENDS CAGE SEASON ON FEBRUARY 19

With the end of last week's basketball play in the Epworth Athletic association, only four weeks of the schedule remain to be run off, the season ending with four games the night of February 19. After this date the winners of each loop will battle each other to determine the champions of the association, boys and girls.

Several good games were viewed at Wesley court during the past week and were affairs that had important bearing on the relative standings of teams in both the girls' and boys' divisions. The most important tilt, and in boys' "A" loop, was that in which College Park took possession of the top rung in the percentage column when Druid Hills was defeated by that team last Monday night. Of importance was the defeat of the heretofore strong Park Street Hi boys by the Grant Park Seniors in an "A" loop embroglio. Two important upshots occurred in "B" loops of the boys when the Epworth five overcame the favorite Haygood bunch, and when the Park Street Seniors downed the St. Paul Feds. The Park Street team has certainly come to the front in the last three games and are beginning to play real ball. The most important feature of the girls' play is the steady march of Martha Brown to perfect leadership in "B" loop, having won all games for the entire season. In "A" loop the leadership is in a muddle, for two strong teams are tied for honors—the Emory Nurses and the Grant Park lassies. Both are strong outfits and the winner of their game later on in the season will probably determine the recipient of the cup.

At present two College Park squads—the Seniors and the Juniors—are showing the way to the other teams in their loops, "A" and "B," respectively, the Juniors having won all games and the Seniors losing just one affair for the season. Grace is still the class of "C" loop and is perched at the top, with all victories for every attempt. Decatur appears at present as the strongest opponent for Grace.

Good Scores.

With only seven of his men retired, and the match closed, the English cricket team scored 734 runs over New South Wales. In 1902 an English team against the same opponent scored 769 runs.

Bob Shawkey Plans Arm Operation

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Bob Shawkey, former Yankee pitcher who now is the property of the Montreal club, hopes to join the world's champions again. Returning from a jaunt to Japan with Ty Cobb, Shawkey said he is going to undergo an operation Monday for the removal of a chipped bone in his right elbow, which was partly responsible for his passing from the majors. With this done, he hopes to form a connection with the Yankees in the combined roles of assistant coach and relief pitcher.

PARKS-CHAMBERS QUINTET OPENS SEASON TODAY

Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock at Fort McPherson the basketball fans of Atlanta will have a chance to see the fast and scrappy quintet of the Twenty-second Infantry in action against a new and independent quintet playing under the colors of the Parks-Chambers Bluebirds.

In addition to the game there will also be stunts by the soldiers between halves, and to give the fans their money's worth the infantry band will furnish music at intervals during the game and between halves.

Tedesco and Sosebee form a tough combination and as aides have capable hoopmen. The soldiers have been working hard with their team this season and are now prepared for a good season in basketball.

The Bluebirds appearing before the public for the first time as an organization, but they know their basketball, and will extend the soldiers to the limit. The Parks-Chambers quint is composed of some of the best basketball talent in Atlanta, and have organized for the purpose of having a lot of fun as well as to perfect the best team in the city.

Jean Borotra Victor In French Net Title

Paris, January 26.—(AP)—Jean Borotra, Davis cup veteran, won the covered court tennis championship of France today, defeating R. George, eighth ranking French player, by scores of 6-2, 6-2, 6-4.

Madame Kleinadel captured the women's title, winning in the final from Madame Golding, 6-4, 6-1.

COTTON STATES TOURNEY STIRS WIDE INTEREST

Auburn, Ala., January 26.—(Special.)—The eighth annual Cotton States Interscholastic Basketball tournament, to be held at Auburn, February 21, 22 and 23, is attracting wide favor with high school men throughout the cotton belt, according to announcements given out by Coach Wilbur Hutsell. The tournament this year will be governed by the rules and regulations of the national high school athletic federation and is officially sanctioned by that body, Coach Hutsel said.

Sixteen teams, who records are highest by comparison, will be invited to the village during the week preceding the tournament. During past years teams have been entered from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, and Mississippi. The records show that the Georgia quintets have received more honors than those from any other state.

Because of its long standing and real honor attached to the winner of the President's cup, emblematic of the cotton states championship, the winner of this tournament is always invited to compete for national honors at the Stagg's interscholastic in Chicago. Vienna High, of Georgia, winner of the cotton states title in 1928, went to the semi-finals in the national high school basketball tournament in Chicago last spring.

Judging by the large number of inquiries that are pouring into the athletic offices daily, much interest is being manifested by coaches throughout the south. Teams are expected to be entered this year from Louisiana, Mississippi, North and South Carolina, and Arkansas.

Services for Killilea Held in Milwaukee

Milwaukee, Wis., January 26.—(AP) Funeral services were held today for Henry J. Killilea, owner of the Milwaukee club, of the American association and one of the founders of the American league. Services were conducted at St. Johns Roman Catholic church with interment in Calvary cemetery.

Only members of the family and a few close friends, including Fielding Yost, athletic director of the University of Michigan, and Phil Ball, president of the St. Louis Browns, were in attendance.

Killilea died Monday of heart disease.

Famous Professional Says There Is Little Difference in Playing Drives and Brassies—Size of Player Counts Little.

BY AL ESPINOSA

(Copyright, 1929, by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

Al Espinosa is one of the best professionals in American golf, a consistent scorer in tournaments. He is a member of the Ryder cup team which biannually meets the cream of Britain's professional golfers in team matches.

There is comparatively little difference between playing the drive and playing the brassie, so far as the actual mechanics of the stroke go. It isn't size or muscular strenth that gets distance with the wood. This has been proven too often for further comment.

The pivot and wrist-lash combined with proper timing are responsible for length. Cyril Tolley is a huge fellow who must weigh close to 250. Nobody hits them any farther than he. But in the open championship at Oakland Hills a few years ago, played over a course 6,880 yards long, little Cyril Walker, who scaled 118, hit his shots as far as anyone.

Not a Big Fellow.

I'm not such a big fellow myself, but I can keep up with most. Without seeking to ballyhoo myself I'll have to name a shot of mine as the best wood shot I ever saw. It was made on the 535-yard eighteenth hole at the Pasadena Country club in 1926, when I was playing with Tommy Armour in the Florida west coast open championship.

I needed a birdie 4 for a 71. There is a canal paralleling the fairway on the right and in pressing to get all the distance I could I banged my tee shot into the canal. It looked as though all hope was gone, but I slapped one 275 yards down the fairway, straight as a string.

There was still a long distance between me and the green, but I hammered a brassie with all my strength, and it covered the pin all the way.

"You've laid it stone dead," said Tommy.

Then the gallery broke into a storm of applause and I found that I had holed out.

Of course it was luck, but the shot had been hit just right. It had to be to get there.

With the modern far-flying ball there is little use for the brassie among the leading amateurs and professionals, probably not more than ence or twice a round. We face few holes that cannot be reached with a second shot with a No. 1 or 2 iron at most. For the average run of golfer, though, the wood is a frequently used club, not only off the tee but through the green.

The best advice that can be given is: Keep the head down and hit the ball. If you do that consistently you're sure to get there or thereabouts.

Rickard Finds Outdoor Stage Best for Bout

Specially Built Ring Does Much To Draw Crowd for Big Fight, Tex Learns.

This is the only autobiography written by Tex Rickard. It was prepared in collaboration with Bozeman Bulger, for publication exclusively for The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance. Shortly before Rickard's death he discussed with Bulger plans for publication of these memoirs in book form. Following is the seventeenth installment of the autobiography, which is appearing in daily chapters.

(Copyright, 1929, by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

The open air arena is the place—the only place to hold a big championship fight. Following my experience in Goldfield with the Gans-Nelson fight that idea sunk into my mind. I have never gotten over it. I have staged other big fights in Madison Square Garden and in baseball parks, but the real place is a specially-built arena.

The arena means more than the convenience of handling the crowds and independence of halls and parks. It throws a glamour around a big fight that nothing else approaches. It is very difficult to associate boxing with any other sport. The mind of the public must be centered on a fight and nothing else. There is some of the old Roman gladiator idea about it. Thousands of people will go for hundreds of miles to an arena built for a definite purpose, when they might consider a hall or a park a sort of convenience where they could go or not. Fight fans, like all humans, like to go to trouble to see a big sporting event. They like to make it an occasion—a big mark in their experiences of the year.

Loses Its Drawing Power.

For example, if the Yale-Harvard football game was held in Madison Square Garden there would be a lack of zest in getting to it. There would be no necessity to plan parties, arrange motor trips and so on. A big sporting event must be a sort of Mecca to which people can journey from all parts of the country. I can feel this idea better than I can express it. I think my readers know what I mean.

In all sincerity, the consideration of how much or how little I might profit in a big fight never caused me much concern. Always that was secondary. In fact, I did not go into the fight game with the thought of making money. As I have related, I was spurred into the Johnson-Jeffries fight by a joking cartoon, printed in a San Francisco newspaper. It was of a jackass, braying "Where is Tex Rickard?"

In other words, my pride was touched. I wanted to prove that I could put on another big fight and get away with it. The fact of bringing one of these affairs to a successful conclusion gave me immeasurably more satisfaction than the actual profit. Of course, I did not want to be a sucker. Nobody does. I have known men of great wealth, who didn't need any more money and never would be in need of it, to work night and day for weeks on a deal just to show that they still had a punch—were not suckers.

So you can imagine the feeling of accomplishment that came over me after we had successfully staged the Jeffries-Johnson fight in spite of all the early difficulties.

A Big Plunger.

By this time I was getting a reputation as a big plunger in fistic events. The sums I had offered as purses were looked upon as out of all reason. I remember very well being lectured in a friendly way by Bat Masterson, the sports writer, and others. Bat pointed out that all my efforts, or most of them, went toward fattening the purses of fighters and of others who got in on the side, while I barely got out with the skin of my teeth.

In a way Masterson was right. My profits were not enormous but I always went on the theory that big business and small profits was better than little business and a bigger percentage of profits. I still think that is the real way to do business. I do not like a piker. Shoot everything to make the affair a big success and the final settling up will take care of itself, is my principle.

A lot of people seem to have the idea that I had given up everything to go into the fight promotion business. That is not true. I kept my other enterprises going all the time. Up until I took over Madison Square Garden the fight business was a sort if sporting side-line with me. It was my recreation. It was a big game, one I liked to play. I studied it and handled my cards accordingly.

The main thing I have found is to ascertain as near as possible what the fighters and the public want and try to satisfy them as nearly as possible.

Men Must be Friendly.

Notwithstanding a prevailing idea that the grudge fight will attract unusual attention I do not believe it. The public likes to look on a fight as a big sporting event; likes to regard the fighters themselves as being sportsmen. I have made a point, as I have mentioned before, of seeing that my fighters were friendly before and after the fight. The public likes that, I'm sure.

The next step was to assist the newspapermen in getting what material they wanted. Oddly enough there is as much interest if not more, in the preliminary arrangements for a big fight as in the spectacle itself. I never attempted to direct publicity. Give the newspapermen an opportunity and they will make the event interesting in a hundred different ways. Never in my life have I told a newspaperman what I thought he ought to write. I have discussed matters very frankly with them but to attempt influencing their opinion would be foolhardy. Besides, that kind of publicity wouldn't be worth a nickel. They know what the public wants to read.

Though I always was an inveterate newspaper reader, I never fully realized to what extent they would go for news about a prize fight until our Gans-Nelson affair at Goldfield. I had expected publicity, of course, but it had never occurred to me that hundreds of newspapermen would come from all over the United States at the expense of their papers to do this. That has given me a lot of thought.

One day I met the circulation manager of one of the biggest New York papers.

"Tell me," I asked him, "why do newspapers devote so much more space to a championship prize fight than to any other one event in the news of the day?"

What Public Wants.

"Why, it's because the public wants to read about it," he said, "do you know that a big championship fight is the biggest circulation getter we have? The only thing that approaches it is a big murder trial in which there is plenty of scandal. I don't know exactly how to analyze this but I know it is true. I have handled circulation for twenty years. I venture to say that a majority of people remember the Corbett-Sullivan fight, for instance, with just as much clearness as they do the sinking of the battleship Maine in Havana harbor."

This brought to my mind the fact that our attempts to get Carpentier over here during the war occasioned as much daily interest as the battles being fought. Even in those days of trouble and distress, news of a prospective prize fight caught the public eye.

Now, with this tremendous aid, given freely, I really don't see how a man could guess wrong on the success of a fight.

But, as I said at the start, it takes a great open air arena to center the interest.

INDIAN ACE

Pictured above is High Sky, six foot, five inch forward of the world famous Indians who will play Tubby Walton's professional team at the auditorium Tuesday night.

Indian Quintet Has Huge Scoring Stars

Famous Players Will Invade Atlanta This Week For Contest With Local Pro Team.

A team that some experts have said is as good as the old New York Celtics will play in the auditorium Tuesday night when the world-famous Indians formerly from Haskell institute plays Atlanta's newly-organized professional team, under the management of Tubby Walton.

The Indian team, on its tour this year, has won 26 games without a defeat. One of its most outstanding victories was scored January 15, in Chattanooga, when the Penn Dixie five, independent team and one of the best in the south, was defeated, 52 to 32. Penn-Dixie is the only team that has defeated Georgia Tech's cage team this year, that happening when the Jackets were on their Christmas training tour.

Players Are Tall.

Every first-string player on the Indian team is a giant in statue, the "runt" of the squad being a mere six feet in height. The tallest is Baesman, who plays center where his six feet seven inches can be used to great advantage in securing tip-offs.

Light Foot, dwarf forward—he is only six feet two inches in height—has the reputation of being one of the fastest in the game. There is another forward, High Sky, who is six feet five inches high and the two guards, War Eagle, six feet, and Tomahawk, six feet three inches.

The above are all full-blooded Indians and capable of playing a fast, speedy, expert brand of basketball. They have drawn large crowds wherever they appeared and a large gathering is expected Tuesday night when they play Atlanta's own professional team.

Local Team New.

The local team, organized by Tubby Walton, who is backed by several prominent Atlanta business men and sportsmen, is composed of local players who starred in high school and college basketball.

Tubby has Nolan Richardson for one of the forwards. Richardson played at Tech High and was one of the highest scoring players prep basketball in Atlanta has ever seen. Then he went to Georgia and made a brilliant record there. Richardson entered professional baseball and is the property of the Detroit club.

Other players include Eddie Moore, Boston Braves player, who played professional basketball for six winters with Philadelphia, performing at a guard position. There is also Bob Smith, Boston pitcher, who starred on the old Agoga class basketball team.

The men have been working out and are in good shape and Manager Walton Saturday night expressed himself as being confident that his team would give th. Indians a good, hard and pleasing battle.

Davidson Track Practice To Open

Davidson, N. C., January 24.—Captain Norton G. Pritchett, director of physical education at Davidson college, who will act as track instructor for the Wildcats this year, has issued a call for all candidates who will contest for the 1929 edition of the Davidson track team. The first scheduled workout will be Monday afternoon, although Captain Pritchett has been working with the members of last year's team all during the year, and has given them some good points which they will now have a chance to put into practice.

Captain Bill Bailey, of Rock Hill, S. C., pole vaulter, will have as his cohorts such veterans as Whittle, Kell, Flinn, Melton, Leftwich, and a number of others. A few contributions will be made to the varsity this season from last year's offerings of the freshman class.

Davidson will be represented at the indoor intercollegiate track meet at the University of Virginia on February 22, said Captain Pritchett. The cream of the candidates will be taken to Charlottesville to represent Davidson in this competition. This is one reason for the unusual early practice.

The complete schedule, made public today, follows:

February 22—Intercollegiate indoor meet at University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va.

March 30—University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.

April 1—V. P. I. at Blackburg, Va.
April 6—Wake Forest at Davidson.
April 13—Tech Relays at Atlanta.
April 30—Clemson College at Davidson.
April 27—V. M. I. at Lexington, Va.
May 4—State meet at Greensboro.

Basketball Supports Sports at City College

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Football as the principal sport of American colleges usually is depended upon to carry the financial burden of all college athletic activities.

At the College of the City of New York, however, the gridiron game is obliged to play second fiddle, financially, to basketball.

The City college eleven in 1928 played to more spectators than in any year since the soprt was resumed there in 1922, yet the financial sheet shows a deficit of more than $1,000. That situation is not worrying the athletic managers because, they announce, "basketball, which annually pays for all the other sports, is expected to make up the football deficit again."

Friends Plan Great Ovation For Pugilist

Rally Tomorrow Night Will Mark Departure of Boxer for Miami Training.

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Macon tonight awaited the return of William Lawrence Stribling, II, its crusading young pugilist, from New Orleans, where Friday night he scored the 114th knock-out of his career over Ralph Smith, California heavy.

Stribling is expected to reach Macon tomorrow at about the same time that Pa Stribling, his father, arrives here from New York city, where he went to scout Jack Sharkey in his bout with K. O. Christner Friday night.

Everything is in readiness here to give Stribling the most hilarious, enthusiastic send-off he ever got from his home town. Not even in the days when W. L., at the tender age of 18, left for Columbus, Ga., to fight Mike McTigue for the light-heavyweight championship of the world, has there been such elaborate planning, so much hullabaloo on the part of Macon fans to demonstrate to Stribling their high esteem for him.

Stribling Popular.

Stribling has always been intensely popular here. His quiet, gentlemanly manner, his open friendliness and ever-present smile have endeared him for a lifetime to citizens of this city who have known him ever since the days when he wore knee trousers and many of whom played, fought and went to school with him.

Hundreds of pictures of Stribling in various poses are awaiting his autograph here Monday night. Tags to go in coat lapels, also bearing his picture, have been distributed throughout the city and everybody today was wearing them in their buttonholes. Macon, which has always liked Stribling, is prouder today of him than ever. The colorful battler with the knock-out punch instead of the defensive fighter of a few years back—that's what has drawn him closest to the rank and file of his native city than he has ever been before.

Eclipse Recent Fete.

Monday night's send-off rally will eclipse even the home-coming welcome that Macon gave Stribling on his return from New York after knocking out Johnny Squires last summer. Among the gifts to be presented him Tuesday night is a gold-handled razor, given by the Macon Junior Chamber of Commerce, of which Stribling is an active member.

On the razor has been engraved the words: "To W. L., Stribling, from his fellow Jay-cees." A busy time is in store for Stribling after his arrival here. Besides the job of packing all his personal effects for the trip to Miami Tuesday, he will play in a basketball game here Monday night, referee a prize fight between halves and autograph several hundred pictures for the admiring throng. At the Stribling home-coming last summer, W. L. autographed pictures for the fans until he developed writer's cramp and had to turn the job over to "Pa," "Ma," and Clara, his wife.

STRIB TO APPEAR IN EXHIBITION BOUT.

Jacksonville, Fla., January 26.—(AP) Young Stribling will appear once more in the ring before he meets Jack Sharkey at Miami Beach, Fla., February 27, but he won't risk anything.

Announcement was made here today that the last public appearance of the Georgia athlete before the main bout will be in a sparring exhibition preliminary to the "Baby" Stribling-Billy Edwards bout Tuesday.

He will box four rounds in exhibition with Glenn Chancey, of Jacksonville.

Chicago Expects Good Tank Team

Chicago, January 26.—Although the University of Chicago swimming team does not have a single letterman returning this season, prospects for a strong maroon squad are good. The team is captained by Bob Spence, football player, who did not enter competition until last year. Spence swims the breast stroke in 2:46. Another valuable man is Wendell Stephenson, who placed fourth in the conference backstroke last season. Cornelius Oker, star of the team two seasons ago, has returned, and will be a formidable entry in the 40 and 100. Oker has done the 40-yard dash in 0:18 3-10 this season. Seth Szold, captain of the water polo team, is a reliable performer in the 440. Dick Hough, in the dashes; Clarence Cushman, in the fancy diving, and Andrew Brislin in the breast stroke, are regarded as good possibilities by Coach Edward MacGillivray.

The schedule for the season is as follows: January 19, at Illinois; February 16, Wisconsin at Chicago; February 23, at Indiana; March 2, Iowa at Chicago; March 9, at Purdue; March 15 and 16, conference meet at Chicago.

Woman Again To Try For Speedboat Trophy

Detroit, January 26.—(AP)—Miss Marion B. (Betty) Carstairs, English sportswoman, will make another attempt to lift the British international (Harmsworth) trophy which symbolizes the speedboat championship of the world.

A challenge in Miss Carstairs' behalf was received today by the Yachtman's association, of America, from the Royal Motor Yacht club, of Southampton, England. The trophy now is held by Gar Wood, of Detroit.

Miss Carstairs sought to recapture the Harmsworth trophy last September, but her boat, the Estelle II, sank during the first heat of the race on the Detroit river.

A Family of Letters.

D. Hastings Hickok won a Yale football letter this last season. His father, Ross, won a "Y" in 1897. W. O. Hickok won letters in 1893, 1894, 1895 and his son, W. O. Hickok IV, in 1926. Seniors and juniors all live in Harrisburg.

Many Famous Baseball Players Balk at Terms Offered Them

Dissatisfied Stars Return '29 Contracts

Dazzy Vance, Mickey Cochrane and Waner Among Those Listed as Holdouts.

BY GEORGE KIRKSEY.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—Many major league baseball stars are dissatisfied with the terms of their 1929 contracts, according to a poll of the teams by the United News. With the training season only a month away, some of the leading stars of last season are numbered among the apparent holdouts.

Mickey Cochrane, star catcher of the Philadelphia Athletics, who was awarded the American league's most valuable player prize last season, has returned his contract to Connie Mack unsigned. Cochrane is said to want $4,000 more than he received in 1928.

Paul Waner, Pittsburgh outfielder and the National league's most valuable player in 1927, has balked at the terms offered him, as has his little brother, Lloyd. Barney Dreyfuss, however, denies they are holdouts.

Dazzy Vance, Brooklyn pitching ace who won the National league's most valuable player prize in 1924, along with most of the other Robin regulars, has not signed a contract for 1929. Vance is said to want $25,000 for next season.

Buddy Myer, third baseman obtained from the Boston Red Sox in exchange for five players, and Leon Goslin, batting champion of the American league last season, are believed to be holdouts among the Washington Senators. Sam Rice, Sam Jones and Fred Marberry are others who have not signed contracts. Out of a squad of 32, only twelve Senators have signed.

Secretary Jim Tierney, of the New York Giants, insists none of the Giants are holding out, but word from Bill Terry at Memphis and Freddy Lindstrom at Chicago is to the effect that they want more money before they sign.

Bob O'Farrell, catcher who won the National league's most valuable player award in 1926, is another Giant who has not signed.

Jess Haines, star moundsman of the St. Louis Cardinals, may join the ranks of the holdouts any day now. He had a conference recently with Branch Rickey, vice president of the club, and failed to sign his contract. Haines was one of the leading holdouts of two years ago. Haines won 24 games and lost 10 in 1927 and won 20 and lost 8 last season. On this record he believes he is entitled to the highest salary on the Cardinals.

Dick Porter, rookie outfielder who was purchased from the Baltimore Orioles for $40,000, has returned his contract to the Cleveland Indians unsigned.

Neither the Chicago White Sox nor Chicago Cubs report any holdouts, but it would not be a surprise if several of the White Sox stars registered kicks over Charles Comiskey's cut-rate salaries soon.

Yanks Not Worried.

With eight of their stars signed, the New York Yankees are not worrying. Babe Ruth, Earl Combs, Lou Gehrig, Herb Pennock, Tony Lazzeri, Mark Koenig, Waite Hoyt, Wiley Moore and George Pipgrass are under holdover contracts.

There are no known holdouts on the Boston Red Sox or Boston Braves.

Penn Track Coach Facing Hard Task

Philadelphia, January 26.—Bernard Berlinger, member of the 1928 Olympic team, is Lawson Robertson's hope for a successful indoor track season for the University of Pennsylvania. The loss of fifteen potential point winners during the past year, by graduation and other causes, makes Robertson's task a most difficult one.

However, if Berlinger can continue the sensational performances that stamped him as a great all-around athlete last season, some of Robbie's worries will have ended. During the indoor campaign of 1928 Berlinger won the septathlon championship over such stars as Elkins, Osborne, Norton and others.

This year Robertson plans to enter the husky Berlinger in the pole vault, shot put, high jump and broad jump, in the Millrose and New York A. C. games in addition to the indoor intercollegiate championships. Barney has been jumping 6 feet 1 inch, in the high jump, 12 feet 6 inches in the pole vault, 23 feet in the broad jump and has been putting the shot well over 46 feet.

Jack Montgomery, who was also a member of the Olympic team is a possible point winner in the mile run. He has shown remarkable improvement over his form of last season and should reach top form within the next two weeks. Other distance prospects include Ritchie and Merembeck.

A mile team that includes Kastler, Ward, McLoughlin, and Cassell, will meet Princeton and Yale, on February 16, in New York. Three men have been selected thus far for the two-mile relay including Saxer, Pearson and Giles. Other track prospects are Steiner and Feist, 35 pound weight, Captain Stratton, high jump, Gentle, McCoy and Ruch, hurdles, Sachs, Hauseman and Clarke, sprinters, Lamberg, shot put and Houghton and Newkirk, broad jump.

Penn Nine Books 33 Games For '29

Philadelphia, January 26. — The University of Pennsylvania baseball team will play 33 games this season, the largest number in years, according to the schedule released today by the council on athletics.

Iowa State making an eastern trip will meet Coach Carlm's team on Franklin Field, June 8. It will be the first game ever played between the two institutions. In addition to the quadrangular cup games with Dartmouth, Columbia and Cornell, Pennsylvania will meet Princeton, Harvard, Yale, Penn State, Syracuse and other big college teams. A southern trip, starting March 27 and concluding April 3, has also been arranged.

Cracker Pitchers

** * * * * * * * * * * **

Fourteen Prospective Hurlers Get Contracts—Some of Them Good and a Few Rate Not So Well on Diamond.

BY BEN COTHRAN

This is a piece about pitching staffs in general and the 1929 Cracker band of throwers in particular. Just as your football fan gets all roiled over the actions of the backs and when asked about something Smith did in the line, gives you a blank stare, so does your baseball fan like his pitchers. Good pitchers he adores.

Atlanta in the past few years hasn't been blessed with a pitching staff that was literally a good one as a whole. There were some who could pitch and others who just merely threw the ball in the general direction of the plate and let it go at that. Last year was a notable example. Only a couple of pitchers could be counted upon to win games and a couple of pitchers can't carry you through an entire season.

14 Pitchers Sought.

Working on that idea, Colonel Rell Jackson Spiller, who owns the Crackers, has mailed contracts to 14 gentlemen, some young and some not so very old, who are of the pitching persuasion. Whether or not they can all pitch is problematical. Names that appear in big type in the winter are sometimes melted down to agate by the mid-summer sun.

But in this list appear some names that are familiar, some that are not. Out of the 14 that Spiller has approached the new manager Wilbur Good is to select eight. Eight good ones would be fine. Six good ones and two that were only fair would be okay.

Uncle Wilbur has stated already, through Mr. Spiller, that Bull Rauch, Joe Kiefer and Climax Blethen would win 60 games this year. Simple mathematics reveals that each must win 20 games. We pause here to wave an admonitory finger under Uncle Wilbur's nose. Twenty games is a lot of baseball games for one pitcher to win in one season. But perhaps he's right.

Kiefer from Texas.

Well, let's look. Kiefer comes here from Wichita Falls where for some years he was one of the Texas league's best pitchers. Last year, they say, he was a bit off-form, but at that won 16 games and lost eight, which means an average of .666, rather fair. It is likely that he'll win 15 games here, which will be doing very well.

Climax Blethen you all saw pitch last season. You also saw him play left field. And if you had been on the road when the team was clambering to the top of the heap, you would have seen him playing second base. Mr. Blethen can do most anything in a baseball game but eat the ball. He might do that if it had anything to do with winning a ball game. The records credit Climax with 14 won and 10 lost. But back in the middle of August, the official scorer, you know, had to some adding and subtracting when Atlanta lost that flock of games, so Climax really should have a better record than that. But there's no doubt that he'll make a good pitcher. Uncle Wilbur knows him. He had him in Macon in 1927, when Blethen won 24 and lost 10.

Uncle Wilbur has also handled Bull Rauch. Spiller bought him in 1927 from Savannah and farmed him to Macon last season. So when the calm, assured Uncle Wilbur says that he's a good pitcher then we suppose he is.

Rube Robinson Back.

Then, there is in the list Mr. John Henry (Rube) Robinson, philosopher, lover of "steak and pertaters," gentleman farmer and left-handed pitcher. It'll probably be the first of June, when the sun bears down, before Rube gets his left arm in shape, but once it is, then Mr. Robinson can put the ball just about where he wants it. Some scoff at the idea of his going another season but perhaps he'll do it.

Red Oldham, a good hitter and pretty good pitcher, will be back.

And we almost forgot young Elzie Clise Dudley, of the strong right arm. Dudley will train with the Brooklyn team at Clearwater, but Spiller says that he will be on the club here this summer. He'll be needed.

Art Olson, who had only an average season in 1928, is due for a good one. Olson pitches more with his head than his arm, a very desirable trait in pitchers.

Brice and Chilton.

Others to whom Mr. Spiller has addressed contracts are Jim Brice, who won 19 games and lost 6 in the Eastern Shore league; Frank Chilton, who'll be a good left-handed pitcher if ever he gets out of a streak of wildness; George Dumont, who will in all probability be traded; Carl Niemitz, who pitched for Greenville, decided to go into the cotton business and has turned again to baseball; Bunkum Morris, who pitched well for Albany in the Southeastern; White, a semi-pro pitcher who caught Nap Rucker's fancy while hurling for West Point. White won 19 games and lost two, so they tell Mr. Spiller. And there is Ralph Griffith, also from the Eastern Shore league.

Fourteen of them. Seven left-handers and seven right-handers. It seems that out of that Wilbur Good should get a good pitching staff. But you never can tell. Maybe he will and maybe he won't. You'll have to wait and see.

Gulf Beats Reds In Court Upset

The Gulf Refining company pulled a surprise Saturday afternoon by defeating the A. A. C. Reds by a convincing score, 34 to 14. The Gulf team has been polishing its guns and saving its ammunition for three weeks in preparation for this battle, and the stuff they turned loose on the Reds was the best they have pulled this year. They missed plenty of shots, but they punched so many openings in the usually solid defense of the Reds that they could make just a small percentage of them and still win. The Reds have won from Gulf twice already this year, and this defeat came as a shock to many of the Red followers.

In the second game of the afternoon the Horseguards played rings around the Southern in spasms and won from them, 14 to 18. The recovery of Endicott by the Horseguards helped them to win and Chopin was also in unusual form.

Davidson Begins Grid Work Soon

Davidson, N. C., January 26.—Coach Monk Younger today announced that spring football practice for the Davidson college Wildcats will begin next Monday afternoon with Tex Tilson, line instructor, in charge. Six weeks of intensive drilling will be the menu for the 1929 varsity candidates.

Later in the season Coach Younger will assist in the training. At present he is tutoring the basketball outfit. All other coaches at Davidson are occupied with duties, Coach Buck Miles being in charge of wrestling and Captain Pritchett directing track activities.

All of the sports now in progress will not affect the football training to any material extent. Less than half a dozen prospective members of the 1929 eleven are involved in other sports, which means that an unusually large squad will be daily reporting to Tex Tilson. Toward the end of the spring workouts the squad will be divided into two teams for scrimmage purposes, but the major portion of the time will be devoted to fundamentals.

1,300 Yards.

In ten games Gerald Snyder, Maryland back, gained 1,300 yards. He made 137 against Yale. In one of the ten games he played only a single period. In another he carried the ball but three times.

Chicago's Sox Give Promise Of Real Team

Manager Blackburn Fills Up Ranks With New Blood and Waits for Campaign.

BY GEORGE MORIARTY,
Big League Umpire.
(Copyright, 1929, by the North American Newspaper Alliance.)

For a team expected to show considerable improvement rather than pennant possibilities, the Chicago White Sox are sitting pretty, likewise Manager Blackburn.

With a few decent breaks, I would not be surprised if the men of Blackburn did much better than the advance dope indicates. Right now they figure to land in one of the first three positions below second place. At present any American league manager (Miller Huggins excepted) guilty of harboring pennant designs, might just as well attempt to shatter the stock market with a newsboy's bank roll.

Fills Up Ranks.

Blackburn has filled up the ranks with an influx of young blood, and thereby enjoys a nice advantage. The big concrete stadiums thrill the youngsters and prompt them to take perilous chances. Big league surroundings lend enraptured vision, and instead of the spur a manager finds it necessary to employ a toning-down effect upon his rookies.

There are many bright spots in the makeup of the White Sox. It looks as if Art Shires had locked up the first base job and thrown away the key. No first baseman of recent years has zoomed into the big leagues with a more perfect landing. He is an ideal first baseman and would rather have the measles than hit a measley grounder or a puny fly. He has endeared himself to the fans by his make-it-snappy attitude, pep and real love for the game.

Reynolds Knows Business.

Also turn the spotlight on Carl Reynolds for a moment. Here is an outfielder in the making who knows a lot about fly-catching, and he steps to the plate with that I'm-here-to-knock-it-down-your-throat look at the pitchers.

Just a word about Shortstop Bill Cissell. Some folk seem undecided about his ability. I don't share that feeling. I liked Cissell first-sight at shortstop, and feel no risk in repeating that he will be a recognized star one of these days.

Correct selection of the fly-chasers may be Blackburn's vexing problem. Nine of them are on the list. That number is a virtue unless a real outfielder slips away in the thinning-out process. Second base is a worrisome spot for the White Sox chief. Several have attempted to play it regularly since Eddie Collins departed. Hunnefield has real keystone ability if he could settle down to the task. Kerr, Swanson and Redfern will compete for the job.

Berg Turns Catcher.

Moe Berg startled the profession last summer when he Houdinied himself from a shortstop into a catcher. The transformation was a complete success. Count Berg among the big shots behind the bat. The White Sox pitching staff looks capable of upholding its part of the burden if one or two of the youngsters come through. Yes, it begins to look rosy for Blackburn and his White Sox.

Bert Shotten, manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, is depending upon his somewhat newly-made infield to hoist his club into some of the National league sunshine. Whitney, Thevenow, Hurst and Thompson form the inner wall. This infield would be held in high regard if it were part of a 1-2-3 club.

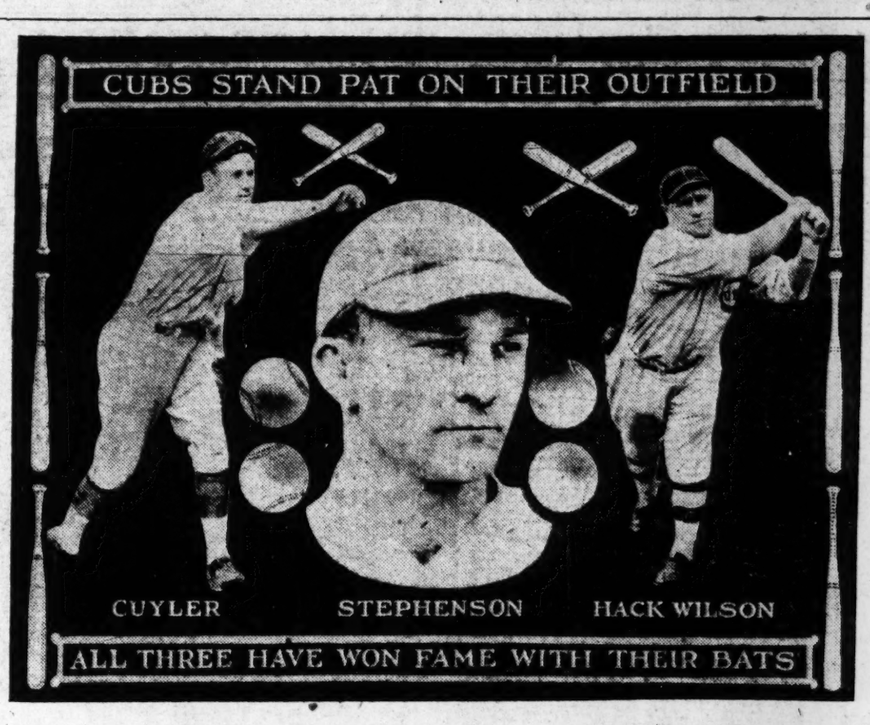

Thevenow, as you recall, joined the Phillies in the deal that sent Catcher Wilson to the St. Louis Cardinals. Outfielders Klein, Southern, O'Doul, Catcher Lerian and Pitcher Ulrich are additional reasons for the belief that the Phillies may do much better this year.

Only Three Loses.

Penn State loses only three football stars by graduation in June. And this year's sophomores are promising. Most of the 1928 team was of sophomore strength.

42,000 Capacity.

The big sports coliseum, to be known as the Chicago stadium, will have a seating capacity of 25,000 when it is opened in February. Eventually the capacity will be 42,000.

Hard Hitting Gardeners To Patrol Outfield For Cubs Next Season

Stephenson, Cuyler and Wilson Make Up Outer Defense.

There was a lot of speculation over the National league loop last spring as to what the Cubs would do with Cuyler added to their outfield that already boasted of Wilson and Stephenson. It was bruited about that here were three .350 hitters on one team and they would crash their way through all league defenses. But Stephenson fell off 20 points in his hitting and Cuyler, a demon in the springtime, always slumps in hitting in midsummer, so the Cubs fell just a few games short of the flag.

They are talking about Hornsby and his .400 hitting average and what he will do for the Cubs as the springtime days draw near. But the Cubs still have that potential outfield. All three of these men are what they call natural hitters. They have the eye, the stance, the swing and the aptitude of the free-handed slugger, and men of this type are always dangerous and always apt to come back with a .350 average.

Even though they did not play up to their full form last season there is no doubt but that this trio, on their records, rank with the Yankee trio as the two best outfields in baseball at this time.

Cuyler batted only .284 last season, a drop of more than 70 points from his 1925 record, but he scored 92 runs and batted in 79 runs, and he led both leagues in stolen bases with 37, made 17 home runs and 25 two-baggers. This is a remarkable offensive performance to go with such a modest batting average. Then Cuyler is a ball hawk in the field.

Cuyler hit for an average of .344 during the years of 1924, 1925, 1926. He is 29 years old and has played six seasons on the big time. His batting slump of the past two seasons is inexplicable. He is fast, keen, smart and takes excellent care of himself. Temperament is considered by many as the chief cause of the dimming of this young star. His sudden setback and McCarthy's wise coaching may bring him back to the heights that every natural baseball talent fit him to occupy.

This stocky, powerful, colorful young man has had a brief but troubled career on the big time. When he came to McGraw in 1924 he blossomed early that spring into a corking fielder, a fast runner, a slashing hitter and an aggressive and popular player. The Polo fans doted on him. But he went into a batting slump in mid-summer that changed the cheers into a wrath of raspberry. The next spring he could not hit at all, so McGraw sent him to Toledo with a string attached. The string slipped or broke or something and Wilson became Toledo property. When he fell back to Double A he suddenly found himself and began to slug the ball. The Cubs grabbed him in the draft the next winter. For three years now he has been a favorite at Wrigley field, but they still weave the raspberry wreath for him once in a while when he fans out too often or in some crisis of a vital game. The grand thing about Wilson is, he tries so hard. He gives everything he has to every game. He hits a little below .320 and he leads his league in strikeouts, but he bats in more than one hundred runs and he hits for extra bases when he does connect with the ball.

This Cub outfielder once hit .371 for Cleveland in the American league. That was back in 1924. He was an infielder then, and his defensive play was so weak that it did not offset his big batting average. They finally let him go to Indianapolis. He slugged his way back to the big show, this time appearing with the Cubs as an outfielder. He worked like a Trojan to perfect his outfield play and finally succeeded. He hit .338 in 1926 and .344 in 1927, and became a star. Last season he fell back to .324, still a most respectable mark. Stephenson came from the University of Alabama and is 29 years old.

Here is an all-star outfield—on their past records. Every man a dangerous batsman and always liable to hit for extra bases. One is a ball hawk, one is a good fielder and one is fair. They batted in 289 runs, slugged out 93 two-baggers and made 56 home runs. If they accomplished these batting exploits while not hitting up to form it can readily be seen that here is a potential trio for any pennant contender when they are going at their best. Here is an outfield capable of hitting right at the .350 mark. Add Hornsby with his .400 batting punch to all this dynamite and you have offensive power that is sure to gain a lot of ground in any campaign against any foe.

Y. C. A. A. LEADERS MEET MONDAY IN FEATURE

The Central Presbyterian court will be the scene of a big battle Monday night when the Alpha and J. O. Y. class, leader and runnerup in the Sewanee league, met for the last time this season and a loss by the latter club practically eliminates it from the running. As both teams have a large following the capacity of the house will be taxed to take care of the crowd expected to attend.

Two teams that were last in starting but which have played consistent ball for the past few weeks meet in the last game of the night and good game with a close should result. Several unexpected victories were registered the past week causing a general shakeup in the standings of the clubs. Most notable of these was the win of the Associate Reform Presbyterian club, and victory gained them a first division berth.

Dixie League.

Western Heights Baptist continues to hold its perfect record and the coming week should see another victory added as the Heights team is slated to meet the Yomecla class, second division team. The feature tilt of the series goes to the Black and Gold and Peachtree Christian teams as a win for the latter club will give them a tie for second place. This game will open the series which is to be played at the Y. M. C. A. on Thursday night. Northwest Atlanta returned to the form that kept it in a threatening position all season in Thursday's series and must be reckoned with the balance of the season.

Cherokee League.

The Cherokee league will be idle during the coming week as the leaders, Western Heights Baptist, meet the Elberfield Sisters, of Chattanooga, in the preliminary game to the Rosenblum-Penn-Dixie setto that will be the mecca of the basketball fans of this city Thursday night in the auditorium.

Seven to One.

The Cubs have a lineup of seven right-hand hitters and only one hitting from the other side in the lineup that is figured on to start the next baseball season.

TARHEELS WIN OVER GENERALS IN MAT MATCH

Lexington, Va., January 26.—(AP) The University of North Carolina opened its wrestling season here this afternoon by defeating Washington and Lee, 26 to 6, scoring three falls and two decisions, and adding five points by the forfeit route in the 175-pound class. The Generals' only victories were decisions accumulated by Kaplan in the 125-pound division and Bolton, competing as an unlimited.

Cowper, of North Carolina, and Flagg, of Washington and Lee, wrestling in the 165-pound class, participated in what proved to be the feature bout of the meet, going through two extra periods to result in Cowper's victory by time advantage of two minutes and twenty seconds.

Woodward took a close decision from Captain Rule, of the Generals, by one minutes, eight seconds advantage, giving the Washington and Lee leader the second defeat of his career.

Before the varsity engagement the freshmen of the two institutions grappled to a 20-all tie, each team winning four falls.

Varsity summary:

115 pounds: Stalling, U. N. C., defeated Backus by a fall in 5 minutes 39 seconds.

125 pounds: Kaplan, W. & L., won decision over Zealey, 2 minutes 15 seconds, time advantage.

135 pounds: Woodward, U. N. C., won decision over Captain Rule, 1 minute 8 seconds, time advantage.

145 pounds: Abbott, U. N. C., won from Belser by fall in 6 minutes 6 seconds.

155 pounds: Moore, U. N. C., won from Hall in two falls, the first in 2 minutes, the second in 12 seconds of a divided time bout.

165 pounds: Cowper, U. N. C., won decision over Flagg in extra period bout, 3 minutes 20 seconds, time advantage.

175 pounds: Forfeited to University of North Carolina.

Unlimited: Bolton, W. & L., won decision over Stone, 3 minutes 10 seconds, time advantage.

Strange But True.

Virginia Poly's 1929 captain didn't play a single game in 1928 for he was injured in the first practice. He is L. B. Nutter, a star end in 1926 and 1927.

A Long Jump.

The Rochester Red Wings moved a long way from Monroe, La., to Plant City, Fla., for their 1929 spring training camp.

Weaker Clubs Add Strength In American

New York Yankees Again Appear To Be Ringmaster of One-Ring Circus.

BY ORLO L. ROBERTSTON.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—With revamped infields, more or less uncertain outfields and likely looking newcomers among battery men, the American league this year assumes the aspect of a one-ring circus with the New York Yankees the ringmaster.

Although the off-season was productive of deals designed to improve the various clubs it remains to be seen whether the changes have been for the better. On paper the trades seem to have struck a more even balance among the entries.

Weaker Clubs Stronger.

The weaker clubs seemed to have been strengthened while the first division teams' activities in the market apparently have not bolstered their lineups to any great extent.

The New York Yankees have picked up promising rookie pitchers in Ed Wells, of Birmingham; Gordon Rhodes, of Hollywood, and Floyd Van Pelt, of Montgomery, but they will enter the race with a revamped left side of the infield, and aging outfield and an uncertain pitching staff that crumbled near the close of the 1928 season. Mark Koenig will probably be shifted to third with either Leo Durocher, the fiery little second baseman, or Lyn Lary, Oakland rookie, getting the call at shortstop.

The Philadelphia Athletics have added four rookie southpaw pitchers and Summa, a veteran outfielder, between the seasons while the St. Louis Browns' acquisitions consist largely of hurler and reserve material.

Browns Grab Light.

The Browns made a big play in coming up from seventh to third place in one season but they were 19 games out of first place last year when the Yankees nosed out the Athletics. Dick Farrell, Columbus catcher, made a free agent by Commissioner Landis, is the real important addition to the Howley team. He may get the regular receiving berth.

Walter Johnson is counting on a lot of young pitchers and Buddy Myer, bought back from Boston for five players, to make his first year at Washington a success. The "Big Train" also will have an infield problem, Joe Judge being the only certainty and he is growing old.

The Chicago White Sox have their usual cavity at second base with no promising prospect. Second base is not the only problem facing Manager Lena Blackburne. He has nine aspirants for the outfield, a weak catching staff to bolster and the improvement of Bill Cissell at short.

Harris At Detroit.

In contrast to the White Sox, Bucky Harris is going into his first year as manager of the Tigers with few "ifs." Bucky is a great manager with a new club and, although his tentative lineup lacks the outfield punch, characteristic of the Tigers for 25 years, he has a hard-working pitching staff strengthened by the Cleveland ace, Uhle.

Much of the club's success, however, depends upon Schuble at shortstop and Roy Johnson, the young west coast outfielder.

What Roger Peckinpaugh does with the Cleveland Indians depends on his new outfield. Tavener, at shortstop, will help the Indians, but the club needs a seasoned first baseman and pitchers.

The Boston Red Sox believe they made an excellent deal in getting rid of Myer for five Washington players, including Gaston, a pitcher. Reeves will be shifted to third base, but there will be four candidates for shortstop, two of them converted second basemen.

The Marines advanced to the last game without a defeat and then lost to the Navy, the first in two seasons. With it the Marines lost possession of the President's cup.

BASKETBALL SHOTS

BY TED VOSBURGH.
Associated Press Sports Writer.

Coach Ed Kelleher's great Fordham varsity basketball five, victor over such teams as Yale, Princeton, Colgate and Syracuse, has a record of never having started a game.

All five of the first stringers are seniors and they have played together every season for four years, but they do their playing in the last three quarters of the game. For the first few minutes they watch the shock troops work.

"I believe I was the first to apply the two-team idea in basketball," said the genial Kelleher, who learned the game as a member of the Niagara university team back around 1910. "Anyway I have made a practice of starting my second team in every game for the four years I have been coach. I do it in all games, hard or soft. It seems to be an important factor in winning, in addition to having the advantage of getting more men into the play.

"With my regulars on the bench they are able to size up the other team pretty thoroughly and see just what they should do when they get in there. Little damage is usually done in the first part of a game anyway and the seconds ordinarily leave only a couple of points behind.

"Then, too, there's a psychological advantage. Boys of college age are impressionable and there is bound to be a disturbing effect upon the opposing players when a fresh varsity comes prancing onto the floor after they have had a hard time holding the seconds.

"The system has a good effect on our second-stringers, giving them added confidence and experience so that a year or so later they will be ready for varsity play."

Kelleher's present big five which at the time of writing had reeled off its first nine games without a defeat was his freshman team four years ago and did shock troop duty the next season before winning the varsity assignment last year.

Its members are fairly tall, Sweetman, the center, and Landers, left forward, being more than six feet. All five are built for speed without being willowy or fragile.

"In Dougherty, the captain, I have one of the fastest running guards I have ever seen," said Kelleher. "He shoots with either hand. Reardon, the other guard, who is sent into scoring territory only a couple of times in a game, is the fastest man on the team, so that his presence around midcourt while we are in possession of the ball is a constant threat."

A big factor in the making of the Fordham team's sensational early season sweep was the set of tactical weapons placed in its hands by Kelleher.

He uses a five-man defense which is air-tight, the men falling back immediately after losing possession of the ball.

When the ball is in their own hands four men are well down in enemy territory while the standing guard is at mid-floor.

"My offensive starts from back court," Kelleher explained. "The two forwards come in fast and both are in the air when the ball is tipped. The forward getting the ball passes it back to one of the guards and the attack begins from there.

"The center and the guards are near the middle of the floor and the forwards nearer the basket at the sides. Under my system three men always cut at once."

The offensive outlined is a five-man attack, as the standing guard is its starting point and is always near enough to the basket to be dangerous, a kind of suspended two-edged sword.

Cubs, Giants, Pirates, Cardinals Are Favored in National Race

Mid-Winter Dope Gives These Four Clubs Best Chance at Flag.

BY BRIAN BELL.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—On the basis of midwinter calculations, the only baseball fuel available now, the National league divides itself into two parts for 1929.

Advance opinions of experts show a disposition to place the Chicago Cubs, New York Giants, Pittsburgh Pirates and St. Louis Cardinals in the front rank, with the Cincinnati Reds, Brooklyn Robins, Philadelphia Nationals and Boston Braves bringing up the rear.

Such a development in strength would find baseball history repeating itself, for the first-division clubs last year were St. Louis, New York, Chicago and Pittsburgh.

Rajah Counted On.

The big bat of Hornsby, added to the Cubs' offensive, may be powerful enough to lift Chicago above its third place standing of 1928. With the exception of adding the former St. Louis and Boston manager to his infield, Manager McCarthy will stand pat.

The Giants will enter the next campaign with few changes, one important move being the addition of Fred Leach, former Phillie, to the outfield. Information from Toledo is that Pat Crawford, South Carolina Jack-of-all baseball trades, will be heard from.

The Cardinals propose to gamble on a wholesale scale in the infield, sending Charley Gelbert and Carey Selph, two sensational minor league recruits, to shortstop and second base with Frankie Frisch moving to third, leaving ody Jim Bottomley as a holdover in the first line of defense. Billy Southworth, a prominent figure in the 1926 world series and last year highly successful as manager of Rochester, will manage the Cards and appear on occasion in his old stamping ground, right field.

Long without a capable left-handed pitcher, the Pirates traded Glenn Wright, their shortstop, for Jess Petty, star southpaw of Brooklyn. A successor must be found for Wright and he may be located by moving Pie Traynor from third base. This doubtless will depend on the ability of Jim Stroner, Wichita recruit, to take care of third.

The second division clubs of last season look with eager anticipation at a full crop of talent from the minors. They will have more youngsters than their more favored fellows and will need them more.

Phils Lucky in Draw.

The Phillies were lucky in the draw last season and have more to build about than was the case when Burt Shotton took his club south last spring. Don Hurst, Pinky Whitney, infielders; Chuck Klein, outfielder, and two promising catchers, Davis and Lerian, made good last year. Thompson and Thevenow complete an able infield combination. If the Phillies get an improved brand of pitching they should get out of the cellar in 1929.

The Reds have been on the lookout for additional hitting strength and Jack Hendricks thinks he has arranged for some extra base hits from Joe Stripp, third baseman. The outfield may be tinkered too before the season gets under way as there are several men in the new crop who hit minor lague pitching to good advantage.

Rhiel Is Sure Bet.

Brooklyn will depend on Glenn Wright to boost the infield and Billy Rhiel should be about due for infield or outfield assignment after a seasoning period at Atlanta. Manager Wilbert Robinson has declared the outfield wide open with a free-for-all battle at Clearwater to decide the winners.

Boston faces a difficult task. The Braves will have to draw heavily on their reinforcements to assemble a cast strong enough to make a dent in the armor of rival clubs. Rabbit Maranville, who never grows old, will play short and bring a lot of enthusiasm to one of his many alma mater clubs, and George Harper may do some hitting. The outfield will be built around Lance Richbourg, one of the great players of the game. President-Manager Emil Fuchs, his first lieutenant, Johnny Evers, and Hank Gowdy, second assistant, will have plenty of players to inspect at the St. Petersburg, Fla., training camp.

Dempsey Defeated Himself in Seventh Round, Says Referee

Barry Tells Of Knockdown In Title Bout

What Happened When Tunney Went Down and How Rounds Were Scored Are Explained.

In last week's installment of "The Truth About That 14 Count," Dave Barry broke a silence of 14 months to reply to the hooting and jeering that has made him a marked man since the Tunney-Dempsey fight. Barry told of his early career, his own fighting career, of his work as a referee, of the secret meeting of the Illinois athletic commission and the tap on the shoulder that sent him into the ring. Barry has called Tunney and Dempsey into the ring. Now take up his story from that point.

The clamor about the ring as I stood in the center to give Tunney and Dempsey their final instructions was deafening. Telegraph keys were clattering as they shot the news to all parts of the world that the greatest bout in history was starting. Flashlights were booming. Broadcasters, their heads buried in the hoods of their radio micropones, were telling 5,000,000 listeners that Tunney and Dempsey were receiving instructions. I'll never forget the murmur of 145,000 voices as it rolled down on that ring.

Jack came out in his bathrobe with Leo Flynn and Gus Wilson in attendance. Tunney met him. They eyed each other squarely. Jimmy Bronson and Billy Gibson waited with Gene. On my right was Dempsey. On my left was the champion.

Talks to Fighters.

Addressing Jack, I asked, "Who's your chief second?"

Pointing with his thumb, he answered, "Flynn."

Turning to Tunney, I asked, "Who's your chief second, Champ?" More self-contained, it seemed to me, Tunney replied, "Jimmy Bronson."

Addressing these chief seconds, I said: "You're the only two whom I will recognize in the corners. If you wish to take anything up with me, call me over between rounds."

Then, speaking to the principals, I said: "You fellows are boxing Marquis of Queensbury rules, with several exceptions—that is, you may fight while your arms are free. If one man is holding, the other may punch as he wants, and I will give him every chance. But when you are locked and I order a break you'll cease struggling immediately and both step back clean. I won't tolerate any sneak punches on the breakaway. Do you understand?" Both nodded affirmatively.

Repeats Knockdown Rule.

Continuing, I said: "In case of a knockdown, the man on his feet will immediately retire to the farther neutral corner. I won't begin my count until he has done so. He must remain there until the other fellow has been counted out or is back on his feet."

(Remember, these instructions were given in the presence of not only Tunney and Dempsey, but also of Flynn, Wilson, Bronson and Gibson.)

Again I asked, "Do you understand?" I got an affirmative answer from the principals, Flynn and Bronson.

"Is there anything more you want to take up?" I inquired further. Four men shook their heads "no."

Then I ordered: "Shake hands and come out fighting."

The men retired to their corners. Bath robes were thrown off; attendants crawled through the ropes and a second later the gong rang.

The first round of Dempsey's historic attempt to wrest back the world championship that he lost on that rainy night in Philadelphia a year before was on.

Jack Comes Out Slowly.

In other fights Dempsey had charged out of his corner. I stepped back at the sound of the gong, half expecting that Dempsey would charge as of old. But it was a different Dempsey who came out to meet the man who had toppled him from the greatest of all fistic thrones.

He came out, did Jack, with catlike tread. Tunney advanced in orthodox stance. His every movement was calm and deliberate. Since the night of the fight I have had time to recall those moments and it often has struck me that Tunney in his attitude fitted the description handed down of old Jem Mace, the father of modern boxing.

He was cool. Why shouldn't he be? He had beaten this Manassa Mauler. Outboxed him to a fare you well. Let Dempsey do the attacking. He would hold him off, outbox him and thus keep safe the title that was worth millions.

Before more than a minute of the first round was over the thought flashed through my brain: "Both are fighting along premeditated lines."

Tunney Was Landing High.

Tunney was standing upright and apparently crossing Dempsey by using a one-two punch. (Technically a one-two is a still straight left hand lead to the face intended to tilt the chin of the opponent upward. The No. 2 punch is meant to deliver a blow to the chin.)

As a matter of fact I noted that Tunney was so intent upon his right hand blow that he slighted the preparatory or left hand chin tilter.

The result was that Tunney's right handers were landing high on the forehead or eye rather than upon the chin.

While Dempsey was swaying back and forth ever pressing Tunney, Gene was flicking out that left hand. It was like a serpent's tongue, licking, licking at Dempsey's face.

Three minutes ticked away. The timekeeper, Paul Beeler, seated in a high chair at the middle of the north side of the ring, rang the gong and the two fighters walked to their corners.

I walked to the ropes and took out the score card.

How Barry Scores a Round

For years I have used one method for scoring a round. First, I ask myself: "Who was the aggressor?" By aggressor I differentiate between the fighter who is plodding after the other, forcing him back, with the thought of countering a lead, and the man who does the leading.

Judgment comes in here. If one fighter merely walks toward his opponent with his hands upraised around his head I'd not consider him the real aggressor. The retiring fighter, if he leads with blows, is the fellow who is taking the chance, and is in reality more aggressive than his advancing foe.

The second question that I ask myself is this: "Which fighter delivered the more clean and effective blows?" By clean and effective punches I mean blows struck with the knuckle or closed part of the glove to vulnerable parts of the body; i. e., heart, jaw or solar plexus as differentiated from punches to the top of the head, back or shoulders or slaps with the open glove.

Question three is: "Sportsmanship?" By this I take to be obedience to the referee's commands and a general sense of fair play. Ordinarily this sportsmanship is evenly divided among the two fighters. But the question and its answer permits the referee to assess a penalty against an unfair fighter by totaling all of his little acts of unfairness.

Uses 10 for Unit.

Having judged a round by answering these three questions, I score it by taking 10 for a unit. If the round is even I give each fighter five points. Where there is a slight shade I score 6 and 4 and so on, with the ratio sometimes reaching 9 to 1, but rarely 10 to 0.

Instead of trying to arrive at a verdict by counting the number of individual rounds won, I reach my decisions by adding the points in all the rounds. The grand total is the deciding factor in arriving at my decision.

The score of the first round of the Tunney-Dempsey fight was Tunney 6, Dempsey 4. Tunney was given the two-point shade because he landed the cleaner and more effective punches of the round. Dempsey was forcing but was not, as many apparently believed, leading. Sportsmanship was equal.

Round two was a repetition of the first round, except that Dempsey began to use what some observers termed the rabbit punch. Dempsey did not use the rabbit punch, a blow which is struck with the outer edge of the open hand. (The blow, incidentally, is called rabbit punch because of its similarity to the technique used by Australian huntsmen in killing rabbits caught in nets.) In Dempsey's case what was mistaken for the rabbit punch was a blow struck with the thumb, heavily padded in a boxing glove.

On the Border Line.

It is true that even this blow was on the border line of a foul and was deemed sufficient cause for me to warn Dempsey. If I had been as rabidly prejudiced against Dempsey as many have claimed I could have rightly disqualified him. It would have been a strict enforcement of the rule. This round also was scored Tunney, 6; Dempsey, 4.

It was after the second round that I was called to Tunney's corner by Jimmy Bronson. He seemed greatly excited.

He shouted: "Referee, they're putting grease on him." I turned and went straight to Dempsey's corner and there saw Jerry Luvadis spreading what appeared to be vaseline on Jack's face and shoulders. (The purpose of rubbing vaseline on a fighter's face and body is to cause an opponent's blows to slide, and thus diminish the chance of skin tearing.)

I grabbed a towel from Jerry's shoulder and wiped off Jack's face and chest just as the gong sounded for the third round. No remonstrance was made.

In round three Dempsey made his best showing up to that time. This round was one of the two won by Dempsey. I scored the round, Dempsey, 6; Tunney, 4. Tunney immediately resumed the lead in the fourth, however. This round I scored, Tunney, 7; Dempsey, 3.

Round five found Tunney considerably farther in the lead than in any of the previous rounds. His one-two punches reached their mark with much greater effectiveness. It was in this round that Dempsey's left eyebrow was cut and the cheek showed a decided swelling. I scored this round, Tunney, 7; Dempsey, 3.

Tunney unquestionably was outboxing Dempsey and I thought to myself that it was likely that the crowd was going to witness a very dull show from this time on. Little did I know of what would transpire in the next few minutes. After the round had ended I jotted down Tunney 6, Dempsey 4, on my score card. The heat from the tremendous lights hung over the ring was beginning to bring perspiration to my face, despite the chill of the air.

The Big Round.

Now we come to the seventh round. Action in the first minute was a repetition of that in preceding rounds. Suddenly things began to happen. Dempsey's rolling technique, which previously had missed the mark a hundred times, paid dividends with dramatic suddenness. The ex-champion's flail first caught Tunney in a left sweep—a 'crash of Jack's right first on the side of Gene's jaw, an inch too high for a knockout. It was the beginning of as murderous an attack as I ever saw in a ring.

Tunney, the master boxer, had lowered his guard or miscalculated by a fraction of an inch. Some say he had grown careless. I don't think so. I really think that dodging one of Jack's swings Gene's back came in contact with the taut rope and the rebound carried him into the punch.

Jack's punches came with the force of a piledriver and the rapidity of a triphammer. For the moment Dempsey was the Dempsey of the Willard fight.

A Moment of Thrills.

This was the mountain top, the end of the long comeback trail. I wish I could write the drama of this thrill-packed moment.

Since then I have wished I might have been one of those 145,000 outside the ring, watching and feeling and cheering. I remember yet the terrific impact of the sound wave that hit me in the 20-foot ring. Did you ever have 145,000 face you and yell at you?

Others, more learned than I, may tell you that there really was a force, a physical force, that swept down on us three from the far reaches of Soldiers' field. I only know that I actually felt as though something had hit me. Maybe it was vibration. I know not just what to call it. But some day if a great torrent of water should suddenly strike me, I think the effect of that torrent might approximate the force of that mysterious blow.

Outside the ring I have been told there was pandemonium. Men were standing on chairs, waving their arms and shouting at the top of their voices. Women were screaming. Folks were pounding one another on the shoulder, tossing their hats in the air.

"He's down, he's down, he's down."

I've been told all this. I didn't hear the shouting. I didn't see the hats flying.

Felt No Excitement.

As Tunney's quivering knees struck the canvas, perforce of habit I approached with right hand upraised to begin the count. It sounds strange now for me to say that I felt no excitement, neither exhaltation or panic. In fact as far as I am able to reconstruct my feelings I think they were purely mechanical reactions to a situation that I had seen many, many times before.

Here were two fighters, one of them apparently on the verge of a knockout. And here was I, the referee to count him out or see him arise to continue the battle.

My right hand sank with my left hand extended in front of Dempsey. I uttered no count.

Still acting mechanically I shouted: "Jack, to a neutral corner."

Vividly I recall seeing Tunney sink to the floor with his left hand grasping the middle of the three ropes on the west side of the ring.

Jack Stood Over Gene.

Dempsey was standing directly in front of his prostrate foe, with his right foot between Tunney's outstretched feet. I can still see him—the mauler. He was a quivering tower of muscle and nerves. His body was slightly bent toward the fallen champion. His hands were clenched. His facial muscles were taut, his teeth bare and jaws clenched.

The thought flashed through my mind. "He going to strike the man on the floor."

I thrust my left arm in front of Dempsey and shouted those instructions: "Jack, to a neutral corner."

For an instant he hesitated and then he circles around my left arm and stepped into his own corner, directly behind Tunney and about three feet away. He could have reached over and hit Tunney with a right hand swing.

My right hand had fallen, but I never uttered the word "one," although I distinctly heard the timekeeper beginning the toll.

I followed Dempsey into his own corner and with my right hand grasped him and with my left pointed to the neutral corner.

For another instant he hesitated, and then, realizing that he must obey, he seemed to slink along the rope, his eyes never leaving the humbled champion.

As Dempsey started for the neutral corner I turned to Beeler, the timekeeper, and raising the index finger of my right hand shouted "One."

During the time consumed in my effort to get Dempsey in a neutral corner (the southwest corner of the right) I had plainly heard the timekeeper counting "One," "Two," "Three," "Four." In the excitement of the moment, it was evident, that the timekeeper, his eyes fixed on his watch, had failed to note that in accordance with the knockdown rule, I had not started the count because of Dempsey's failure to take a neutral corner. You will recall that I have previously explained that the boxing commissioners unanimously had ruled that should a boxer on his feet fail to stay in a neutral corner when his opponent was down, the referee and timekeeper should cease counting until the standing boxer had gone to the neutral spot.

The Difference in the Count.

When I sprang back in front of Tunney and shouted "One!" the timekeeper's count had passed "four," when, in strict accordance with the commission's ruling, it never should have been started.

Understand, I attach no blame to Timekeeper Beeler on this score. I am convinced that in his effort to do his part he was so intent on watching the hands of his stopwatch that he had not noticed Dempsey's disobedience of a clear cut rule, a rule that had been called to the attention of the principals before the bout started.

Tunney's face had a dazed, fixed expression. But before I had said "two." that expression changed as though a mask had been lifted. He nodded to his seconds in his corner.

They were motioning him to stay down for the full count of nine.

On the count of nine Tunney began to pull himself to his feet.

As I shouted "ten" he was up and away.

Mounts His Bicycle.

Then came the strategy which produced what many referred to as Tunney's classic bicycle ride. Dempsey chased the champion round and round the ring. He couldn't corner him. Jack challenged Gene with a leering gesture. But Gene was unimpressed.

A half minute before the round had closed Tunney again was himself. The retreat was still on, but there were pauses in which Tunney poked at Dempsey's lacerated face with his left. As it later developed, Dempsey's big opportunity had flown.

The gong sounded to mark the end of round seven. I pulled my score card from my pocket. On it I made the entry: Dempsey, 9; Tunney, 1.

I did not realize at the time that that round was going to play so important a part in my life. I didn't know that from that time on I was to be ridiculed, jeered and hooted as "14 Count Barry."

What did happen is a matter of history. May we pause to reflect on what might have happened?

I had seen the possessor of a $2,000,000 title sprawling on the floor. I had seen his foe attempt to stand over him and I had been convinced that this man on his feet—this Dempsey—would even slug Tunney while he was down.

Would there have been a greater storm if the commission rule had been ignored and Dempsey had been permitted to stand-over Tunney, and had struck him when he arose? Would there have been a greater storm had I permitted Dempsey to carry out his evident impulse to hit Tunney before he got to his feet and then had disqualified him? This is my guess—there would have been a riot.

Acted from Habit.

Perhaps I acted as an automaton. I have refereed more than 600 fights. I'm confident a man of slight experience might have forgotten the rules. Habit may have been as big a factor in my favor as judgment. Yes, perhaps I acted as an automaton. But fair men, familiar with the facts and in possession of a thorough knowledge of boxing should be glad that I did. There were no two paths to take.

At the final bell I separated the fighters. Then I added up my card. The total score was: Tunney, 57; Dempsey, 43. Had I been scoring by rounds the score would have been: Tunney, 8; Dempsey, 2.

I walked to the side of the ring and handed my card to Al Smith, the announcer. I left the ring while Smith was getting the cards of the judges. I took my seat at the ringside. Smith read the three cards and then raised Tunney's right arm in token of victory.

Barry Tells His Purpose.

This is a plain story given without embellishment; without an attempt to be dramatic. I have told how I was chosen, sent into the ring, and how I conducted myself in the second Tunney-Dempsey fight. I have told this story in detail and with the greatest accuracy possible. I have told it not in an attempt to get vindication, but as a frank reply to a vicious slander.

True, there never has been a direct charge made against me, but by innuendo the press has carried volumes aimed to prove that I gave Dempsey the worst of it. Thousands have jeered me as "Long Count Barry." Thousands have chanted the refrain of the "14."

I don't think it fair.

I have been told that men have said I received a fortune from Tunney. I never got a cent from him or any of his friends. The Illinois boxing commission paid me a fee of $1,000 for my work in the ring.

I have heard it said that "Dave Barry never profited on the 14 count, but his brother in New York won $275,000 by betting that Tunney would win."

My brother never knew that I was to referee the title fight until he read that I had. As far as I know, he never bet a cent on the fight and as president of the Thrift Foundation in New York is not a betting man.

"Rolling in Wealth."

A New York newspaper sent a reporter to Chicago to investigate a story that I was "rolling in wealth, driving an expensive car, and had moved into a ritzy apartment."

I haven't owned an automobile since the fight, haven't moved my father, mother or myself from our simple home at 523 Melrose street, nor in any way changed my habit of living.

I have a modest bank account, but am compelled to work daily to earn a living.

It has been published that "Dave Barry knew he was to referee the battle two or three weeks before it occurred. Others knew it, but the secret had to be guarded."

This is an utter falsehood and can be proved as such by any member of the Illinois boxing commission. I have told exactly how I was picked and when I learned that I was to referee the big battle.

Scarcely Knew Tunney.

It had been bandied about that I was friendly to Tunney and picked by him to referee. I met Tunney for the first time in my life several years ago when he boxed in a semi-windup show with Jimmy Delaney in Chicago. I had never seen nor spoken with him from that time until I climbed into the ring on Soldiers' field.

Before the title fight I did not visit either training camp, talk with attaches of either camp or receive any communication directly or indirectly from Tunney or Dempsey.

While I scarcely knew Tunney, I had known Dempsey for years. I liked him. At one time I was a fellow passenger with him on a special car to and from S. Louis, where I refereed a show in which he gave an exhibition.

It has been alleged that I bet on the fight. And that is a lie. I never bet a dime on any fight.

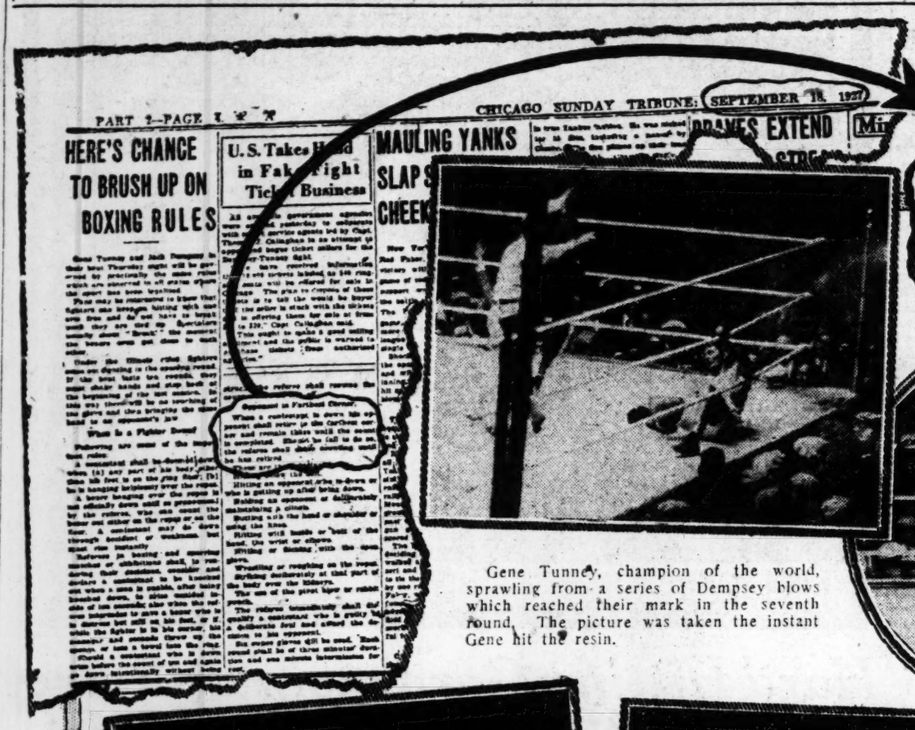

There have been other charges. It would fill a book were I to chronicle them all.

I welcome this opportunity to deny every last one which infers that by any action of mine I was not acting in fairness and good faith to either Dempsey or Tunney.

Maybe the chant of the 14 count will haunt me to my dying day. Maybe folks don't want to be fair. I think they do.

That is why I have told my story.

VIEWS OF THE FAMOUS KNOCKDOWN AT SOLDIERS' FIELD

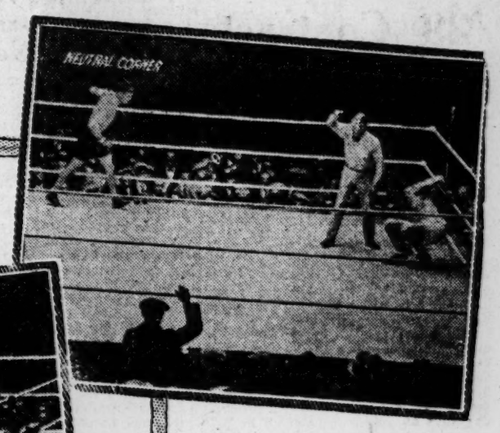

Informal charges have been made that Referee Barry's conduct was different in the eighth round when Tunney floored Dempsey for an instant. Barry says that if Dempsey hadn't jumped to his feet immediately there would have been no count until Tunney had gone to a neutral corner.

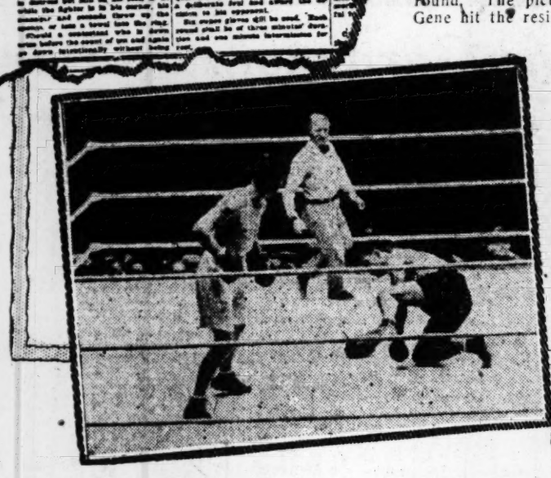

Gene Tunney, champion of the world, sprawling from a series of Dempsey blows which reached their mark in the seventh round. The picture was taken the instant Gene hit the resin.

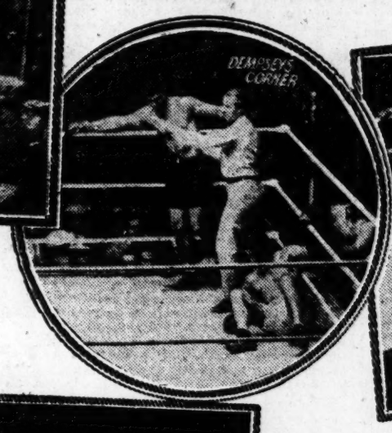

Opponent in Farthest Corner.

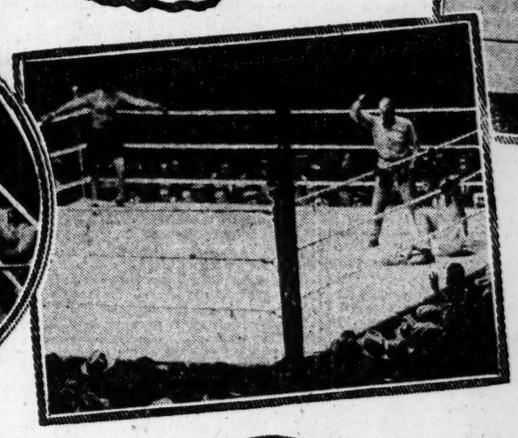

When a contestant is down his opponent shall retire to the farthest corner and remain there until the count is completed. Should he fail to do so, the referee shall cease counting until he has retired.

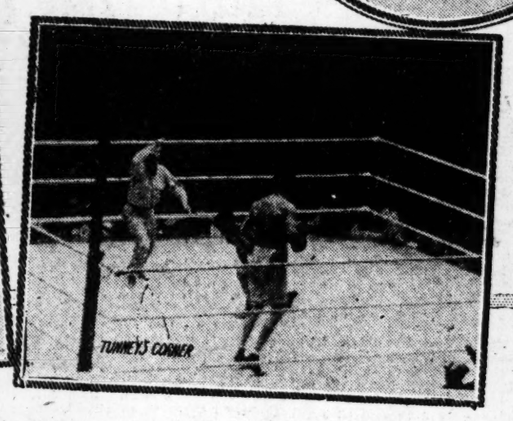

Eventually Dempsey reached the neutral corner and Referee Dave Barry started his count in compliance with the rules of the Illinois athletic commission. The man in the foreground with right hand upraised is Timekeeper Paul Beeler.

Critics of Barry say this picture shows Barry counting with Dempsey down and Tunney near his own corner. The referee says he made no count and points to his posture as shown in the other picture of Dempsey on the floor, as evidence. Further, he says, Dempsey wasn't down a full second.

The champion, the referee, and the challenger. The eyes of 145,000 persons were focused on these three men on the night of September 22, 1927.

Above—The champion, the mist cleared from his brain, obeyed the instructions of his handlers to stay down until Barry counted nine. The champion is arising here and the challenger is dashing from the neutral corner, intent upon finishing the fight.

DOWN THE LINE

BY W. O. M'GEEHAN

BY THE NUMBERS.

The New York Yankees have decided to number their players for the convenience of the customers, and Mr. Barnard, president of the American league, is considering making it a general order for the teams in his league. It seems a bit superfluous so far as some of the players are concerned. Babe Ruth could be recognized at any reasonable distance without his numerals. Also Miller Huggins, the demi-tasse manager of the Yanks, could be seen through any practical microscope.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert, president of the Yankees, could be recognized by his distinctive sartorial display—though there are times when he might be taken for Mayor Walker. As for Mr. Egbert Barrow, he is stationed permanently at the pass gate and needs no distinctive badge.

It might be a good idea to number the fighters at Madison Square Garden, because some of the judges at this place have on several occasions, shown signs of color blindness, so that the distinctive coloring of the tights has meant nothing.

If this scheme is carried out all English heavyweights should be compelled to wear their numerals on their chests, where they could be seen by those interested. If they put them on their backs the numbers would be invisible.

Seems Like Overemphasis.

Games played by the University of California drew the record attendance for the season just past. This means that in a ten-day season the attendance at these games was larger than that for many a big league baseball club for the entire season.

There seems to be no limit to the popular interest in intercollegiate football—only the limits of the various stadia. You could have one of those "million-dollar gates" for a football game if you had a place big enough to hold your customers and the nerve to charge them prizefight prices.

A Mediocre Lot.

Far be it from me to wish the great cauliflower industry any harm, but it is my firm conviction that there will be no more million-dollar gates. The customers are becoming more or less sophisticated, and when the customers get into that frame of mind they are not paying $40 apiece for a ringside seat, which is located in a county adjacent to the ring, and from which a good view may be had through a powerful telescope.

The current crop of heavyweights is quite mediocre—so mediocre that Mr. William Muldoon, some time back, felt the spirit of prophecy and predicted that Dempsey would become the heavyweight champion next year. The fact that Dempsey was beaten twice by Tunney, the retired champion, either makes Tunney a very great champion or the present heavyweights a very poor lot.

In fact, it does not seem that any of the big ones around today are worth any high price of admission. Dempsey holds a knock-out decision over Cukoschay—though I still maintain that the Garrulous Gob was fouled that night. Stribling in all of his bouts in this vicinity showed up very poorly. Heeney, who was picked as the best of the lot last year, was knocked out by Tunney. The Uzcuduns, the Hansens, the Riskos and the rest are out of the picture.

There would be no particular reason whatever for holding another battle of the century, were it not for the fact that Mr. Muldoon and Mr. Tunney have given a trophy for the next heavyweight champion. Also, it is necessary for the six hundred millionaires and the allied interests to hold an annual battle of the century to help toward raising their dividends.

But to make fights in any division of the manly art of modified murder you must have fighters. And, where are they?

New Orleans Plans Annual Grid Battle

Committee Working on Project To Assure Crescent City Big Football Tilt.

New Orleans, January 26.—(AP)—A mayor's committee of prominent business and sports citizens are moving forward to their goal of an annual football tournament between the two best teams of the year in the north and the south, to be played in New Orleans.

Already the committee has passed through the preliminaries and is now shaping definite plans for the first game on the Saturday preceding New Year's, which would be the fixed date. The general plan would be modeled along the lines of the Tournament of Roses played annually in California.

From Coast to Coast.

The Mason and Dixon line, the old war line, would be extended from coast to coast to mark the division between the north and south and some authority would select the teams to represent the respective sides. While sponsors of the tournament hope that the spirit of the 60s would prevail on the gridiron, they believe the game would obliterate in the minds of the public the last vestige of feeling, if any remains, between the south and north because of the war between the states. The teams would probably take to field to be strains of Dixie and Yankee Doodle, to rally the rooters.

Proceeds of the game after expenses and percentages for each team would go to some worthy charity.

Southern Climate.

The south, the committee points out, is ideally fitted by climatic conditions for this post-season winter game and with the interest and development in recent years of football, the south will be able to present a stalwart foe for any team the north could produce.

The committee is headed by T. Semmes Walmsley, city commissioner, and is composed of Clark Shaughnessy, Loyola coach; Bernie Bierman, Tulane coach, and Sam Fowlkes, Richard Foster, Joseph Killeen, John H. O'Keefe, A. D. Smith, John E. Boulden, Leonard Keiffer, Crawford H. Ellis, Allis Owen, Charles A. Stair, G. Owen Vincent, James W. Billingsley, Alfred Porter, Henry Aleus, James Menefee, Joseph McCarthy, Harry Williams, Herbert B. Flowers and Joseph Gumbel.

Boy Shows Way In Trap Shooting

Pinehurst, N. C., January 26.—(AP) Youth had its fling today when 14-year-old Elwell J. Ford, of Detroit, showed the way to a field of more than 80 crack trapshoot artists to win the consolidation handicap of the 22nd annual Pinehurst mid-winter target tournament.

Young Ford ran up a total of 96 from the 16-yard mark over the field which included most of those who had run up big scores in the earlier contests. Buffalo Smith, of Aiken, S. C., finished second with 92. Ford's victory was not wholly unexpected, his 90 of yesterday giving promise of his prowess.

C. A. Young, of Springfield, Ohio, won the high overall championship medal in the 950 target contest which comprised the totals of several events. He had an aggregate of 886. H. E. Johnson, of Haines City, Fla., was second with 882.

In the 600-target high overall, 16 yards, C. A. Bogert, of Sandusky, Ohio, winner of the introductory, took first place with 584.

Mrs. J. S. Murphy, of Freehold, N. J., made a clean sweep of the special trophies for women shooters, winning the 16-yard 600 and the 200-yard handicap.

Mrs. Howe Wins U. S. Title in Squash Meet

Boston, January 26.—(AP)—Mrs. William F. Howe, Jr., of Boston, became the first women's national squash racquets champion here today by defeating Mrs. George W. Wightman, of Brookline, 17-15, 15-12, 15-11. It was the final match of the tournament which opened here last Monday with a field of 64 women from Boston, New York, Philadelphia and Greenwich, Conn.

Bill Harris Purchased By Minneapolis Club

Dallas, Texas, January 26.—(AP)—Bill Harris, pitcher with the Asheville, N. C., club last year, has been bought from Minneapolis, American association, Bbb Tarleton, business manager of the Dallas, Texas, league Steers announced today.

Harris won 25 and lost 9 games last season.

High, Higher, Highest.

Two of Wisconsin's basketball regulars, Tenhopen and Kowaleyzk, stand six feet four inches each. The total height of four men ins 24 feet 11 inches.

Many Billards Prizes Offered

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Contestants for the world's 18.2 balkline billiards championship here beginning February 4 will have plenty of financial incentive. Nearly half of the total prize money which aggregates about $20,000 will go to the new champion.

The winner in what the National Billiards association says is the richest tournament ever contested in point of prize awards will get a year's salary of $6,000 during which time the title is not subject to challenge, $2,500 in cash and 38 per cent of net gate receipts.

The runner-up draws $3,000 salary, $1,500 in cash and 23 per cent of net receipts; third gets $1,150 and 17 per cent; fourth, $850 and 12 per cent; fifth, $500 and 7 per cent; and last $250 and 3 per cent.

In the field are Edouard Horemans, of Belgium, the champion; Jake Schaefer, Welker Cochran and Erich Hagenlacher, of Germany, former champions; Felix Grange, champion of France, and Kinrey Matsuyama, of Japan, world's junior champion.

El Ouafi Takes $5,000 And Sails for France

New York, January 26.—(AP)—El Ouafi, Arabian winner of the 1928 Olympic marathon, sailed for France today with $5,000, earned in his first American tour as a professional distance runner.

Officials at Madison Square Garden admitted that the visit of the wired-haired "waffle" was anything but a financial success to them. The garden also paid El Ouafi's expenses during his several months tour that included races with Joie Ray here and in Boston, as well as distance grinds in Tulsa, Okla., Detroit and Philadelphia.

Ray, who turned professional after being beaten in the Olympics by the Algerian, still is under contract with the garden. His earnings were less than El Ouafi's. Because of poor attendance at professional match races, garden officials said El Ouafi would not be invited to return and race again under their auspices.

Dempsey Will Test Self This Week for Ring Comeback

Former Heavy King Dubious About Return

Jack Says He Will Have To Decide Whether Physical Condition Warrants It.

Miami Beach, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—Jack Dempsey will conduct an experiment next week to see whether he will attempt to play two ends of the fighting business. So much he intimated today, when he declared that he will start road work in Miami Beach next week after he has all of the preliminary details for the Sharkey-Stribling fight off the boards.

The former heavyweight champion, more recently Madison Square Garden's key man in the elimination battle envisioned by Tex Rickard before his death as "something for folks to see in the winter time," repeated today that he does not know if he will return to his earlier alignment with affairs of the ring.

He indicated that any road work on his part will be for the purpose of testing the condition of his body and reiterated his statement of a week ago that he is the only man who is able to judge his physical condition. Until after he has tried himself out, he said, he will be unable to decide upon any future plans as to fisticuffs.

Wants to Return.

Dempsey, it is believed here, would like to fight either Sharkey or Stribling for the heavyweight championship if he finds that his stamina is sufficient to carry him through the sharp mixup that either of them would offer. While he made no statement as to his opinion of Christner's ability, except that he was a "tough man and a hard one to get to," it is the general opinion among his friends that Dempsey's plans as to his return to the ring might have undergone a change, or at least a revision, had the Akron fighter pummeled Sharkey sufficiently last night to win a try at the elimination bout with Stribling here February 27.

Dempsey's labors toward the erection of a $52,500 arena at Flamingo park, as well as his plans to lay a gross of something like $600,000 in the coffers of Madison Square Garden corporation from ticket sales for the fight, are pleasant, he said today. But added that such activity is none the less confining. He wants more exercise than is afforded him in the daily routine of accepting reservations and cash for seats, supplemented by frequent trips about Miami and Miami Beach to arrange for other angles of the promoting gestures.

Original Intention.

"I came down here originally to visit with Tex," Dempsey said, "and planned to do a little road work on the side. With Rickard's death and my appointment to carry on his work my plans have naturally undergone a complete change. I'm going to get in my workouts some time soon, however, and then maybe I'll have something to say about fighting. Maybe I won't. It all depends on the way the old muscles feel."

The promoter is expecting Young Stribling and his party to arrive in Miami Beach some time tomorrow. But had not heard tonight as to the time when Sharkey will arrive.

The "semi-finalists" in the heavyweight champion business will have training quarters nearly adjoining, Sharkey, Dempsey said, will do his training and polishing up for the go in the Miami Beach Kennel club, while just around the corner, at Hardie's casino, Stribling will center his pre-contest efforts toward victory at the Flamingo Park arena.

Jerry Luvadis and Gus Wilkins, Dempsey's trainers, will start on his schedule Monday, Dempsey said today. Wilkins arrived here from New York this morning.

Tornado Rallies To Beat Georgia

counted for Tech on a free shot. There was less than a minute left. Georgia began passing the ball around, which was the natural thing to do. The ball was worked down under Tech's basket. It was passed across the court. Williamson bobbed up from somewhere, and heaved it in. The whistle sounded shrilly through the uproar. It was over. Tech had won by 38-37.

BABY JACKETS WIN FROM GEORGIA FROSH.

BY HERB CLARK.

It was Baby Jacket versus Bullpup at the auditorium Saturday night. And the Jacket had the edge in a rough and tumble, fast, and hard-fought affair. The final count was 31-26 in the Tech yearlings' favor.

The affair was a typical Tech-Georgia scrap, hammer and tongs throughout, with the Junior Jackets holding a slim lead from the start, with the exception of the first few moments, when the Georgians got off to a three-point lead on a neat toss from the center of the court and a foul. It was two-four-six and up for the Jackets after this period had been crossed off the list of things due to happen. The score at the half gave Tech a two-point lead at 15-13.

Scoring Is Even.

With the opening of the second frame, matters proceeded along much the same lines. Practically the same number of points were added to each total, the Jackets garnering 16, while the Bullpups had to be content with another unlucky 13.

Lemon, who refereed the affair, made the mistake in the first session of not calling the fouls strictly enough, with the result that the game degenerated into an affair which would have done justice to many a squared circle. Raines and Duke, for the Jackets, left the game via the foul route, while Mell did likewise on the other side. And many another man was so close to the dropping off point that the coaches were beginning to have doubts that the size of their squads would enable them to finish the battle with a full quota on the floor.

Raines, the Tech center, was star of the fray. He played one of the prettiest floor games ever put on by a freshman in these parts, passing accurately, shooting well, and putting up a good defensive game. English was high point man for the Jackets with 11 markers, and put on a good exhibition. Perkins also played well and got himself 8 points. The Tech guards, Duke, Waldrop, and Seckwell, did good defensive work in keeping the Bullpups away from the basket and getting the ball on the rebound from the long efforts.

Moran, as fighting a fool as his name would indicate, held the Georgia scoring honors, and proved to be their leading light in all-round play. Mell, before he left the floor, Smith and Strickland, kept him company in holding the Bulldogs in the running.

Pa More Confident After Seeing Gob Beat Rubber Man

New York, January 26.—(AP)—"Pa" Stribling, father and manager of Young Stribling, who will box Jack Sharkey at Miami February 27, scouted the Sharkey-Christner bout last night from a seat in the second row ringside.

"Sharkey is a much better fighter than I was led to believe," said "Pa" after the Boston sailor had won the decision from the hard rubber man of Akron, "but after seeing the bout I am more than ever convinced that 'son' will knock him out at Miami Beach. He is easy to hit with a right hand and my boy has a right which I am sure will be powerful enough to do the trick. Christner, too, is a far better man than I expected to see."

PRESBYTERIAN AND CALVARY MEET TODAY

What is classed as a championship game is Calvary's meeting with First Presbyterian Monday night in the final game of the S. S. A. A. program for the evening. The two American league teams are in the first and second places of the flag race with a win for Calvary enabling it to tie the leaders. First Presbyterian, should it win, gains a more substantial lead.

In the first battle of these two quintets First Presbyterian took honors by a late rally, outscoring Calvary by 1 point. First Presbyterian lost a game since then, and if Westminster had not tossed a wrench into the works by beating Calvary, would be in a tie for the top post.

However, two girls' games and two boys' struggles preceding this one will push this contest for the feature role. Westminster and Bowie Girls' teams, now in a deadlock for the leadership, play Lutheran and Morningside, respectively.

Triple E kept its perfect record, adding two more wins during the past week and are far in the National league chase.

John Lewis, Calvary ace, went far in the lead in the asscociation scores by jumping to 96 points, while Ike Smith, G. F. G. scorer, was 20 points behind him with 76. Miss E. Hollingsworth, of Westminster, leads the girls with 46, and Miss Muse, of Westminster, and Mrs. Culver, of Bowie, are tied for second with 40. Brilliant guarding work by Misses Bradshaw and Chambers, of Westminster, has been a big feature to the girls' playing.

Association members will meet Wednesday night at the A. A. C., the final confab, to register players for the last month of the cage play.

The week's schedule:

Monday Night at A. A. C.

Bowie Bible Class, St. Luke's Episcopal vs. Central Presbyterian (American), 7:30.

Westminster Presbyterian vs. Lutheran Church of the Redeemer (Southern-girls), 8:20.

Salary Disputes Hold Up Contracts

San Francisco, January 26.—(AP)—Salary differences are holding up the contracts of two big league players, both residents of this city.

Frank "Lefty" O'Doul, husky outfielder of the Philadelphia Nationals, and Eddy Kenna, catcher for the Washington Senators, both are dissatisfied with terms offered them. O'Doul's contract calls for the same salary as he received from the New York Giants last season but the former San Francisco Seal star feels that he should have an increase. Kenna has returned three unsigned contracts so far.

Kentucky Is Defeated By Alabama, 27 to 26

Lexington, Ky., January 26.—(AP)—Alabama's basketball team had difficulty in defeating the University of Kentucky here tonight, but near the end of the game scored enough points to win, 27 to 26, in a Southern Conference game.

Every starting player had at least one personal foul called against him, and Hood, Alabama center, and Spicer, Wildcat forward, were sent to the bench with four personals against them. The game was rough from the start, and both coaches made numerous substitutions.

Notre Dame Beaten By Northwestern U.

Evanston, Ill., January 26.—(United News.)—The brilliant work of Frank Marshall, guard, gave Northwestern a basketball victory over Notre Dame here tonight. The final score was 27 to 24, Marshall scoring 12 of his team's points.

Jack and Strib Clear Barrier To Miami Bout

Sailor Still Debating Date He Will Open Training in Florida.

BY FRANK GETTY.
United News Sports Editor.

New York, January 26.—Safely past the danger mark of their respective tune-up bouts, Jack Sharkey and Young Stribling now can devote their attention exclusively to preparing for their battle at Miami Beach, February 27.

Getting past Jack Smith at New Orleans last night proved no trouble at all for the Georgian, who stopped his man in three rounds, but Sharkey had all he could do to outpoint K. O. Christner, of Akron, Ohio, before an hysterical, capacity crowd at Madison Square Garden, and nearly ruined a hand in the bargain.

The Bostonian today displayed an inflamed thumb, which he said he injured in the final punch of the fight, but the injury is not sufficiently severe to cause the promoters of the Miami Beach affair to lose any sleep. Sharkey will be a far better man against Stribling as a result of the workout Christner gave him last night, in one of the best scraps between heavyweights seen in these parts in many a day.

Since Sharkey encountered so much trouble in his bout with the former rubber puddler with his reputation as a beginner, tentative odds which had favored the Bostonian to defeat Stribling a month hence have disappeared.

Two Are Leaders.

Sharkey and Stribling still stand out as the two leading heavyweights of the day—always barring, Jack, George Godfrey, and some of the others who for one reason or another cannot participate at this time. The Lithuanian and the Georgian should meet on even terms, which will serve to lend attraction to the Miami Beach match.

"Pa" Stribling and his son are proclaiming today that "they" will knock out Sharkey next month, but there was nothing in the latter's desperately fought match with Christner last night to lend weight to their boast. Sharkey absorbed a world of punishment from Christner's active right hand, and proved able to keep his head and come back to win after a poor start.

This is something that Sharkey has not always been able to do. He lost several fights more important than last night's through blowing up when an opponent took the play away from him.

Strib's Knockouts.

As for Stribling, he apparently is going steaming down to Miami Beach on the crest of a flood tide of knockout victories, and while his opponents may have been mediocre, the Georgian has the winning habit, and that is something of no little importance as any astute judge of fighting will tell you.

Sharkey said today that he would be ready to meet—and beat—Stribling on the date set, although he and his manager, Johnny Buckley, still are hemming and hawing about the date on which the Bostonian will go to Miami Beach to start training.

Madison Square Garden's executives consulted with Sharkey today and requested him to be ready to start training on the site of the Stribling match not later than February 2.

SCHMELING TAKES ON RISKO FRIDAY NIGHT.

New York, January 26.—(United News.)—Although major interest at Madison Square Garden centers on preparations for the Jack Sharkey-Young Stribling heavyweight bout at Miami Beach next month, considerable attention also is being paid to the clash Friday night between Max Schmeling, the promising German, and Johnny Risko, of Cleveland.

Schmeling, who looked great in his last fight against Joe Sekyra, will find a craftier opponent in Risko, boxing critics here believe. Risko is one of the major reasons why it is so hard to make heads or tails of the heavyweight situation, in the opinion of many.

The Cleveland baker boy holds to his credit a victory over Jack Sharkey, who is rated one-two with the outstanding heavies today. He recently lost to Jim Maloney, who, critics declare, ranks y-z on the list.

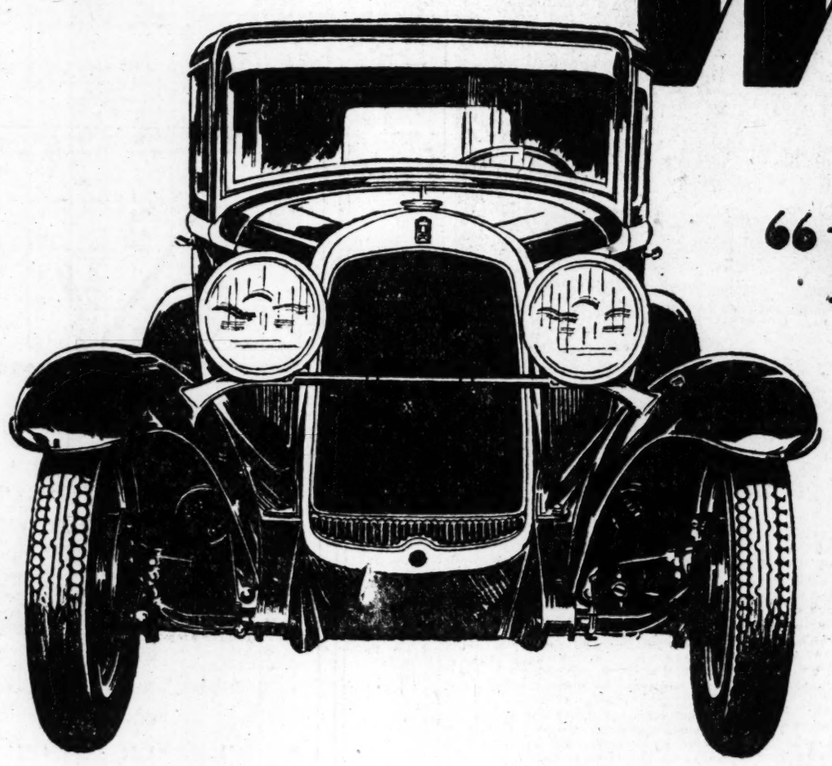

Ohio State Wins First Day Game in 16 Years

Columbus, Ohio, January 26.—(AP)—Ohio State beat Chicago university 40 to 30 in the first daylight basketball game on the Big Ten since 1912, when Chicago played Wisconsin at Madison.

The Buckeyes led by 28 to 9 at half time. George Van Heyde, center, was high scorer with eight field goals.

OFF TO A LONG SUCCESSFUL RUN

New SUPERIOR Whippet with "FINGER-TIP CONTROL"

THE MOST NOTABLE ADVANCE IN DRIVING CONVENIENCE SINCE THE SELF-STARTER

Greater Beauty, Larger Bodies Made it the hit of the New York Show

After its triumphant appearance at the great New York Auto Show, the new Superior Whippet is now off to a long successful run to bring its many buyers increasing satisfaction and pride of ownership.

The longer bodies of the Superior Whippet, the low lines, distinctive colors, higher radiator and hood, heavier one-piece full crown fenders, are bringing to Four and light Six buyers an entirely new conception of how smart and beautiful an inexpensive car can be.

Mechanically, too, the new Superior Whippet is far advanced—faster, livelier, more powerful than ever. It is the lowest priced car to offer such important features as the new "Finger-Tip Control," silent timing chain and full force-feed lubrication. And it carries on Whippet's unsurpassed reputation for operating economy and minimum service costs.

Roomier interiors, broader seats, longer front and rear springs, snubbers and oversize balloon tires bring you the riding comfort of costlier cars.

Be sure to see the new Superior Whippet at your first opportunity! An immediate order will aid in obtaining early delivery.

A single button, conveniently located in the center of the steering wheel, controls all functions of starting the motor, operating the lights and sounding the horn.

This fundamental improvement does away with all troublesome foot fumbling for the starting button, located in a somewhat inaccessible position, and obviates a change from the comfortable driving position to reach the light switch on the dash.

You can keep your foot always on the brake when starting or re-starting on a hill—an obvious safety advantage of major importance.

WESTERN ELECTRIC IS USING REOS

The Western Electric company has just made known its contract with the Reo Motor Car company covering a period of two years for Speed Wagons to be used for movietone news reels and so-called "location" sound picture recording units.

The production of apparatus for the making of sound pictures is a large scale operation at the Western Electric company's Hawthorne plant in Chicago and special bodies to fit the Speed Wagon chassis are being built at the plant of the Highway Trailer company, Stoughton, Wis.

The Western Electric program calls for the marketing of large numbers of these "Studios on Wheels," which, by reason of their ability to combine sound with sight in motion pictures, seem destined to largely supplant the silent news reel. Indeed, the popularity of the new type of entertainment seems likely to affect commercial and educational fields as well. It looks as though the historical records of great occasions will in future be recorded by means of these portable equipments, which will give a new thrill to future generations who can not only read about but hear and see the events of the past.

Richard H. Scott, president of the Reo Motor Car company, sees in this announcement the beginning of a new and heretofore undreamed-of development and availability of radio and its facilities.

"The possibilities of television—with its ability to bring synchronized sound and picture into the home—are already recognized, even though the realization of these possibilities doubtless is still some distance in the future.

"But even those unlimited possibilities would be of comparatively little practical value unless some means could be devised of making more mobile the broadcasting devices.

"To state it somewhat differently, there seem to me to be two major difficulties in the way of radio-listeners or television "spectators" getting the maximum enjoyment and the maximum benefit. The first is that radio programs are now entirely subsidized by advertising—and while there is no criticism of the injection into a radio program a reasonable amount of legitimate advertising and propaganda, it is difficult to know just where to draw the line; and certainly, even now, some of the programs are so heavily loaded with advertising that the radio listener, even though he is paying nothing for the entertainment, feels that he is being cheated.

"That particular difficulty can be easily removed by the development of a system whereby the radio-listener will contribute something to the cost of the program.

"The second difficulty lies in the immobility, and therefore, the relatively limited scope, of the broadcasting apparatus.

"To be sure, broadcasting facilities can be installed in a theater, a convention hall, a baseball park, a football stadium—or anywhere else where some prearranged special event of interest or importance is to take place. But so far those events must have been prearranged, known in advance—in order that the necessary broadcasting arrangements could be made.

"And that sort of immobility falls far short of enabling the industry to take fullest advantage of television—even when that art is sufficiently perfected to make it practable.

"The plans of the Western Electric company for the production of broadcasting studios, mounted on the most mobile equipment imaginable—Reo Speed Wagons—indicate that no longer will radio be hampered by the restrictions just mentioned.

"The broadcasting apparatus can go where something of interest is happening—even though that event is as unexpected, as unprearranged as a fire.

"It is not at all difficult to imagine, with this new equipment always in reserve for emergencies, that not only the sound—but the sight of a big fire can be brought to you in your own home; the screech of the sirens, the falling of the walls, the throbbing of the pumping engines, the heroic scaling of walls by the intrepid firemen, the dramatic saving of human lives.

"It will be news reels perfected to the nth degree, because the sight and sound of these dramatic and historic events will be brought to your own fireside, the very instant they are happening!

"But quite obviously there will be no time for some salesman to sell that particular 'hook-up' to some enterprising advertiser. The cost will be borne by the beneficiary. The vehicle with apparatus, a studio on wheels, will be rushed to the scene and what it sees and hears will be broadcast to subscribers who will pay the producer a flat monthly charge, precisely as they now pay for their telephone service.

"It seems to me unmistakably clear that wired wireless is the answer, and that the larger telephone companies in each section of the country will offer the service, entirely unalloyed by advertising, at a nominal price. With such a source of revenue—large in the aggregate, although ridiculously small in the charge upon the individual user—better programs will be available. The present situation, in which the recipient of the entertainment pays nothing, is economically unsound.

"Incidentally, it is my belief that the ultimate realization of the possibilities of synchronized sight and sound is farther away than enthusiasts for television are claiming; but I do believe that in three to five years—and possible a little sooner—a perfected synchronized television and radio will be as common as the telephone.

"We are indeed proud that the Reo Motor Car company, by its association in this field with not only Western Electric, but General Electric and the Fox Case company, is being permitted to play a real part in the development of this impending great improvement—one which, in my judgment will completely dwarf the tremendous strides that radio has already made."

SLAVENS BOOTERY WILL OPEN MONDAY WITH FRESH STOCK

One of four stores operated in the south by the Slavens Shoe corporation, an Atlanta organization with headquarters here and with stores in Jacksonville, Louisville and Cincinnati, will open Monday at 121 Alabama street, S. W., in the former location of the Arch Preserver shoe shop.

The Slavens Bootery, as it will be known, will feature popular-priced shoes for women with style as the predominant note and with values at a high standard, officials stated Saturday. The entire stock will be composed of new spring footwear attractively displayed in a shop that has been remodeled and redecorated in a color scheme of blue and gray.

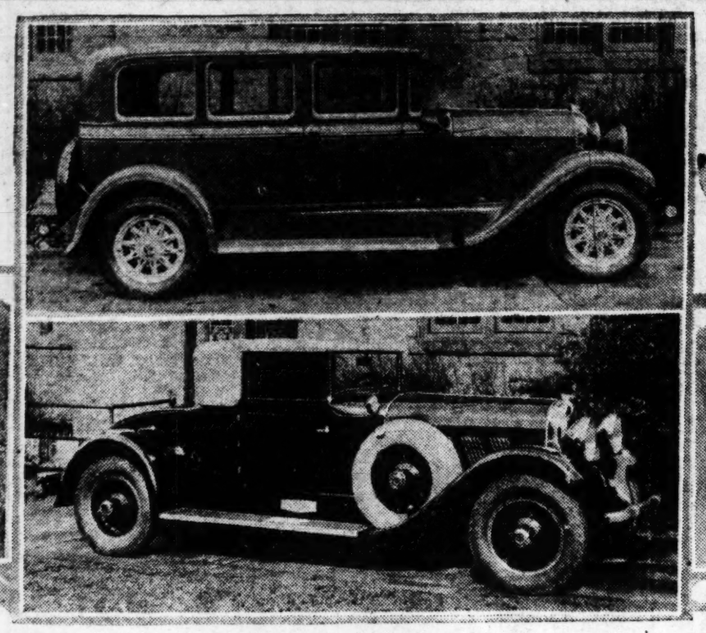

Tom Thrower, a native Atlantan who has been in the retail shoe trade here for almost a quarter century, will be manager of the new store. J. L. Craig, also a native of this city and a veteran in retail shoe circles, will be buyer, and J. B. Waldrop, who has spent nearly 20 years in the shoe business in Atlanta, is interested in the establishment. All these men have a wide circle of friends and patrons formed during their connection in the past with many of the leading shoe stores of this city.

Charles Slavens, treasurer of the Slavens group of stores, also is widely known here, having been a resident of Atlanta for a considerable time and taking part in many civic and improvement movements. He will be located at the Alabama street store in charge of the financial affairs of all the stores in the chain.

Jack Phinizy Motor Company Named Auburn Distributor

JACK PHINIZY, President.

MILTON RILEY, Sales Manager.

Announcement is made today that the Jack Phinizy Motor company, of 58 North avenue, N. E., has been appointed Georgia distributor for the popular Auburn line of motor cars. The company also is Atlanta dealer in Pierce-Arrow cars, which it has represented for the past seven years.

On display Monday at the North avenue show rooms will be three of the beautiful new models of Auburn, and later in the week a complete line of all Auburn models will be received and placed on exhibit. The Phinizy company immediately will organize wholesale and retain Auburn departments, will carry a complete line of parts and will afford efficient and prompt service on its new line.

Jack Phinizy, who heads the company bearing his name, has been in the automobile business here for the past seven years, and his record has been one of outstanding accomplishments. He is known as one of the leading sales figures in the south in the fine car line and has a wide circle of friends. The same is true of his salesmanager, Milton Riley, who has been associated with Mr. Phinizy for the past five years and who will be in charge of both Auburn and Pierce-Arrow sales for the company.

The 8-90 Straight-eight Auburn has been built especially for those persons who are experienced in motor cars and who appreciate the finer type of performance, according to Mr. Phinizy.

"It is our belief," he added, "that the American public is desirous always of obtaining a finer product, whether it is radios, golf clubs, washing machines or automobiles. Performance of yesterday is not satisfactory today and beauty of line and form has come to mean much in our lives.

"Our 8-90 line gives the public an automobile that no one need ever have to apologize for having bought. The bodies are big and roomy, beautifully appointed with the finest of mohair upholstery and silver finish hardware. The engine is a straight-eight Lycoming developing over 90-horse-power and the chassis contains such outstanding features as hydraulic brakes, hydraulic shock absorbers, Bijur lubrication system and a score or more of similar refinements.

"This line, like all Auburns, is built low and of fleet appearance, and the colors are the newest obtainable, most of them being exclusive. Throughout the design of the entire car we have kept the one idea in mind of luxuriousness—to be had at a moderate price."

ESSEX CHALLENGER HAS NEW BRAKES

Full flating, self aligning, two shoe four-wheel brakes provide two-way braking efficiency on new Essex Challenger.

The brake shoes float in position and present the full surface of the lining at the instant of brake application.

With this design of floating shoe it is impossible for the brakes to drag. This improvement will increase the service life of the brake and furnish a trouble free braking system. Ordinary brakes have from 30 per cent to 50 per cent efficiency upon application when the car is reversing. The Essex Challenger full floating brake shoes provide 100 per cent efficiency either forward or back.

These shoes are lined with a pressure molded lining. This lining is impervious to water and oil, providing full brake pressure power under all weather conditions. Tests conducted showed that service wear did not detract from their efficiency because the lining its identical in texture throughout.

The whole braking system is an example of simplified design typical in the new Essex. A single adjustment easily made without tools is provided to compensate for wear. This is the only adjustment necessary to maintain the full effectiveness of the braking system.

Killed Accidentally.

Thomasville, Ga., January 26.—(AP) Jack Dennard, 9, son of L. V. Dennard, farmer living near Thomasville, was killed by a load from a shotgun in the hands of Hartwell Dennard, 9, his cousin, yesterday afternoon, while they were hunting rabbits. The shooting was said to have been purely accidental.

Durant Six "66" Newcomer To Durant '29 Complete Line

The Six "66" is a newcomer to the Durant line. Its outstanding feature is the Durant special silent third and double high transmission—and it is the lowest priced six in the world with four forward speeds. This transmission effects a 20 per cent reduction in gasoline and oil consumption and 40 per cent reduction on engine wear owing to the fact that in the most constant driving speed, the engine is turning at a correspondingly less number of revolutions per mile of speed. The reduction in vibration is claimed to be such that riding and driving comfort are accordingly increased. In third speed acceleration on level and hills is claimed to be beyond any known records.

The chassis is 112 inches wheelbase, with shock absorbers all around. The motor is a Red Seal Continental of special Durant design, set in rubber, with a Lanchester vibration damper—with a bore and stroke of 2 7-8 by 4 3-4, giving 185 cubic inch displacement.

In appearance the models are of a refined modern design, having a new radiator higher than in previous Durant models, yet retaining the distinctive grill work by which Durant cars have become identified. These grills, however, are more elegantly finished in chromium, as is the radiator shell, lamps, and all other ornamental exterior metal work.

The bodies combine the most approved streamline effects, softened with fine curves instead of angles and are finished in rich rather than loud colors. The available body models are: Coupe, $895; 4-door sedan, $945; de luxe models in each, $115 extra.

The lowest priced six in the world with four forward speeds—that one fact is enough to make the new Durant series "66" the outstanding car of its time. For four-gear ratios to choose from have heretofore always constituted a luxury in motoring. It has remained for W. C. Durant, after his 25 years' continuous leadership in the automotive industry, to make another outstanding contribution to purchasers of popular-priced motor vehicles.

This time he has gone even further by presenting, not only a quality feature at the lowest price obtainable, but one of exclusive superiority. For Durant is the only manufacturer in America authorized to use this type gearshift giving silent third and double high.

Briefly this phase indicates that the third speed in this transmission, unlike that in other four forward speed cars is as quiet in operation as in cars of only three speeds, and furthermore, that the two high gears—third and fourth—are so coupled that the shift is of the utmost simplicity and convenience; fool proof and less noisy than in any other type of transmission—either of three or four speed type.

The advantages of this transmission are superlative:

Performance—Unqualified command of road, grade and traffic conditions. Vibration at high speeds reduced to a point below any three-speed car with speed acceleration and power correspondingly increased.

Economy—Oil and fuel consumption 20 per cent less and engine wear 40 per cent less than three-speed cars—car life correspondingly increased.

Convenience—The most convenient gearshift arrangement of any four-speed car. The easiest working gearshift of any car. The greatest speed range for instantaneous choice in any situation.

Studebaker's New Brougham Is Displayed by Yarbrough

A new five-passenger brougham, available on the Studebaker Commander chassis was announced recently by the Studebaker corporation and first shown at the national automobile show in New York. The enthusiastic reception accorded the new model at the New York show, followed by its success at other motor exhibitions in other cities, has led many automotive critics to forecast a great popularity for this smart body type.

Graceful, low hung body lines reflect the speed and brilliant performance of the Commander motor. Fenders hang low over the wheels, flanking the deep chromium plated radiator topped by a winged cap symbolic of Studebaker's championship speed and performance. An entirely new style note is set by the raised mouldings which accentuate the window reveals, by the smart curve of the windshield pillars, and the graceful contour of the new French front framing the non-shatterable safety glass windshield.

In addition to their clever use of raised body mouldings, Studebaker body designers have made lavish use of bright, tarnish proof chromium plating to add to the smart sophistication of the new brougham's appearance. The big hub caps, the cowl lights, headlights, cowl beading and door handles are all finished in bright chromium. An added touch of smartness is provided by the chrome plated retaining rings of the six wire wheels, which are standard equipment along with the touring trunk mounted at the rear.

Interior fittings of the new Commander brougham reveal a new degree of luxury and comfort. The deeply-cushioned seats are covered with smooth French pillow type upholstery of rich broadcloth. The rear seat is amply wide for three persons, and is fitted with a folding center arm rest in addition to arm rests at the sides.

Every detail for convenience and comfort is provided in the front compartment. The comfortable front seat is adjustable for the convenience of the individual driver. Clutch and brake pedals and the steel core safety steering wheel with its convenient thin grip are also adjustable to individual preference. The pedals are fitted with rubber pads, and the conventional button type accelerator pedal is replaced with a comfortable rubber-padded foot treadle.

The full ventilating windshield with its shatter proof safety glass is readily opened by means of a convenient crank. As an additional measure of safety and convenience in driving, the windshield is fitted with two automatic cleaners, which give both driver and passenger a clear view of the road in bad weather.

The Commander brougham is fitted with twin beam headlights controlled from the center of the steering wheel, no-glare rear view mirror and hydraulic shock absorbers front and rear. In combination with the patented ball bearing spring shackles pioneered by Studebaker, the hydraulic shock absorbers give the new brougham an exceptional degree of riding comfort and roadability. Other equipment includes coincidental lock to steering and ignition and the usual instruments, which are mounted under glass in individual dull silver frames against an old ivory mat and indirectly lighted.

With its complete equipment, fine appointments, and air of smart sophistication the new Commander brougham is proving one of the most popular cars in the entire range of new Studebaker models. It is priced at $1,525 at the factory, which includes six wire wheels and trunk.

25 G. M. C. Trucks for Lee Baking Co.

Above is part of the fleet of 25 G. M. C. panel trucks that were delivered recently to the Lee Baking company, Atlanta's newest bakery, by the General Motors Truck company's Atlanta branch. This is one of the largest fleet deliveries noted in Atlanta for many months.

PEEPLES PUPILS TO PRESENT PLAY ON PROMOTION DAY

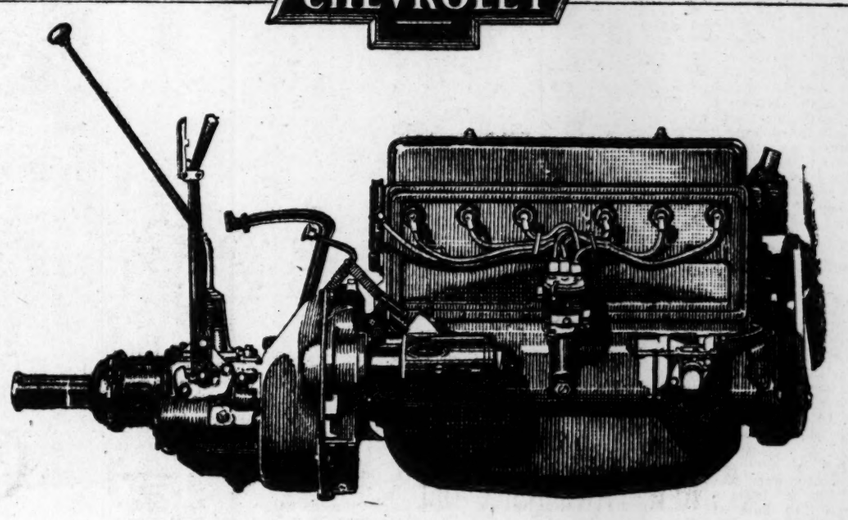

Regular promotion day exercises of the Peeples Street school will be held at 3 o'clock Thursday afternoon, with an elaborate program arranged for the promotion of the students to junior high school, it is announced.

Presentation of a play, "Legend of the Cherokee Rose" will feature the program, which also will include farewell addresses by a number of the students and teachers of the school.

Class distinctions will be conferred by the teacher of the class, Miss Stella Murray, and Dr. McIntosh Burns, vice president of the board of education, will present certificates of promotion.

Smoothness

Never Before Achieved in a Low-Priced Automobile

Of all the exceptional performance qualities resulting from the advanced design of the new Chevrolet Six, none is more impressive than its remarkably smooth operation.

Although the new six-cylinder motor develops 32% more power with higher speed and faster acceleration . . . although it delivers better than twenty miles to the gallon of gasoline——its outstanding feature of performance is a degree of smoothness never before achieved in any low-priced automobile.

Whether you are flashing away from a traffic stop with the accelerator to the floor, whether you are rolling along at twenty-five miles an hour or doing well above sixty on the open road—the power is delivered easily, freely and without annoying vibration.

To achieve such remarkable performance in a car of such low price, Chevrolet spent years in development work. Over 100 different engines were designed, built and subjected to over a million miles of testing at the General Motors Proving Ground before the present motor was adopted. The new power plant has many unusual features, such as the non-detonating high compression cylinder head, new acceleration pump, the new gasoline pump and filter and the new automatic lubrication of the rocker arms.

The frame is stronger and more rigidly braced. Transmission and axle gears are stronger and made of nickel steel. The four-wheel brakes have been newly designed to assure positive, quiet action. Steering has been made easier. And the new Fisher bodies with their new lines, new colors, adjustable driver's seats and new appointments, represent new heights of style, distinction, comfort and value.

We extend you a cordial invitation to see and drive the new Chevrolet Six. We believe it an experience that every motorist should have. We want you to know how finely the new Chevrolet Six is built and how smoothly it performs!

DETROIT AUTOMOBILE SHOW HOLDS SPOTLIGHT OF PAST WEEK

EVENT NOW RANKS WITH CHICAGO, NEW YORK EXPOS

Heavy Sales Reported, With Exhibitors Displaying Enthusiasm Over Prospects for 1929.

BY WALTER BOYNTON.

Detroit, January 26.—Detroit's twenty-eighth auto show has been the center of attraction all t...s week. In importance to the industry, the exhibit put on by the Detroit Auto Dealers association ranks level with the national shows at New York and Chicago. There is equally complete representation of passenger cars, commercial vehicles, accessories and equipment and the show space of 200,000 square feet was filled with the best that modern industry can offer in the shape of a motor vehicle. A feature of this year's show was the display of 25 custom-built bodies of high-power chassis, the product of our best makers in the highest price class.

Decorations were unusually elaborate and handsome and four orchestras were kept busy. The arrangements for handling the crowd were admirable and attendance broke all records.

Simultaneously with the main show, following the growing custom, there were extensive exhibits at the showrooms of the principal distributors here. Richards-Oakland company, the largest distributor of Oakland and Pontiac cars, put on a comprehensive showing that featured the new Big Six Pontiac. Aaron DeRoy Motor Car company, largest distributor of Hudson and Essex, presented the new lines in handsome settings, and the John H. Thompson company, the largest of the Chrysler distributors, showed a full line of these cars.

Heavy Sales Reported.

A tangible result of the show was the number of sales made and these will give January registrations a sharp push upward. While it is true that several important lines were publicly introduced here even before the New York show, buyers have apparently been holding off in this territory until they could see the complete offerings of the industry, and up to the time of the Detroit exhibit registrations were well below the figures for the corresponding period in December, which was naturally a low month, to the extent of close to 30 per cent. Ford has been leading, numerically, but the total Ford registrations are well below the December figures. The fact largely accounts for the comparatively unsatisfactory January showing to date. Chevrolet's percentage of increase has been the largest, as the new Sixes began to get into the registration figures.

Comparison of the Wayne county figures for 1928, compared with 1927, shows an over-all gain of 62.3 per cent. Totals for the year were 85,355 cars, against 52,593 in 1927, a gain of 32,762 cars. The bulk of the business was done by Chevrolet, Ford, Hudson, Essex and Chrysler-Plymouth, with Buick, Willys-Overland and Graham-Paige next in volume. The Graham-Paige percentage gain was the largest, over 885 per cent, and Willys-Overland showed an increase of more than 200 per cent.

Selling the 1929 lines has begun in earnest and the most important distributors are confident that the year will show substantial increase over the figures for last year. The used car market is most active, and this branch of the retail business is being pushed with extreme vigor, the dealers now being apparently alive to the importance of the used car as a factor in sales-building.

Durant's Activities.

W. C. Durant's move in taking over the group of former Dodge sales executives, headed by F. J. Haynes, and placing his advertising in the hands of the Phelps agency, so long identified with the Dodge campaign, was not unexpected. Negotiations looking to this result were under way for some time. Establishment of Durant headquarters at Lansing adds an interesting element to the Michigan industrial situation and more prestige to the city itself.

Expansions either announced or already under way in the Detroit area are evidence of the confidence held by important organizations in the business outlook this year. An aggregate of close to $25,000,000 is being spent by three railroads in extensions to their service. The foundry industry generally is being largely expanded and the copper mines of the upper peninsula are getting in shape for larger production. Old shafts are being operated again and men being taken on. Estimates for increase in the number of freight cars that will be required here are that it will run close to 10 per cent in the first quarter. Industrial consumption of electrical energy is running about 20 per cent higher than in former months.

When the Society of Automotive Engineers was in annual session last week the Detroit section was host at a dinner, with O. T. Kreusser, in charge at the General Motors proving grounds, as the principal speaker. Mr. Kreusser presented a review and appraisal of the 1929 cars, based on his experiences with them under test. He notes that this year's lines are generally longer, wider and larger than the 1928 cars, and weigh about 200 pounds more. Trend is toward larger power plants, though not an increase in size proportionate to the increase in car size. Better fuels and better utilization of them give adequate acceleration, speed and hill-climbing ability. Combustion chambers are better designed, better valve porting is noted and there has been improvement in manifolding. Camshafts are better. Properly selected gear ratios and tire sizes are credited with influence on better performance, though Mr. Kreusser says that there is probably some criticism that engine smoothness has suffered.

Small Cars Proposed.

Four-wheel brakes, he adds, have been improved. He lays especial emphasis on the marked improvement in the lower-priced cars. "In appearance, quality, finish, performance, riding smoothness and reliability," says Mr. Kreusser, "these cars compare most favorably with the best and in some respects are superior, from the customer's usage standpoint, to the larger cars."

He criticizes seats and backs and feels that the matter of proper ventilation should have more attention. Front wheel alignment, headlights, provision for doing away with the cross-reflection of lights at night, and proper material for floor covering in the driver's compartment are among the matters that he recommends for improvement.

Detroit employment has resumed its rise. This week's increase was 3,210 men, bringing the total to 281,965, or 65,450 more than were on the rolls of the employers' association a year ago. Between 300 and 400 men are being added daily to the personnel of the Fordson plant of the Ford Motor company.

Figures from the automotive trade commissioner at Paris show Hudson-Essex the largest importer to Europe of six-cylinder cars and that more than a third of the American cars sold in England are Essex.

Cannon Ball Baker Starts Record Run

Cannonball Baker at the Manhattan end of the Holland tunnel just a moment before he speeded away on his record-breaking dash to Miami, Fla. The Franklin covered the 1,541 miles in 31 hours and 10 minutes, beating the scheduled time of the crack Miami Limited by one hour and 50 minutes and breaking the former automobile record between New York city and Miami by seven hours and 57 minutes. The Franklin averaged 49.44 miles per hour, compared with the train average of 42.3 miles.

NEGLECTED CUTS CAUSE TROUBLE

"Great oaks from little acorns grow" is an old adage that is true in more ways than one, declares Alfred H. Bailey, Fisk tire dealer.

Tires should be inspected often, as small cuts in the tread and sidewalls grow to serious proportions if neglected, especially during winter driving.

Often a sharp stone, piece of glass, iron or tin or the sharp edge of a switch point will cut the toughest kind of tread, especially in wet weather. Dirt, grime and moisture are forced in through the cut by the springy compression of the tire as it revolves. In winter driving snow and pieces of ice fill the cut, the flexing action of the tire will enlarge it and the foreign matter and moisture will deteriorate, chafe and weaken the carcass, with resulting premature failure of the casing.

"It is an easy matter to have the cuts filled with cement and plastic rubber," states Mr. Bailey. Your tire dealer will be glad to examine the tires and make these simple preventative repairs, although if the cut is of sufficient size it will be better to have the spot vulcanized.

Such little precautions add mileage to your tires and maintain rubber expense at the minimum.

GOODYEAR ANNOUNCES NEW PATHFINDER TIRE

"Announcement of the new Goodyear Pathfinder tire is of interest and importance to large numbers of motorists in this city," said H. H. Brooks, manager of the Goodyear service station at 1643 Jonesboro Road, S. E., operated by the Brooks-Shattery Co., Inc.

"The Goodyear Pathfinder is built by the world's largest tire manufacturer and has gained an enviable reputation for quality," he said. "It is the equal, and in many cases the superior, of the highest quality and highest price tire built by smaller tire manufacturers; in fact, it is the outstanding tire in its price class," he said.

"The Goodyear company has for many years been building a tire to fill the demand of automobile owners who, for various reasons do not want to invest in the best standard tire on the market—such as we believe the all-weather tread to be—but who want tire equipment that will give them the most service for a moderate investment.

"Whenever possible, the quality of this tire has been improved and Goodyear engineers conducted many tests and experiments before determining upon the changes which have been incorporated in the new Pathfinder.

"It is a standard Goodyear product, stamped as such and carrying its own identification mark.

"Rugged and attractive in appearance, this newly-designed tire gives real value in maximum of wear and traction. The new Pathfinder is made in all the popular balloon and high pressure sizes."

DR. DURHAM TO SPEAK

Kiwanis Club To Hear Discussion on South's Social Outlook.

Dr. Plato Durham, of Emory university, will speak at the luncheon meeting of the Kiwanis club at 12:30 o'clock Tuesday. Dr. Durham will speak on "Social Outlook of the South."

The entertainment program, arranged by Dr. R. M. Eubanks, will present the new Emory quartet. Honor guest of the luncheon will be J. Thomas Lyons, of Baltimore, Md., past officer of the Kiwanis International and past president of the Baltimore Kiwanis.

Franklin Makes Fastest Time In Record Run to Florida

Sweeping his way down the storm-swept Atlantic seaboard and on into the sunny south, Cannon Ball Baker, piloting a model 135 air-cooled Franklin stock sedan, in a race against the fastest train between New York city and Miami, Fla., clipped one hour and 50 minutes off the scheduled time of the Miamian Limited, and 7 hours, 57 minutes off the former automobile record, covering the 1,541 miles in 31 hours and 10 minutes.

The Franklin traveled 154 miles further than the Miamin Limited and averaged 49.44 miles per hour as compared with the train average of 42.3 miles per hour.

The speed run was officially checked both at the starting point and at the courthouse in Miami by Western Union executives, who attested the accuracy of the Franklin's remarkable time.

In linking Miami, Fla., and New York city in the shortest time ever made by any vehicle, the air-cooled Franklin adds another outstanding record to the many others won in the past six months—declared by automobile engineers as a tribute to the efficiency of the air-cooled power plant.

Baker left the Manhattan side of the Holland Tunnel at 12:30 a. m., January 15, arriving at the finish line in Miami on January 16 at 7:40 a. m., where he was greeted by officials of the Miami Chamber of Commerce, who had been advised that Baker was piloting his air-cooled Franklin to blaze a new speed trail from the wintry north to the tropical southland.

During the entire run, Baker drove his Franklin into strong head winds with wintry weather holding fast as far south as Richmond, Va. the thermometer hovering around 20 above zero.

Further into the southland speeded the Franklin with its air-cooled engine continuously developing the tremendous speed and power necessary to sweep the Franklin onward to a new and sensational road record. For 250 miles before reaching Raleigh, the roads were made slippery and dangerous by rain but the roadability of the Franklin again proved itself, enabling the driver to maintain a high rate of speed with absolute safety.

Over the slippery dirt roadways of South Carolina and Georgia, the Franklin raced, with glassy pavement in the vicinity of Savannah forcing a slower speed. Crossing the Florida boundary and on to Jacksonville, Baker battled stiff headwinds and blankets of thick fog from the ocean and rushed to the finish line for a new record through a heavy tropical storm.

The temperature at the completion of the run was 70 degrees as compared with the freezing temperature when the car flashed away from Manhattan, demonstrating the ability of the air-cooled Franklin to function perfectly regardless of temperatures.

At the end of the remarkable test run, Baker said:

"I have driven the air-cooled Franklin to many new records in the past six months, which includes a round trip transcontinental test from Los Angeles to New York city and return, but never has a car performed as the sedan I used on the run to Miami. Despite the adverse weather and road conditions, the engine performed perfectly every inch of the route and at the end was purring as smoothly and as silently as at the start. I really believe that this race against time will go down in automotive history as one of the greatest accomplishments in road travel."

'MODERNISTIC' MODE CHASSIS IS SHOWN

A new "modernistic" chassis, showing a mottled mother-of-pearl finish under brilliant colored lights, is proving a leading attraction to the Oakland-Pontiac booth of the National Automobile shows.

Already displayed at New York and now on exhibition at Chicago, a chassis of either the new 1929 Pontiac Six or the latest Oakland All-American Six is scheduled to be shown at approximately a hundred other automobile shows in scattered sections of the country.

The unusual appearance of the chassis is achieved by a new finish just compounded by Dupont in which fish scales are used as an important ingredient. Oakland officials explained. Three Oaklands and four new Pontiacs have been "dressed up" for the national showings of the chassis, popularly voted as the most distinctive display of its kind at New York.

The modernistic finish is used on the engine, frame, spare tire carrier and other parts of the major structure, while the remaining parts, including the smart wire wheels, are finished in copper plating polished to a brilliant hue. All working parts are cut away and an electric hookup shows parts in motion comparable to actual road driving.

In this way points of superiority in the mechanical structure of the two cars, which normally escape the eye of the owner, are clearly and effectively illustrated. Four-inch rails of brass fence off the chassis exhibit, the upper rail being covered with velvet and shielding a bank of colored lamps trained upon the chassis.

Buick's Famous Chassis To Tour South

The Buick cut-away chassis, which created much interest at the recent automobile show in Atlanta, has been mounted on a specially constructed trailer, built at the Buick factory branch on Spring street, and will be taken on a road tour throughout the Atlanta branch territory in charge of a Buick service department representative. The trailer is towed by a 1929 Buick stock sedan, which is also used to demonstrate the construction of the famous Fisher body.

The cut-away chassis is skillfully designed to make clear every detail of Buic kconstruction and operation. A concealed electric motor operates the moving parts of the chassis, making it possible for the watcher to grasp the interrelated movements of all the numerous units.

"The cut-away chassis of the silver anniversary Buick," states Mr. Alexander, Buick branch manager, "is an educational exhibit of interest to all automobile owners as well as Buick owners, since it makes clear many of the mechanical principles underlying all motor car design, as well as special engineering features, for which Buick has long been famed."

UNUSUAL DEMAND FOR GABRIEL SNUBBERS

Although the new Gabriel "Triple-Hydraulic" shock absorber is just now being displayed for the first time at the various automobile shows, orders already received will require the entire anticipated production of the Gabriel Snubber company's new hydraulic plant for the next three months, according to an announcement from Cleveland.

The new factory constructed especially for the production of the "Triple-Hydraulic," is now running at capacity production.

Unusual activity also is reported by the Gabriel company for its familiar product, the Gabriel snubber. Orders actually received during the last quarter, which is usually the slowest of the year, are giving the snubber plant more than three times the volume of this period last year. An order for an additional 20,000 snubbers has been received from Fiat, making a total of 100,000 snubbers shipped to this car manufacturer alone during the year.

4,000-Mile Test Given Reo By Danish Baroness

A mud-bespattered automobile displayed in one of the windows of the Reo agency of E. C. Christiansen in Copenhagen, Denmark, caused a mild sensation recently when a placard accompanying it disclosed the fact that a leading Danish sportswoman, Mme. Louise Hasselbalch, who was born Baroness Plessen, had driven the car, a Reo Flying Cloud, to Cologne, Germany, and back again, a distance of 4100 miles, without a mishap.

It was not so much the fact that a woman made this long trip alone through perilous mountain passes and over rough roads torn up by storms that attracted so much attention, but rather the news that Mme. Hasselbalch, a noted equestrienne and lover of horses, had at last succumbed to the lure of the motor car. And on top of this came the information that Mme. Hasselbalch would hereafter use her car to reach the many distant European horse shows in which she is a yearly exhibitor and contestant.

At the Concours Hippique, or horse show, in Cologne, Mme. Hasselbalch won the "Kanonen" steeplechase, which is the German equivalent of the championship.

In a signed interview written by "Nemo" for the newspaper Berlingske Tidende, of Copenhagen, Mme. Hasselbalch is quoted as saying that although her Reo Flying Cloud was new, and she had "never guided a model of such force," she resolved to drive it to the Cologne horse show and back home again.

"I cannot tell which was worse, the weather or the roads,' she told the interviewer. "Between Eckenforde and Schleswig the road was like a swamp. The car sank in the mud to the axles. Often the road was covered by water for thousands of yards. But the way was too narrow to turn back, and through I came, my Reo behaving wonderfully. I am sorry the trunk board of the car is not big enough to accommodate my horse, for I intend driving to all of the continental horse shows instead of using the railways."

Lockhart Death Car Disassembled and Sold

Indianapolis—(AP)—The late Frank Lockhart's dream car, in which he died trying to establish an automobile speed record for a mile on a straightaway course, will never run again.

It has been completely disassembled and many of its parts bought by persons interested in other automobile race cars. Axles, motors and other interchangeable assemblies have been obtained for use in other speed creations.

Lockhart was killed on the sands of Daytona Beach, Fla., last April when the car, hurtling through space at an estimated speed of 215 miles an hour, got out of control and was destroyed. It was unlike any other car built for such terrific speed, being exceedingly light and of small motor power.

Ray Keech, Philadelphia speed ace and present holder of the world's straightaway record of 207.552 miles an hour for one mile, expressed a wish to drive Lockhart's car, saying he believed it is the fastest in the world. It was decided, however, to never rebuild the automobile.

Four Speeds Forward
Standard Gear Shift

Owners, after many months' experience with the Graham-Paige four-speed transmission, enthusiastically endorse its performance. Fourth, used most of the time, gives a new smoothness and swiftness—third, a quiet internal gear, provides rapid acceleration in traffic, and up steep hills. The gear shift is standard. You start in second—first, in reserve, is seldom used. A six or eight, with the new refinements and improvements, is at your disposal.

GRAHAM PAIGE

Five chassis—sixes and eights—prices ranging from $885 to $2495. Car illustrated is Model 827, eight-cylinder, five-passenger Sedan, $1925 (special equipment extra). All prices at factory.

MAIL IS USED TO SELL WHIPPETS

The Willys-Overland company has just carried its "message to Garcia" by means of the greatest gathering of air mail planes in the entire history of American commercial aviation.

Fifteen tons of air mail divided into 700,000 individually addressed letters to as many actual prospects for automobiles, on January 17 were loaded into 30 airplanes and within 48 hours were delivered to each prospect in more than 6,000 towns spread out into every state in the union. The airplanes covered 11,000 miles of the 13,000 miles of charted air routes of the nation and landed in 108 different ports, from where the mail was rushed on to final delivery by railroad trains, electric lines, motor trucks, speed boats, steamboats and other methods of transportation.

The Willys-Overland Whippet mail shipment more than doubled anything ever before attempted by the air mail service and demonstrated to the satisfaction of army and navy observers American aeronautical preparedness for any peace-time emergencies and for military defense in time of war. The postoffice department concentrated all its resources to assure prompt delivery of the shipment without interfering with regular air mail schedules elsewhere. Twenty army pursuit planes from Selfridge field escorted the mail planes at the beginning of the flight and proved their ability to cooperate with the commercial planes in tactical formations. Most of the mail pilots are former army fliers and include names which are the most outstanding in all the air mail service.

Postoffice officials, under the leadership of Postmaster General New and Assistant Postmaster General W. I. Glover, who witnessed the demonstration, were delighted because they knew that the letters would advertise the advantages of the air mail to thousands of Americans who never before had received mail by airplane. By the same token, the air mail enabled Willys-Overland to present, through a compelling channel, the advantages of its new Superior Whippets to the thousands of handpicked prospects who received the air mail letters.

The shipment of 30,000 pounds of mail compared with a total average daily shipment of nearly 10,000 pounds throughout the United States. It cost the Willys-Overland company $35,000 for stamps alone, although total expenses exceeded $80,000. John N. Willys, president of the company, declared, however, that Willys-Overland is planning to use the air mail more extensively and regularly for shipment of letters and advertising matter, particularly when the time element is important.

"The success of this big experiment is proof of the rapid growth and splendid development of commercial aviation in the United States and is all the more significant in view of the fact that all this has been accomplished without government subsidy, which is a regular practice in European countries," Mr. Willys said. "Two years ago this kind of a demonstration would have been impossible. Any manufacturer can now make the most extraordinary demands on the air mail service which can be readily met. The speed with which these planes were mobilized and handled proves, too, what could be done in times of a national crisis."

The military officials told Mr. Willys that the load of air mail carried by the planes could as readily have been 30,000 pounds of mustard gas for the destruction of a national foe, or 30,000 pounds of food or medical supplies for the relief of some section of the nation stricken by famine or epidemic. Planes used for the demonstration ranged from the giant all metal tri-motored ships, capable of carrying nearly two tons of mail, to the baby Waco biplanes, which can carry only two or three hundred pounds of mail. The planes which landed at the Toledo Transcontinental airport for this test are valued at a half million dollars.

HEAVY ATTENDANCE SLATED FOR AD MEET

Heavy attendance of advertising men and women is expected at the second meeting and dinner of the Five Point league, Atlanta's newly-organized advertising club, at the Capital City club Monday night at 6:30 o'clock. Herbert Everett, of the Chamberlin-Johnson-DuBose company, who is head of the league, will speak on style as a factor in modern merchandising. An interesting entertainment program will be staged.

Those expected to be present at the dinner include Mrs. Virginia Gouedy, Mrs. Elizabeth Baird, Miss Georgia May Little, Miss Mary Brock Mallard, Mrs. Jessie Ingram, Mrs. Alice Janders, Miss Roselyn Janes, Miss Ruth McCullough, Miss Doria Camp, Charles Davis, Miss Lorena Daniel, Miss Marguerite Dougherty, Miss Caroline Essig, Miss Frances Hargis, Sam Dull, Frank Lowenstein, Herbert Porter, Allen Gottshaldt, Warren Humphries, Charles Atkinson, Bob Whitehead, Mrs. Weathers, W. HEARING DELAYED

Pittman Case Delayed Because of Man's Condition.

The case of Mrs. C. A. Pittman, of 2795 Peachtree road, said to have shot her husband through the hand and thigh after trailing him to the apartment of Helen Reese, 705 Piedmont avenue, Saturday afternoon was postponed until February 2 on motion of the investigating detectives who reported that Pittman is unable to leave his bed.

Mrs. Pittman was arrested on disorderly conduct charges and is at liberty on $500 bond. Miss Reese, under the same charges is at liberty on $100 bond. Pittman still is confined with the injuries.

Dr. Jenkins Made Bishop

Portland, Ore., January 26.—(AP)—Dr. Thomas Jenkins, of McMinnville, general missionary of the Episcopal diocese of Oregon, was consecrated bishop of Nevada at Trinity church here yesterday. A group of 13 bishops of the church attended the service. Clergy and lay members, many of them here to attend the 41st diocesan convention, thronged the church.

When Reo Pulled Stone Mountain

Approximately 10,000 people saw the Reo shown above make it to the top of Stone mountain last Sunday. This car, piloted by Peter De Paolo, world's champion race driver, is the first closed car to reach the top of the world's largest rock. It was accomplished with five passengers—something the experts said couldn't be done. The above photos show the "Reo Flying Cloud," piloted by De Paolo, at the start; center on one of the steep grades—it was at this point when they took on the five passengers to ride the balance of the way; bottom, just after they reached the top. Standing by the car, left to right, Mr. Caldwell, of the Reo factory; C. F. Watson, general manager for Reo Sales and Service, Inc.; Wendell Jones, sales manager, and Eddie Thompson.

GRAHAM-PAIGE WINS EUROPEAN TESTS

Graham-Paige four-speed models again proved their superiority over European makes in acceleration and speed tests conducted last month by the Royal Automobile club, of Victoria (Australia), at Dormana, near Melbourne.

The contest was held on a course slightly over two miles in circuit, on gravel roads, with four right-angle turns. Each event started with an acceleration test from standstill, the cars continuing around the course against time. There were 50 entrants, European and American cars.

In the event for closed cars, a Graham-Paige model 619 won the acceleration test and made the fastest circuit. As there were no open models at hand, a Graham-Paige 614 sedan was entered in the event open to all cars—sports models, racing cars and specials—and made the fastest time in its class (cars of 2,200 to 3,300 cc. displacement).

In the class for large cars, the Graham-Paige 619 sedan made the circuit in the best time, defeating open models of other makes.

A recapitulation of the score shows that the Graham-Paige made the best time of all American entries, best time of all closed cars, best acceleration of all closed cars and the best time of all competitors except an eight-cylinder French Ballot race model guaranteed to do 125 miles per hour.

Besides the American cars entered, the entrants included Delage, Bugatti, Panhard, Lancia-Lambda, Fiat, Vauxhall, Riley, Salmson and Ballot.

Machine Gun Guards Jail

Colorado Springs, Colo., January 26.—(AP)—A machine gun has been mounted at the county jail here, where "Whitey" Walker, accused bandit chieftain, is a prisoner awaiting trial in connection with a raid by five desperadoes on the First National bank of Lamara, Colo., last May.

Newspapers, Roads, Trucks Big Factors for Economy

Pontiac, Mich., January 26.—(Special.)—Newspapers, good roads and modern trucks are in a natural alliance which may, during 1929, contribute powerfully to a reduction of America's hig merchandise distribution costs, estimated at 60 per cent by most economists.

That is the opinion of Paul W. Seller, president of the General Motors Truck company, in a statement made here today.

"A year from now," he said, "we may speak of 1929 as the year that wiped out distances. To do that is one of the greatest opportunities this year brings to American business. In facing our part of the opportunity we of the truck industry find ourselves allied with the newspapers of this country by the very mutuality of our aims and plans."

Better Roads a Key.

Vastly freer movement of commodities between city and what is still called "country" is a basic factor, Mr. Seiler contends, in any real reduction of the 60 per cent distribution costs with which American industry now wrestles.

"There is a fundamental trend, which none of us has yet calculated accurately, and which very few businesses have even started to use, toward tremendous expansion in the influence areas of cities. The growth and influence expansion of newspapers illustrates that quite clearly I think.

"This trend is apt to be more sharply defined in 1929 than in any previous year and, perhaps, than in any single year to come.

"Therein lies ripe opportunity for the manufacturer who would cut his distribution costs. And an equally golden opportunity for the great city merchandising establishments which must find ways to increase their armies of customers in order to use the full potentials of their remarkable organizations.

"The merchandising and storage facilities are in the cities. Outside the cities are vast new sales fields of people as modern-minded and as modern-pursed as any who live within formal city limits. Communication is already established, influence is already created and functioning by progressive newspapers.

"Cutting distances and time, getting full and free flow of commodities between the great, modern 'inner city' and the rich 'outer city' is the final link. Good paved roads and trucks will bring greater movement of commodities inward to the cities. And this will, quite naturally, aid in solving some of the farmers' problems."

P. W. SEILER.

Parker Gilbert Sails.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—S. Parker Gilbert, agent general of the reparations commission, sailed on the French liner Paris today. He declined to discuss German reparations and said his part in the forthcoming meeting of the commission would be merely in an advisory capacity. He was accompanied by Mrs. Gilbert.

'Noback' Stutz Latest Safety Feature Demonstrated

The above photo shows the new Stutz "Black Hawk" that introduced the very latest safety feature at the Southeastern Automobile show. This feature is designed to keep a car from rolling back on hills and inclines. It works automatically and requires no effort on the driver's part. The Rector Motor company, 426 West Peachtree street, distributor for Stutz cars, is showing these cars and cordially invites the public to arrange a demonstration.

Didn't Believe It Could Be Done--

Even Well-Informed Experts, But That Was Not Suprising

Last Sunday some ten thousand Atlantans watched Pete De Paolo, famous motor racing driver, conquer Stone Mountain. Driving a fully equipped stock model REO FLYING CLOUD Brougham, he climbed the brow to the summit--the first time such an achievement has been accomplished.

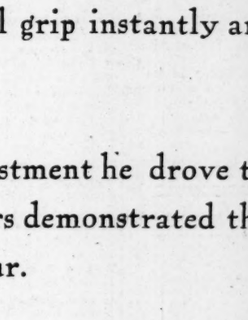

There is no road up the Mountain, as you may know, and the car had to surmount large boulders, loose rocks, hurdle deep crevices and clefts—a portion of the ascent having an angle of 45 degrees. The car carried two passengers up the hill until it reached the steepest camel hump; then was stopped, and took on three more adult passengers and a boy. It was restarted without the slightest jerk, back slip or spinning of rear wheels, and proceeded to the summit at surprising speed. At no time was any external assistance given.

Descending the Mountain, De Paolo, on the steepest incline he could find, gave an astonishing exhibition of how the Flying Cloud's four-wheel brakes will grip instantly and hold the car in fly-on-the-wall style.

Then without any adjustment he drove to a level stretch of road, and with four passengers demonstrated that the car could reach a speed of 75 miles an hour.

The entire demonstration was made without any "doping" of the car, or resorting to any special alteration or equipment—it was stock throughout.

Yes, REO FLYING CLOUD made a little more motor car history last Sunday. No wonder the whole town's talking:

PETER DE PAOLO.

Why We Chose

AUBURN

POWERED BY LYCOMING

Because we think we are harder to sell an automobile to than any one else in this community. Before we bought we investigated not only the value of the present models, but the factory behind them, and the future ahead of the factory. In all three respects we found, after a thorough study of the industry, that Auburn decidedly leads. Auburn's financial strength, stability and permanency are unquestioned. In manufacturing facilities and resources Auburn leads the industry. Not in mere size, but in engineering ability; production methods; workmanship and quality standards. Auburn's policy of not obsoleting former models with rapid changes in design, protects the owner's investment. Auburn's methods of doing business, and treatment of its customers is fair and constructive. Auburn's management is young and aggressive, insuring an even more brilliant future for Auburn. Now, as to the cars themselves, Auburn's policy sold us. Auburn said "There are our new models--compare them--drive them--and if they do not sell themselves, you will not be asked to buy." We make you the same invitation.

Twelve Farmers Awarded Master Degrees at Closing Of Agricultural Session

Two Lowndes County Farmers Win Cotton, Honors; Fine Showing Made in Egg Exhibition.

Athens, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Twelve men, chose because of their outstanding achievements in agriculture during 1928, were today awarded the honorary degree of master farmer. The presentation was made at the close of the annual Farmers' Week and Marketing conference sponsored by the State College of Agriculture.

Certificates were delivered by Dr. Andrew M. Soule, president of the College of Agriculture, while Dr. Clarence Poe, president of the Progressive Farmer company, awarded medals to the winners.

The men are W. P. Bryan, Tift county; R. P. Burson, Walton county; George T. Deriso, Sumter county; W. C. Willhouse, Burke county; U. C. B. Hogan, Laurens county; Jim Kelly, Washington county; Ben L. Redwine, Coweta county; C. J. Ross, Fulton county; Fred W. Schroer, Lowndes county; John H. Shaklesford, Pike county; H. R. Straight, Habersham county, and A. W. Tabor, Peach county. Only one man was absent, Jim Kelly, who was ill.

In announcing the men to receive the honor Dr. Soule said: "Agriculture is a profession as profound and complicated as that which graces any other line of human activity. Men who rise to the surface in rural affairs and successfully maintain themselves in positions of authoritative leadership and trust have performed an outstanding piece of altruistic work for the benefit of society. They are, therefore, entitled to approbation and reward for the contributions they have made as much as those who achieve something of constructive worth in any other vocation."

Tonight the farmers were honor guests at a banquet given at the Biltmore in Atlanta by the Progressive Farmer. More than 200 business, industrial and agricultural leaders of Georgia were to attend.

LOWNDES FARMERS WIN COTTON, CORN HONORS.

Titles of the best growers of corn and cotton in Georgia fell to the McLeod brothers, of Lowndes county, and W. H. Camp, Villa Rica, respectively.

They were awarded highest honors in the five-acre corn and cotton production contests, their rewards including cash prizes and an agricultural tour offered by the Chilean Nitrate of Soda Educational bureau.

The McLeod brothers, who also won first prize of $200 in the Georgia upland section division, showed a yield of 130.79 bushels of corn to the acre and a profit of $88.76 per acre.

Camp won first prize of $1,000, offered by the Chilean Nitrate bureau; $250 for best results in the long-staple contest. He produced 5,825 pounds of lint cotton with a profit of $883.33 on his five acres and his cost per pound of lint was 7 3-4 cents.

Both winners will be given a trip to Louisiana, Texas and Mexico to participate in agricultural conferences and tours.

Nearly 400 entered the contest last spring, while 89 completed their work. Seventy-three counties were represented. Considering that 1928 was generally unfavorable for corn production, authorities expressed great satisfaction with the results.

Grand prize for the lowland corn contest was voted to Bennett Claxton, Johnson county. It was a $200 cash award.

The prize of $100 for the greatest number to finish in any one county went to D. F. Bruce, county agent of Bibb county.

The awards made to growers in the various sections in the corn contest follows, along with their yield and profit:

North Georgia lowlands:

First—Grover Wilson, Rabun county, yield 81.89 bushels, profit $59.37, prize, $200; second, G. M. Mitchell, Newton county, $100, yield 80.60 bushels, profit, $53.34; third, J. B. Hallford, Stephens county, $50, yield, 69.03 bushels, profit $49.87; fourth, C. F. Burroughs, Madison county, $30, yield 76.84, profit, $43.50; fifth, J. F. Johns, Jr., Stephens county, $25, yield 70.13 bushels, profit $34.84; sixth, N. T. Moss, Chattooga county, $20, yield 63.83 bushels, profit, $44.84.

North Georgia upland; first—W. E. Morgan, Haralson county, $200, yield 82.08 bushels, profit, $55.25; second, J. A. Knox, Bibb county, $100, yield 67.70 bushels, profit, $50.25; third, T. Q. Sullivan, Clayton county, $50, yield, 67.50 bushels, profit, $32.07; fourth, W. P. Odum, Newton county, $30, yield 59.28 bushels, profit, $30.05; fifth, W. E. Neville, Rabun county, $25, yield 54.66 bushels, profit, $33.27; sixth, W. A. Legg, Jackson county, $20, yield 54.66, profit, $25.00.

South Georgia upland; first—McLeod Bros., Lowndes county, $200, yield 139.79 bushels, profit, $38.76; second, J. E. Davidson, Peach county, $100, yield 94.57 bushels, profit $56.58; third, J. H. Allen, Peach county, $50, yield 100.19 bushels, profit, $57.59; fourth, A. S. Hunnicutt, Bulloch county, $30, yield 79.18 bushels, profit, $50.37; fifth, E. T. Barnes, Laurens county, $25, yield 87.30 bushels, profit, $39.98.

Sixth prize—Jacob Vickers, Coffee county, $20, yield 76.20, profit, $36.93.

South Georgia lowland; first prize—Bennett Claxton, Johnson county, $200, yield 85.11 bushels, profit, $54.24; second, J. R. Raines, Crisp county, $50, yield 81.82 bushels, profit, $54.99; third, Wilson and Jenkins, Colquitt county, $100, yield 93.06 bushels, profit, $61.37. (Won first prize 1927. Not eligible for first two prizes for two years). Fourth, Richard McElmurray, Richmond county, $30, yield 62 bushels, profit $32.19; fifth, J. R. McElmurray, Richmond county, $25, yield 58.50 bushels, profit, $28.60; sixth, Grady Young, Worth county, $20, yield 29.90 bushels, profit, $6.83.

J. O. M. Smith, Madison county, won the second prize of $400 in the five-acre cotton production contest. He produced 6,150 pounds and made a profit of $715.13. Other winners were, third, R. L. Holland, Chattooga county, $250, produced 5,374 pounds with a profit of $807.70; fourth, W. D. Chastain, Cobb county, $150, produced 5,069 pounds with a profit of $786.08; fifth, R. P. Burson, master farmer of Walton county, $100. He produced 5,531 pounds and cleared $655.58. Burson made more cotton than the high winners, but his cost was likewise higher.

The 10 next best, who were awarded $10 each, were: Miss Maude Thomas, Martin; J. R. Marable, Farmington; L. S. Strickland, Royston; Stanley A. Owens, Canon; B. E. Baker, Summerville; Paul Dillard, Calhoun; J. D. Dorough, Cordele; J. H. Todd, Summerville; Carlton Evans, Jefferson, and J. F. Shaw, Marietta.

Winners in the long staple contest were: First, W. H. Camp, Villa Rica, $250; second, J. H. Todd, Summerville, $150; third, J. J. O'Kelly, Athens. The 10 next highest were: G. S. Holland, Holland; John Goodson, Chickamauga; L. B. Stephens, Covington; J. R. Marable, Farmington; L. H. P. Beck, Bowdon; L. A. Bowdon, Conyers; I. S. Brisendine, Conyers; J. G. Morris, Jonesboro, and E. L. Vaughn, Kensinton.

W. Ralph Mallard, Statesboro, won the annual $400 scholarship awarded by the Chilean nitrate of soda company to the man producing the largest yield of corn on an acre of ground, using nitrate of soda as the sole source of nitrogen for the growing crop. Mallard won over 56 contestants with a yield of 91.16 bushels.

ALFRIEND FEATURES CLOSING ADDRESS.

The principal address at the closing session was made by Kyle T. Alfriend, secretary of the Georgia Education association, who spoke on "The Need for Better Rural Life," asserting that "if we would face the truth and know the indications as they have been handed down to us by history, we would know that the rural life of America faces a crisis the like of which the world has never known.

"The decay of farm life, decline of the farm home and the deadening effect of debt upon the farmers present a problem for our nation—for the solution of which the best minds of the time must be enrolled," he declared.

The speaker said that farmers pay nearly 17 per cent of their income for taxes, while the average for the rest of the taxpayers is only 11 per cent.

Mr. Alfriend praised the work of the State College of Agriculture, but stated that "more education is needed in Georgia to change the outlook of the farmers from despair to hope and prosperity. If the agricultural conditions are to be bettered the training and educating must begin with our children."

He compared the average expenditure per child for education in Georgia with that of other states and the nation, explaining that the expenditure in Georgia was $16.75, while the nation's average is $62.07. He asserted that Georgia spent less for teachers' salaries than any other state except Mississippi. "We spend only 10 per cent of all tax money for education. Our counties are bonded for over $25,000,000 for roads; for schools less than $4,000,000."

SPLENDID SHOWING MADE IN EGG CONTEST.

Georgia farmers placed their representative eggs in one basket for the first time during the farmers' week and marketing conference at the agricultural college here and found them practically 100 per cent perfect.

One hundred and four dozen eggs, representing thirty Georgia counties, were entered in the egg show, the first of its kind in the state. The show was held under rules of the American Poultry association and each winner awarded a ribbon.

The Thomson hatchery, Thomson took first place in the commercial class brown eggs, and The Dixie poultry farm, Augusta, placed first in commercial white eggs.

Poison Designs on Husband

:: Wanted Strychnine To Kill "Dog in Overalls," Police Say ::

Land Woman in City Bastile

Her alleged desire to buy strychnine for the purpose of killing "a dog that wears overalls" Saturday resulted in the binding over to city criminal court of Mrs. Mary Floyd, of 316 Pryor street. Recorder A. W. Callaway, after hearing the testimony in her case, held her on vagrancy charges and set her bond at $300, also advising that she be referred to the lunacy commission for further investigation.

According to the testimony given in court, Mrs. Floyd entered a downtown drug store Saturday afternoon and asked for a quantity of strychnine. When asked what she wanted with the poison she is said by the clerk to have answered, "I want to kill my husband." The startled clerk told her she was in the wrong place and when she departed hastily he summoned Patrolman Barrow and told him of the strange request.

The officer promptly started to trail the woman and followed her to another drug store. As she gave the same order here he stepped up to her and asked her why she wanted the poison. She then claimed that she wanted to kill a dog and Patrolman Barrow informed her that if such was her desire he or any policeman would be glad to shoot the beast for her.

"Yes," Mrs. Floyd is then alleged to have said, "but this dog wears overalls."

Startled by her strikingly frank way of phrasing the case, Patrolman Barrow still retained enough presence of mind to take Mrs. Floyd into custody and down to the police station.

Taken before the recorder, Mrs. Floyd is said to have admitted that she had planned to "make up a lunch" with plenty of strychnine in it and send it to her husband, from whom she is separated.

12 'MASTER FARMERS' HONORED AT BANQUET

Twelve "aces of the deck" in Georgia farming and their wives Saturday night were honored by Atlanta business men and the Progressive Farmer magazine at a banquet at the Biltmore hotel after twelve master farmers had been awarded certificates at Athens at the George State College of Agriculture Saturday.

"You twelve men are the aces in the deck of Georgia farming," Dr. Clarence Poe, president and editor-in-chief of the Progressive Farmer, told the master farmers. "A search all over the state has brought you here with your wives as a masterful tribute to the properly balanced system of farming which made you predominant in the farming field for 1928."

Success of the twelve men who qualified themselves for the master farmer honor was assigned by President Andrew M. Soule, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture to diversification, and yet, he pointed out, in every instance, each man was a specialist in some form of plant or animal growing. Each, he said, was a competent business executive.

Praised for Diversification.

Dr. Poe praised the master farmers for their leading parts in the movement of southern farmers to abandon the "one-arm" or solely plant-production system of farming. Commending them for their wisdom, he pointed out that farmers all over the state rapidly were realizing that the two branches of farming, plant and animal productions were equally important, and that during the years since the war, animal production had shown a greater increase in profits than the cost of living for the same period, while plant production showed less percentage of profit increase.

It was pointed out that the twelve master farmers during the year had averaged a net profit of $8,000.

J. G. Oliver, of the Georgia State College of Agriculture, praised evidences he found among the group of "farming for a living and not for money."

Change in Sentiment.

Floyd C. Newton, president of the Master Farmers' club, who was chosen last year for the honor, told of the change of public sentiment toward the farmer, and that where in former years, farming was regarded as a careless and haphazard occupation, it now was recognized as an organized business. He told the "new crop" of master farmers that they were disciples of a new gospel in farming.

The twelve master farmers present with their wives were John H. Shackleford, Pike county; Ben L. Redwine, Coweta county; C. J. Ross, Fulton county; R. P. Burson, Walton county; W. C. Hillhouse, Burke county; H. R. Staright, Habersham county; W. P. Bryan, Tift county; George T. Deriso, Sumter county; A. W. Tabor, Peach county, and Fred W. Schroer, Lowndes county. Jim L. Kelly, of Washington county, was unable to attend on account of sickness.

Mrs. W. N. Hutt, editor of the woman's department of the Progressive Farmer, told of the part of the farm wife in making for better farming. W. C. Lasseter, editor of the Progressive Farmer, acted as toastmaster.

Twelve Georgia farmers are selected each year by the Progressive Farmer for distinguished achievements in the field of agriculture.

FUNERAL SERVICES FOR T. C. WHITNER TO BE HELD TODAY

Funeral services for Thomas Cobb Whitner, Atlanta pioneer, who died suddenly Friday, will be conducted at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at Spring Hill chapel by the Rev. J. S. Dill. Private burial will take place at West View. John S. Whitner, Charles F. Whitner, Lorton Lee, Spann W. Milner and Whitner Howard will serve as pallbearers.

Mr. Whitner, who was in his sixty-sixth year, apparently was in good health when he left his home for his office Friday morning, but was stricken with a stroke of apoplexy while at work and died early Friday night at his home, 108 Fifth street.

A native of West Point, he was a members of one of Georgia's most distinguished families and the son of Major John C. and Mrs. Sarah Cobb Whitner. The family removed to Atlanta about a year after his birth.

He lived here from that time, with the exception of about eight years spent in New Orleans. He and his brothers succeeded to the management of the John C. Whitner Insurance company following Major Whitner's death.

He was a member of the North Avenue Presbyterian church and the Pioneer Schoolboys' association.

Booker T. Washington High School Presents Organ Recital Today

Booker T. Washington High school for colored will present Graham W. Jackson in an organ recital at Big Bethel A. M. E. church at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon.

In addition to the many favorite numbers by well-known composers, and "At Twilight," by Prof. Frederick Hall, director of music at Clark university, there will be several numbers rendered by the school glee club, whose broadcasting recently met with such popular favor throughout the state and nation. The program begins promptly at 3:30.

MRS. DAVIS DIES

Tennille Woman Passes Away at Sandersville.

Mrs. Eva Burns Davis, widow of Dr. James Porter Davis, of Tennille, died recently at a hospital in Sandersville after an extended illnes. Funeral services were conducted at the Sandersville Baptist church and burial was in the Tennille cemetery.

Mrs. Davis was a native of Savannah and the daughter of the late William and Elizabeth Meldrim Burns. She is survived by two sisters, Mrs. Daisy Burns Jones and Mrs. Lena Burns Lancaster, both of Atlanta, and a brother, W. Lee Burns, of Wadley.

Mortuary

JOHN A. POWELL.

John A. Powell, 83, died Saturday afternoon at his home, Alto place, Center Hill, after an extended illness. He is survived by his widow, four sons, A. L., J. S., A. H., and F. M. Powell, and several grandchildren and nephews. The body has been removed to the undertaking establishment of Brandon and Williams, Hapeville, and funeral arrangements will be announced later.

W. R. FREEMAN.

Ellaville, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—W. R. Freeman, aged 75, died at his home on the Ideal-Ellaville highway. Mr. Freeman was a native of Talbot county, moving to this section fifteen years ago. Fifty-five years ago he was married to Miss Savannah Wallace, of Sumter county, who survives him.

Funeral services for Mr. Freeman were held at his home Friday afternoon and were conducted by Rev. C. D. Carter, of Ellaville. His remains were interred in the Ellaville cemetery. Besides his wife he is survived by one son, Will Freeman, of Columbus, and two daughters, Mrs. W. T. McCarty, of Alamo, Ga., and Miss Mary Belle Freeman, of Macon county.

BOARDWALK PIER AT ATLANTIC CITY DESTROYED BY FIRE

Atlantic City, N. J., January 26.—(AP)—Climaxing a day of six fires, flames tonight took their heaviest toll by destroying the central pier, at Tennessee avenue, and the Boardwalk. The loss was estimated at $250,000.

Eight firemen were taken to the hospital and a number of others were less seriously injured and were treated at an emergency hospital set up on the walk. The central pier was on the site of Young's old pier, destroyed in March, 1912. Buried in the ruins of the central pier are Atlantic City's invaluable convention records, destroyed with the office of the Atlantic City Convention bureau.

The fire started at 6:30 p. m. Before it was under control at 10:45 apparatus from seven neighboring municipalities were aiding every fireman in the city to keep the flames from spreading to the Knickerbocker hotel and other buildings in the Boardwalk block between Tennessee avenue and St. James Place.

EDUCATION BOARD MEETING TO AWAIT RETURN OF POWELL

The anticipated special meeting of the board of education of Atlanta will not be called until the return to the city of George Powell, president of the board, it was announced Saturday night by Dr. McIntosh M. Burns, vice president. The meeting is to be called to consider the revised budget for the year.

Due to the fact that the regular pay checks of teachers in the city schools are not due until Friday, and since Mr. Powell is expected to return before that date, the meeting will not have to be immediate, it was pointed out.

The school budget for 1929 is rapidly being slashed from the $7,386,485 appropriation asked. Raymond Ritchie, assistant superintendent of schools in charge of business administration, announced that practically all of the $894,000 to be taken from the anticipated budget had been absorbed. Only about $40,000 remains, he said.

MRS. MARY E. BOHR, PIONEER RESIDENT, LAID TO LAST REST

Mrs. Mary E. Bohr, 67 years old and a resident of Atlanta for more than 50 years, was laid to rest in Oakland Saturday afternoon following funeral services held at the chapel of J. Austin Dillon company and conducted by the Rev. Robert Ivy.

Mrs. Bohr was a native of Charleston, S. C., and came to Atlanta in 1872 with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Goetting, and her brothers. She was educated and spent the rest of her life in this city.

Her father was a founder of one of the first toy shops in the city, located at Peachtree and Grubbs street and known by the firm name of Goetting & Simmons.

Mrs. Bohr is survived by a daughter, Mrs. F. H. Wingard.

SYLVANUS MORRIS, GEORGIA 'U.' DEAN, IS LAID TO REST

Athens, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Funeral services for Dr. Sylvanus Morris, who for 28 years was dean of Lumpkin Law school, University of Georgia, were held today from Emmanuel Episcopal church, the Rev. Dr. A. G. Richards, rector, officiating. Interment was in Oconee cemetery.

Classes were suspended in the university today as a mark of respect for a man who gained prominence as one of the state's leading attorneys and jurists, and a foremost alumnus and teacher of the Georgia institution of higher learning.

Pallbearers were associates of Dr. Morris, and included Thomas F. Green, Sr., Abit Nix, Howell C. Erwin, Thomas F. Green, Jr., Robert L. McWhorter, J. Alton Hosch, Walter G. Cornett, and Deupree Hunnicutt. All are members of the Athens Bar association.

Honorary escort included C. D. Flanigen, Arthur E. Griffith, E. L. Hill, S. J. Cartledge, J. J. Strickland, E. H. Dorsey, Sr., E. K. Lumpkin, Sr., the board of trustees of the university, the chancellor and faculty, the vestry of Emanuel, the Kappa Alpha fraternity, the Athens Bar and Alumni association of the university.

Police Chief Beavers Celebrates Fortieth Anniversary as 'Cop'

James Litchfield Beavers, Atlanta's veteran chief of police, Saturday celebrated his fortieth anniversary as a policeman by doing a full day's work and pausing only long enough to receive the congratulations of friends and fellow officers.

Chief Beavers started "on the street" way back in 1889. Rising from the ranks he became chief in 1911, and has filled that position since that time.

Not only is the chief well-known and liked in Atlanta and in Georgia, but he has won many friends, particularly among policemen, over the country. This was well evidenced by that fact that last summer he was chosen head of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, at the annual convention of that organization, held at Colorado Springs, Colo.

NEGRO EDUCATORS GATHER IN MEETING AT BETHEL CHURCH

More than 400 colored school teachers, principals and supervisors were present at a district meeting for negro educators, in Big Bethel A. M. E. church at 10:30 o'clock Saturday morning.

Speaking in their interest and benefit were Superintendent Willis A. Sutton, of the city schools; Jere A. Wells, superintenadent Fulton county schools; President John Hope, Morehouse college; State Agent Walter B. Hill, state department of education, and S. H. Lee, Rosenwald field agent.

Dr. Sutton made a strong appeal for both a practical and livable program of education—stressing health, education and thought and action—and lastly, character. President John Hope responding, paid a high tribute to Dr. Sutton for his sterling worth to Atlanta and the south as an educator.

County Superintendent Jere A. Wells emphasized the problem of negro school and education in Fulton county. He said that of the children in the county of school age, the negroes were about 20 per cent. Walter B. Hill spoke of the work that is being done for colored teachers and schools by the various state and philanthropic agencies within the state.

S. H. Lee reported splendid results for the Rosenwald fund in aiding and establishing additional negro schools. Every colored college and school in Atlanta was represented and more than 24 counties were represented with more than 100 teachers. Principal O. I. Harper presided.

PRAYER—"Love of God, so pure and changeless, Blood of God, so rich and free, Grace of God, so strong and boundless, Magnify them all in me."

FREEDOM OF THE SEAS.

Senator Borah, in discussing the cruisers bill, speaks interestingly and strongly for freedom of the seas for neutral commerce. That is a vital matter for the United States, because our commerce is neutral in all war-times when we are not an active belligerent.

And that is why the cruisers bill should now be passed and our navy, now inadequate to enforce our neutral rights, should be promptly passed. England is now as able, for instance, to sweep our commerce from the seas as when she did it in 1809-1814, only yielding to us the privilege of trading directly with Sweden.

In view of the European and Asiatic situations, with great powers ready any day to jump at each other's throats, it is intolerable to a red-blooded American to know that our commerce can be disastrously jeopardized in all the seven seas and for safety would need to be embargoed by ourselves in our home ports.

The situation is similar to what it was in the early years of the nineteenth century when we lost a thousand ships on the high seas because we were without a navy large and competent enough to command England and France to keep hands off them.

It is all right enough to move, as Senator Borah does, for an international conference to codify maritime laws and to establish the rights of neutrals on the high seas. But as long as the great foreign powers know for a fact that the United States are impotent to assert and defend their right to freedom of the seas for their neutral commerce, such a conference is not likely to produce fixed results.

It is worth almost any amount of money for this nation to force the world powers to realize that the maritime rights and commerce of this people cannot be denied with impunity.

Hence the supreme duty to reenforce our navy now—and not after our commerce on the high seas has been driven off the oceans.

HOOVER'S HOME BASE.

Yet another misguided zelot with a lack of learning in the constitution and laws of his country has questioned the right of Herbert Hoover to be president, on the grounds that he has not "been 14 years a resident within the United States" as the national constitution requires.

On its face the contention might seem to the uninformed a valid objection, founded upon the letter of the law. But since the institution of the government the concensus of constitutionalists has been that the requisition does not demand 14 years of unbroken prior residence within the confines of the country in order to make "a natural born citizen" competent to be elected and sworn as the president of the United States.

Judge Story, one of the first rank commentators on the constitution, early said:

"Even a native citizen might, from long absence, and voluntary residence abroad, become alienated from, or indifferent to his country; and, therefore, a residence of 14 years within the United State is made indispensable, as a qualification to the office. This, or course, does not exclude persons who are temporarily abroad in the public service, or on their private affairs, and who have not intentionally given up their domicile here."

No competent person, of course, will obtrude this silly matter in the proceedings to invest Mr. Hoover with the functions of the presidency. His home base for many long years has been in California. That commonwealth is "within the United States" and has held his "permanent domicile" which all constitutional authorities agree is the test.

MARSHALL'S VISIT.

Atlanta has rarely had opportunity to extend a welcome on behalf of the entire south to a visitor of greater distinction and more impressive record of achievement than Louis Marshall, who comes today to speak at the convention of the grand lodge district No. 5 of B'nai B'rith.

The generosity of officials of the lodge in inviting the general public to hear the lecture, in so far as the capacity of the temple of Pryor street will permit, is an invitation which Atlanta as a whole appreciates deeply and which hundreds of her leading citizens will eagerly accept.

As a lawyer and a scholar Mr. Marshall is known and honored all over the world. He has the distinction, believed unique, of having served on three constitutional conventions in his home state of New York. His counsel on matters of law and on problems of humanity is always eagerly sought and highly prized. His services as a speaker and his erudition as a scholar are always in demand and, in so far as duty and strength permit, are always available in any worthy cause.

It is, however, as a champion of the poor and the seriously handicapped in life that Mr. Marshall is most deeply honored and most sincerely loved. As an ever-ready warrior for the cause of the unfortunate and the underprivileged he has never failed to give to the utmost of his tremendous ability, magnificent training and spotless power.

He was president of the American Jewish Relief committee during the world war—a committee which raised $72,000,000 for suffering humanity in the war torn areas of Europe and the Near East. To Mr. Marshall's tireless effort and genius for leadership a large part of this record of succor is credited.

At the peace deliberations after the armistice he toiled, unceasingly, to protect and safeguard the rights of the smaller and weaker nations, again championing the cause of the minorities unable adequately to secure their own rights.

This is the world citizen whom Atlanta welcomes today. To such a man it is a treasured privilege to be given the opportunity to extend the hand of hospitality and admiration.

Ever a friend of the south, coming to the aid of her cause many times when her side was not the popular one, ever fighting for justice, Mr. Marshall has won the admiration of all southerners familiar with his career.

HIS NOSE IN THE AIR.

No one who observes public affairs can discount the alertness of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, as a sentinel in the senate of the popular welfare. In that role he has independence of ideas and aggressiveness of advocacy.

Like many precedent reformers—like Wendell Phillips and Neal Dow and William Jennings Bryan—he talks and walks ahead of his generation.

Just now his nose is in the air scenting the furtive approach of a python seeking to coil about the limbs of the nation and strangle it into impotent submission. The python is what the senator calls "the power trust."

Through the agencies of consolidations, interlocking managements and mammoth holding companies, the producers of hydro-electric power are assumed to be conspiring to national control of the generation and distribution of such power, defiant through monopoly of both federal and state regulations.

Senator Norris seems to see no way of escape for the common dependents upon such power from the predacious hands of the power python than for the national government to get actively into competition with it through the use of its yet unappropriated power sites.

But we have come through seasons when very able statesmen and political economists believed that the rights and interests of the people demanded nationalization of the railroads, and of the telegraph, and of the express transportation business, and so on and so forth! Yet the wise use of the constitutional powers of the federal government and the exercise of the sovereignty of the state have so controlled the relations of those utilities to the public as to make "government ownership" a wholly rejected remedy.

If Senator Norris has the vision to read between the lines of the late election returns—and he is old enough in public life to have it—he cannot fail to find there an overwhelming verdict against "government in business." One paramount policy of the forthcoming administration is already known.

Mr. Hoover has distinctly said that "the government must keep out of production and distribution of commodities and services. This is the deadline between our system and socialism," and that the nationalizing of industry or business is the negation of our social foundations. It is against such doctrines that Senator Norris and his followers will find themselves making a hopeless frontal attack.

GENUINE FARM RELIEF.

Charles J. Haden, well-known Georgia capitalist, hit the nail squarely on the head when he told the City club, in an address Thursday noon, that the establishment of industrial plants in the small cities and towns of Georgia would do more to bring prosperity to the agricultural interests of the state than any other one thing.

With a prosperous manufacturing plant of average size, operating the year 'round, in every town in Georgia, a population of steady wage earners would be created who would consume all the farm products that the farmers of each community could raise.

The marketing problem for our agricultural crops would be solved. Money made in Georgia would be spent in Georgia for Georgia grown products and widening circles of circulation would benefit every interest in the state.

The articles manufactured in Georgia would provide her people with their manufactured needs, with a consequent saving in shipping charges and trade price enhancement. The manufactured products sold out of the state would bring a steady flow of new capital into her borders.

The manufacturing plants would offer vast opportunities to the young men and women of the state whose talents turned to such enterprise.

And, getting back to Mr. Haden's original idea, the workers in these plants would spend their earnings for foodstuffs grown upon the nearby farms, bringing a new market and a consequent new era of prosperity to the farmers.

It is a thesis so self-evident that it needs no lengthy elucidation.

ALIENS SERVING OUR SHIPS.

The other day, in the house of congress, attention was called by Congressman La Guardia, of New York, to the fact that aliens are largely employed to serve the Atlantic liners operated under the control of the United States shipping board.

The congressman presented the figures to show the truth of his contention that many hundreds of aliens, not even holding first papers toward future citizenship, are employed upon those liners to the exclusion of actual Americans who want and need the employment. There is no excuse of extra competency upon the part of the aliens who serve in the steward's crews and no valid reason for preferring them was forthcoming from the shipping board.

The proposal by Congressman La Guardia was that no part of the appropriations allotted to the shipping board should be used for the employment of aliens on government controlled ships when equally competent Americans may be obtained. It is difficult to understand why the house should have voted down so reasonable a proposal as that embodied in the La Guardia amendment, but it was done. Here, therefore, is furnished a justifiable cause of complaint by the labor organizations of the nation.

Aliens who live in foreign countries, who maintain their families in them, and who do not even offer to become naturalized as American citizens, ought not, in all good reason, to be given preference of employment and wages over needy Americans begging for work.

DOCTORS OF MAD YOUTH.

A new cult of reformers is developing in this land of ours. The members are assuming the offices of doctors of mad youth—that is, that great section of the rising generation which is affected, if not afflicted with the new "dementia Americana," evidenced by sexuality, hip-flasks and a passion for unmoral activities.

There is no call, however, in our social system for the services of such a cult of soul physicians, with their puritanisms and prohibitions. The abberations of our young men and women that excite the zeal of the reformers differ from those of every past generation only in their instrumentalities. The same spirit of youth to revel in the accessible pleasures of life is no worse spirit than drew out the proverbs of Solomon, the acid sentences of Solon, the criticisms of Cicero, and the verbal anathemata of Burke and Hannah More and plenty of early American philisophers.

All the same the race in general, and specifically in America, has been steadily making headway in good character, honest policies, altruistic services, and in the benevolences that beautify and dignify human intercourse.

Give youth fine examples and freedom of choice; it will slough off its ephemeral crudities and, by a large majority, show itself of good metal, and often of pure gold.

As Shakespeare made one of his characters say of himself these are youths' "salad days when it is green in judgment." It will be better to give youth its fair chance to ripen.

THE VALUE OF HEALTH.

The plan, by the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Atlanta, to hold a better health exposition at the auditorium, should receive the enthusiastic support of all our citizens.

In actual length of life, the possibility of increasing the span of man's usefulness to his state and community can only be measured in millions of dollars. Experts declare that, were the available medical knowledge thoroughly disseminated, the average length of human life could be increased 18 per cent over the present figures. When it is remembered that ten years have been added to man's life during the past half century, the incalculable increase in human values can be estimated.

Aside from this actual lengthening of life, of course, there is another benefit involved in health education which is at least as valuable in wealth and human happiness. That is the improved physical condition of the people generally.

The Jaycee organization should be given the enthusiastic support of everybody in this move for better health education. Every individual in the state, high and low, for both selfish and altruistic reasons, should not only seize every opportunity for better health education for themselves, but should aid every undertaking which will make this teaching available to their neighbors and fellow citizens. Such education will help each individual in so many ways that its ramifications assume nothing short of an unending series of ever recurring circles of benefit.

UTILIZING FARM WASTES.

Print paper from cornstalks is "something new under the sun," but seems to be making marvelous progres. Many experiments in different states are reported as successful.

A belief that the new industry promises not only to add a vast amount of new wealth to the country and provide new employment for much labor, but also to help in a large measure to solve one of the outstanding problems of agriculture—that of utilizing a farm waste and the largest single item of waste where corn is the principal crop—is held by experimenters who add that it offers the larger promise of giving the forests a chance to catch up with the demand that is being laid on them.

The government printing office has shown practical interest in the new type of paper, and sees hope that the work of the conservationists may be made much easier in the immediate future.

There is no greater service than that of conservation of wastes, and particularly is this true when it works directly to the benefit of the farmer.

SOTHERN'S FINAL EXIT.

The recent de ision of E. H. Sothern, our greatest actor of Shakespearean roles, to abandon the stage was read with sincere regret by all the surviving lovers of the supreme in drama and tragedy behind the footlights.

Sothern was born in New Orleans, of an actor family, 69 years ago, and from his boyhood has walked the mimic stage in all the lines from roaring farce to hair-raising tragedy. His inherited genius, sedulously re-enforced by conscientious study and stage work, brought him steadily into public favor and fame. In recent years he has stood peerless as a master interpreter of immortal Will Shakespear.

But Sothern knows from abundant observation and experience that the taste of the box-office public has dropped to an appetitive level far below that of the philosophy and wisdom of Shakespearean dramatic literature. He admits the futility of trying to re-educate the modern stage-box and orchestra-chair ochlocracy to the mental and spiritual values of Hamlet, Othello, Macbeth and Shylock. There is a woeful lack of intellectual raw material under their hair.

So Sothern retires to seek other avenues of activity for his genius and accomplishments, and who, looking at the lines besieging the box-offices everywhere, can blame him?

To show the world that he harbors no resentment Al Smith is spending six weeks in Florida, and at Sarasota where John Ringling's elephants are winter-quartered.

During a flu epidemic the prohibition laws should be invalid for invalids.

World peace seems a possibility. Now if the safety razor is perfected there will be no more blood shed.

LOOKING AND LISTENING

BY SAM W. SMALL

Here We Are Bang Up Against a New Theory of Evolution.

Washington, January 26.—(Special.)—Any humane person possessed of a life-saving complex can find a job cut out and waiting here in my sanctum. As an "accident of evolution" I am in sad need to be rescued and to have my feet set upon solid scientific ground somewhere!

For many meandering years I have been collecting several shelves of books written by the cocksure scientists to explain to me "how," by the processes of nature, I became the "Sam what I am!"

During a very prolonged life-time I have been carefully tracing myself from the Genesis of Moses up to Darwin, and then tracked around with Spencer, Huxley, Wallace, and on down to Henry Fairfield Osborn and Clarence Darrow, winding up with beloved Dr. Thornwell Jacobs!

But now comes Dr. Austin Clark, of the Smithsonian institute, who knocks all my previously and painfully acquired evolutionary knowledge galley west!

* * * *

My Books Are Back Numbers.

Dr. Clark's theory to account for the presence of man in our known cosmos makes it imperative that I shall scrap all my books by the scientists of yesterday, because he has shown them to be back numbers of fiction.

And I am mighty willing to junk the whole long array. They have annoyed and hampered me a whole lot for many years.

I throw my doors wide open to Dr. Clark, whose abilities and fame as a biologist are known undeniably in the scientific world.

He gratifies me immensely by his finding that "there is nothing to show that man was in any way connected with monkeys!" Gee, but that is comforting. Now I can cheerily go to the monkey-house at the zoo, or into the menagerie tent of Ringling's circus, without having to feel reverential respect for those ring-tailed, chattering dickenses in their cages on the ground of my direct descent from their family forbears!

Henceforth, on the authority of Dr. Clark, I shall treat every "monk," from the educated one on the stage in a dress suit to the organ-grinder's panhandler in a red frock, as a rank stranger and alien!

The Big Fundamental Fact.

The great thing in Dr. Clark's thesis which pleases and stabilizes my spirit is his scientific corroboration that—

"Man appeared suddenly and in substantially the same form as he is today. There is not the slightest evidence of his existence before that time."

Of course that has been the constant belief of all men, in all ages and countries, who have accepted the Mosaic scriptures. Nor is it a new scientific concept, or conviction, or corroboration with Dr. Clark.

Here we may recall what the great Virchow, chemist, investigator and anatomist of the first rank, said years ago—which saying was—

"We must really acknowledge that there is a complete absence of any fossil type of a lower stage in the development of man."

And Professor Dr. Freidrich Pfaff, professor of natural science in the University of Erlangen, said that "the age of man is comparatively brief, extending only to a few thousand years; that man appeared suddenly; that the most ancient man known to us is not essentially different from the now living man; and that transition from ape to man, or from man to ape, are nowhere to he found."

* * * *

A Georgia Scientist Agrees.

We are very proud in Georgia of the great scientific character and career of Professor Joseph Le Conte, whose latest achievements were while he was in the faculty of the University of California. Professor Le Conte was a notable addict to the theory of evolution, but evidently he could not "go the whole monkey" on the claim that man, through long ages evolved up from tadpole to ape and then descended from ape to us! For he said:

"The evidence of geology today is that species seem to come into existence suddenly, and in full perfection, remain substantially unchanged during the term of their existence, and pass away in full perfection. Other species take their places apparently by substitution, not by transmutation."

(It was Professor Le Conte who emphasized the words in the clause which I have above quoted.)

Sufficient to say that those of us who believe God created man, let us say "suddenly" in the sixth day, and in "full perfection" as a man, are in accord with the above-mentioned scientists, and are not disturbed in our fixed faith by all of the technical paleontological and biological folderol with which they surround the fundamental facts.

* * * *

A Very Merry Howdy-Do.

It is a pretty sure thing that Dr. Clark has let himself in for a very merry howdy-do by publishing his thesis. All the prognathous monkey-docti will fall upon him like wolves upon a stray sheep in a desert. His best safety will be in a grounded airplane with propellers all around making a million revolutions a minute!

Certainly it is going to be interesting and illuminating to see and read the arguments that the ultra-evolutionists put up against this new and devastating theory by Professor Clark. He seems to have pited up, from fields of investigation all over the world, a mass of evidence to support his conclusion; and that conclusion simply thrashes the stuffing out of Darwinism and all of its ancillary adjuncts. It makes thousands of volumes and large sections of the world's libraries little more than junk.

Naturally, the monkey-obsessed section of the scientific cult is not going to silently throw up their hands and surrender their cherished simian idol at the Smithsonian doctor's demand.

* * * *

A Quite Valuable Effect.

I am hoping for one valuable effect to come from the promulgation of this most recent "scientific explanation" of how man happened upon this planet.

It ought to furnish fresh and convincing proof of the folly of allowing absolutely unlearned teachers in the public schools of any state to assume to teach the theories of evolution to the immature understandings of children.

This immediate and prominent demonstration that scientists of the highest repute are as far apart as the poles in their own understandings of "what evolution is," and which theory of evolution is the pure stuff, should impel the legislators of every state to bar the teaching of so-called evolution from the public schools.

Whose evolution is being taught in the Georgia schools? Is it that of Darwin, now discarded by most reputable scientists? Or, is it that of Huxley, or of Dr. Osborn? Or, shall we substitute, for whatever theory is being taught, this latest one by Dr. Clark?

Treaties and Cruisers

In the discussion of the ratification of the Kellogg treaty before the senate, Senator Glass, of Virginia, is quoted as saying, "A treaty has only the value of the armed force which is behind it," while Senator Reed was dramatized pouring the full force of his sardonic satire upon "such an impotent gesture." Of course there is ground in the history of nations for these and other expressions of cynical skepticism, which characterized much of that debate. Lack of confidence in the sincerity and good-will of each other has been all too prevalent in international relations for us to be too optimistic about the phraseology of treaties.

But let it be remembered that it was this lack of faith, and not lack of guns, which has made so many of the treaties of the past "impotent gestures." For that very reason, the spectacle of these distinguished senators, using all of their forensic gifts to destroy the faith of nations in each other, seems to me to be a tragic betrayal of their high responsibility. These senators are inevitably national leaders, and are supposed to represent the attitude and sentiment of at least some portion of the American people. When in the very act of voting for the ratification of a treaty, which declares that we will never again resort to war for the settlement of any controversy with another nation, they declare that those words have no meaning, they are doing all that they can to destroy the confidence of other nations in our solemn signature to an agreement.

A Bit of History.

But in the light of our past history, I directly challenge the truth of the statement that "a treaty has only the value of the armed force which is behind it," or that a peaceful declaration by this nation is "an impotent gesture."

The year 1814 found England and America both busily building warships on the Great Lakes, with the deliberate intention of arming for another fight. The old lie, "in time of peace, prepare for war," was still dominant. But in 1818, these two nations quietly took the most revolutionary step in international history. By mutual agreement, they turned their warships into commercial vessels. More than a hundred years ago these pioneers three thousand miles away from the intrigues and traditional distrusts of European diplomacy, saw clearly that rivalry in guns was not only a suicidal economic policy, but that frowning forts fringing the frontiers of neighbors, with their guns pointed at each other's peace and prosperity, was a constant international irritation. They saw that this assumption of the possibility of war was a constant invitation to war.

This daring experiment of a century and more, has proven to be a practical proceedure for permanent peace. For a hundred and fourteen years, nothing but an imaginary line four thousand miles long, stretching across our nothern frontier, has separated two growing, ambitious, sensitive, peoples. Innumerable vexatious and irritating questions have arisen during this period. There have been questions of boundaries, fisheries, navigation, and mines, involving conflicting interests, which might easily have provoked a fight. Demagogues, jingoes, adventurers, and conscienceless politicians, have strained the peacefulness of these governments, but today every ancient controversy has been practically settled, without the firing of a gun.

Lesson In Faith.

From this standpoint, let us estimate the value of the Kellogg treaty, and the significance of the pending bill for fifteen more cruisers. It is claimed that this adjdition to our navy is a purely defensive measure. Against whom are we arming to defend ourselves on the seas? There is only one other naval power in the world against whom these deefnsive measures can possibly be taken, and that is the British empire. Does not the story of one hundred and fourteen years of peace between our English-speaking nations, based entirely upon faith in one another, without the threat of an armed regiment or an armed vessel, challenge our faith for the future? If we can trust Great Britain upon the land for more than a century, why cannot we trust her upon the high seas?

NEW YORK SKYLINES

BY CHARLES ESTCOURT, JR.

(Written Exclusively for The Constitution and North American Newspaper Alliance).

Written Exclusively for The Atlanta Constitution and the North American Newspaper Alliance.

New York, January 26.—A big visitation campaign is now being organized by some of the New York churches. Men and women will go through apartment houses and ask tenants whether they attend any services. Those who don't will be invited.

The ministers here are baffled by the problem of making contact with large numbers of intelligent non-church-goers who might not welcome such calls. Even on the question of visiting their own members certain clergymen are perplexed. The relationship is less simple than in a smaller city.

"There is nothing," says Dr. William Pierson Merrill, of the famous Brick Presbyterian church on Fifth avenue, "which seems less profitable than to spend an afternoon going from one apartment house to another, hearing one's name proclaimed over a house telephone by an Irish doorman to a Swedish maid servant, while you stand below wondering in what form it will reach the lady of the house.

"But the chances are all in favor of the response being a chill 'Not at home' which sends you on your way, only to repeat the performance at a half dozen other places.

Keeping Home Fires Burning.

The next advance in civilization will be a centralized janitor service. A young business man plans to establish it. He will open an office and keep it open day and night for complaints about the heat, the garbage and the plumbing.

Tenants with kicks of this order will kick to his office and not to the landlords, whose lives are now made miserable by such petty annoyances. This man is going to engage a group of negroes and work them in shifts, firing furnaces and doing other work. They will be in uniform, suited to rough work of course, but clean and neat.

Coal for all of the houses will be purchased on a grand scale, and the amounts required for different houses will be carefully figured and all materials and working time will be utilized as efficiently as possible. It will be a service for landlords rather than for tenants.

This Applies to Baby Vamps, Too.

It's quite a handicap, says Miss Lillian M. Lockwood, for a young and impressionable business girl to be told that she looks like a movie star. The girl pins curls under her hat brim, paints a pink rose on the hat, affects a necklace of "poils," and is rejected.

In applying for a job, appearance counts one-third, according to Miss Lockwood, a personnel director in a school for young business women. She insists upon long sleeves for office wear, little jewelry, if any, neat gloves and heels, moderate make-up except in a movie concern or at a modiste's, and no baby bonnets.

"A girl must realize the importance of grooming," Miss Lockwood says. "Expensive clothes are not at all necessary. A ten-dollar dress with long sleeves and two or three changes of collars and cuffs, which are quite an asset, will do very well."

Church Gets Architects' Best.

In this city of absurd and wasteful change the architects' best bet for monumental fame remains the church. Some churches have to go, it is true, but they stick better than other buildings, which are razed while comparatively new and wholly admirable. They are torn down that larger buildings, affording a higher money return, may rise in their places.

The architects, who see their fine work destroyed so soon, put their best into churches. Among the many palatial apartment houses that make the Fifth avenue skyline of Central Park a wall of gleaming white there stands out in softer, purer beauty the new church of the Heavenly Rest. Not such a big church, and even now below the general skyline level, this fair shrine has somehow engaged the devotion of the designers in a way that no contract for a millionaire's domicile could.

Makes Music of Figures.

John Alexander Rogers is the first man in 14 generations of his family to be in business as his life work, and he partly atones for it by singing—over the radio or telephone and on the stage. He manages the uptown office of a brokerage concern and the music in his voice over the telephone varies slightly with the market.

His ancestry can be traced at least to John Rogers, martyr burned at the stake in England in 1555. His great-grandfather was president of Harvard, and an uncle was president of Dartmouth. Most of the line of New Englanders behind him preached, taught or wrote.

This "singing broker" wrote the "Song of Friendship" for the committee on World Friendship Among Children, and he has even been in opera.

Shaving Mugs That Are Different.

The decorated shaving mug industry of the world centers on Greenwich avenue, Greenwich Village. Here hand-decorated affairs are brightened with floral designs and symbols and dainty faces. You may have anything you please painted on your mug, provided it's respectable, and people have strange fancies. An undertaker ordered a mug with a picture of his hearse upon it, and the grateful husband of a woman recovering from an operation sent the surgeon a mug with the operating scene done on the sides.

Occasionally the subway management finds a number of pennies in the turnstiles, which will not turn except on a nickel. The explanation is that the city holds a few people who believe the subway is entitled to more than a nickel for a ride.

Therefore they drop, for example, seven or eight cents in the turnstile as they pass through, and thus they can sleep easier.

The Background of Foreign Affairs

Britannia Rules the Waves; America and the Freedom of the Seas; The Conflict of Interests; To Build or Not To Build.

BY HENRY KITTREDGE NORTON.

Put yourself in an Englishman's shoes for a moment and, if it is not too great a strain, try to think as an Englishman thinks. You have a great and glorious empire, no doubt of that. It was built up by war and conquest, no doubt of that, either. The great instrument of that conquest was the British navy. It was the British sailor who met, one after the other, the rivals of England and put a stop to their imperial aspirations. Spain, Holland, France and Germany, in turn, went down before his prowess as a seaman and a fighter. Small wonder that you heed the counsels of your great sailors, the sea lords that sit in the admiralty.

Of course, war and conquest have passed under a ban. You yourself, as an Englishman, now that you have a large portion of the world under your rule, have been as eager as anyone to outlaw war in the future. But when it comes to cutting down the British navy on that account, or even to allowing any other nation to have a navy equal to yours, that is another matter. And you turn to the sea lords for advice.

They are ready with their answer. True, England never intends to go to war again. She has signed the pledge. But still wars are a possibility and England might be drawn in. If so, she is helpless without a navy which can control the sea, for two-thirds of her food supply is imported in ships. England simply must have a navy great enough to insure the continuity of that supply.

You remember with a shiver the dark days of the war when German submarines were sinking food ships faster than they could be built and England came within days of starvation. The sea lords must be right. And yet—there is America. You know she can afford to build a greater navy than yours if she wants to. And, to be honest with yourself, you must admit that you have raised rim with her commerce with that navy of yours. Probably you would not have done so if she had had a powerful navy at the time.

You would, of course, be glad to cut down your navy now, for taxes are high and ships are expensive luxuries. Maybe you could come to terms with America. But hardly without agreeing to equality. Perhaps it would be better to let the thing ride. Why force the issue? Britannia rules the waves.

Now think like an American again—like an American conscious of the history of your country. You can go back through the decades to the days when this was a young and struggling republic. You remember its chief interest was in building up its trade and commerce and that its efforts in that line were constantly interfered with by the recurrence of wars in Europe. The belligerents were forever cutting American commerce to pieces in order to injure their enemies. Great Britain was the worst offender because she had the greatest navy and used her power to strangle the continental nations with whom she was at war. Yes, she did this right down to 1917, when we entered the world war, and your government was forced again and again to assert American rights against British aggression. It was only because Germany's aggressions ignored American life as well as American property that you finally went to war by England's side.

It was this sort of thing that led your fathers to insist upon the rights of neutrals, upon what they called "the freedom of the seas." They even went to war with England in 1812 over the question, but they didn't settle it and you feel that it won't be settled until the power of the British navy is in some way restricted. Of course, if you build more cruisers than England has, that is the one sure way to restrict it. But that seems an idle waste of money when you don't really want the ships. You think it ought to be possible in some way for two fairly intelligent peoples to settle such a matter without spending millions on useless fighting ships.

Then you remember that President Coolidge felt the same way about it until he had tried to make an agreement. And you remember that the Geneva conference was a failure. And you seem to be faced with the choice of letting Britannia continue to rule the waves and, incidentally, cut off our commerce in case she needs to, and building a navy which will command the respect even of the lords of the admiralty.

That is very much the choice we come to. The British argument as to their need for a fleet that can insure her food supply in time of war is unanswerable to the British mind. The only fallacy involved is that a fleet that can do that can also sweep any other navy off the seas and cut off the commerce of other nations at will. The British admiralty does not make a great point of this, but, nevertheless, it is what disturbed American equanimity.

The British tradition is to use her sea power not only to insure her own food supply, but to strangle commerce with her enemies. This is always neutral commerce and the British interference injures the neutral as much as it does the hostile belligerent. The American tradition is that belligerents have no right to cut off neutral commerce except in contraband goods—this is, goods destined for the use of the fighting forces of the enemy.

It is this conflict of traditions, based, of course, upon a conflict of interests that lies at the bottom of the Anglo-American naval rivalry. As long as Great Britain puts its admiralty in possession of the greatest navy in the world, wars will be conducted according to the British tradition. If we had a fleet the same size as Britain's, the admiralty would think twice before it took American ships into British ports to have their rights adjudicated by British courts in accordance with British law. That is why some Britishers, whose sense of dignity has quite overgrown their sense of humor, make much of the inconsistency of our signing the Kellogg pact and then passing a cruiser bill.

Several points are fairly well settled in this controversy. First, the British navy is very considerably larger than ours. Second, it is going to remain so unless we do something about it. Third, in case of any war in which Britain is involved her navy will be used to cut our commerce with her enemies. Fourth, the admiralty has sufficient influence with the present government at least to prevent any agreement to limit naval armament so long as Britain can hold things as they are.

On the continent of Europe there is considerable sympathy with the British position. This is not due to any great love for Britain, but rather to the fact that the British navy is looked upon as an important instrument of the League of Nations in case of a war to restrain an aggressor nation. By the same token, our claim to trade wtih a belligerent is looked upon as likely to disrupt the whole league effort in such a case. An aggressor would have little to fear from a league boycott if he had access to our markets and supplies bought here could reach him under our claim to neutrality.

What is the answer?

There is room here for compromise. We may offer to give up our neutral right to trade with an aggressor nation in return for Britain's surrender of her claim to interfere with our commerce in any "private" war of her own. We should thus align ourselves on the side of the forces which are constructively striving for peace and leave Britain with no plausible reason for insisting upon naval supremacy. If she refused such an offer she would be placed in the unenviable role of obstructing peaceful solutions instead of ourselves.

Would that appeal to the admiralty? Not unless history and tradition are to be belied. The admiralty thinks in terms of war, not peace. But if, at the same time, we had under construction a navy which would equal Britain's, the admiralty would come up to the desk just as they did at Washington in 1922 and charmingly offer to agree to equality. As a result, both the British navy and our own could be cut to a sensible size.

CAPTAIN SIRMON DESCRIBES HISTORY-MAKING EXPLOITS OF ATLANTA'S OWN DIVISION

Fourth Installment of Diary Carries 82nd Through Big Conflict of War.

In this, the fourth installment of Captain William A. Sirmon's war diary, he pictures the Eighty-second division, Atlanta's own, as it went through the war, or at least through most of the major engagements in which the division participated.

Captain Sirmon pictures the dark but exciting days on the front, how he won signal honors bestowed upon him by the French and American governments; how while out with a patrol he was surprised by the enemy and how his patrol met the surprise.

This installment of Captain Sirmon's diary carries his division from July 5 at Minorville to the day when his decorations were formally approved by Major General Duncan and his services and those of his associates were recognized.

July 5. Minorville. I spent the entire forenoon yesterday at the front on the 326th sector. It was a fine day and I enjoyed the tour. The trenches there, just as on the 325th, are so old and badly washed out that a fellow feels like he is strolling down a country lane, instead of a trench calculated to stop the charge of the Boches. I must say they contrast the concrete trenches which patrols have reported behind the German outposts. I went to Menil le Tour in the Dodge, and made a whirlwind trip to Manonville and Domevre. The best wines are to be had at the last two places named, and wine always sharpens the general's wit and makes our meals more delightful. There is a blonde at Manonville who deserves an hour every day, too.

July 7. Minorville. The Sabbath day may not be remembered by the Hun, but he keeps it "holey." His shells and ours were screeching through the air all day. We were startled about 10 o'clock this morning by a sudden and furious outburst of music. The 326th band came over and gave us a concert. They played the same old tunes we used to dance to in America and I don't think I was the only homesick man around. The last piece they played was "Dixie." Our French interpreter looked at me and exclaimed, "Ah, that's English." I came near to doing him bodily injury. The chaplain of the 326th held short services. He has splendid ideas for collecting a large congregation—gets the band out and has them play a fine assortment of jazz and waltzes. The poor little Y. M. C. A. girl was overburdened with attention. A whole battalion was paying homage to her.

July 8. Minorville. Aside from frequent artillery action on various sub-sectors time passes very quietly. Some of our units in the front line succeed in fighting hot skirmishes with our own patrols. Some of these, when no casualties result, would be amusing if the situation was less serious. When the nervous tension of the first few days of front line experience wear off, this condition will, of course, disappear. Becoming acquainted with the sector is difficult because of the few opportunities we have to go up into the front line.

July 9. Minorville. There has been great joy spread through headquarters by the announcement that our bold and dashing signal officer Lieutenant Hood, will have a young American girl to dine with us this evening. Being the "Mayor Domo" of the general's mess I set about to make the occasion sufficiently pleasing to make another visit in the future possible. I startled the table by producing four quarts of what the cook christened "good old U. S. ice cream," but I am afraid since the fair maid has come, dined and departed, that I wasted a great deal of energy.

General Pasaga called in the afternoon. He is a very keen old boy apparently. Domevre, Manonville and Menil-le-Tour were all visited in the day's rambling. In the evening about 9 o'clock the German's shelling hit some of our positions to the west heavily. Let him boom away. It gives the war a military setting. I wish he'd parade his infantry—we'd accelerate his goose-step for him.

July 10. Minorville. A fairly heavy rain last night settled about half of the mobile soil of France. The dust has been very bad during the long drouth and the little sprinkling from heaven was timely. It also improves the outlook for the crops. Today General Cronin took over the command of this sector. He now commands his brigade and two regiments of French. Our division will take over about ten miles of front and relieve the 154th French infantry, which will be available for service elsewhere. Colonel Charpentier and his staff came over, and in their usual polite fashion relinquished the command to "Les Americanes." I was at the 326th headquarters during the morning, otherwise it was a pretty slow day, working over maps and liaison schemes. I am glad General Cronin has taken the sector, for there are few men who I believe to be his superior as a soldier. The German general who has to parry his tactics will not find him one of those "Laughable American generals."

July 14. Minorville. This is France's Fourth of July, the birthday of the French republic. In the afternoon we had the mayor of the town and the staff charpentier at our headquarters and a bit of champagne served as an excuse for toasts to France and the tie of friendship that binds us all together as warriors. Even the Y. M. C. A. rose to the occasion and sipped a glass of champagne. I was out until 5 a. m. straightening out the reliefs that became mixed up on our left. It seems difficult to get our people to read and execute the same order the same way at the same time.

July 15. Minorville. The Germans launched another big offensive west of us today, on a 50-mile front. The French were holding according to latest news. I think Fritz has run his limit. Enough American soldiers are now in France to release veteran troops for reserves.

July 16. Minorville. News of the stand our boys are making on the banks of the Marne comes to us regularly. It is great to know that in the stiffest offensive Germany has yet started, our American boys stand in his way and revive the memory of "Stonewall" at Bull Run. They do not retire.

I got a great kick out of the education some of our men are giving the French kiddies. This afternoon I was walking down the street, and coming toward me about a block away was a fond mother with her four-year-old youngster beside her.

Several of our boys passed them, and just as each one came even with them they looked down at the child quickly in a rather startled manner, and then smiled. The mother would nod her head with pride and smile, too.

I wondered. When I met them I was startled, too, as the little four-year-old said:

"Hello, you blankety blank——"

Yes, you guessed it. That's what he said. He and his mother had been told that it meant "Good afternoon, Mr. Soldier, how are you?"

I looked down quickly—and smiled. The mother nodded, smiled and said "oui."

I inspected the outpost position last night and went through the town of Fliry. Nothing remains of it but a few plaster walls. I was on the very edge of No Man's Land for the whole night, returning to quarters at 4 o'clock this morning. It is a hard life up there, but such a pleasure to know that it's worth it.

July 18. Minorville. Two young officers from our regiment, Lieutenants Wooten and Rodenwald, were ordered to brigade headquarters for temporary duty as liaison officers. They are both excellent gentlemen, one from Alabama, the other from Georgia, and I hope will make life here a little more real. I got tired, yea, bored, just being present at "brigade headquarters." General Cronin is a brilliant man and has a desire to do everything himself, which often leaves me unoccupied. I'd rather take my turn in the trenches.

July 20. Minorville. It has become an impossibility to do anything satisfactory around headquarters. The general has ridden us so constantly and consistently about picayunish details that he has his entire staff demoralized.

This afternoon he called Lieutenants Heron, Maddox and myself into his office and asked what was wrong, that our little official family seemed to be unhappy. It was and is. Heron beat Bob and me to it by telling him frankly that he could not get results by "God damning" him. Bob and I o. k.'d that pronto.

He tried to give the meeting a happy ending, but for my part I'm going to get away from here. I want to be up front with my men anyway. When this blows over, I'm going.

July 27. Minorville. Rainy and drizzly today, and nothing to do. I decided I would answer the call that has been ringing in my ears for so long—the call from the border of No Man's Land.

So it happened that my written request for transfer to the line went to the general this afternoon. In the evening I attended a dance at Aulnois, given by the nurses of the field hospital there. It was wonderful to be with our American girls again.

August 1. Minorville. Today, after a very slow dragging eleven hours had passed, that order—the one sending me back to the line, back to my old regiment, back with the boys to live, fight and maybe die with them, came down from the division headquarters, and I want to go very badly. Outdoors in peace and indoors in war, has a taint that I am sure does not fit me. Tomorrow I will go back, back to the good old 325th, back to Company "E" of the second battalion, and I know I shall find the boys I left on February 14 just the same.

August 2d, Minorville.—I was greatly disappointed that I did not get to go to my regiment today. The eagle, star and shield, insignia of an aide de comp, are not on my collar now. In their place I have two very plain, yet sacred crossed rifles, the insignia of the infantry. General Cronin sent my pal, Bob Maddox, and me out to look over the surrounding country for a combat range. I think the old man sent us out that we might be together this last day that I will be here. We were out on horses the entire day and located a fine place for combat work. It hurt pretty badly to leave Bob, a fine upright boy, who has been a constant companion and excellent friend, he the son of Atlanta's foremost citizen—I just a plain country boy from south Alabama. I left brigade headquarters at 9 o'clock and walked to Manorville, a comfortable and comparatively safe job behind me, the trenches ahead!

A shelltorn section of No Man's Land viewed by Captain Sirmon's ever-ready camera. Ruin and desolation are everywhere. Note the fragments of what was a German soldier until an allied gun halted his march. All that are visible are his helmet, his boot and a section of his leg. Below are Major Clark Howell, Jr., who served with the 326th infantry, and Supply Officer Joe Brown Connelly, who received wounds which later proved fatal to him. He died at base hospital, Fort McPherson, a few months after the close of the war.

August 2d. The Front—I got up rather late this morning for the very simple reason that I had nothing to do in particular and enjoyed the late hours in bed. I reported to Colonel Whitman and he directed me to be on my way to join my company, so with my knapsack on my back I started toward the front. No Cadillac to take me down—just plain hiking is mine now. Arrived at battalion headquarters at 4 p. m. and a little later went down to my company in the support line. There I met Lieutenant Moore and Lieutenant Pinkosohn, who were with the company when I left it, and Captain Fraser and Lieutenant Webster whom I know quite well. I went over our position and talked with the enlisted men who used to be with me at Camp Gordon. No man can feel better—more sincerely satisfied than I feel tonight. Here with my men in the trenches at last. Thank heaven, now I feel and know that I am serving my country.

August 4th, The Front.—It is just four years ago today that war was declared. It hardly seems possible that it took us so long to get here, but I guess our statesmen know best. I came away from regimental headquarters assured by half a dozen people that my blankets would be sent right down after me. I feel stiff and have sore spots all over me to remind me that somebody failed to make good. The dugout in which I slept had two features I shall not forget—the floor was damp and it was hard. Still I slept well. Fritz did not drop any shells on me and what more could a soldier ask?

August 5th, The Front.—Rumors that we are to be relieved by some division are superseded by facts now. Reconnaisance parties whiz by in Cadillacs, Nationals and various other American cars on every road. The eighty-ninth division, the Kansas lads, are the relieving unit. Some of the veteran divisions of Chateau Thierry fame are near us now too, and they tell some exciting stories of the big drive. In support we do not have a great deal to do. I am sorry we will not go into the line here again for I would like to have a whirl at a Boche patrol before we get out.

August 13th, Chateau Dombasle, Front Line—War is truly a game fo surprises. I went out sleepily to reveille this morning intent on doing a day of good hard drill in the offensive formation of small units. The first order was for me to take charge of the company at once. When I reported, the company order number two was for me to be ready in 40 minutes to go as advance company commander to reconnoitre front line positions into which we will move later. I was ready with four sergeants and my orderly at the designated hour. The truck arrived an hour late, and we made a three-hour trip over dusty chalk roads through Loraine, to a point north of Nancy. I arrived at the headquarters of the company we will relieve at 12:30 p. m.

August 16th, Front Line—After a very quiet day, visiting the French who are on our right and the company on our left, Major Hawkins asked if I would like to go along with a patrol tonight. Would I?

For months I have looked over our parapets into that weird ghostland and become fascinated by its mystery. I have wanted to go into it, explore it, brave its hidden dangers. My chance had come.

As soon as night was on in earnest we moved out. Major Hawkins and Lieutenants Wood and Lemuel Hill, of our battalion, were also along. Several enlisted men, too. We could exercise no command—we were just visitors, along to observe and become familiar with the sector.

Moving about No Man's Land I was badly frightened. The fear of the unknown had me in its grip.

We moved down between the lines to a point in front of the French position. An old road passed through the German wire here and it was left open. Why? Just a moment.

Hazelwood halted the patrol and investigated the opening almost to its farthest side. Nothing happened, so we moved forward in single file, to pass inside the Boche lines. We were crawling along slowly. I was shaking badly, but swearing to myself I would not run. The road felt trackbeaten to me and I was commenting on this mentally when one shot, then a hundred broke loose, flanking us from both sides. Hand grenades were bursting all around and over us and flares had turned the night into day.

We were caught—successfully ambushed! We were hemmed in on both sides by the heavy German wire. We could not deploy.

I heard Lieutenant Hazelwood shout. "Tell Major Hawkins that Hazelwood is wounded."

There was a terrific explosion right beside me. I turned and a private lay there, groaning.

"Are you hurt?"

"I think my hip's blown off," he said.

I felt his hip and put my hand into a ghastly hole the potato-masher had made.

The patrol broke. I wanted to shoot, but could see no Germans to shoot at. They had two machine guns and several riflemen flanking the opening. I had jumped to the side of it. In the flare lights I could see our men escaping, running back out of the wire. Strangely enough I did not think of running away. I was not even shaking now. Not that I was thinking of those things at the time. I don't know what I was thinking at all. It was a case of being in a hot, tight corner, and somehow or other there was no time to think.

Soon everyone who was not wounded, was gone. The terrible firing continued. A short distance from me was a shell hole. I rolled the wounded man beside me into it. I saw several wounded and got them all into the one hole. I found Hazelwood wtih several bullet wounds in his body and one foot blown off by a grenade. None of the wounded were able to do more than carry themselves.

Sergeant Garner, of our regiment, appeared out of the dark. He said that Lieutenant Wood was dying in the wire to our left. I could not help him. I had seven wounded of my own, but told him I would cover the opening with a rifle until he could get away. He saluted, and got Wood and saved him.

Firing had not slackened. I got the six enlisted men to the edge of No Man's Land and showed them how to get over to our lines, and watched them hobble away, assisting each other.

I went back into the wire for Hazelwood. No flare was up, darkness was complete except for flashes of grenades and rifles. I crawled too far and found myself almost to the enemy trench as a flare went up and showed me German riflemen shooting into the wire about 12 feet away. I lay still. As the flare went out I made my way to Hazlewood and got him on my back.

Fearing to get into the opening, which was being raked by machine gun and rifle fire, I started out through the wire. We were doing well, the noise of firing covering our efforts until it ceased suddenly. Every noise we made now could be heard. It seemed to me that the grass crackling under my hand could be heard in Berlin.

But we had to get out. As I struggled with Hazlewood he bled profusely. He soon had my back soaked in blood and it became slippery. He weighed 180 pounds, and as I tip the scales at 135 it was hard to keep him balanced. I would have to throw him over the wire entanglements sometimes and then crawl after him. This would cause the Boche to shoot up their flares and rake the wire again. We would have to remain mighty still.

Hazelwood was becoming very weak. He begged me to leave him. He constantly wanted to rest. I was afraid he would become unconscious or bleed to death before I could tend to his wounds. The enemy decided we were wounded in the wire and came out to get us. I could hear them talking.

They came into the wire in small groups. I told Hazelwood to remain away from me as I was going to fight them if they discovered us. I would not be taken prisoner. He asked that I stay right by him. If I was killed he wanted to go, too. I took out four grenades, his and the two I carried, and took out my 45 and waited. One party of three Boche came within five feet of us. I kept them covered, for the slightest sign that they had seen us was to be my cue to kill them. It was much wiser not to fire otherwise. There were too many others nearby, and they would annihilate us sooner or later if we were discovered.

The Germans, by some miracle, missed us. When they returned to the trench I gradually made my way out, with Hazelwood slipping and sliding off and on my back. Out of the wire, although still only 35 yards from the Germans, my relief was so great I actually felt safe. I stood up and undertook to lift my comrade up on my shoulder. As I lifted I could get him about waist high and he would groan with pain. I cautioned him to be quiet, but each lift brought the same result until I discovered that all of his foot had been blown away except a long piece of skin, to which was attached his big toe. I was standing on this, too, endeavoring to lift him on my shoulder. No wonder he would groan!

This corrected, I carried him down into No Man's Land; I dressed his wounds and put a tourniquet about his knee to check the loss of blood. He had become unconscious.

To the left of me was a forest through which flows the river Seille. Daylight was not far off now, so I might have to hide out there.

There came the faint sound of breaking sticks. Somebody was walking cautiously about the woods. Were they friend or foe? If friend I could make myself known and we would be saved. If foe, by the same token we would be lost. I decided on silence.

The password tonight is "Nevada." I heard Majow Hawkins say "Kick the brush and say 'Nevada,' so if there are any wounded they will answer you."

Welcome, thrice welcome words were these. I ran to the edge of the woods and called "Nevada."

Silence!

Then I gave the parole, which was "Austin."

Major Hawkins answered, "Bill." He was back with a relief patrol.

"Yes, sir," I called back to him.

Hazelwood to the hospital. Me to bed. The night's adventure was over!

N. B. I have never seen Lieutenant Hazelwood since. I learned, however, that his leg was amputated at the knee and he lived.

I learned later that Lieutenant Samuel Hill, of Columbus, Ga., rendered fine service in gathering up the wounded in No Man's Land while the Boche were still raking it with his fire. He rallied in all of the men who were escaping from the wire that he could and then began scouting up the wounded. He found Garner and Wood and helped them in.

This little incident of the great war illustrates the devotion to duty and country inherent in every doughboy. No question of friendship or personal acquaintance here—just doughboy for doughboy, uniform for uniform.

Since the eventful night described above I have gone back in my diary to insert the following extract of a general order issued by Major General Duncan of the Eighty-second division, announcing the award of the Distinguished Service Cross for my conduct in the affair on the night of August 16. The order is dated December 25, 1918. Sort of a Christmas present.

On February 16, 1919, on the Plains of Demarian, where Caesar fought his greatest battle against the Gallic chieftain Vercingetorix, I was decorated by General Pershing.

The Legion of Honor of France and the Croix de Guerre with palm, were also awarded me on citations by Marshal Petain.

The order follows:

Headquarters, 82nd Division,
American Expeditionary Force,
France.
25 December, 1918.
General Order No. 47.

Extract.

1. The commanding general announces to the command that the commander in chief, in the name of the president, has awarded the Distinguished Service Cross to the following officers and soldiers, for the acts of extraordinary heroism described after their names:

Captain William A. Sirmon, 325th infantry.

For extraordinary heroism in action near Clemery, France, 16 August, 1918.

At the imminent risk of his own life, Captain Sirmon rescued another officer by carrying him at night through enemy wire, and under heavy machine gun fire, for 500 yards to a place of safety, where he dressed the wounds of the disabled officer.

2. The commanding general takes particular pride in announcing to the command these fine examples of courage and self-sacrifice. Such deeds are evidence of that fine spirit of heroism which is innate in the highest type of the American soldier, and responds unfailingly to the call of duty, wherever or whenever it may come.

3. This order will be read to all organizations at the first formation after its receipt.

By command of Major General Duncan.

Gordon Johnston,
Chief of Staff.

R. L. Boyd.
Major, A. G. D., Adjutant.

Georgia Has Faith in Prohibition, Plans Submitted in W. C. Durant $25,000 Prize Contest Indicate

BY FRANK SHIELDS.

That Georgia, one of the cradle states of prohibition, still nurses a strong and abiding faith in it, is attested by the fact that hundreds of people from this state submitted plans in the national $25,000 prize contest conducted by W. C. Durant, motor car manufacturer, recently for the best method to make the eighteenth amendment effective.

There were a handful among the Georgia entrants who argued with Al Smith that moderation was as far as enforcement could ever get, and one challenged even the possibility of achieving that, as a national standard for liquor consumption. But all the rest—the overwhelming majority—expressed genuine confidence that the eighteenth amendment could be made effective and the country brought to a bone-dry status, and they presented many powerful and some novel ideas as to how the feat could be accomplished.

More Atlanta Entries.

Atlanta led with the largest number of entries from any city in the state, but all sections were largely represented, and practically every walk of life, as well—ministers, clubwomen, business men, civic workers, reformers, housewives, lawyers, doctors, laborers and even an admitted bootlegger or two. And while the $25,000 prize went to a New Yorker—Major Chester P. Mills, former prohibition director for the New York area, and the $5,000 high school prize went to young Malcolm D. Almack, of Palo Alto, Calif.—it was announced that a number of the Georgians' proposals reached the last stage of selection before the final choices were made.

A study of the Georgia entries, made public by the prize committee in New York last week, revealed an almost unanimous sentiment among them in favor of prohibition. And few objections were raised to the Volstead law, as it now stands. But it was agreed that many vital factors were still missing to put the bootlegger definitely and permanently out of business.

In a nutshell, the Georgians seemed unanimous in the declaration that what prohibition needs is:

More religion.
More education.
More penalties.

Big Campaign Urged.

W. C. Ewart, of Atlanta, recommended that the national government go after prohibition enforcement in the same manner in which it entered the world war—with a wide-awake campaign of huge proportions to popularize it with the people.

"The enforcement idea," he wrote, "must be taken from the reform, or 'thou shalt not' class and elevated to the 'he-man' or 'do not want to' class. This can be done in a carefully planned and highly educational manner."

His plan called for the drafting of all agencies of public appeal—the press, the pulpit, the lecture platform, billboards and movies—in an intensified national campaign of one year's duration, to be financed by the federal government through another Liberty bond issue. Once the public at large was thus brought thoroughly and patriotically to realize the actual curse which liquor brings to mankind, and the actual financial and healthful benefit of prohibition, he declared that enforcement would become a fact.

Laxity Is Charged.

Harvey L. Parry, an Atlanta lawyer, charged the present prohibition laxity to its chief enforcement officers—the judges and members of their courts.

"Just so long as a judge, immediately after passing sentence upon some unfortunate and friendless negro, who has been convicted of selling a pint of liquor, can step into his private office and himself take a drink," Mr. Parry's plan read, "just so long as the prosecuting officer can do the same thing, and the arresting officer can confiscate the captured liquor and apply it to his personal use; just so long as a sheriff and his deputies can agree, for a consideration, to arrange the safe passage of the bootlegger in the transportation of his liquor, then we may never hope to secure much respect for the law from the public."

Mr. Parry's chief recommendation was the disfranchisement of all public office holders who are convicted for a second time of negligence in the performance of their duties.

"When a congressman realizes that a second conviction for indulging himself in a drink will mean the loss of his honorable position," he concludes; "when a judge realizes that his customary drink may mean he must surrender his office, and when the officers and public servants all the way down the line realize that disfranchisement threatens them, they will one and all begin to sit up and take notice, and then the law will have a fair showing."

Prohi Staff Arraigned.

A bitter arraignment of the prohibition staff was incorporated in a plan submitted by Harris M. King, supervising inspector of naval stores in Savannah.

"I have seen the stuff sold here," he charged, "directly across the street from the customs house, which is the headquarters of the enforcement officers. The records will show that the so-called enforcement officers are the biggest bunch of grafters ever known in the history of our country."

As for complete enforcement, Mr. King was pessimistic. He added:

"Any fruit juice will ferment under natural conditions and produce alcohol. And this fermentation is now being brought about by millions of people through this 'free' country. The only way to stop it is to change nature's law, and until this can be changed, liquor will be plentiful."

Another rap at the judges was taken by Miss Dorothy Durst, of Augusta, who declared that the seat of present prohibition's weakness rested in corrupt politics.

Abuse of Power.

"We must put a stop to the shameful abuse of their power by certain judges," she wrote, "who flagrantly violate their trusts by giving convicted bootleggers a cash fine, instead of sending them to jail. For this dishonest practice they, or their accomplices, receive big financial and political rewards. But politics will never be clean until clean people take charge of them. We do not need more politics in religion, but we sure need more religion in politics."

L. C. Dabney, in the Candler building, Atlanta, urged the use of the nation's military strength to enforce prohibition. His plan, in part, was:

"The regular army should be used inland, with the assistance of the aviation department. And the marines could be used on the borders, also with aerial assistance. The appearance of our soldiery unquestionably would have a tremendous moral effect.

Mrs. Joyner Elaborates.

Mrs. Mary C. Joyner, of Sandersville, elaborated somewhat on Mr. Dabney's plan.

"The only way is to treat rum violators as rebels against the U. S. A.," she wrote. "Broadcast a declaration that the army and navy would be used to suppress the liquor traffic. Imprison all first-offending violators in detention camps for six months; disenfranchise second offenders and deport them to some place designated by the president for one year, and for the third offense, deportation for life. Expensive, you say? All wars are expensive."

Robert Frank Doyle, of Macon, suggested that the League of Nations be asked to aid us. His plan read:

"The best and most practicable method of enforcement seems to be, first to place spirituous liquors in the same category as narcotic drugs, with the same penalties for violators. This would put teeth into the law. Thousands of our citizens who ordinarily would violate the amendment would not regard it with such levity. I would then place the matter before the League of Nations and ask that it be agreed that other nations will use their efforts to prevent smuggling of liquor into the United States."

Daily Paper Recommended.

J. L. McGhee, of Emory university, suggested the establishment of a national daily newspaper, devoted solely to the prohibition cause.

"One feature," he outlined, "should consist of racy, brief true stories of saloon days, lest we forget and lest our children shall never know the facts, and thus be led to false conclusions about present conditions. A page should present accurate figures on the economic phases of prohibition, and material should be published for use by public speakers, with a persistent urging on teachers, preachers, lawyers, physicans and all others who meet the public to help burn into the consciences of young and old the civic, moral and spiritual duties resting upon every one in the prohibition issue."

Miss Annie T. Cooper, of Athens, offered a plan which she said had been the dream of her late father.

Asylums Advocated.

"My father was a physician," she wrote, "and he wanted to see enough inebriate asylums built in every state to accommodate all the drunkards. Inebriacy courts should be established throughout the country, and when a man or woman is found drunk, he or she should be tried for inebriacy and confined in one of the asylums until cured of the drink habit."

One method of locating the wet spots of the country, suggested by A. J. Gayson, of the Y. M. C. A. in Atlanta, is to watch the voting in the various states. It is obvious, he pointed out, that all districts electing avowedly wet candidates are most susceptible to prohibition violations, and therefore enforcement lines should be drawn tightest in them.

The Rev. Claude D. Adams, of Buchanan, proposed that the federal government advertise the names of all liquor violators.

"Organize a vigilante bureau of information at Washington," he wrote, "to collect and make public the names and addresses of all liquor manufacturers, bootleggers, excessive liquor drinkers and all places where liquor is found to be sold, including hotels, cafes, eating and drinking places.

Publicity Method.

"This information can be obtained through volunteer law-abiding people, letters of warning can then be sent to those persons and places reported, letting them know that their violations have been discovered. Unquestionably the shame of the publicity and the fear of arrest for further offenses will put those persons and places on the right side of the law."

Miss Elizabeth Clarke, high school teacher in Blairsville, argued that the consumer should be equally as guilty, and equally as liable to punishment as the bootlegger.

"And more jail sentences ought to be imposed," she added. "People who report cases of Volstead violations should be rewarded, and every man found guilty ought to be sent to jail within two months of his conviction, instead of being permitted to remain at liberty indefinitely on bail."

Pen Sentences Urged.

Guy Clopton, of Gainesville, a veteran advocate of prohibition, recommended that the penalty for prohibition violations be made a positive penitentiary sentence, with or without fine. He suggested the following scale of imprisonment:

"For the first offense, not less than one year and not more than twenty years, according to the nature of the case. For second offense, not less than three years, nor more than thirty, and for the third offense, not less than ten years, nor more than fifty."

G. F. Nicolassen, of Oglethorpe university, suggested that the chain gang would inspire more fear in bootleggers than a prison.

"After serving one sentence in a chain gang," he wrote, "the liquor purveyor would think twice before he returned to his old trade. And if the second offense called for a longer term on the chain gang he would probably seek other sources of a livelihood."

Forfeiture of Licenses.

Nicolassen also urged all persons found guilty of driving an automobile while intoxicated should forfeit their licenses for at least a year.

One of the most drastic measures proposed came from a woman—Mrs. Allison Appleton, of Jefferson.

"To get the best results in enforcing our national prohibition law," she suggested, "the law should make bootlegging a capital offense. When a bootlegger is convicted, hang him. He not only murders, but he also kills a man's soul.

A recommendation almost as drastic, from the viewpoint of some, was made by C. A. Goodin, of Commerce.

"If every woman and every girl in the United States," he wrote, "would firmly resolve—and stick to it—that 'lips that touch liquor shall never touch mine,' then there would be no need of enforcement officers."

23,230 Plans Submitted.

From throughout the nation, and other parts of the world as far distant as China, a total of 23,230 plans were submitted in the competition, the winners of which were announced by Mr. Durant's committee of prominent men and women judges on last Christmas day.

Major Mills, in being awarded the $25,000 capital prize, submitted 32 proposals including local discovery of sources of illegal liquor; local publicity for a plan to suppress all sources; adequate records for showing local public and federal chiefs how far enforcement succeeds and where it fails; stricter supervision of permits for industrial alcohol; non-political interference with enforcement, and presidential leadership.

Suggestions Made.

Some of the multitude of suggestions made included: Substitutes for alcohol, numerous plans to cure drinkers, no marriage for drinkers, the suppression of ridicule of prohibition on the stage and in magazines and newspapers, pensions for people living sober lives up to the age of 45, public liquor fountains, to be turned off at night, take men's trouser and coat pockets away from them, so they can't carry flasks, further restriction of immigration, and the deportation of all aliens convicted of prohibition violations, and the exclusion of all wets from church services.

One woman, 70 years old, living in Kansas, suggested this:

"Make every bootlegger wear red pants, and when caught without them, put him in prison."

Branan Trust Fund Of $1,000 Bestowed On High Art Museum

A trust fund of $1,000 in memory of the late Janie Bartow Branan has been bestowed on the Atlanta Art association and the High Museum of Art by her brother, Charles I. Branan, R. J. McKinney, director, announced Saturday.

The income from the fund will be used each year for the purchase of a beautiful print to add to the museum, Mr. McKinney said. A suitable inscription, perpetuating the memory of Miss Branan, will be placed upon each of the prints.

Mr. McKinney also announced Saturday that an unusual display of agricultural renderings from the Georgia School of Technology is being shown at the museum. The diversified group was produced by students under the direction of Dean Rush-Brown, of the school af agriculture.

TO MY SISTER IN HEAVEN

BY ERNEST NEAL

I.

My fond heart is glad in its dreaming;
It lives o'er the old happy days,
And the light from your eye still gleaming
Is brightening my life always.

II.

In the hush of the night comes ringing
Your voice like a heavenly chime;
And your smile, a radiance bringing,
Rainbows all distance and time.

III.

Let fate do its worst, it can never
My visions of you even mar;
My soul holds your image forever—
Like a lake that mirrors a star.

Woman Risks Home, Husband For Ideal Love

A woman seeks what she conceives to be ideal love, risking home and security. One person discovers her secret. A doctor. Dare he reveal it when, through her eyes she cries "Don't tell my husband!"

This is the all-talking drama, "The Doctor's Secret," Paramount's second dialogue opus which plays at the Howard this week. It is the screen version of Sir James Barrie's stage success, "Half an Hour," and marks the advent of a play by the famous author of "Peter Pan" as a dialogue picture, bringing for the first time to the silver sheet the witty and vigorous dialogue which characterizes all his works.

With an outstanding cast, including Ruth Chatterton, H. B. Warner, John Loder and Robert Edeson, and directed by William C. DeMille, "The Doctor's Secret" has drawn wide laudations from citicis generally.

The story is laid in England and, as the original title, "Half an Hour" infers, is supposed to take place within thirty minutes. Thirty minutes and the courses of three lives are changed!

Ruth Chatteron, star of the legitimate stage, who has scored many successes in Broadway productions, among them, "Daddy Long-Legs," "Changelings" and "Mary Rose," plays the role of a woman who dares all for ideal love. H. B. Warner portrays the character of her husband who believes money is her god, while Robert Edeson is cast as the doctor, the man who holds her destiny, to gamble with as he sees fit, and John Loder, a famous English actor, who essays the part of the lover.

In addition to "The Doctor's Secret," two oral and musical sketches, which have been hailed exceptionally fine, are on the same program. They are Borrah Minnevitch, New York musical comedy headliner, and his fun and music, "Boyhood Days," and "Just One Word," a modernistic all-talking skit.

Loew's Grand.

Few pictures have sounded the depths of tragedy like "The Singing Fool," Al Jolson's great film that is returning to Atlanta to be shown all this week at Loew's Grand theater. And few pictures are so alive with the gayety of existence.

Records for attendance and for emotional response were established by "The Singing Fool" in its first showing here, as in its presentations elsewhere. The pathos of "Sonny Boy," sung in the authentic voice of the great singer, Jolson, makes the picture and its story unforgettable. The sound synchronization will be repeated in the presentation this week at Loew's Grand.

Jolson proved himself a great dramatic actor as well as singer. Famed as a blackface comedian, in this picture he lays aside his burnt cork for the greater part, and plays not as a clowning, wisecracking comedian, but with remarkable emotional power and depth of feeling.

New York Theater Guild To Present Play Here

Atlanta theatergoers will be privileged to see the Sidney Howard's clever play, "Ned McCobb's Daughter," which will be the initial presentation of the New York Theater Guild Repertory company at the Erlanger theater Thursday evening, February 7, when the guild company returns to Atlanta for its second annual visit.

"Ned McCobb's Daughter" proved one of the outstanding successes of the guild's New York season. When first produced the play struck immediately a responsive chord not only with the New York critics but with the theater public and played a solid season at the John Golden theater. "Ned McCobb's Daughter" presents a phase of story and situation new so far as the present-day theatergoers are concerned, yet it returns to the locale in engaging speech of rural New England.

On Friday night, February 8, St. John Ervine's gripping drama, "John Ferguson," will be given. This is the first of the plays of the gifted Irish dramatist, now dramatic editor on the New York World, to be shown in America. It is the play which, above all other of his writings, firmly established him with the American public and it is the play which definitely launched the then young and struggling theater guild in the tremendous and unique success which has ever since attended their way.

For the matinee on Saturday S. N. Behrman's comedy, "The Second Man," will be introduced. This was Mr. Behrman's first play to have a Broadway production and as given at the hands of the guild, proved an instantaneous success. Metropolitan audiences enjoyed it particularly as a presentation of the clever and sophisticated world that is supposed to meet somewhere on the island of Manhattan.

Saturday night, George Bernard Shaw's sparkling comedy, "The Doctor's Dilemma," will be the offering. A well nigh perfect performance of this distinguished play may be expected from the New York Theater Guild company. "The Doctor's Dilemma" is an amazing and amusing satire on the medical profession, with marvelous characterization giving the comedy its full dramatic values.

The guild is sending an exceptionally clever cotrie of players to Atlanta to present these plays, including Elizabeth Risdon, Peg Entwistle, Edwin Maxwell, Warburton Gamble, Neal Caldwell, P. J. Kelly, Alan Mowbray, Brandon Evans, Richard Stevenson, Lowden Adams, Payson Edwards, Beatrice Hendricks, Jack Quigley and others. Mail orders are now being received by the management of the Erlanger theater.

NOTED NEGRO TENOR HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Roland Hayes Will Make Second Appearance Before Atlanta Audience.

Roland Hayes, popular negro tenor who appears at the auditorium next Friday night, has sung before all sorts and conditions of audiences in many parts of the world, since his remarkable rise to premier vocal fame some eight or nine years ago.

Last February, in Russia, Hayes sang before audiences of workmen and peasants, appearing in that country at the special invitation of the soviet republic. He gave five recitals in Moscow, two in Leningrad and one each in Kiev, Karkov and Rostov. His audiences of Russian working people had heard some music and had listened eagerly, hungry to learn its beauties.

Censored by Government.

But the only tenor singing they knew was the voluminous and sensational Italian operatic style. The negro spirituals were new to them. The printed texts may have been some help towards comprehension, even though it is rather hard to imagine the negro idioms translated into Russian. But the government found it necessary to censor and excise certain religious sentiments, and the ultimate result was quite meaningless.

Nevertheless, Roland Hayes' universal language, the language of song, succeeded in penetrating these barriers of race and tongue and style. He stated afterward that he had never felt a closer sympathy and response in his audiences. They, like him, were descended from slavery and had inherited a wondrous treasury of folk songs, born of suffering. Through the rare art of Roland Hayes they sensed the pathos and exaltation of the spirituals.

Second Visit Here.

For the Hayes recital next Friday, his second appearance in Atlanta since he became famous—he is a native Georgian, the son of a poor colored farmer near Rome—the auditorium, as before, will be divided into two sections, one reserved for white patrons and one for colored.

Seats for colored went on sale Saturday morning at the Yates & Milton pharmacy on Auburn avenue, while the white seat sale will open Tuesday morning at Cable Piano company.

Hayes is brought here under the auspices of the Southern Musical bureau, S. Russell Bridges, president and is to be presented in the auditorium in order that there may be ample room for the tremendous crowd which advance interest indicates will be present.

BIG BILL AT EMPIRE

Jazz Orchestra Again Feature at Community House.

Another great picture bill, presented in addition to the regular Wednesday night big-time attraction, Hal Mayfield's Melody Masters on the stage, is seen this week at the Empire theater, corner Georgia avenue and Crew street, where Managing Director Alpha Fowler has arranged a picture program including "The Show Girl," "Smile Brothers, Smile," "The Hawk's Nest," "Heart to Heart" and "Overland Stage."

In addition to the picture program another big stage program will be seen at the Empire theater on Friday night when Mr. Fowler will stage his weekly "Amateur Night," offering the finest talent of the neighborhood in contest for a big array of prizes.

Alice White, the brilliant new star who set box office records afire with "Show Girl," is to be seen in this vehicle of hers in which she made a name for herself. The picture plays Monday and Tuesday at the Empire, and tells of the adventures of a peppy, modern young chorus girl who meets 'em, mulets 'em and moves.

"Smile, Brother, Smile," featuring Jack Mulhall, will be the Wednesday attraction at the Empire theater. "The Hawk's Nest," with the talented and popular star, Milton Sills, is the scheduled attraction for Thursday, while "Heart to Heart" will play Friday. Saturday's attraction is the "Overland Stage," a grim and thrilling account of those early vehicles of transportation.

Burroughs Company Will Hold Business Show at Hotel Here

A Burroughs businesss how will be held at the Henry Grady hotel in rooms 300, 302 and 304 from January 28 to February 2, inclusive, being the largest exhibit of special accounting machinery ever brought south.

It will include the entire exhibit at the New York and Chicago business shows last fall, and will be on display for the entire week between 11 a. m. and 9 p. m. The show is described as purely educational for the benefit of the general public.

Ponce de Leon.

"Amateur night," with its customary quota of entertaining local talent, and five outstanding pictures, comprise the forthcoming week's program announced Saturday by the Swiny & Davis management of the Ponce de Leon theater, popular community playhouse at Ponce de Leon avenue and Boulevard.

Monday the week gets under way strongly with "The Silver Slave" on the screen. This splendid Warner Brothers feature presents Irene Rich in a gorgeous pageant of wealth and luxury, with interesting complications developing in rapid order. Tuesday's picture is "A Ship Comes In." Pathe release, with Rudolph Schildkraut in the lead role of a dramtic story of an innocent man imprisoned.

Wednesday brings to the screen May McAvoy and Conrad Nagel in "Slightly Used," another Warner feature sparkling with comedy and thoroughly entertaining in every way. The double bill of Thursday and Friday is Marion Davies' famous picture, "The Patsy," and on Friday night "amateur night" adds the customary interest to the bill.

Saturday's picture is "Take Me Home," a Paramount film featuring Bebe Daniel, and, in addition, there's the first chapter of "Tarzan the Mighty."

Uruguay is to spend $7,000,000 on road building.

A Japanese meal may include as many as seven kinds of seaweed.

Girl Decides To 'Sin as No One Has Before'

To say that Colleen Moore's latest offering, "Synthetic Sin," which will be shown all this week at the Metropolitan, stirs up memories of her first huge success, "Flaming Youth," is putting it mildly, for in her latest, dainty Colleen, does not appear as a young girl caught in the whirl and whim of circumstance and living as she sees her elders do, but as a young lady with ambitions and ideas of her own, who fails in a show because she has no experience and knows nothing of the world, and who sets out to get her experience and sin as no one has sinned before, and she does it. And how she does it makes the fastest, most entertaining story of the year.

The story is taken from the brilliant stage success by Frederic and Fanny Hatton, and which had an unusually successful run on the great white way, and which now as a picture, has promises of outshining even the great stage success.

Antonio Moreno plays opposite the star as a playwright, in love with the heiress and decidedly not in favor of her ambitions for a career and horrified at her methods in obtaining the necessary background to take heavy vampire roles behind the footlights.

Also appearing in the cast are numerous screen favorites, among the players being Gertrude Astor, who appears as a worldly wise actress, Edythe Chapman, Montague Love, Ben Hendricks, Jr., and Raymond Turner.

Cameo.

"The Foreign Legion," showing at the Cameo Monday and Tuesday, co-stars Norman Kerry and Lewis Stone, with Mary Nolan and June Marlowe in the leading feminine roles. It is sheer drama of romance and revolt, relieved with comedy placed at just the right spots.

"Manhattan Cocktail," showing Wednesday and Thursday, is a story of New York back-stage life, and is the vehicle chosen to co-star Nancy Carroll and Richard Arlen, Paramount's young team.

Zane Grey's latest literary work, "Avalanche," was acquired by Paramount and serves as a vehicle to feature that western favorite, Jack Holt. This is the Friday and Saturday feature at the Cameo. Doris Hill and Baclanova are the leading feminine players.

Girl Reporter Loses Memory, Gives Lover Gate

Lois Moran, playing the part of a demure little newspaperwoman who has lost her memory through grief over the death of her brother and an attack on her fiance by a gang of thugs, is called upon in the script of the Fox film, "Blindfold," to order her lover out of the headquarters of the gang—not realizing in her condition that he is her sweetheart.

It is one of the points of high interest in the story, which was written by Charles Francis Coe, ace crook story writer of the modern day. Miss Moran's transformation from her demure self to a coquettish flapper-aid of the gang is complete, she playing quite a Jekyll-Hyde type of role. Her ambition for a long time had been to portray a "sort of wicked" individual, and in "Blindfold" she got an opportunity of which she took full advantage.

George O'Brien, star of "Sunrise," "The Iron Horse" and other outstanding Fox productions, plays the part of Kelly, the cop, the sweetheart and fiance of Miss Moran. He, too, is fulfilling an ambition by his appearance in that sort of role, as he long had wanted to be a cop in pictures. His father is chief of police of San Francisco, and he was brought up in a more or less police atmosphere.

"Blindfold" begins a six-day run at Keith's Georgia theater Monday as the screen fare served up along with a vaudeville bill. Anatole Friedland his Night Club Revue, which is said to be one of the most spectacular acts in vaudeville.

West End.

Joan Crawford, in "Our Dancing Daughters" Monday and Tuesday at West End. This great picture has an all-star cast, including Anita Page, Dorothy Sebastian, Johnnie Mack and Nils Asther. Ask someone that has seen it. Wednesday, "The Haunted Ship" will be the offering. Thursday, Ramon Novarro in "A Certain Young Man," an M. G. M. Remember Leo the Lion? It's his trade mark. Friday, Collene Moore in "Her Wild Oats." Saturday, Ken Maynard in "The Red Raiders."

Deserted by Wife Man Imports New Russian Spouse

Thomas Meighan, supported by filmland's two popular stars, Evelyn Brent and Renee Adoree, comes to the Rialto this week in his latest production, "The Mating Call," directed by the veteran director, James Cruze.

"The Mating Call," the screen adaptation of Rex Beach's story of same name, tells a fervid and daring love drama. Miss Brent plays the role of a sophisticated society girl who divorces Thomas Meighan, her husband, while he is fighting in France, to wed a wealthy sportsman. In her typically and fascinating blase manner Miss Brent puts aside her husband, wins her new lover and soon scorns him. Her wardrobe has been carefully selected and is claimed to be one of the most expensive and tasty this star has yet had, though her previous pictures have been outstanding for her beautiful clothes.

Renee Adoree takes the part of a Russian immigrant girl, of social standing in her own country, whom Thomas Meighan chooses as his wife to help him with his Florida farm. Out of the strange courtship and marriage grows a fervid love.

The action of the story stakes place in Florida, with one of the climatic scenes laid at the port for immigrants to the United States, Ellis Island.

CONDUCTED by LORENZO JONES JR.

Play of Night Club Life New Opus of Wagner Group

One of the most interesting events of the local theatrical season is promised for this week at the Erlanger theater, where the Charles L. Wagner Players will offer the latest John Golden New York success, "Night Hostess," by Philip Dunning, co-author of "Broadway." In his latest drama, based on the night club life of New York, the author has written a play that is exciting and exhilirating from beginning to end and at no time does he allow the interest to lessen.

In fact, "Night Hostess" is said to be one of the most tense and gripping plays that has been produced in New York in many years. Manager Wagner was fortunate in securing "Night Hostess" for local presentation. The play is not generally available for stock production, as the original company is still playing at the Vanderbilt theater in New York, but after much negotiation Mr. Golden's consent was secured for the play to be presented here by the popular Charles L. Wagner Players.

Leneta Lane, the charming leading lady of the company who has endeared herself to all Atlanta theatergoers, will have an outstanding role in this play, as will also the dashing leading man, Kenneth Thomson, and other prime favorites, including Frank Sylvester, Russell Hardie, Carleton G. Young, Robert Memminger, David Munro, Marguerite Wolfe, Leslie Virden, Barbara Hastings, Margaret de Mille and Clara Everett.

In addition to the permanent members of the Wagner company, "Night Hostess" will also enlist the able efforts of a number of new players, specially brought here for this production. This is in line with Mr. Wagner's well-known plan to augment his all-star casts with additional players of outstanding merit to fit in additional roles wherever required. "Night Hostess" is a clever, gripping story of a girl who struggles to remain virtuous in hell's innermost chamber.

It is a wonderful panorama of New York's mad, gambling, night life, masterfully penned by the author of "Broadway." It is a play with a moral, genuine humor and big moments that you'll never forget. It is the play of which St. John Ervine wrote "Here, ladies and gentlemen, is a play." Briefly, it is the play of the hour. Seats for all performances are now on sale at the Erlanger box office and at Phillips & Crew Piano company.

PADLOCKED BY POLICE, NIGHT CLUB SHOW HERE

Keith's Georgia theater patrons can enjoy a real night club revue this week without the proverbial couvert charge when Anatol Freidland following a successful tour with his "Club Anatol Revue," direct from his own night club, which has been padlocked by federal authorities, arrives at the Georgia theater for a week's engagement. A dazzling array of feminine beauty, gorgeous costumes, sensational dancing, beautiful music and unsurpassed talent makes Friedland's vhudeville offering for 1929 the greatest he has produced in his ten years as a headliner.

Le Blanc and Du Charm, adagio dancers; Lucille Hayes, dancer; Al Jockers, musical director, and ten beautiful specialty dancers not to mention waiters, page boys, door men, cigarette girls and hostesses, make up the brilliant cast presented in the act.

Anatol Friedland teaches the three P's instead of the three R's. Personality, Pulchritude and Pep are the three most essential qualities of any revue. That, Anatol Friedland proves in his current offering.

When federal officers closed the Club Anatol in New York, Friedland calmly folded up his props, gathered his company about him and forthwith went into vaudeville. It is said far and wide that this was New York's loss and vaudeville's gain. Friedland has been famous for ten years for his girl revenues, but it is said that in his latest revue he has outdone himself.

The screen attraction on this bill is "Blindfold," starring George O'Brien and Lois Wilson in this popular story written by Charles Francis Coe, famous for his crook stories.

Reindeer were first brought to America in 1892.

'Suicide Squad' Revived by Film Of Navy Fleet

Thrills that taxed the repertoire of the famous "Suicide Squad" of the navy flying service, a genuine setting that was provided by cooperation and won the indorsement of the navy officials themselves, romance of the sort assured by a cast that includes Ramon Novarro, and Anita Page, are all details of "The Flying Fleet," the feature picture at Loew's Capitol theater this week.

It is a genuine picture of the air service, and among its actors are famous navy fliers—Lieutenants "Put" Stores, C. F. Greber, D. W. Tomlinson, William Davis and others. Lieutenant Commander Frank Wead, U. S. N., was co-author with Byron Morgan, who is famous for production of high-speed films, and acted as technical adviser.

And to accentuate the thrills and atmosphere of action, there is a synchronization of stirring sound. The stunts, the daring, are alive.

It is splendidly done and affords some of the best "air shots" that have yet been seen on the screen. It also deals with a new angle of aviation, that is new as far as pictures are concerned, for it treats of thrilling flights above the sea. The story is concerned with aviation in the U. S. navy.

But what lifts "The Flying Fleet" so completely out of the ordinary class of aviation pictures is the fact of its entertaining and engrossing story. There is so much more to it than air stunts, thrilling as they are. It has a tender love story combined with a great epic of friendship, a friendship between two youths that is tested to the very core, one that involves their honor and a great sacrifice.

WORLD WAR MELODIES FEATURED AT CAPITOL

Memory of those immortal melodies of fire and tender sentiment inspired by the world war, its heroism and its sacrifice and its gallant graiety will flock back to the crowds that attend the performance at Loew's Capitol theater this week.

Heading the bill is the company of Lieutenant Gitz Rice, remembered as the creator of several of the most popular of the ditties of that day, and known as one of the outstanding song writers of peace time as well.

Lieutenant Rice brings an excellent company of varied talents, the members of which he calls his Northwest Mounties. They are singers and musicians of unique ability, and a session of melody is promised—not a revival of war-time material, but a modern, snappy program. With the company of six men comes Gabrielle Tremblay, billed as "The Petite Canadienne," a girl of personality who has won an outspoken admiration over the circuits.

George Watts and Belle Hawley have a clever act of songs and snappy business, denominated "Laughs, Coated With Melodies." They occupy the auxiliary headline position, and the notices that have preceded them to Atlanta seem to prove they are entitled to the real honors.

Jack Conday and company, in "The Cellar," will offer a comedy novelty that is promised to maintain the high standard of the week's program. Two men and a girl compose the cast, J. Gill being Mr. Conway's male assistant funmaker.

The unfailingly popular entertainment furnished by a blackface comedian and songster has a place on this bill, Jack Goldie occupying the second position. He is called "The Popular Blackface Songster," for good reason.

The bill is opened by "Alpine Sports," an act of beautiful setting and thrilling performance, the nature of which will be one of the surprises of the bill.

'DOMINOES OF 1929' NEW MIDNIGHT FROLIC

"Dominoes of 1929," a fast-stepping musical revue, including in its cast nine outstanding colored stars of the stage, is scheduled for appearance Friday night before the footlights of the 81 theater in the popular Decatur street playhouse's regular weekly midnight frolic for white patrons. The show will begin promptly at 11:30 o'clock, and Manager Tom Bailey, of the theater, promises a wealth of real entetrainment to all who attend.

"Dominoes" brings to Atlanta "that top-notcher of comedy," Willie Richardson, whose funny sayings have won him nation-wide popularity in this and past seasons. In addition, the show's personnel features such outstanding stars as Ruben Harvey, Ella Mae Waters, Marion Moore, Charles Hawkins, Irma McRae, Violet Richardson and Walker and Walker.

The entire "Dominoes" company includes 20 people and a high-kicking chorus of 10 that adds pep to an already fast and furious show. The music is tuneful in the extreme, advance criticisms state, and in every detail the revue is one well worth seeing.

Manager Bailey announced Saturday that tickets for the show will go on sale immediately at Jacobs' Five Points and at the 81 box office.

Alamo No. 2.

There is a real treat in store for all lovers of good drama Monday at the Alamo No. 2 theater, where Columbia's "Name the Woman" is the attraction. It is full of action, mystery, suspense and works up to an excellent surprise climax. The cast is superb with Anita Stewart, Huntly Gordon and Gaston Glass scoring as featured players.

The plot revolves around a murder trial. The accused is without a single corroborating witness unless a mysterious masked woman can be found. The prosecuting attorney is grilling the defendant and it appears that the case is going against him when the woman makes an entrance. She refuses to unmask and writes her name upon a slip of paper, handing it to the judge. What is written there causes the justice to declare a recess and take the woman to his chambers for private questioning.

The narrative that the woman relates furnishes many tense dramatic moments and provides for some colorful scenes, especially those showing a mardi gras in progress.

In the New York Theaters

BY PERCY HAMMOND

The week's most urgent warning to playgoers was that uttered by Lewis Beach, whose past investigations of the character and habits of the American bourgeoise have been valuable to his hearers if not lucrative to himself. In "The Square Peg" and "The Goose Hangs High" he proved his ability to gather clouds and then to dispel them, to combine the tear with what Mr. Winchell calls the tee-hee and to do it in a moderately effective way. Neither play succeeded in creeping entirely into the hearts of the dramalovers and one fears that his latest lecture, "Merry Andrew," will receive a similar indifferent welcome.

In this interbreeding of the lark with a bird of ill-omen Mr. Beach raises an admonitory forefinger to those business men who contemplate withdrawing from the market place to seek rest and comfort in idleness. Mr. Aiken, middle-aged proprietor of Aiken's drug store (Walter Connolly), grown weary and prosperous from the conjection of antidoes in a minor metropolis of the central west, decides to quit. He is led to that decision by his adoring wife (Miss Effie Shannon), who is jealous of his attentions to trade and who wishes him to spend all his time around the house. Therefor he sells out to his rival, Norcross, and prepares to enjoy all the pleasing inertias of a sloth. But he has been too busy to fit himself for idolence. He knows nothing of song or dance, literature, painting or the drama. He has neglected to "furnish himself," as Mr. Wells says. His muscles, accustomed to wielding the pestel, refuse to adjust themselves to golf, so he finds that

Leisure is pain; take off our chariot wheels and How heavily we drag the load of Life!

He makes a mess of his repose and after a few acts of Mr. Beach's synchophantic mixture of show, farce, comedy and sermon, he repurchases his pharmacy—an unbelievably petty one for so big a town—and resumes the inscrutable joys of an old-fashioned apothecary, dispensing a modern drug store's commodities from a hypodermic syringe to a chicken sandwich. Mr. Connolly is amusing and as faithful as possible in the delineation of his role; and business men of 60, who contemplate retiring without the capacity to do it gracefully, will be taught by him to be cautious. Also by other items in "Merry Andrew" that money riches are not always as beneficial as advertised.

For weeks I have been advised by my counselors that I was missing a rare entertainment by not going to see Miss Helen Menken in "Congai." Since the time that Miss Menken made her great success in "The Captive" she has been as a modest violet hiding beneath a mossy stone; and she elected to present herself in "Congai" on a night that was full of other openings. Therefore it was not until yesterday that I could borrow a chair in the Sam H. Harris theater from which to view her performance.

The play, as all the world of Broadway knows, is a dramatization of Harry Hervey's novel of the sex-life of Indo-China with the amorous French invaders plying their casual romances among the defenseless native women. Their practice, both soldier and civilian, is to rent a village belle for the season and to walk out on her without the customary two weeks' notice. The French literary author who is served by Thi-Linh (Miss Menken) departs deliberately; but he leaves all his precious books in the bungalow, an indifference rather incredible in a thrifty French man of letters.

Miss Menken, who is renowned for her calms as well as her storms, suffers the distress of a woman of many men, now placidly, then with a volcanic turbulence. She passes from the arms of Kim Khouan, her native lover, and a bad actor, to a French book worm, and thence to an opium-smoking French captain, to the elderly commandant of the French barracks and eventually to His Excellency the French Governor-General. Made-up in the sepulchral pallor of a walking cadaver, and speaking with a voice fresh from the tomb, Miss Menken is always an object of sorrow. When, in the second act, she denounces the cruel French as they march the Indo-Chinese to the world war, her shouts are a loud, musical and eloquent oratorio. "Congai" is not a bad play, and one hesitates timidly to add that it is not a good one.

The new police commissioner, Mr. Whalen, temporarily abandons his quest for the murderer of so eminent a citizen as Arnold Rothstein and employs the entire N. Y. constabulary in an effort to make life easier for the theater-goers. Mr. Whalen's revolution against the bourbon traffic laws is victorious, and now we can attend without discomfort the nude Godivas in "Whoopee," the adultery, squalor and bloodshed in "Street Scene," the black-mailing in Miss Alice Brady's show, and the assassination, embezzlings, burglaries and mayhems prevalent in the show district. Cynics have observed that Mr. Whalen might serve his subjects better were he to make it impossible for them to go to the theater, instead of smoothing their paths to and from the Times Square crime orgies. However, Mr. Whalen has made himself and many others happy by his attentions to the drama as the most important and the most ailing of New York's civic advantage. Mr. Kelcey Allen, the Broadway critic of "Woman's Wear," witnessing Mr. Whalen's triumph Monday night, in his tower at Forty-fifth street, exclaimed in a rapture of enthusiasm, "He's taking bows!" And he earned every cheer he got from the multitude, because his spectacular efforts result in easing the anguish of every one whose happiness depends on arriving easily at the Shubert, the Erlanger, the Ethel Barrymore, or any one of the numerous Chanins.

Vancouver, British Columbia.—The largest cargo of wheat flour ever shipped from Vancouver to China is about to leave this part. Apart from the regular flour shipments over Canadian Pacific lines, this consignment of 7,200 tons is now being transferred from the elevators here. The flour is going to North China and will be followed by a still larger cargo next month.

Among the most feted of the midwinter visitors is Mrs. Gustav Erbe, Jr., of Rochester, N. Y., who is the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles R. Sims, on St. Charles place. Before her marriage, which was a brilliant social event of last spring, Mrs. Erbe was Miss Nell Sims, an acknowledged belle of Atlanta society, and she is receiving a cordial welcome from her friends on this, her first visit home.

Robinson-Sanford Wedding Beautiful Mid-Winter Event

Of cordial social interest to a wide circle of friends throughout Georgia and the middle west was the marriage of Miss Rosalie Robinson, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Robinson, to Daniel B. Sanford, which was beautifully solemnized at the home of the bride's parents on Emory road at 11 o'clock Saturday morning.

The marriage service was read by the Rev. D. P. McGeachy and was witnessed by the members of the bride's and groom's immediate families and a small group of close friends.

The living rooms of the home were thrown en suite, an attractive arrangement of roses and gladioli in varying shades of pink forming the decorations. At one end of the long living room, extending across the width of the house, an altar was formed of palms and ferns, interspersed with floor standards filled with long-stemmed pink radiance roses

In the dining room, where the wedding breakfast was served, the lace-covered table was centered with a graceful silver basket filled with the same lovely blossoms, silver candlesticks holding tall pink tapers flanking either side of the centerpiece.

There were no attendants, the beautiful young bride entering with her father, R. H. Robinson, who gave her in marriage. She was radiantly lovely, wearing a smart going-away costume developed in two shades of gray, which was especially becoming to her gray eyes, fair coloring and golden brown hair. A modish close-fitting gray felt hat completed the bridal ensemble, her flowers being a corsage bouquet of gardenias and valley lilies.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. Sanford and his bride left for a motor trip through Florida. They will be at home after March 1 at their apartment on St. Charles avenue.

The bride is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Robinson, who formerly made their home in St. Louis, Mo. Since coming to Atlanta to reside she has been a charming and popular addition to the younger social contingent and has endeared herself to a wide circle of friends who will be interested in her marriage. Receiving her early training in St. Louis, she finished her education at Agnes Scott college.

Mr. Sanford is the son of Mrs. D. S. Sanford and the late Mr. Sanford, of Milledgeville. His only sister is Miss Mara Sanford, of Atlanta. A graduate of both the Georgia Military academy and the Georgia School of Technology, he is a popular figure in social and business life of the city. A member of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity, he also holds membership in the Atlanta Athletic club, the East Lake Country club and the Shrine. He is at present connected with the J. B. McCrary Construction company and is prominent among the civil engineers of the state.

Studio Club Will Present The Lioness

The dramatic group of the Studio club announces the public performance of "The Lioness" for Thursday, February 21. A dress rehearsal for members only will take place on Wednesday, February 20.

"The Lioness," a melodrama in three acts and a prologue, was written by Carroll Fitzhugh. It is the story of a mother's desperate efforts to save her daughter from a husband who is outwardly all that a husband should be, but in reality is a monster of cruelty. The mother, a lady of an old and aristocratic New York family, with all the cultivation of an old civilization, reverts suddenly and surprisingly to the ancient and primitive law of the jungle, in her determination to save her child from danger.

The first scene of this remarkable play is laid in the depths of the African Congo, with the delicate young woman surrounded by savages, tomtoms, and impenetrable forrest. The later scenes are in the drawing room of a New York house. A sudden and unlooked conclusion at the end of the play recalls vividly the earlier scene.

Those people taking part in the Atlanta production are as follows: Mary Brett, Catherine Connerat, Virginia Van Patten, Cornelia Cunningham, Guy Woolfolk, Bill Jones, Eugene Willingham, Sam Wood, Armin Maier. The production is under the direction of Mrs. Janet Mills Shepherd; stage manager, Kenneth Kalmbach.

Prize Winners.

Four Studio club members won prizes at the second exhibition of Georgia Art at Davison-Paxon company. Ralph M. Britt, for his "Self Portrait," won the prize for the best water color or pastel painting. Miss Kate F. Edwards won a prize for her "portrait of Mrs. G. of Pasadena, Calif." for the best crayon, drawings in block, etching or silhouette. George Ramey won a prize for Batik, "White Geese" for best original design for rugs, tapestries, textiles, block-prints, book plates and architecture. Mrs. Elizabeth Paxton Oliver was awarded a prize for her oil painting, "Happy Valley," the best Atlanta subject.

Theater Guild Representative To Address Drama League Tuesday

Mrs. Samuel Scott, of New York, will address the members of the Atlanta Drama league at the meeting Tuesday afternoon, January 29, at 3:30 o'clock at the High Art museum.

Mrs. Scott is a representative of the Theater guild of New York and comes partially in the interest of the guild productions which will be seen at the Erlanger theater early in February. Four plays will be produced during their stay here. They are "The Doctor's Dilemma," by Bernard Shaw; "The Second Man," by S. N. Behrman; "John Ferguson," by St. John Ervine, and "Ned McCobb's Daughter," by Sidney Howard. Mrs. Scott will discuss these plays and also the purposes and ideals of the Theater guild in its efforts to give to the public the best in modern drama, well staged and truthfully and sincerely presented.

The Drama league is endorsing the presentations of the guild again this year and this is an excellent opportunity for all to learn something definite about the program of plays they are offering. It is also a chance for Atlantans to learn something about the work of this magnificent organization known as the Theater guild of New York.

After Mrs. Scott's talk tea will be served and a social hour enjoyed. Sharing honors with Mrs. Scott at the tea will be Miss Laneta Lane, the charming young woman who is appearing in the leading feminine roles of the Wagner company now playing at the Erlanger. All members are urged to be present. New members may join at any meeting by applying for a membership card at the door.

Miss Murray Weds Charles D. Robert.

The wedding of Miss Mildred Geneva Murray, of Tulsa, Okla., to Charles Donovan Robert, of Atlanta, was solemnized at the home of the groom's mother, Mrs. Charles S. Robert, 1100 Gordon street, S. W., last Thursday evening at 8:30 o'clock. The Rev. E. L. Flanagan, pastor of the West End Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony in the presence of immediate relatives only.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert are residing at present at 1100 Gordon street, S. W., but will leave in the near future for an extended visit to Mr. Robert's estate in Lake county, Florida, Daytona Beach and other points of interest.

Mrs. W. C. Bass Is Bridge Hostess.

Mrs. W. C. Bass entertained at a bridge party Saturday evening at her home on Cambridge street, in Decatur, in honor of several friends, whose birthdays occurred during last week.

Red roses adorned the home and the Valentine ideas were carried out in all details.

Miss Nancy Niebling assisted her sister in entertaining.

The guests were: Miss Margaret Gorman and Dr. E. C. Bleim, of Augusta, Ga.; Miss Mary Stauber, Dr. Marvin Mayhew, Arthur Courtney, of Aiken, S. C.; Mr. and Mrs. Tom Neibling, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Boyd, Miss Margaret Grant, Mr. and Mrs. James Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Elwood Parker, Dr. and Mrs. Fred Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Leib, Mr. and Mrs. Roy Repass, Mrs. Harold Cummings, Ben Cummings, Mr. and Mrs. Milton Andrew, Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Moore, J. H. Neibling.

Ga. Women Voters Give Luncheon At Biltmore Feb. 15

Invitations will be issued at an early date to prominent citizens over Georgia to a large luncheon, to be held by the Georgia League of Women voters at the Biltmore, on February 15, in connection with the citizenship conference to be held by Emory university February 12-16. The invitations will be issued by the board of executive directors of the league, and other arrangements for the luncheon are in the hands of a special committee, headed by Mrs. Lamar Rutherford Lipscomb, league chairman of the ninth congressional district. The affair will be of special importance, owing to the fact that the Georgia league has recently compiled a kit on the simplification of state government and the details of its distribution will be announced at this time.

Kits.

Requests are being received daily at league headquarters for the kits which have been complied by Mrs. L. L. Hendren, Georgia league chairman of efficiency in government, and which are being loaned to organizations and individuals over the state so that a study of the state governmental scheme may be made. The members of the men's council, advisory body affiliated with the Georgia league, have each received a kit, and comments of interest to league members have been received.

Dr. William F. Quillian, president of Wesleyan college, says: "I have read the kit with interest. I trust that our history department may be able to give some attention to this important enterprise."

Dr. W. D. Furry, president of Shorter college, says: "I wish to assure you of continued interest in the work of the league and of willingness to render any service whatsoever."

Mrs. Sinclair Jacobs and Miss Roberta Hodgson, delegates to the cause and cure of war conference held in Washington, D. C., have returned to their homes and have given their reports to the Georgia league concerning their participation in the conference. Mrs. Jacobs, who is league chairman of International Co-Operation to Prevent War, issues a statement in which she expresses joy that the women of the world have undertaken and carried to such success an international movement for peace.

"Let us rejoice in this power we find we have," says Mrs. Jacobs' statement, "and let us use it judiciously; let us realize that the ratification of the Kellogg treaty completes the first phase of our work for peace. The second phase will be to continue educational programs, to promote understanding of foreign relations and foreign nations."

Miss Hodgson, who is a professor in the normal school at Athens, Ga., and a prominent league member says: "The women made a noble effort. They had studied and were convinced, and had done the necessary organization on this case to put public opinion on peace into effect."

East Atlanta Notes Are of Interest.

Mr. and Mrs. John Faith, who have been residing in Bakerfield, Calif., for the past year, have returned to their home in Atlanta.

Mrs. Emory Moore recently entertained the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the East Atlanta Christian church with an apron party.

Several members of the better films committee of John B. Gordon School attended the luncheon at Henry Grady hotel Thursday.

Mrs. W. Y. Allen, of Monroe, is the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Euel Argo.

Mrs. T. A. Walker, of Etawah, Tenn., is visiting her sister, Mrs. W. C. Lewis.

Mrs. E. V. Moore entertained at tea Wednesday afternoon at her home on Metropolitan avenue in compliment to her friend, Mrs. Frank Jones. Contests and music featured the afternoon entertainment.

Miss Helen Kimbrell was hostess to the members of the Gamma Delta society at her home on Glenwood avenue Wednesday evening.

Fashion Show Models Announced For Benefit Bridge at Biltmore

A group of charming Atlantans will act as models at the fashion show which will be staged in connection with the elaborate benefit bridge that members of St. Catherine guild of St. Luke's Episcopal church will sponsor Monday evening, February 11, in the ballroom of the Biltmore hotel. The models include Misses Callie Orme, Ida Sadler, Virginia Courts, Florence Eckford, Lena Knox, Edythe Coleman, Lucile Stone, Ethel Hunter of New York, Billie Johnson, Kitty Parks, Cecil Jewell and Mrs. John Knox and Mrs. Charlotte M. Fletcher.

This group of belles will model the smartest styles in afternoon, evening and sports costumes from M. Rich & Bros. company under the direction of Mrs. William Huger, chairman of models, and Mrs. Rogers Toy, chairman of the fashion revue.

A group of sub-debs will assist members of the guild with the sale of home-made candy, including Misses Vera Kamper, Carolyn Perry, Peggy Fuller, Susan Baker Jones and Jane and Martha King.

Rev. High Moor, rector of St. Luke's Episcopal church, and Mrs. Moor, with Mr. and Mrs. John M. Slaton, will act as official hosts of the occasion.

The proceeds netted from this brilliant affair will be used to pay for the furnishings of a room at the Egleston Memorial hospital sponsored by St. Catherine guild.

A prize will be awarded the winner of each table, and those in charge of the party state that innumerable surprise features will be introduced throughout the evening.

Mrs. Eugene Cronheim is chairman of arrangements for the party, and is being assisted by Mrs. A. Q. Smith as co-chairman.

A large number of reservations have already been made by a large number of Atlanta's bridge-playing set, including both ladies and gentlmen, for this brillian affair. Atlanta League of Women Voters Starts Annual Membership Drive

The Atlanta League of Women Voters will launch its annual membership drive beginning February 1, to continue throughout the month. With Mrs. C. W. Harris as chairman, assisted by Mrs. Harvey Payne, and a group of workers, the 1929 drive is to be conducted along lines somewhat different from those of previous years. From each ward in the city, a group of leaders will be selected by the membership committee, each leader to be assisted by two workers of her own choice. These groups of three will have a quota of 15 members each, which will be filled during the month of February. Renewals will be counted as well as new members.

Loving Cup.

A beautiful silver loving cup, coveted award given by the league each year in recognition of the best work done during the membership drive, will this year be presented to that ward showing the greatest percentage of improvement in membership over last year's drive record. This plan forwarding the cup will give every ward in the city an equal opportunity, whether league membership in that section be large or small. Hitherto the loving cup has gone to the group of workers enrolling the greatest number of members, whether the ward in which the group worked showed a percentage of improvement or not.

Prizes.

In addition to the loving cup, individual prizes will be given each week during the drive to the worker turning in the largest number of memberships for that week. At the end of the drive, a prize will be awarded to the worker who has turned in the greatest number of members for the entire period of the drive.

Luncheons.

The drive will be inaugurated with a buffet luncheon at league headquarters, 356 Candler annex, Friday, February 1. Mrs. W. F. Trenary, chairman of hospitality, will have charge of this affair. A plate lunch will be served for the nominal sum of 35 cents. Preceding the 12 o'clock luncheon, a meeting of the leaders appointed by the membership committee will be held and material and instructions will be distributed. Mrs. Harris will preside at this meeting and all leaders are asked to be at league headquarters promptly at 11 o'clock, as business of importance will be presented. No worker can fulfill her duties without the kit of literature and receipt books will be distributed at Friday's meeting.

The noon luncheons will be continued each Friday throughout February and preceding each there will be a short meeting of drive workers for the purpose of turning in memberships and reports. The weekly prizes will be awarded at the luncheons. The price of 35 cents a plate will prevail at all these affairs.

Finance Committee.

Tuesday, January 29, Mrs. Guy Sink, chairman of finance, will hold the first finance committee meeting of the year at her home, 28 Seventh street, N. E., apartment 1, at 3 o'clock. The function of the finance committee is to raise the budget as adopted by the league in annual convention and at Tuesday's meeting plans will be decided upon for this work.

Ward Officers' Council.

Mrs. Harry Gershon, chairman of the ward officers' council, has called the first regular meeting of her committee for Wednesday, January 29, at league headquarters at 10:30 o'clock. The ward officers' council is an advisory body composed of the chairmen of the organized wards and its work in perfecting organization is vital to the league.

Mrs. Ellis Robb.

The appointment of Mrs. Ellis Robb as 1929 treasurer of the Atlanta league is announced by Mrs. Alfred Bailey, president. Mrs. Robb is a league member of long standing and an ardent supporter of league ideals. Her appointment comes as a distinct source of gratification.

Mrs. Edgar Alexander.

Mrs. Bailey also announces the appointment of Mrs. Edgar Alexander as chairman of legislation for the Atlanta league. This post is one of the most important offices in the framework of league activity, and Mrs. Alexander's recognized capability as a civic worker gives her an advantage in this field which should prove valuable.

Mrs. Bailey will serve as chairman of efficiency in government for the Atlanta league during 1929, being assisted by the editor of Facts, official league publication, and the chairman of the get out the vote campaign, both activities being under the direct supervision of this committee. Monthly educational meetings, offering programs designed to aid in citizenship instruction will be Mrs. Bailey's individual contribution to the work of this committee.

The Calendar.

The Ninth Ward League of Women Voters meets Friday, February 1, at 10 o'clock at league headquarters. This meeting will last one hour, as the membership meeting will follow at 11 o'clock.

The finance committee of the Atlanta League of Women Voters meets at the home of Mrs. Guy L. Sink, 28 Seventh street, N. E., apartment 1.

Miss Ruth Still Becomes Bride Of W. R. Cox at Quiet Ceremony

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Still announce the marriage of their daughter, Ruth, to William Robs Cox, of Atlanta, the ceremony having been quietly solemnized at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, in the study of Dr. M. A. Cooper, pastor of the West End Baptist church, who read the marriage service.

The ceremony was witnessed only by the members of the bride's and groom's immediate families.

The lovely young bride was modishly gowned in a spring model of navy blue georgette, becomingly fashioned and worn with a smart, closefitting hat combining navy blue silk and straw. Completing the costume for traveling was a handsome coat of black llama cloth, collared and cuffed in black lynx fur. The bride's flowers were a shoulder bouquet of pink rosebuds and valley lilies.

There were no attendants at the wedding.

Immediately following the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Cox left for a wedding journey to Miami and other Florida resorts. Upon their return they will make their home on Piedmont avenue.

Both Mr. Cox and his charming young bride are popular members of Atlanta's younger social contingent and the announcement of their marriage will be received with interest by a wide circle of friends. Mrs. Cox is the granddaughter of the late Rev. John F. Aldmand, prominent Georgia divine, and Mrs. Almand, both of whom are pioneer residents of Conyers. Her mother was before her marriage Miss Susannah Almand. The bride received her education at Girls' High school, of which institution she is a graduate.

The groom is a representative of a well-known North Carolina family. He is prominently connected in business with the Adair Realty company.

Dancing and Reducing Classes Begin at Y. W. C. A. Feb. 1

Miss Lucille Crabtree, director of health education in the Atlanta Y. W. C. A., announces the opening of a reducing class Friday morning, February 1, when the second term of gymnasium and dancing classes begin. The class will meet Tuesday and Friday from 11 to 12 o'clock at the "Y" headquarters, 37 Auburn avenue. Exercises for all parts of the body will be given, a chart giving the weight of class members will be kept and posted weekly so that one can see how much she loses each week. Emphasis will be put on daily exercise and diet, and a regular course of study on calories and weight control will be followed.

Miss Crabtree says that a person reducing should, after the first two or three weeks in the class, lose only two pounds a week, and that at the end of the term, which will be May 15, each member should have lost from 20 to 25 pounds. Miss Crabtree has had a great deal of experience in reducing and has had much success with her classes at the "Y." Last year all who really worked to reduce lost from 20 to 25 pounds in one term of three and one-half months.

At the "Y" the belief is that one does not have to refrain from eating certain foods or eat just a few kinds of food, but must not, if trying to reduce, eat more than 1,200 calories a day. Only once a week do members of the "Y" reducing class go on a strict diet, drinking only buttermilk or orange juice—this to shrink fat. If this class interests you come to the "Y" or call Walnut 8961 for further information.

City Federation Will Meet Wednesday at Georgian Terrace

George Rogers, baritone soloists of the Emory Glee club, will sing "Trees" by Rastheb, at the Forestry and Good Roads luncheon, to be held by the city federation of Woman's clubs, at the Georgian Terrace Wednesday, January 30. Several numbers will be given by the Emory quartet under the direction of Dr. Malcom Dewey. The artist will be introduced by the federation music chairman, Mrs. Mary Griffith Dobbs.

An all-day meeting will feature the mid-winter session, beginning at 10:30 o'clock. Reservations for luncheon can be made through Mrs. E. V. Carter, Dearborn 2591-J, or Mrs. R. M. Walker, Hemlock 2384-W. Price $1 per cover. Presidents and chairmen are requested to make reports at this time, bringing before the federation matters of community interests and civic pride.

Distinguished Guests.

Distinguished guests invited for the occasion are: Governor L. G. Hardman, Dr. T. H. McHatton, of the University of Georgia; G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Memorial association; Eugene Haynes, president of the Haynes-Manor corporation; L. H. Roan, of the Atlanta Georgian-Sunday American; John Paschal, of the Atlanta Journal; Clark Howell, of The Atlanta Constitution and Mrs. H. G. Parks, president of the Atlanta P.-T. A. council.

The city federation represents 15,000 club women and since its organization in the year 1889 has been through the various channels of federated work, a great factor for good in the building of the community. The object of the federation is "To bring into communication the various organization of the city that they might become mutual by helpful and through the federation be a unit of power in all humanitarian work."

Federation's Achievements.

Among the outstanding movements recently inaugurated was a bill in legislation seeking the establishment of a psychiatic in the state prison system; an intensive campaign to increase the use of Georgia farm products by the city population of the state; the founding of the Annie Tripp Rambo library at Alto Ga., for the tubercular hospital; the federation contributes financially to the Tallulah Falls Industrial schools. While supporting these and many other worthwhile movements the federation also gives its cooperation to community activities along civics, educational and phylanthropic lines.

Officers of the federation are Mrs. Norman Sharp, president; Mrs. R. F. McCormick, first vice president; Mrs. H. G. Hastings, second vice president; Mrs. Louis J. Elsas, third vice president; Mrs. R. H. Wolf, recording secretary; Mrs. F. C. Block, corresponding secretary; Mrs. E. V. Carter, treasurer; Mrs. R. M. Walker, auditor; Miss Rosa Woodberry, parliamentarian and Mrs. J. H. Legien, press representative.

At the meeting of the executive board which will be held Monday morning, January 28 in the directors hall at chamber of commerce building, at 10:30 o'clock the newly appointed resolution chairman, Mrs. J. N. Brawner and press chairman, Mrs. J. H. Legien, will be given a cordial welcome.

Garden Clubs of Marietta To Stage Mammoth Tulip Show

A mammoth tulip show will be staged at the Marietta Golf club in Marietta during the month of April, when these lovely flowers bloom in profusion and in a variety of color. The flower display will be sponsored by the garden clubs, of Marietta, and will assemble flower lovers from all over the state. A prize of $100 will be given by the garden clubs, of Marietta, for the most beautiful display of tulips and a large gazing globe will be awarded by the H. G. Hastings Seed company as a second prize.

The Marietta Garden club was organized last March by Mrs. Mary J. Mays, prominent Marietta woman, whose gardens in Marietta are numbered among the most beautiful in this state. Since the Marietta Garden club was organized four other garden clubs have been organized in this nearby city whose membership numbers several hundred prominent Marietta women who are interested in flower and shrubbery cultivation. Mrs. Mays is also responible for the organizing of garden clubs in Cartersville, Spring Hill, Log Cabin and Piedmont, Ala.

The garden clubs, of Marietta, are making extensive plans for the development of floral culture in the schools of Cobb county and also for the beautifying of the highway leading to Marietta. The schools of Cobb county are now competing in a contest for beautifying the grounds of the individual schools in this county under the direction of the garden clubs, of Marietta, for which a prize of $25 has been offered for first prize and $10 donated by Mrs. Henry Minor as second prize.

State Woman's College News Is of Interest.

Valdosta, Ga., January 26.—"Let us reason together," was the keynote of Dr. A. G. Cleveland's talk at vespers Sunday night at the Georgia State Woman's college, in which he brought out the fact that people too often are willing to accept everything that is told them without questioning the facts.

Through a number of "whys" he put the group to thinking of motives behind the various historical developments from the time the Pheonicians began to venture out from their own shores; of motives behind the educational developments from the time the Greeks advanced the theory of all round development; of the motives prompting present-day actions and writings. The last though Dr. Cleveland developed was that people should accept some things without question, other things are to be thought through. "Know what to accept and what to question, but don't think you know it all," were his closing words.

The Home Economics club met Friday evening. The program in charge of Miss Carden Bell was given as follows: Modern Tendencies in the Education of Women—by Miss Annie P. Hopper, dean of women; Relation of Art to the Field of Home Economics—Miss Francis R. Carpenter.

Poetic Selection—Miss Lucius Bedell. Definite plans were made for the Wednesday afternoon tea to be given by the Home Economics club.

The Sororian and Argonian Literary societies held a joint meeting Saturday afternoon following an interesting discussion of modern Russian drama led by Miss Margaret Dasher, "The Boar," a one-act play by Yaton Tchekoff, was presented under the directions of Miss Louise Sawyer. The cast of characters included: Grigorji Stepunovitch Smirnov—Miss Kathryn Sawyer; Luba—Miss Lillian Exum; Helen Ivanova Popov—Miss Roselle Hatcher.

Margaret Wilson C. of C. Reports Meeting.

The Margaret A. Wilson chapter, Children of the Confederacy, Atlanta, met at the Wren's Nest in Atlanta Wednesday with the president, Miss Eugenia Hopper, presiding. Minutes of the previous meeting were read by Frances Stanton. The serious illness of Hattie High Childs and Elizabeth Hall was reported. Plans were made to entertain the ladies in the Atlanta Old Ladies home with a Valentine party Friday afternoon, February 15. An invitation was extended all the children to attend the celebration of General Robert E. Lee's birthday at the state capitol Saturday afternoon, January 19.

The following young ladies were invited to serve at the reception given by the three local chapters of the U. D. This is time well spent and all mothers of pre-school and kindergarten children are invited to attend the meetings.

The mothers enjoyed a program of rhythmic exercises presented by the High kindergarten children in costume.

Shorter College News Is of Interest.

Rome, Ga., January 26.—Meetings of the various study classes which are organized in connection with the different departments at Shorter college have featured the calendar recently.

The Shorter chapter of Beta Phi Theta, national French fraternity, met Friday night. The program was an unusually interesting one. Several members of the club, with the aid of cards shown on the slide in the physics classroom, conducted those present on a delightful tour of Paris. The students were Misses Mary Lou Hoyt, Elizabeth Richardson, Maybelle Harris, Glennie Padgett, Dorothy Sims, Sarah Lou Casey, Mary Julia Pyle, Catherine Burney. Other French students of the college were guests. Miss Catherine Burney, the new pledge, was formally admitted.

At the January meeting of the International Relations club Miss Geraldine Brown assisted by Misses Jane Broadhurst and Glennie Padgett gave an interesting account of Hoover's visit to South America. Miss Birdie Bondurant assisted by Miss Eugenia Dodd discussed the Bolivia-Paraguay question.

The chemistry department sponsored the January meeting of the Science club. Miss Grace Jackson gave a history of rayon and Dr. E. E. Porter, head of the department, gave demonstrations of the rayon process, methods used, etc.

An important event of the week was the lecture by Tieu Lai Huang, Chinese aviator, scholar and political observer, on "What Is Happening in China." It was the third number in the lyceum series for the year.

Harvey-Ottley Wedding Date Is Set for Thursday, Feb. 14

Society's most cordial interest centers in the announcement of the personnel for the wedding of Miss Mary Harvey, lovely young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Harvey, to John King Ottley, Jr. Their marriage will be brilliantly solemnized at 8 o'clock Thursday evening, February 14, at the Second Baptist church and will assemble a large throng of fashionable southern society.

The marriage service will be read by Dr. Carter Helm Jones, of New Orleans, La., former pastor of the Second Baptist church.

Mrs. George McCarty, only sister of the groom-elect, will act as matron of honor, while Miss Sarah Southerland, of Tampa, Fla., will serve as maid of honor.

Miss Harvey has chosen as her bridesmaids a quartet of lovely belles, including Misses Virginia Coarts, Florence Eckford, Flora Jenkins, of Columbus, and Mary Shewmaker, of Memphis, Tenn.

Miss Mary Dudley Pittman, of Raleigh, N. C., young cousin of the bride-elect, will act as junior bridesmaid, while Miss Harvey's small brother, Richard Harvey, will be the ring bearer.

Robert Emmet Harvey will give his daughter in marriage and George McCarty will serve as Mr. Ottley's best man.

Dan Conklin, Baxter Maddox, William Harvey, brother of the bride-to-be, and Tom Caldwell, of Miami, Fla., will be the groomsmen. The ushers include James D. Robinson, William H. Kiser, Brooks Morgan, Edward C. Peters, Dr. Herbert Kennedy, Ernest G. Ottley, brother of the groom-to-be, Hunter Bell and Preston S. Arkwright, Jr.

Miss Jean Kendrick will sing a group of appropriate songs preceding the marriage ceremony, after which a program of nuptial music will be rendered.

Miss Harvey and Mr. Ottley will be central figures at a number of interesting social events preceding their marriage.

Renowned Orchestra To Play At Capital City Club Ball

The renowned B. F. Goodrich Silvertown Cord orchestra, of New York, has been secured by the Capital City club management for the Valentine dinner-dance Wednesday evening, February 13, at the club. This orchestra is recognized as one of leading musical organizations in this country and is frequently heard over the radio in concerts broadcast from station WEAF, New York city. Joseph Knecht is the popular director of the orchestra and is assisted by "Happy" Felton, youthful master of ceremonies who is a gifted singer and comedian. Mr. Knecht was for many years musical director at the Waldorf-Astoria hotel, New York, and before that with the Boston symphony and later with the Metropolitan Opera company.

Members of the orchestra will leave immediately after the dinner-dance for Tampa, Fla., where they will play for the brilliant balls attendant upon the Gasparilla celebration in that city.

Several hundred prominent Atlantans and visitors will assemble in the handsome ballroom of the Capital City club for the Valentine dinner-dance which will begin promptly at 8:30 o'clock. A number of novel features will be introduced throughout the evening and elaborate decorations appropriate of the Valentine season will lend a gay atmosphere to the brilliant occassion. Members of the club are requested to make reservations for the affair at an early date.

Mrs. Brosseau Urges Attendance At National Defense Conference

In view of the coming conference on national defense, Mrs. Alfred J. Brosseau, president general of the National Society, D. A. R., sends the following important message:

"The Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense will convene on the evening of January 29, 1929, at Memorial Continental hall, in Washington, D. C., and continue through January 31. This is an event of colossal importance to the 33 patriotic organizations participating in this annual conference. The number of delegates and visiting guests is not limited. If you can arrange to attend and share the inspirational advantage of this great patriotic gathering, please notify your state regent to that effect.

"Pacifistic and opposition elements are constantly strengthening their organizations by consolidating in community, state and national meetings which are intended to recruit, rally and unite anti-defense forces. Recently the president of the United States has restated his views on the great necessity for national defense. Would it not be especially fitting for us to assemble in larger number than ever before to indicate our firm stand for national defense and in support of the declarations of President Coolidge? To swell the numbers you are needed. Come!

P. S.—Mrs. Thomas Spence, 640 Shepard avenue, Milwaukee, Wis., national president, American War Mothers, was asked to secure transportation information for the delegates to the Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense and she has advised me as follows: The railroads are willing to grant a fare and a half on the certificate plan for the round trip to Washington. The railroad fare from any given point, not to be less than 67 cents. Rates good from January 25 to February 6."

Election of Congress Delegates Feature D. A. R. Chapter Meets

The following accounts of D. A. R. chapter meetings, featuring the election of delegates to the state conference and to the national D. A. R. congress, will be of interest to the readers of the page:

The Augusta chapter, D. A. R., met with Mrs. Samuel Fortson on Meigs street. Miss Isabel Clark will be the hostess in February.

Routine business was transacted, the most important being the election of delegates and alternates to the state conference and national congress. The chapter will be represented at the state conference March 12, 13 and 14 in Brunswick by the regent, Mrs. M. M. MacFerrin; Mrs. A. H. Brenner, Mrs. Sanford Gardner and Mrs. Foxhall Sturman, all of whom are members of the state conference executive committee, Mrs. Charles R. Clark was elected delegate, with Mrs. A. H. Howell, Mrs. Robert Walton and Mrs. Terrill Wiggins, alternates.

The chapter will be represented at the national congress in Washington, D. C., the week beginning April 15, by the regent, Mrs. M. M. MacFerrin, and Mrs. Sanford Gardner, who is appointed teller by the state regent. Mrs. Samuel Fortson was elected the delegate, with the following ladies as alternates: Mrs. Sanford Gardner, Mrs. Charles R. Clark, Mrs. Clark Jack, Mrs. Le Roy Hankinson, Mrs. Robert Walton, Mrs. Terrill Wiggins, Mrs. L. V. Stone, Mrs. Edward Clark, Mrs. Percy Burum, Mrs. W. A. Rigsby. Many of the alternates and other members of the chapter are planning to attend the national congress in the interest of Mrs. Julius Talmadge, of Athens, who is a candidate for president general.

Because of the influenza epidemic the December meeting of the chapter was omitted. The regent reported cooperation with the Woman's Service league in helping to sell in November $19 worth of "forget-me-nots;" Red Cross roll call on November 24 about $12; $7 worth of Christmas seals December 8.

Athens Chapter.

The Elijah Clarke chapter met Thursday afternoon, January 17, at the home of Miss Annie Crawford. The meeting was called to order by the regent, Mrs. J. V. H. Rucker. Reports were made by the recording secretary and the treasurer, the latter showing that all obligations could be met and the chapter placed on the honor roll.

Contributions were made to the three southern D. A. R. schools, one in South Carolina, one in Alabama and one in Florida. These schools are supported solely by the D. A. R. and are doing wonderful work. A report was made by the committee which was appointed to see about placing a marker in honor of William H. Crawford. The unveiling of the marker will take place February 22.

Delegates were elected to the state and national conferences. Many of the members are planning to attend the national congress to support Mrs. Julius Y. Talmadge, who is a candidate for the office of president general, N. S., D. A. R.

On account of unusual obligations that have to be met this year by the chapter, the management of the Palace theater was asked that the chapter be allowed to sponsor a picture. This request was granted. The date of the picture will be announced later.

At the close of the business session Dr. A. M. Soule was introduced by Mrs. Rucker, whose talk on "The Defense of Education" was interesting and instructive. January 17 being the birthday of Benjamin Franklin, the paper of Mrs. Durwood Colliers on his boyhood was appropriate. The program was closed by two lullabys sung by Miss Margaret Elliott, accompanied by Miss Mable Wedge.

Savannah Chapter.

The Lochlan McIntosh chapter met January 15 at the home of Mrs. J. H. Tison in Ardsley Park, the regent, Mrs. J. E. D. Bacon, presiding.

The librarian was authorized to purchase Collins' "Kentucky" in two volumes. The committee on Americanism, Miss Margaret Cosens, chairman, assisted by Mrs. David Furse, was authorized to send a box of useful articles, such as yarns, etc., to Ellis Island.

Mrs. W. B. McKinstry and Mrs. Eugene Daniel were appointed a committee to visit Fort Argyle in Bryan county and ascertain whether or not there is anything left of this fort, with the object in view of having the spot marked. The chapter voted to offer a prize of a $5 gold piece in an essay contest among the school children, the subject to be selected; this matter is in charge of Mrs. David Furse. Authority was given to procure copies of records of historic value and interest in Bryan county. This work is in charge of Mrs. Walter S. Wilson, who is to select her assistant. The registrar reported one new member, Mrs. Eugene Daniel.

The following were appointed delegates to the state conference to be held in Brunswick in March next: The regent, Mrs. J. E. D. Bacon, Mrs. C. L. Paul, Jr., alternate; Mrs. Roy Chalker, official delegate; Mrs. H. R. Oliver, alternate.

In addition to the obligatory contributions, including for marking historic spots, $2.00; Ellis Island, $2.00; immigrants' manual, per capita, 25c; state tax, per capita, 20c, it was voted to make the following donations: Georgia Mountaineers' association, $10; The Georgia Bell, Valley Forge, $10; memorial to the four founders of the D. A. R., $10; Meadow Garden, $5; State Woman's college, Valdosta, $5; to fund for reception to be tendered Mrs. Julius Talmadge on April 15, next, at the New Willard hotel in Washington, D. C., $10.

At the December meeting Mrs. Walter S. Wilson was appointed official delegate in place of the regent to represent the chapter at the national congress of the D. A. R., to be held in Washington, D. C., in April next; Mrs. A. S. Hook was also elected a delegate with Mrs. David S. Furse alternate. The resignation of Mrs. Helen C. Drummond as publicity chairman was accepted and Miss Carrie S. Davis was elected to succeed her.

Macon Chapter.

The second of a series of lectures on women in national life was heard by the Mary Hammond Washington chapter, D. A. R., of Macon, Wednesday afternoon at the January meeting held at the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Johnston Cooke on College street, when Joseph Robinson, of Mercer university, spoke on the life of Josephine Preston Peabody, his paper being entitled "A Soul of Fire and Dew." Mrs. Malcolm Jones, Jr., a talented reader, gave several poems, among them "The House and The Road," by Peabody; "Jenny Kissed Me," "Lucy," and "Evening Song," by Lanier.

A new member, Mrs. Charles Hinton, was welcomed into the chapter. The chapter was invited by Mrs. W. D. Lamar to be present at the unveiling of the Gutzon Borglum bust of Sidney Lanier, which will take place February 3 at the Lanier room in the Washington Memorial library. Following the program Mrs. Cook entertained the chapter at tea. The monthly meeting of the board of management preceded the chapter meeting.

Commerce Chapter.

The James Pittman chapter, D. A. C., met at the home of Mrs. C. D. Stark, with Mrs. W. W. Stark and Mrs. H. P. DeLaPerriere, joint hostesses. Mrs. C. E. Pittman, regent, presided. The registrar, Mrs. G. L. Carson, Sr., reported 6 application papers sent in to national headquarters in Washington. Two were passed on, four pending. The treasurer, Mrs. C. W. Truitt, reported the payment of all requirements of the honor roll, leaving a substantial balance in the treasury. Contributed $2.50 for the Georgia Bell at Valley Forge, and paid $150 for a chapter chair in the new Constitution hall. Chairman of Revolutionary soldiers' graves reported through the regent, one marker received, one ordered. Two more will be ordered as soon as desired information is obtained.

The chapter having already endorsed Mrs. Talmadge for president general at the September meeting, voted to contribute $5 toward the reception which Georgia D. A. R. will give for Mrs. Talmadge in Washington during the continental congress. The flag code committee sometime ago distributed the flag code to the local schools, both white and colored.

After the business session the program was presented. An interesting sketch of General Richard Montgomery of Revolutionary fame was given by Mrs. Eugene Runion. "Woodrow Wilson as War President" was given by Mrs. J. T. Quillian. "What Patriots Are Doing," by Mrs. M. T. Sanders, told of some of the patriotic work carried on by the National society, D. A. R.

The Hawkinsville chapter, D. A. R., met Thursday afternoon, January 10, at the home of Mrs. M. H. Boyer. In the absence of the regent, Mrs. J. L. Mims, Mrs. T. H. Bridges, first vice regent, presided. Each member responded to roll call with a new year pledge to the D. A. R.

Delegates were elected to attend the state conference in Brunswick, March 12-15, and continental congress in Washington April 15 to 20. Representing the chapter at state conference will be the regent, Mrs. J. L. Mims, with Mrs. T. H. Bridges as alternate, Mrs. L. A. Jordan, and Mrs. G. W. Jordan. To continental congress, Mrs. J. L. Mims was elected as delegates with Miss Reba Jordan, of Washington, D. C., as first alternate.

Mrs. J. J. Whitfield, chairman of conservation and thrift, urged each member to plant, not later than February, two trees, one for herself and one for a non-resident member. A committee was appointed to look after the marking of the grave, in the Hawkinsville cemetery, of Elizabeth Nicholson Philips, daughter of Major John Nicholson, of North Carolina, a Revolutionary soldier and the ancestor of Mrs. J. L. Mims.

The program, arranged by Mrs. W. C. McAllister, consisted of the following numbers:

Solo, "America, the Beautiful," by Miss Martha Jane Perrine; paper, "George Rogers Clark's Patriotic Vision," by Mrs. Eli W. Goode, Jr.; paper, "Defense of Religion," by Mrs. W. R. Meadows.

Delegates Named To Patriotic Conference on National Defense

The following delegates have been appointed to the Woman's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, meeting January 29, 30 and 31 in Memorial Continental hall, Washington, D. C.: Mrs. Herbert Fay Gaffney, of Columbus; Mrs. Julius Young Talmadge, of Athens; Mrs. Wilbur M. Coney, of Savannah; Mrs. Charles Rice, of Atlanta; Mrs. J. V. H. Rucker, of Athens; Mrs. John W. Daniel, of Savannah; Mrs. J. P. MacLean, of Chevy Chase, Md.; Miss Annie Bannon, of Washinton, D. C.

The following information issued by Mary E. Spence, national president of American War Mothers, concerning railroad transportation to and from the conference is of interest to all delegates and others who will attend.

Reduced Fares.

A reduction of one and one-half fare on the certificate plan will apply for members attending the meeting of Woman's Patriotic Conference on National Defense, to be held at Washington, D. C., January 29 to February 2, 1929; all railroads will cooperate in reduced fares. Children of five and under 12 years of age when accompanied by parent or guardian will, under like conditions, be charged one-half of the fares for adults.

The following directions are submitted for guidance:

1. Tickets at the regular one-way tariff fares for the going journey may be obtained on any of the following dates (but not on any other date) January 25 to 31. Be sure that when purchase is made you request a certificate. Do not make the mistake of asking for a "receipt."

2. Present yourself at the railroad station for tickets and certificates at least 30 minutes before departure of train on which you will begin your journey.

3. Certificates are not kept at all stations. If you inquire at your home station, you can ascertain whether certificates and through tickets can be obtained to place of meeting. If not obtainable at your home station the agent will inform you at what station they can be obtained. You can in such case purchase a local ticket to the station which has certificates in stock, where you can purchase a through ticket and at the same time ask for and obtain a certificate to place of meeting.

4. Immediately on arrival at the meeting present your certificate to the indorsing officer, Mrs. Thomas Spence, national president, as the reduced fares for the return journey will not apply unless you are properly identified as provided for by the certificates.

5. It has been arranged that the special agent of the carriers will be in attendance on January 29 to February 2, from 8:30 a. m. to 5:30 p. m., to validate certificates. If you arrive at the meeting and leave for home again prior to the special agent's arrival or if you arrive at the meeting later than February 2, after the special agent has left, you cannot have your certificate validated on the home journey and consequently you will not obtain the benefit of the reduction on the home journey.

6. So as to prevent disappointment, it must be understood that the reduction on the return journey is not guaranteed, but is contingent on an attendance of not less than 250 members of the organization at the meeting and dependent members of their families, holding regularly issued certificates obtained from the ticket agents at starting points, from where the regular one-way adult tariff fares to place of meeting are not less than 67 cents on going journey. Certificates issued to children at half fares will be counted the same as certificates held by adults.

7. If the necessary minimum of 250 certificates are presented to the special agent, and your certificate is duly validated, you will be entitled up to and including February 6, 1929, to a return ticket via the same route over which you made the going journey at one-half of the regular one-way tariff fare from the place of meeting to the point at which your certificate was issued.

8. Return tickets issued at the reduced fares will not be good on any limited train on which such reduced fare transportation is not honored.

9. No refund of fare will be made on account of failure to obtain proper certificate when purchasing going tickets, nor on account of failure to present validated certificate when purchasing return ticket.

State Chairmen Issue Last Call For Convention Reports

Mrs. R. M. McMaster, D. A. R. chairman of the sale of Christmas seals; Mrs. Di Ingram, state chairman of the Valdosta Loan fund; and Mrs. B. C. Ward, state treasurer, send out the following calls urging the chapters to send in their reports on these various branches of D. A. R. work, so that they may be incorporated in the convention reports.

Mrs. McMaster, who is serving the state D. A. R. as chairman of the sale of Christmas seals, begs that the chapters send in reports as soon as possible so as to enable her to have her report ready for the state conference which is to be held in Brunswick, March 12, 13 and 14. Her message is as follows: Won't you please let me know just what part your chapter, and chapter members had in the sale and use of Christmas seals? Did your chapter foster the sale, assist or just use them? Report number using the seals, also any other work along the line of fighting tuberculosis. This is convention report. Do your part for me."

Mrs. Ingram's call reads: "The new year is with us—Tempus fugit, and before we can realize it the state conference at Brunswick will be on. Has your chapter contributed its quota to the Valdosta Loan fund? Do you realize what this fund is doing? How many times it has made it possible for a worthy young woman to finish her college course? Your money can't go for a more worthy cause. If you have not already sent the state treasurer your quota, do so at once and let me know the amount so I may include it in my convention report."

Mrs. Ward, treasurer, sends the following urgent plea: "Please mail all contributions as early as possible direct to your state treasurer, Mrs. B. C. Ward, 952 Peachtree street, Atlanta, Ga. State books will close February 20 to prepare for state conference which will be held in Brunswick, March 12, 13 and 14."

State Chairman Urges Cooperation In Organizing Children of Republic

Mrs. James L. Logan, D. A. R., state chairman of the children of the republic, aided by her committee, including Mesdames C. R. Cannon, R. A. Malone, B. C. Teasley, J. S. O'Sheal, George A. Traylor, R. A. Norris, V. F. Balkcom, George Hodgson, B. H. Hooks, T. J. Royal, issues the following timely message:

"As your D. A. R. state chairman of the children of the republic, I feel honored that the state regent should have given me such a broad and important subject. Childhood is the cradle of the nation's hope. This being true, it follows that the greatest service is to adopt a method by which the children of the republic may be developed along mental and moral lines in such a way as to produce a healthy manhood and womanhood. Good citizenship depends upon the proper training of the child at an impressionable age, and can be best accomplished by keeping before the child ideals as reflected in the lives of great men and women who have reached the highest stations in life.

"The children of the republic are children of the masses and should be taught love of soil that gave them birth. The love of home is the beginning of patriotism, and will create a deeper understanding of our constitution and our institutions. The public schools by teaching our boys and girls their true relations to country, to schools, and obedience to law will create in their hearts a desire to become an asset to their government, instead of a liability. The child should be taught loyalty to our flag and what it means to them. This can be done by simple lectures conveying to the child that the flag represents generosity of the government maintaining the school system for their special benefit, and in the strength of the government protecting child life. The flag of our country should be placed over every public school building and other public institutions.

"We can best carry out this great work by forming clubs in the public school—the great melting pot. We must not confuse this work with the organization of children of the revolution. All children nine years and over, regardless of race, color, creed or ancestry should have the opportunity for an organized expression of patriotism. The work of these clubs will also include Boy Scouts.

AS FOUR WOMEN HEAR IT

ALMOST twelve months ago Four Women told of an interview with that distinguished personage, John Taintor Foote, who paused momentarily in our midst and granted Atlantans only a brief glimpse of himself. It is with more than extraordinary pleasure that we announce to you now that Mr. Foote is not only among us again and for a longer visit, but that he has brought with him his entire delightful family circle. Having taken the charming Brookwood Hills home of Mr. and Mrs. William McKenzie for, at least, the duration of the hunting season, they will be counted as Atlanta citizens for some weeks yet, the noted author having come south for some quail shooting, in which sport he excels, as well as for a warmer clime for his family.

Mrs. Foote, who is divinely tall and divinely fair, is a distinct asset to any social or cultural circle in which she chooses to move, having been before her marriage the beautiful Miss Jessie Florence Todhunter, of Vancouver, British Columbia, and fashionable Atlanta society congratulates itself on so charming an acquisition. Not only is she endowed with beauty, culture and the social graces, but she possesses marked dramatic ability, which she displayed early in life and later turned to account. An interesting incident in which Dan Cupid played a part is that, upon seeking a stage career in New York, Mrs. Foote, who was then Miss Todhunter, was cast in a leading role of "Toby's Bow," one of the Broadway successes of that season, written by the eminent playwright, John Taintor Foote. On the author's first appearance at the production of the comedy, the lovely brunette beauty captivated him to such an extent that her stage career was interrupted for a trip to the altar.

Presiding with equal grace over a summer home in the Peekshill mountains and a spacious apartment maintained in New York city, Mrs. Foote is noted for her forte as hostess, her brilliant conversational powers constantly rendering her the center of an admiring group of Gotham's intelligentsia.

Completing the family circle are two handsome young sons, Peter, who is seven, and Timothy, whose last birthday cake held three tiny candles. Lovers of nature by inheritance, they have grown up in the great out-of-doors and are as strong and sturdy as the youth their father writes about in his stories. Having traveled extensively from coast to coast and even across the seas with their parents, they have had little of the normal boy's life in private and public schools, but have enjoyed the tutelage and personal supervision of their brilliant young mother. Another inheritance gives them a love for animals and a fondness for sports, encouraged, perhaps, by their illustrious father, who is a notable figure in the world of sportsmen as well as in the realm of writers.

KING of the carnival! A stately being, one with a regal robe, ermine collar and a bit of gold; a scepter in his hand, a queen at his side and a crown on his head. That is the king of the carnival.

Such a person was the first king of the Gasparilla carnival in Tampa many years ago. He was the late E. R. Gunby, well-known Atlantan. At the forthcoming carnival in Tampa, where her father inaugurated the series of gala affairs with his presence, Miss Rosalie Gunby will make her formal bow to Tampa society, mixing and mingling freely with elite which gather annually at this picturesque festival by the sea. Miss Gunby's sister, Miss Dorothy Gunby, was upon a previous occasion queen of the Gasparilla carnival, thus rendering the visit of Miss Gunby one replete with deep sentiment and significance.

Dating back to the time of the first festival, in which Mr. Gunby was king, the bold pirate ships of the high seas have slipped into Tampa bay, overcome the city and with that bravado which characterizes these marauders the world over, crowned their own king and queen. The scene is suggestive, colorful and of historic significance, suggesting the days when lawlessness held a threatening hand over vessels and cities by the sea.

Miss Gunby and her mother, Mrs. E. R. Gunby, leave today for Tampa to be present at the brilliant whirl of festivities preceding the carnival when former kings and queens will entertain at a series of gay parties with a group of prominent visitors as central figures. Miss Gunby will be the admired guest of Miss Adelaide Mahoney, a member of last winter's debutante ranks, who on account of her great beauty, popularity and social prominence, will undoubtedly be crowned as Gasparilla's queen, the interesting secret not to be divulged until the evening of the coronation ball. Miss Mahoney will be remembered as the recent guest of Miss Gunby during her debutante season, at which time she was the center of much social attention. While in Tampa Mrs. Gunby will visit Mrs. Wallace Brown, whom Atlanta society has also had the pleasure of meeting during frequent visits here.

Later Mrs. Gunby and her beautiful young daughter will join the fashionable winter colony in Miami, Fla., where they will add to their list of social triumps, being extensively entertained at the season's exclusive affairs.

FOUR WOMEN think that there is more than a social gesture in the visit of a prominent young widow from the east who is the feted visitor of a well known young Atlanta matron who makes her home on the north side. Cupid, one is led to believe, had a hand in this visit, the brother of the Atlanta hostess, who also formerly made his home here, now living in the east, where, rumor has it, he became enamoured of this attractive widow. She is easy to look upon, it is said. She will be extensively feted while in the city. Sisters have played their part in the advancement of less interesting friendships. The visit centers the interest of Atlantans on every hand and Four Women are no exception.

VARIED are the experiences of European travelers, especially those traveling as do Dr. and Mrs. Dunbar Roy every summer, spending several weeks at a time in one place, absorbing some of the environment and coming in contact with its natives, and the following story, as told by Dr. Roy, is one of the most pleasing episodes ever to come into their lives, and continues to add yearly pleasure both at home and abroad. "During the month of August, 1927, Mrs. Roy and I were sojourning at Bad-Nauheim, Germany, where I, with 5,000 other visitors, was taking the famous Bad-Kur. One afternoon, while sitting in the open at the Kur-Saal, or clubhouse, listening to the music rendered daily by an orchestra of 60 pieces, an elderly lady and evidently her young daughter, took the vacant seats next to us. In a few moments the young girl asked in very good English, but with a decided accent, if I would let her see the musical program. Every afternoon and evening the famous orchestra renders a classical concert and a program is distributed twice weekly giving the complete musical list for the entire week. I very cheerfully acquiesced, and in a few minutes we engaged in a lengthy conversation and from her I obtained a most interesting story. She and her mother were native Russians and the latter was in Nauheim taking the kur for an affection and the young girl was staying there as her companion. She spoke English, Russian, German, Polish and French. Her mother spoke Russian, German and Polish. They were living in Petrograd at the time of the world war and at the beginning of the revolution, the family consisting of her father and mother, two sisters and two brothers. They had an immense estate in the country with servants galore and all the accessories which went with Russian aristocracy. Her father had a large lace mill and was worth considerable money. In one night the bolsheviks confiscated everything and ordered them out of the country. They fled with what necessary things they could get together and were allowed to take a cattle train out of Russia to Riga, now the capital of Lithuania. They saved nothing, and in the dead of winter it took 18 days to make this trip which ordinarily takes 11 hours. They had all kinds of discomforts and sufferings but finally reached Riga. An uncle, who had fled to Switzerland, heard of their plight and sent some money on which they eked out an existence. Finally they moved to Wilno, Poland, where they at present live. The father and two boys, with the help of the uncle have started a new factory and one of the boys has a superintendent's place in the gas works.

"We found the young girl and her mother most refined and elegant while our acquaintanceship added much to the enjoyment of our stay in Nauheim. We saw them every day by taking long walks together and the young girl's attractive manners completely won a place in our hearts. So much so that the friendship has continued, especially as she is so anxious to come to the United States to live. During our first conversation, she happened to remark that the only person she knew in America (all foreigners speak of the United States as America) was a young girl who was teaching music in one of the colleges in Virginia and whose sister had been a concert artist in Atlanta, Ga. She said her friend's name was Blanca and her sister's Rosita Rennard. Atlantans will no doubt remember Miss Rennard as the artist who played so delightfully at the time of the Atlanta Symphony orchestra. Strange that here in a distant German city she should accidently meet some one who lived in the city where her only friend had given a concert performance. The world is small and strange incidents occur.

"The young Russian girl's name was Luba Kowalewa (Luba means love) and she herself was a graduate of the Berlin Conservatory of Music. We frequently heard her play and everyone adjudged her to be a musician of wonderful talent and ability. All Americans who met her were fascinated with her winning ways and she was ever a bright little star in our midst. When we left for Paris in September she was at the train with an immense bunch of roses to bid us good-bye and the parting between Mrs. Roy and Luba was indeed tearful as we both thought that we should never meet again. Last summer, however, we sent her a card from Stockholm saying that we would again spend the month of August at Bad-Nauheim. We heard nothing from her until one evening at our hotel in Nauheim we received a wire signed by Luba saying that she would arrive the next day. And so she did as bright and beautiful as ever, just to spend two weeks in order to see and be with us. During the winter her father had died, due to the shock of being forced out of Petrograd and from which he never recovered. We introduced her to all of our friends and all were sweet and lovely to her because of her fascinating ways. Everyone to whom we introduced her seemed to take a personal interest in her future and all were of one mind and that was 'We must get her to the United States where she can teach music and the languages.' We invited her as our guest in Hamburg for a few days before we sailed, as she had never seen that beautiful city nor had she ever seen one of the large ocean-going ships. We enjoyed her company and she had what she described as one of the most wonderful times of her life. She went with us on the train to Cuxhaven from where the Hamburg-American ships sail and on the train every American whom she met was filled with fascination for this beautiful and sprightly Russian girl. We shed tears as we parted and there were a dozen Americans who waved good-bye to that slender slip of a girl who could be seen standing on an elevated point until even the binoculars failed to distinguish her form.

"This Christmas we received the following cablegram: 'Roy, Terrace hotel, Atlanta, Ga.: Pupil faint. Signed, Luba.'

"Before leaving Nauheim I gave her a Western Union traveler code. She had not forgotten its use. Here is the translation: 'Please accept my very best wishes. Await letter, it will explain everything. Luba.'

"This cablegram came by the Postal Cable company and I had forgotten that I had given her the traveler's code. In going to the office to get it deciphered they said that everything was plain except the word Luba. I told them that this was her name and the mystery was solved. We are still expecting the letter. One of the great pleasures in world wanderings, is the fact that you so often meet with worth-while people."

ACCORDING to rumors, cupid is using his little bow and arrow overtime these first days of the new year preceding St. Valentine's day. The latest hearts to be pierced by this little love god are those of a former Atlanta belle, who has resided for the past few months in another southern state, and a prominent young Atlantan whose heart has grown fonder during the absence of his true love. The society section of the newspapers will carry the formal announcement of their engagement the first Sunday in February. The announcement of the return to Atlanta of the dainty, petite blonde as the bride to a scion of one of Atlanta's most representative families will be received with genuine interest by her wide circle of friends. The younger of two devoted sons, the groom-elect bears the name of his father, who is ranked among Atlanta's financiers and social leaders.

The wedding, we hear, will be among the notable events of late winter, taking place where tropical breezes blow.

SNAPSHOTS gathered at random: Homer Sinclair, popular English director of the Wagner Players, wearing a single eye glass. Miss Priscilla Toomer, of Jacksonville, Fla., wearing cap and surplice while singing a solo in the Fort McPherson chapel at Sunday morning services. Miss Polly Abraham, lovely young daughter of Major and Mrs. Clyde C. Abraham, wearing a smart navy blue double-breasted coat topped by a blue beret, exercising his wire haired terrier "Peter Pan" on the parade ground at Fort McPherson. Adorable little Julia Colquitt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Colquitt, wearing the daintiest of shell pink frocks and serving sweetmeats at the reception tendered Friday to the newly-elected Sheltering Arms officers by Mrs. Preston Arkwright and Mrs. Glenville Giddings at their home in Druid Hills. Mrs. Henry Grady, Jr., and Mrs. Edward Van Winkle wearing the most exquisite gowns of white chiffon and serving punch at Mrs. Arkwright's and Mrs. Giddings' reception. Mrs. Lewis Gregg effecting the smartest of hair cuts, her closely clipped locks brushed straight back over the ears. Mrs. Dudley Cowles proving herself a delightful impromptu speaker at the Drama league luncheon by telling a clever after dinner story. Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Black regaining their balance on board the steamship "Cuba" just as the boat got under way in rough waters from Havana, Cuba, bound for Key West, Fla. Mrs. Perrin Nicholson, Jr., driving out Peachtree road in her smart new Ford sedan. That's all today. More next Sunday.

Mrs. Knight Weds Mr. Brown, Of New York, at Quiet Ceremony

The announcement of the marriage of Mrs. Carrie Lou Williams Knight, of Atlanta, formerly of Valdosta, to Hector V. B. Brown, of New York, is of wide social interest, the ceremony being quietly solemnized Saturday at high noon at the First Presbyterian church before a group of relatives and close friends. Rev. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the church, was the officiating minister. Immediately after the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. Brown left by motor for New York, where they will reside at the Hotel Shelton.

Mrs. Brown's costume was a striking three-piece model fashioned of beige colored kasha woven with tiny gold threads. She wore a smart hat of beige felt, trimmed with a small tailored bow of ribbon to match. A shoulder bouquet of orchids and valley lilies completed the modish ensemble.

The bride resided in Valdosta before coming to Atlanta for residence. She is a representative of one of south Georgia's most prominent families and by her gracious manner and magnetic personality she has made a wide circle of friends since in a number of cities where she has often visited. She is a sister of R. L. Williams, of Summit, Ga.; Mrs. G. B. Owens, of Tampa, Fla.; Mrs. J. M. Scandrett, of Hollywood, Fla., and Miss Mary Ada Williams, of Lincoln, Neb.

Mr. Brown is a native of Toronto, Canada, and as southeastern regional sales manager for the Marmon Motor Car company he resided in Atlanta for some time before going to New York, where he is associated with the W. L. Thomas and company.

Mrs. B. G. Lastinger, of Valdosta, a cousin of the bride, and R. L. Williams, of Summit, the bride's brother, were among the out-of-town guests who attended the wedding.

Needy Women Fund Chairman Makes Earnest Appeal

Mrs. R. M. McMaster, of Waynesboro, Ga., chairman of the Mrs. Norman V. Randolph fund for needy women for the Georgia division, U. D. C., makes an earnest appeal in the following article:

"Into another year of opportunity we have entered and let us appreciate the fact there is much we may accomplish. Our thoughts turn to those worn, courageous, faithful women of the sixties. With the feebleness of years hanging heavily upon them, these, our very own, are looking to us, the Daughters of the Confederacy, with the trust of little children, to care for them in the wanting time of life. Will you not lay the matter upon your heart and conscience? Please send at once, a liberal contribution to the 'Mrs. Norman V. Randolph relief fund for needy confederate women' the general convention has requested that every chapter contribute as much as five dollars; but let us urge that you be more liberal if your budget or personal interest will permit. Georgia division has two of its own women in need of this fund, so honor compels us to send at once, in order that others need not suffer through our neglect. It requires $15 a month to care for an individual. Georgia is able, and we feel sure will meet her obligations in a manner worthy of the cause we stand to illustrate. It is a sweet privilege given the Daughters of Confederacy to bring a full realiztion to these blessed 'Women of the Sixties' the truth of the Psalmist when he said:—'The Lord is good to all, and His tender mercies are over all His works.'"

Misses Skeen Are Hosts At Party in Decatur.

Misses Rebecca and Virginia Skeen entertained at a bridge-tea Saturday afternoon at the Hotel Candler in Decatur. The guests included 50 members of the sub-deb contingent. Spring flowers in pastel shades featured the decorations for the affair. The center table was ornamented with a large silver epergne of narcissi and snapdragons offset by loving cups of the same flowers at each end of the table.

Moreland P.-T. A. Hears Talk By Judge Bell

The daddies' meeting of the Moreland P.-T. A. was held Tuesday evening. Judge Clarence Bell, one of Moreland's own daddies, spoke very interestingly.

Judge Bell traced the growth of community interest from the earliest times, when the savages gathered together in small settlements, to the present time with New York as an example of the most intricate form of community, and pointed out that interest is growing still broader with the getting together of the nation's, as was shown by the recent signing of the Kellogg pact. He closed with the idea that the P.-T. A. is the very embodiment of community interest.

The whole assembly joined in singing several songs, and Charlie Cowan sang "On the Road to Mandalay."

Mrs. Marvin R. Woodall, who presided, showed the booklet, "The Origin and Evolution of the United States Flag." Mrs. Woodall also made the following announcements: The Moreland P.-T. A. will have a rummage and rag sale the latter part of February, which will give all patrons and friends of the school time to get together their discarded clothes, hats, shoes, umbrellas, window shades, dishes, suitcases, or any household articles. Any kind of old rags will be appreciated, and they do not have to be washed.

The first aid class, which had been discontinued before the Christmas holidays, will resume its regular Wednesday morning meetings at the Inman Park Presbyterian church from 11 to 12 o'clock. All members are urged to attend and anyone, even if unable to attend regularly, will be benefited by attending when possible. The class is free. If one wishes to buy bandaging material, it costs ten cents. Visitors are invited.

Seven grades in the Moreland school have 100 per cent of dental certificates, which indicate teeth in perfect condition.

Mrs. Patterson's grade has 100 per cent of the parents members of the P.-T. A.

Two of the P.-T. A. cook books were given as door prizes. Mr. Bailey was the lucky daddy and Mrs. Ray Brady the lucky mother who received them.

The dollar prizes for the grades having the largest attendance of parents went to Miss Mary Frances Black, upper grades, and Mrs. Gertrude Cloud, lower grades.

Williams Street P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

The Williams Street P.-T. A. met Tuesday with Mrs. Ed McDonald, the president, presiding. The treasurer's report was read and also reports from the better films chairman and welfare chairman were given. Plans were discussed as to ways and means of raising money and it was decided to have a candy pulling in March.

The president presented to the school from Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson two very interesting books for the library.

The program for the afternoon consisted of five-minute talks by the teachers explaining the various ways the school and home might cooperate, thereby obtaining a higher standard for all of the school activities.

The prize for having the highest percentage of mothers present was given to low four.

Theosophical Society Opens Reading Room.

The reading room of the Theosophical society will be open Tuesday afternoons from 2:15 to 4:15 o'clock each week, at 202 Peachtree and Baker streets. Mrs. Louise Lyerly will be hostess. All interested may have free use of the library.

State P.-T. A. Board Meets Wednesday

The state P.-T. A. executive board meets Wednesday, January 30, at 10:30 o'clock at the Henry Grady hotel. Mrs. Joe Dan Miller, of Gainesville, state president, will preside.

Hoke Smith Junior Hi P.-T. A. Hears Judge Watkins

The Hoke Smith Junior High School P.-T. A. met Thursday afternoon in the new auditorium of the school. Judge Garland B. Watkins, of the juvenile court, spoke on "The Young Boys and Girls of Atlanta and Fulton County." He spoke of the unfortunate conditions of the children from 11 years of age to 15 and stated that the most serious crimes of today were committed by boys and girls of the 'teen age to 23 years.

The candy pulling which had been slated for a recent date has been postponed till some time in February. Mr. Kimberley, the principal, stated that the absentees had greatly decreased in number since the holidays, and urged the parents to keep their children in school every day possible in order to eliminate as many failures as possible. He announced that hot lunches are being served daily in the cafeteria.

The attendance was splendid and the attendance banners were received by 9-A-1, Miss McLendon's class; 8-B-3, Miss Meyer's class and by 7-A-1, Miss Hinton's class. The attendance banners were dispinyed and will be kept by grades having the most mothers in attendance at the meeting from one meeting till the next.

Tech High P.-T. A. Meets.

The Tech High P.-T. A. featured their January meeting as "Members' Night" Wednesday in the chamber of commerce. Mrs. C. F. von Herrmann gave an interesting talk on thrift. She also gave a most useful formula for budgeting the house money. The Tech High band gave several selections. Harry Kromer, who went to Pasadena for the Rose Bowl game, gave in interesting detail an account of his entire trip. The resignation of Mrs. Leo Sudderth was read and accepted with regret. Mrs. J. P. Morgan was elected to fill the chair for the remainder of the school year. Mrs. J. P. Davis won the P.-T. A. pin in the drawing.

Ormewood P.-T. A. Meets With Club.

The Ormewood Park Improvement club and Parent-Teacher association, Mrs. T. M. Shaft, president, held a joint meeting in the auditorium of the Annie E. West school Thursday evening with John L. Hudson, president of the club, in the chair.

The following officers and committee chairmen for the club were named for 1929: President, John L. Hudson; vice president, W. A. Hansell; secretary, Miss Nona Townley; treasurer, E. P. Beale.

Chairman of street committee, J. E. Womac; sewers, E. M. Barton; schools, Mrs. T. M. Shaft; sanitary, Mrs. E. M. Barton; electric lights, W. C. Guy; transportation, J. T. Webb; publicity, Mrs. L. V. Kennerly; membership, H. B. Andrews; program, W. A. Hansell.

Interesting talks were made by H. Reid Hunter, assistant superintendent of schools; George B. Lyle, councilman of eleventh ward; Mrs. Paul Webb, of board of education, and W. A. Hansell, chairman of program committee, who promised an interesting program for each meeting.

Decatur Jr. High P.-T. A. Hears Talk By Mrs. Askew

The January meeting of Decatur Junior High school P.-T. A. was held in the school auditorium Wednesday afternoon. The president, Mrs. Mark White, presided. Mrs. White introduced Mrs. Lewis Barrett, of Atlanta, who, accompanied by Mrs. Madge Lee, sang Frank L. Stanton's "Miss Mary," and "I Wanta Be a Janitor's Child."

Mrs. Byron Mathews, of the Atlanta council, spoke of the P.-T. A. food book and presented a strong appeal for purchasers, explaining the conditions under which it was published and the need for the funds therefrom.

The reports from the various committees were interesting, indicating that the work of the association is going forward. The yard committee reported having painted the yard seats; the athletic committee told of the purchase of additional athletic equipment; the membership committee reported that the membership had gone over the 500 mark, and the motion picture chairman called attention to the naming of Mrs. Dana Burgess as Monday matinee chairman for the Decatur better films committee, and requested that children be encouraged to attend the Monday matinees in preference to those of other days of the week (the Monday pictures being especially selected for the younger boys and girls.)

The program chairman, Mrs. W. J. Thebaut introduced Mrs. S. H. Askew, a teacher in North Avenue Presbyterian school, a widely-known specialist and instructor in work with Sunday school juniors, and a beloved Decatur woman, who spoke on "Making Home Memories." She spoke of the value of home environment in the development of character, and offered striking illustrations and quotations as evidence of the truth of her claims.

Mrs. Thebaut announced that "founders day" will be observed in February, when an appropriate program will be given. Mrs. McLennan extended an invitation for new members for the junior high ladies' basketball team, and requested attendance at the game on Saturday night, to be played by the ladies of the junior and senior highs. The attendance banner was won by 9 S. 30.

Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. Sponsors Benefie Bridge.

Mrs. Guy Hudson entertained with a benefit bridge at her home Wednesday in Decatur for the benefit of the Ponce de Leon P.-T. A.

There were nine tables, and the high score prize was won by Mrs. C. W. Penick, this being a box of stationery donated by Mrs. W. S. Elkin for the occasion, and an olive dish and fork, the consolation gift of Mrs. Hudson, was presented to Mrs. G. B. Wright.

This was the first of a series of parties to be given by Ponce de Leon P.-T. A. to raise funds with which to pay a Victrola indebtedness, the influenza epidemic having prevented the giving of the one which was scheduled for December at the home of Mrs. Elkin.

Benteen P.-T. A. Holds Meeting.

Benteen P.-T. A. met at the school building Tuesday with the president, Mrs. C. Hamilton, presiding.

Encouraging reports were made by the chairman, especially the pledges of $12 by each group of grade mothers. The principal, Miss Lydia W. Guice, will give a candy pulling for the benefit of this fund. Mrs. Rosshirt responded splendidly, assisted by Mrs. J. E. Roberts in the child's welfare work, supplying all their needs.

A talk was given by Miss Lydia W. Guice on pre-school work. Several mothers spoke interestingly in favor of the pre-school circle. Mrs. P. C. Randall and Mrs. J. F. Duggan were elected as chairmen for this work.

The third and fourth grades were awarded the prize for the greatest number of mothers by percentages present.

Williams Pre-School Circle Studies Health.

The Pre-school circle of Williams Street school met at the home of Mrs. J. B. Lacy recently. The subject of "Health" was studied by the class. Many interesting phases along that line were discussed. The lesson was outlined and conducted by the chairman, Mrs. J. R. Denton. After the lesson was fully discussed and studied Mrs. Lacy and Mrs. C. O. Fountain served refreshments. Eight members were present.

Peeples St. P.-T. A. Is Addressed By Emory Dean

The Peeples Street P.-T. A. met Tuesday afternoon in the school auditorium with Mrs. T. J. Moore presiding. Dean G. C. White, of Emory university gave a talk on child psychology and the problems of children. He stressed the need of studying the normal child as well as the subnormal one, also of the importance of early training.

Mrs. William Modena, accompanied at the piano by Mrs. Widmeyer, gave several vocal selections. The promotion class of the school also entertained with songs.

Miss Ruby Jones, principal, asked that all teeth certificates be brought in. Mrs. M. Herzberg, safety chairman, gave the number of all different kinds of accidents happening in Atlanta in 1928. Mrs. M. A. Richardson, membership chairman, presented checks to Miss Hamilton and Miss Marchman as rewards for their rooms securing the most members during the membership drive.

Mrs. S. R. Wilson, finance chairman, announced the banquet to be given the promotion class Friday, February 1, at 2 o'clock at the school.

The P.-T. A. food book, given at each meeting, was won by Mrs. G. W. Scott.

Thanks and appreciation were extended to Mrs. L. A. Hollingsworth for her faithful service to the association for seventeen years. During this time she has filled almost every office of the association.

The count of parents gave the prizes to Miss Murray's and Miss Grant's rooms.

P.-T. A. Meetings

The Commercial High School P.-T. A. meets Wednesday, January 20, at 2:30 o'clock in the auditorium.

The executive board of Emory P.-T. A. meets Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. A. E. Foster, 1179 Oakdale road.

The English Avenue P.-T. A. meets Friday afternoon, February 1, in the school auditorium.

First Presbyterian Sunday School P.-T. A. meets Monday, January 28, at 3 p. m. in the Sunday school room for the mothers and children in the intermediate departments through the senior department. Mrs. Askew will speak. Mrs. E. S. Papy, the president, urges a large attendance.

Mrs. J. P. Morgan, who was recently elected to fill the vacancy made by Mrs. Leo Sudderth, president of Tech High P.-T. A.' calls a special meeting of the executive board for Tuesday, January 29, at 12 o'clock in room 200 at the school.

The executive board of the William A. Bass Junior High P.-T. A. meets in the library at the school Wednesday morning, January 30, at 10 o'clock.

Newnan Family Gives State 'U' Gift of $10,000

Athens, Ga., January 26.—(AP)—Chancellor Charles M. Snelling, of the University of Georgia, announced here Saturday the gift to the university of a $10,000 scholarship fund by Mrs. Berryman T. Thompson and Mrs. Lucile Thompson Jones, wife and daughter of the late B. T. Thompson, of Newnan, Ga.

According to the terms of the gift the accrued interest from the sum is to constitute a scholarship fund which will be available to worthy boys and girls from Coweta county, who wish to enter the University of Georgia.

The fund will bear the name of Mr. Thompson, who graduated from the university with the bachelor of arts degree in 1872, and was in college with the late chancellor emeritus, David C. Barrow.

MERCER STUDENT PLAYERS LISTED FOR PERRY, GA.

Macon, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The Mercer players will open their 1929 season in Perry on Thursday, January 31, it was announced today by Archie Grinalds, of Macon, president of the players. They will play at Bessie Tift college, in Forsyth, on February 2. Arrangements probably will be made for a performance somewhere on February 1, Mr. Grinalds said.

Mr. Grinalds takes the leading male role, while Coleman Clarke, of Atlanta, and Harold Raymond, of Fort Myers, Fla., execute the leading female impersonations. Other members of the cast are:

Hugh Kelly, of Thomaston; Bill Wright, Johnston, S. C.; Gilbert Cone, Statesboro; George Cain, Savannah; Addis McGlon, Macon; George Billinghurst, LaGrange, and George Moseley, Tifton. J. C. Shelburne, registrar of Mercer, is director of the players, and John G. Harrison, Jr., of Macon, is technical director. Fred Shaw, of Tifton, is business manager.

The players will present "Square Crooks," a three-act mystery comedy by John P. Judge. Rehearsals have been held nightly for several weeks and members of the cast have been busy at work making and painting scenery under the direction of professional actors and scenic artists.

National P.-T. A. Convention Meets in Washington May 5-11

The National Congress of Parents and Teachers will meet in Washington, D. C., May 5-11 with headquarters at the Washington hotel. The theme of the convention will be "Worthy Home Membership." Round table conferences on public welfare, education, publications, city councils, state bulletins, summer round-up, parent education and association programs will feature the convention sessions. Section meetings on pre-school, high school and college associations will be held during the convention. Classes giving instructive courses in publicity and rural life will be held between the business sessions of the convention.

At the vesper service, which will be held at the Arlington Amphitheater, the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, bishop of Washington diocese will make an address. Another interesting event in connection with the convention will be the pilgrimage to Mount Vernon where an impressive tree planting exercise will take place. At the founders' day dinner addresses will be made by the following distinguished Americans: Hon. William Cooper, U. S. commissioner of education; Dr. Jesse H. Newlon, director Lincoln school, Columbia university, New York; "Education for Worthy Home Membership," Mrs. S. M. N. Marrs, president N. C. P. T.; "Come Into the Garden," Mrs. Helen Field Fischer, landscape designer, Shenandoah, Iowa; "Engineering the Home," Mrs. Lillian Gilbreth, consulting engineer, Montclair, N. J.; "Problems of Modern Youth," Dr. Ernest R. Groves, professor of sociology, University of North Carolina.

Other interesting and delightful features attendant upon the convention will be child welfare and publicity dinners; thrift, rural life and humane education luncheons. Sightseeing trips will form a delightful feature of the social program.

The convention will be attended by several hundred delegates representing parent-teacher associations throughout the country.

J. P. Barron Speaks At Meeting Of S. M. Inman P.-T. A.

J. P. Barron, president of the Teachers' association, was the principle speaker at the January meeting of S. M. Inman P.-T. A. He spoke of the coming convention of the National Educational association. He said the Atlanta association was counting on the P.-T. A. to do their share towards entertaining the 15,000 or 20,000 delegates who were expected to attend the convention. Mrs. Byron Mathews, of the fifth district, gave an interesting sketch of the history and contents of the P.-T. A. health and cook book. She urged the members to buy the book and recommend it to their friends.

Mrs. L. H. Williams, citizenship chairman, announced that prizes would be given to the grade chairman securing the largest number of mothers to register for the coming election. Interesting reports were made by the chairman of the various committees.

All recommendations presented by the executive board were read and accepted by the association.

Mrs. Albright also stressed the importance of the children crossing only at the corner where the officer is stationed. She begged the mothers to cooperate with her in this matter for the safety of the children.

Bridal Couple To Be Honored At Brookhaven Club

Mr. and Mrs. William Wardlaw will entertain Monday evening, January 28, at the Brookhaven Country club, honoring their son and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. William Wardlaw, Jr., whose marriage was a social event of December 14, and who have been on their honeymoon, and who have returned to Atlanta for a short visit en route to Baltimore, Md., where they will make their future home. The guests will include the members of the family and a group of the young married contingent. Many other affairs are being planned in compliment to Mr. and Mrs. Wardlaw, this lovely bride having been before her marriage Miss Ednabelle Raine, popular belle of Atlanta society.

Mrs. Ransom Wright will entertain at an informal luncheon Wednesday, January 30, at the Piedmont Driving club, in compliment to Mrs. Wardlaw, Jr. Covers will be laid for six friends of the honor guests.

Miss Clara Coles' dinner, given at the Biltmore for Mr. and Mrs. Wardlaw, is planned for Wednesday evening, and Mrs. Joseph S. Raine, Jr., gives a small party for her sister, Mrs. Wardlaw, Thursday, January 31.

STATE FAIR HEADS TO CONVENE AT MILLEDGEVILLE

Milledgeville, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—The annual meeting of the Association of Georgia Fairs will be held in Macon during the week commencing February 11, exact date to be determined at a meeting of the board of directors to be held within the next few days. The sessions usually last two to three days.

The Association of Georgia Fairs is composed of practically every fair association in the state and all secretaries attend. Various other officials of the various fairs usually attend also, and at the meeting in Columbus last year it was decided to let properly endorsed members of the carnival or amusement field to become associate members of the organization.

It is planned to make this year's meeting the largest in the history of the organization. Bad crop conditions last year handicapped some of the fairs and the various officials are uniting together stronger than ever this year to secure state aid.

Charles Wilkins, of Savannah, is president of the association, C. B. McCullar, of Milledgeville, vice president and E. Ross Jordan, of Macon, secretary-treasurer. Mr. Jordan will be in charge of arrangements for the Macon meeting.

Boys' Hi P.-T. A. Observes Students' Night at Meeting

One of the largest crowds in the history of the Boys' High P.-T. A. attended the meeting of the Parent-Teacher association in the Military hall Wednesday evening. The occasion was observed as students' night and about 75 of the student body attended the meeting. A short business session was presided over by Mrs. Henry Bauer. Splendid reports were given by the various chairmen, showing all committees actively at work.

Two recommendations from the executive board were accepted. First, that the class bringing the largest number of books for library be rewarded. Second, that the P.-T. A. contribute $2.50 to the welfare chairman of the Red Cross for repairing shoes for needy children.

Short talks were made by H. O. Smith, principal of the school; George Powell, president of the board of education, and Mrs. Julia O'Keefe Nelson, member of the board of education. The program was given by the Orchestra and Dramatic club of the Boys' High school.

The splendid playing of a number of selections by the orchestra under the leadership of M. Martin showed much talent and ability among the boys.

Following the orchestra's part of the program, the Dramatic club presented Booth Tarkington's one-act play, entitled "Station YYYY." The play was under the supervision of Mr. Davis and Mr. Wright.

Kirkwood P.-T. A. Features Health Program

The Kirkwood P.-T. A. met Tuesday in the school auditorium with several hundred mothers present.

There was an interesting program on "Health," with Miss Lillian Alexander, director of public nursing, as speaker. She gave a number of helpful hints in caring for the sick.

Mrs. Feld, the school nurse, made a report on examinations of the school children and said that while the children stood well up to the standard, they should be urged to rest in the afternoons.

Miss G. Brenner, principal, asked the cooperation of the parents in making the year 1929 the best yet, at Kirkwood.

Announcements regarding children entering school in February were made. A piano solo by Miss Talmadge was enjoyed also a reading by Mrs. Natalie Buchanan. The grade prizes for January were won by Miss Pearl Moore low 4-1 and Mrs. Long, low 2-1.

Bolton P.-T. A. Reports Meeting.

The Bolton P.-T. A. met at the school Friday. In the absence of the president, Mrs. Paul McDonald, Mrs. H. L. Wilson presided.

The fourth grade, under the direction of Miss Hortense Hughes, gave a thrift program. Rev. Thompson, pastor of the Collin's Memorial church, gave an address on "Recreation for Young People Today."

The second grade won the dollar for having the largest number of mothers present, and the seventh won the one for having the largest per cent present.

Joe Brown Jr. High P.-T. A. Hears Talk By Football Coach

The January meeting of the Joe Brown Junior High P.-T. A. was held Monday evening in the auditorium of the J. C. Harris school. The Joe Brown auditorium is not yet completed, and as the music room will no longer accommodate the increased attendance, it was necessary to seek a more spacious meeting place.

Professor A. G. Martin, principal of the school, gave a splendid report from the cafeteria committee.

Miss Mary Gray, faculty representative of the executive committee, told of the plans and introduced the four captains of the soap wrapper contest.

The recreation committee offered a prize for the best back yard playground. It was stressed that this did not necessarily mean the most expensively equipped playground but the most practical and the most used.

Seven B4, Mrs. E. F. Lowe's class, got the prize for the most signed slips. Mrs. J. A. Johnon won the P.-T. A. cook book, and Mr. H. J. Middlebrooks drew the potted plant presented at each meeting by Mrs. Stallings.

Mrs. J. T. Hooper, chairman of the program committee, turned the meeting over to Mrs. R. G. Lyon, chairman of the recreation committee. Once each year, the recreation committee puts on a program, showing some of the activities of the school.

The Joe Brown orchestra gave a selection, "Opera Gems." Miss Frances Ozburn favored the audience with "The Gipsy Dance." Miss Josephine Johnston rendered a piano solo, "Hungarian," by McDowell. Miss Kathleen Hargrove, director of physical education for the girls, had her pupils entertain the audience with many splendid stunts. The boys' glee club, under the direction of Professor F. E. Hankinson, also gave a number.

Coach W. A. Alexander, of Georgia Tech, was the speaker for the evening. His introduction was greeted with a burst of applause, a tribute to his popularity. His address was both amusing and instructive.

Perkerson P.-T .A. Holds Meeting.

The Perkerson P.-T. A. met recently. The sixth grade furnished an interesting program on "Safety First." On resignation of Mrs. Rooke, a committee with Mrs. Jere Wells, chairman, was appointed to secure a manager for the lunch room. Since this meeting, Mrs. Dan Cain was selected by this committee, her work to begin at once. The treasurer was instructed to direct funds sufficient to purchase three basket balls. Miss Cash reported 108 books added to the school library during the past year. The seventh grade received the dollar for largest attendance.

Un Mot Ici, Est Bien

Mrs. J. J. Harris, Editor Georgia Division, U. D. C.

The state editor, returning to her desk after a month's serious illness, wishes to thank all whose kind letters and cards were a solace to her during the period of her inactivity. Our efficient state president, Mrs. Trox Bankston, was most considerate in arranging a most interesting page. To her also we tender our heart-felt thanks. It is a pleasure to resume work and watch the beauties of the noble enterprise thrive and develop under the management of the efficient and noble women who strive to make remembrance of the cause of the confederacy a pact of honor.

Mrs. Rosa McMaster, Waynesboro, chairman of the Mrs. Norman V. Randolph relief fund for needy women, sends an earnest plea which appears today. We should all heed this S. O. S. call as the wives of our confederate heroes should rank next in our regard. Mrs. W. C. Martin, of Dalton, chairman of Georgia day and flags in schools, issues a fine program. It will be of great benefit to chapters for their Georgia day exercises. It shows much time and thought expended.

It was a great disappointment to be deprived of the privilege of being present on the occasion of the brilliant tea given by the Atlanta chapter, the Rebecca Felton, and the Fulton chapter, U. D. C., honoring Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, first vice president-general, and Mrs. Trox Bankston, division president. All accounts prove it to be one of the most beautiful functions in Atlanta's bright galaxy of social events.

We are happy to report that Mrs. H. M. Franklin, chairman of historical programs, U. D. C., and past state regent, D. A. R., is recovering from her recent critical illness. Mrs. Franklin is one of the most brilliant women in the roster of the Georgia division and her friends will learn of her convalescence with the keenest pleasure.

Today the new list of chapter presidents is published. This is done owing to delay in completion of year books. Mrs. Powell Cotter, our efficient past recording secretary, regrets this delay, and takes this extra trouble for the benefit of the division.

On Wednesday, January 30, the executive board will meet in Athens. A beautiful luncheon will be tendered the visiting officers and chairmen. Many constructive plans will be outlined. All are looking forward to the reunion of old friends, and the name of Athens is inspirational.

Rebecca Felton U. D. C. Indorses Mrs. Harris.

At the January meeting the Rebecca Felton chapter, U. D. C., indorsed Mrs. J. J. Harris, of Sandersville, for state president, Georgia division, U. D. C.

U. D. C. Executive Board Plans Action on Several Resolutions

The meeting of the executive board of the Georgia division U. D. C. to be held in Athens next Wednesday, January 30, will be of unusual interest and importance and the president urges every member to attend. Because of the following resolutions adopted by the convention, in Atlanta, important action must be taken at this time in regard to the campaign to raise funds for building the Mildred Rutherford Historical museum. In compliance with resolution No. 2 the following advisory committee will submit plans to the executive board. This committee held two meetings in Atlanta last week.

The members of the advisory committee are Mesdames Lamar Lipscomb, A. McD. Wilson, T. W. Reed, J. L. Sexton, W. Trox Bankston and Miss Rosa Woodberry.

Resolution No. 1. Be it resolved, That the library-museum building to be erected by the Georgia division of the United Daughters of the Confederacy be called the Mildred Rutherford Historical museum in honor of our illustrous and beloved leader who recently passed to her reward.

That the building be erected on the campus of the University of Georgia, whose sons in every field upheld the cause of the Confederacy and whose interest in preserving the history and traditions of the south will never be lessened in the coming years.

That the attention of Miss Rutherford's many friends be called to the opportunity thus presented them to make memorial gifts to the fund with which this building is to be erected, and that a record of all such gifts to be kept and the names of all donors be inscribed in a specially prepared book. (Signed) MRS. THOMAS W. REED.

Resolution adopted.

Resolution No. 2. Resolved that a committee, consisting of the president of the Georgia division, as chairman, and four members to be named by her, be directed to make a study of the type of building to be erected as the Mildred Rutherford Historical museum building, to secure suggested plans for such building, together with approximate cost thereof, and to make report of their work to the next meeting of the executive board, in order that that body may have necessary information for launching the campaign to raise the necessary funds for the erection of this memorial building.

(Signed) MRS. THOMAS W. REED.

Resolution adopted.

Resolution No. 3. Whereas Miss Mildred Rutherford, historian of Georgia division, U. D. C., serving long and faithfully, giving her time to the cause of the Confederacy, therefore be it resolved that the Georgia division make some move to erect a suitable memorial for Miss Rutherford. Preferably along some historical or educational lines. If each chapter will give one or two dollars each the memorial fund can be raised.

(Signed) The Last Cabinet Chapter, Washington, Ga.

Resolution adopted (as in line with resolution No. 1.)

Resolution No. 4. Presented by the Atlanta chapter, U. D. C.:

Whereas, in the providence of God, there has lately fallen upon all our southland the shadow of sore bereavement and we shall mourn for many a day to come the passing of our much beloved historian-general, Mildred Lewis Rutherford, one of the most glorious of all the elect-spirits that we have known and loved and cherished since our society was founded—one who was ever the champion of a cause whose loss she refused to concede—one whose pen unwearied in the quest of truth, whose mind was a storehouse of information bearing on all things southern, whose heart was a fountain of loyalty, crystal pure and lovingly warm to the heroic memories of the old south, its lofty ideals and whole inspiration; and,

Whereas, her whole life was spent in searching the archives of history and in writing volume upon volume to vindicate those principles for which Lee fought, and for which his brave army bled and suffered, even unto death, was spent, too, in keeping bright the rolls of fame, and fragrant at the fireside every loved and cherished name, whether its wearer was a hero at the battle's front or a heroine who served her country in those obscure but not less trying posts of honor, the hospital and the home; and,

Whereas, it behooves us to keep ever in mind the patriotic claims of such a life upon our eternal remembrance, that, in an age of maturity of graft and gold, its lesson may not go unheeded, nor its guiding stars be lost;

Therefore, be it resolved, by the Atlanta chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, that a day be set apart in our year's calendar to be known as "Millie Rutherford Day," to be observed with patriotic exercises appropriate thereto, and to coordinate in dignity with other days, which are honored with the like consecration; and

Be it further resolved, That both state and national societies be memorialized by this chapter to take similar action in the premises, to the end that throughout the wide borders of our organization the memory of this golden-hearted and true-minded daughter of the south may be worthily honored and perpetuated.

(Signed)

Mrs. D. F. Stevens, President Atlanta chapter.

Mrs. A. McD. Wilson, president-general Confederate Southern Memorial association.

Mrs. John Marshall Slaton.

Mrs. Lucian Lamar Knight, chairman of Confederate events, Atlanta chapter.

Mrs. John A. Perdue, chairman.

Mrs. Oscar McKenzie, chairman of resolutions, moved the adoption of this resolution, with the date July 16, Miss Rutherford's birthday, as the day to be memorialized. Motion seconded by Mrs. Wilson. Discussion. Resolution, with July 16 as Memorial day to Miss Rutherford adopted.

Georgia Day Program Issued By Chairman

Mrs. W. C. Martin, of Dalton, chairman of Georgia day for the Georgia division, U. D. C., issues the following program to be used by chapters in observance of Georgia day, February 12:

Song, There's No State Like Georgia; Georgia acrostic; slogan, It's Great to Be a Georgian; song, The Red Old Hills of Georgia; reading, Song of the Chattahoochee; song, Cherokee Rose; reading, This Ole Worl' 'Ye're Livin' In, Stanton; b, Rain Song, Loveman; Georgia facts (geographical); Georgia facts (historical); song, Georgia Land.

LaGrange College News of Interest.

LaGrange, Ga., January 26.—Sunday evening several members of the Y. W. C. M. had charge of the program of the senior Epworth league of Saint John Methodist church, LaGrange. Miss Mae Ratcliff, of Lakeland, gave a reading; Miss Kate Smithwick, of Orange, and Miss Ruth Hill, of Manchester, sang, "Somebody Did a Golden Deed;" Miss Sara Barrett, of Augusta, gave a talk on "Little Things;" and Miss Nell Cole, of East Point, played a violin solo, "Flower Song."

Miss Elizabeth Moss, of Waleska, has been elected a new member and exchange editor of the Quill Drivers' club, which has charge of the publication of the monthly college paper, "The Scroll." Miss Moss is a junior and has had experience along this line as editor-in-chief of The Hilltonian at Rhinehart college.

Georgia Girl Like Mother

"Out of sight, out of mind" is a true saying. The fact that we can't see what's happening inside our children's bodies is the reason so many of us allow them to go on suffering from constipation until they are full of the poisons from decaying waste and they're bilious, headachy, sallow and weak, with no appetite or energy. Watch your baby or child, Mother, and at the first sign of coated tongue, bad breath or feverishness, give him a little California Fig Syrup. This rich, fruity product gently expels all the souring waste; gives tone and strength to the stomach and bowels, so they continue to act normally; stimulates the circulation; tones and nourishes the entire system.

Its sales record of over four million bottles a year and the enthusiastic praise of women everywhere prove mothers depend on it today as they have for more than fifty years. A Georgia mother, Mrs. W. A. Wallace, 516 Ashby St., S. W., Atlanta, says: "I used to take California Fig Syrup, so when my little girl began to suffer with constipation I started her on it. It stopped her trouble quickly and made her look ever so much better. I have used it with her since for every little upset spell. It keeps her well and strong."

See that the Fig Syrup you buy bears the name "California," so you won't be imposed on by imitators.—(adv.)

Report of U. D. C. Meetings Feature Celebration of Lee's Birthday

The anniversary of Robert E. Lee and Stone Wall Jackson was observed by the Blakely chapter, U. D. C., with an appropriate program at the high school auditorium. The stage was decorated with confederate flags and bunting, and had as the central feature a large flag draped picture of Lee. Southern melodies were rendered by the student body, accompanied by the high school orchestra, with Miss Annie V. Womack at the piano.

After scripture reading by Superintendent Mangham and prayer by Rev. W. H. Ketchum, of the M. E. church, an address was made by Rev. Mr. Ketchum, which, with a reading, "The Sword of Lee," by Amelia Hobbs, and song, "Annie Laurie," by Mrs. J. S. Hartsfield, comprised the program. The singing of "Dixie" by the school concluded the exercises. Mrs. W. R. Stewart is president of the Blakely chapter.

Douglas Chapter.

The Douglas chapter, U. D. C., celebrated the birthday of Robert E. Lee with exercises at the Methodist church Sunday morning. A demonstration was evinced by the large attendance to hear T. S. Stanford, pastor of the church. Mr. Stanford stressed the high Christian character of this great chieftain, the renowned leader of the confederacy—holding up his life as an example to emulate. Special music by the choir was rendered. "The Conquered Banner" was read and the flag unfurled during the impressive services.

James Boynton Chapter.

Boynton chapter, U. D. C., met Tuesday at the Memorial clubhouse with Mrs. Mable Jenkins Cole, Mrs. W. A. Nipper and Mrs. Richard Mitchell acting as hostesses. Mrs. Cole, the president, presided. During the business session Mrs. Richard Mitchell, acting secretary, called the roll. Mrs. Mobley Johnson, treasurer, gave the financial report. Mrs. Harry Johnson gave an interesting account of the packing and disposing of the empty stocking baskets Christmas eve. The chapter sold $30.35 worth of seals for the Red Cross chapter. It was voted unanimously to indorse Mrs. J. J. Harris for state president. Mrs. Harry Johnson stated that she would seek to have the schools declare a holiday on Georgia day. Mrs. Homer Gossett, chairman of the veteran committee, reported that all veterans had been remembered with Christmas cards. Mrs. J. F. Whatley, Mrs. J. W. Slade, Mrs. J. G. Marbry, Jr., and Mrs. Francis Forster, of Greensboro, N. C., were taken in as new members of the chapter. Mrs. J. A. Drewry was in charge of the program on Robert E. Lee. Mrs. Kenan White sang, accompanied by Miss Thelma Brisendone. Mrs. Harry Johnson and Mrs. J. C. Edwards gave papers on Lee, and Mrs. Lamar Walker sang a solo, also accompanied by Miss Brisendine.

Covington Chapter.

The Covington chapter, U. D. C., met at the library Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. J. C. Upshaw, president, in the chair. Mrs. C. W. Dyal, secretary, read the minutes of the last meeting and reports were made by the officers and various chairmen of committees. Mrs. R. M. Mobley reported that flag day will be observed Saturday, February 9, instead of the regular day, February 12.

Mrs. A. A. Aenchbacher was elected reporter to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mrs. R. Fields Taylor, who leaves January 28 for Seneca, S. C., where she and the family will join Mr. Taylor in their new home. A vote of thanks was given Mrs. Taylor for her loyal and efficient service as reported and chairman of publicity for the Covington chapter, U. D. C.

The subject for essay contest this year is "Benjamin H. Hill." Three prizes of $2.50 in gold will be given, one for the best essay from the Covington Senior High school, one to the Covington Junior High school, and one for all other schools in the county. A paper on Robert E. Lee, written by Mrs. Earl M. Smith, was read by Mrs. E. B. Nelson, in the absence of Mrs. Smith. A reading, "Sword of Robert E. Lee," was given by Miss Caroline Osborn. Mrs. W. Trox Bankston, president Georgia division, U. D. C., gave an interesting talk outlining the work for the year.

Martha McLeod Chapter.

The Martha McLeod chapter, U. D. C., of Abbeville, met recently at the city hall, with Mesdames W. M. Syms and J. W. Dougherty as hostesses. The president, Mrs. G. F. McLeod, appointed a committee to prepare a program in observance of Robert E. Lee's and Stonewall Jackson's birthday at the school auditorium Friday afternoon, January 18. Mrs. Howard Comer, of Cordele, was the chapter's first new member for the year 1929. Hostesses and program committees for 1929 were read by the secretary and after business session Mesdames Epp Reid and W. H. McDaniel gave the following program: Poem, Robert E. Lee, Mrs. E. P. Dunaway; song, Dixie, by chapter; poem, '62, by Miss Julia Bass; harmonica duet, Mrs. Amanda Bowen and Mrs. W. H. McDaniel, accompanied by Mrs. C. C. Fulghum.

Augusta Chapter.

Chapter Augusta, U. D. C., Mrs. W. W. Battey, president, celebrated the birthday of Robert E. Lee Monday with an appropriate program. The exercises were attended by a large audience, the patriotic societies of Augusta being well represented and a number of the old veterans present. Mrs. W. W. Battey introduced those taking part in the program. Rev. W. G. Crawley, of St. James Methodist church, opened the exercises with prayer. Miss Koontz and Miss Helen Wolfe sang a group of songs, accompanied by Mrs. Bright McConnell. Miss Elizabeth McLeod read "The Stately Soldier." Robert Coffin introduced the orator with an original bit of verse.

Mr. Kennedy paid eloquent tribute to the life and achievements of the south's great chieftain. Mrs. Battey, in closing the program, gave a talk in which she expressed her pleasure in having the old veterans present, with special mention of Col. John W. Clark.

Sarah Hornady Chapter.

Four generations were represented by the hostesses to the first meeting of the Sarah E. Hornady chapter, U. D. C., Ellairville. Mrs. W. Dykes, her daughter; Mrs. J. H. Holloway, her granddaughter; Mrs. W. M. Perry, her great-granddaughter; little Miss Mary Frances Perry receiving the members at the home of Mrs. Holloway. The president, Mrs. J. R. Jordan, brought a new year greeting in the outline of enlarged activities in different departments. The report of other officers were also most encouraging. Several new members were added, and dues for the year paid. Baskets of fruit and confectioneries were sent to each widow of a Confederate veteran and cards of Christmas greeting to each of the old soldiers. One of the outstanding matters of interest reported was the purchase of a set of the new American history of special value to the U. D. C. as a true and just record of the south's part in the building of the nation. Mrs. J. J. Harris was unanimously endorsed for president of the Georgia division.

Plans were made for the observance of the birthday anniversaries of Lee, Jackson, Maury, and a chapter birthday party, which dates January 23. The celebration took place at the home of the president to which several of the state officers were invited. Mesdames S. C. Collins, C. C. Wall and J. R. Wall served as a committee of arrangements, Mesdames H. J. Williams, A. Allen and C. R. McCrory provided features of entertainment.

In a short selection Mrs. G. P. DeWolf presented Lee as the teacher, standing always for peace with honor. Mrs. McCrory gave interesting facts of Belle Boyd, the noted Confederate spy, and Mrs. H. J. Williams reviewed chapter history from old records.

ANDREWS DRIVE HOUSE SHOWPLACE OF ATLANTA

Is Habitat of True Artist

BY RALPH T. JONES.

The creation of beauty is one of many definitions of art.

The creation of beauty with utility, is the greatest contribution that a man or woman can make with their hands to the world in which they live.

When, in the course of daily events, a commentator upon things as they happen comes across someone who is quietly, honestly, sincerely creating utilitarian objects which are yet touched with the beauty that is truest art, it is his duty to pass on the information. Hence this story.

Recently I spent an afternoon at the home of Douglass Wright, young Atlanta artist, on Andrews drive. His home, be it remarked in passing is a most lovely place and worthy as the habitation of a true artist. But that, after all, is personal and not a matter for general public attention.

In that home, however, in the studio where he works and seeks the truly artistic in perfect beauty, he has created some of the most beautiful screens I ever saw.

The screens are long panels of perfect wood—walnut, mahogany, etc. Three or four of the panels are hinged together to form the screen and on them Mr. Wright has drawn his pictures, if you will, his design, if you prefer.

They are lovely things, vibrant with that fleeting beauty of line and form, suggested rather than fully developed, hinted at rather than boldly displayed.

They are, each one of them, individual, the result of the travail of the artist's soul which is in young Wright. They are the sort of things that it is good to have in your home, good to live with them, to let them work their silent alchemy of beauty upon the daily average of your days. They are genuine. And they are the work of a very sincere and genuine young artist.

My attention was first directed to this contribution to art and utility by an Atlantan, Charles F. Naegele, the distinguished artist whose home is just across the line in Cobb county. They are so fully in consonence with Mr. Naegele's most earnest desire—to see Georgia boys and girls learn the inestimable value of beauty in the everyday products of their hands that I can understand his enthusiasm.

And, they are of themselves so lovely that my own enthusiasm must be added to his, for the worth of the creations alone.

Mr. Wright is achieving a very genuine thing in a rare and difficult art and he ought to be recognized by his fellow Atlantans—at least those gifted with the eye which can see beauty—as one of the most important contributors to the really worthwhile products of our hands and hearts and souls of today.

Temple Tours Opens Southern District Office in Atlanta

To better serve its growing clientele in the south, Temple Tours, Inc., a world-wide travel organization with headquarters in Boston, has opened a southern division office in the Healey building here.

The first Temple Tour party went to Europe in 1901 on the S. S. "Westernland," and since that time Temple Tours has had a steady, consistent growth. The volume has grown from one party of 25 members in 1901 to 103 parties, containing 1,625 members, in 1928.

The Church's Real Call.

What are you doing in your church?

When Jesus said: "Follow Me and I will make you fishers of men," He indicated that winning souls is the first and highest mission of every church member. Many persons exhaust their strength on side issues and miss entirely the great outstanding objects that our Lord has set before them. The mechanical and incidental things are apt to engross our attention and divert us from the chief purpose of church membership.

There is a vast difference between watching the drill of the life boat crew, as they launch their boat and go mechanically through the maneuvers required for rescue, when there is no life at stake, and the actions of the same men when before thir eyes a man is drowning and his life depends upon the rapidity with which they reach him. Men are dying through sin, and Christians are the life crew sent for their rescue.

Wins Praise

The quality of her acting as the Private Secretary in "The News Parade" is winning the praise of movie fans everywhere for this lovely newcomer to the screen. At home in New York City, hundreds admire her charming personality and she has fairly "set the style" on Broadway by the way she dresses her hair.

"The simple method I use in caring for my hair," says Miss Shea, "has been of great help to me in my motion picture work, where one's hair must always look its best. It's just the thing for busy girls, too, because it is so easy. Most of the girls I know in stage and picture work are taking it up as soon as they hear about it. All you do is put a little Danderine on your brush every time you use it. It makes your hair so easy to dress and holds it in place wonderfully. It's ideal for girls who are letting their hair grow. It keeps my hair and scalp so clean and comfortable. I don't shampoo half so often, now. It gives my hair such a silky, soft, lustrous appearance that all my friends comment on it."

Danderine removes the oily film from each strand of hair, restores its natural color, gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It cleanses and invigorates the scalp; helps overcome dandruff. It is delightfully fragranced; isn't sticky or oily; doesn't show. Waves, "set" with it, last longer. All drug stores have it, in generous 35c bottles.—(adv.)

Ga. State Teachers' College News.

Athens, Ga., January 26.—Saturday morning at chapel in celebration of Robert E. Lee's birthday, T. L. Mill gave a talk on the life of this great general.

Members of the Voice club, under the supervision of Miss Mabel Manning Wedge, took part in the Rotary club program Wednesday. The program presented by these members was: "A Winter Lullaby," sung by Miss Margaret Elliot, of Augusta; "Sing A-Long" and "Smiles," sung by Misses Sara Boyd, of Winder; Florence Quill, of Sparta; Annie Whitehead, of Manchester, and Annie White, of Macon.

Sunday night Misses Florence Quill and Kitty Sellars took part in the program of the Epworth league services held at the First Methodist church.

Miss Margaret Elliott, of Augusta, sang a solo at the D. A. R. monthly meeting which was held at the home of Miss Annie Crawford.

Mr. Deboise, of the Salvation Army headquarters, in Atlanta, had charge of a program which was given Sunday night at vespers. The program consisted mainly of music which was given by members of the Salvation Army band.

The History club met Monday night. Before the meeting began Miss Ophelia Balkom, the president, appointed a membership committee composed of Misses Mary Robinson, of Carrollton; Mildred Peek, of Richland, and Susie Emma Newsome, of Reynolds. The program consisted of talks of the Kellogg treaty, a discussion which was given at the last meeting. The program consisted of: "The Pact of Paris," Miss Mary Ham, of Montezuma; "British View of the Treaty," Miss Mildred Green, of Macon; "Germany's View," Ruby Cloer, of Blythe; "Russia's View," Cornelia Shell, of Shiloh; "Should the United States Ratify the Peace Pact?" Mildred Peek, of Richland; "United States Signs the Pact," Miss Mary Dillard, of Crawfordsville.

The Chatham County club conducted the chapel exercises Friday morning. The program was as follows: Scripture by Alice Wilkins; History of Chatham County, by Kitty Isdal; Industry and Agriculture, by Kitty Sellars; Education in Chatham County, by Evelyn DeLoache. Music was directed by Miss Marion Woeltjen and Miss Catherine Wall, president of the club, presided.

Christian Council Hears Address By Chest Officer

The Women's council of the First Christian church had as its monthly speaker Frank Miller, executive secretary of the Atlanta Community Chest. Mr. Miller emphasized the constructive side of the work of the agencies of the Community Chest, pointing out that those ministering in preventative and constrictive philanthropies are as important as those which are more of the nature of relief or charity. This message is one of a series of addresses to be brought by representatives of various community organizations to help the women of the church make contacts with these great agencies.

Another pleasant feature of the meeting was a vocal solo by Mrs. C. J. Stiles, one of Atlanta's artists who has recently come to the city from Albany, Ga. The devotional service was led by Mrs. T. F. Hemminger. Mrs. Charles N. Walker presided and Mrs. H. C. Phipps had charge of the program. Group No. 1, with Mrs. L. W. Austin, chairman, served the church night supper in the evening.

Briefly Told

Mrs. W. J. Neel, president Baptist Woman's Missionary union, of Georgia, attended the annual meeting of W. M. U., of Rehoboth association at Houston Factory church, Macon, January 18. Mrs. Noel conducted the conference period.

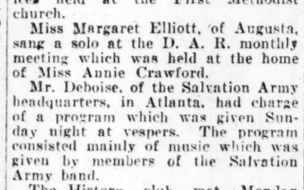

Mrs. E. M. Bailey, mission study chairman, Baptist W. M. U., north central division, announces a mission study institute for teachers, divisional and associational to be held in Atlanta, February 19-21. Mrs. James D. Rhodes, mission study chairman for W. M. U., of Atlanta association, is cooperating with Mrs. Bailey in making plans for the institute. The place of meeting and other plans will be announced later.

Mrs. J. C. Lanier, vice president of Georgia W. M. U., and Georgia trustee for south-wide W. M. U. training school, Louisville, Ky., is again emphasizing the request that Georgia societies remember the training school girls by sending pecans and canned peaches to this splendid institution.

The Woman's Missionary society, of Milledgeville, Washington association, recently elected officers for the year. They are president, Mrs. Floyd Hendrickson; recording secretary, Miss Manie Jones; vice president, Mrs. Walker Blacklell; treasurer, Mrs. L. C. Wall. The executive board met and appointed chairman for the different departments, and from the names on the list, it is very evident that a splendid year's work is ahead. It will be interesting to note that the new president, Mrs. Hendrickson, is a sister of a well-known and much loved missionary, who is located in Shanghai, China.

Methodist Board Postpones Meting.

The Methodist board of city missions has postponed its meeting until Tuesday, February 12, as the Woman's Missionary conference will be in session at Cartersville Tuesday, February 5.

Gordon Street Baptist W. M. S. Board Retires After a Successful Year

The photograph presents the retiring officers of the executive board of the W. M. S. of the Gordon Street Baptist church. They are, left to right, front row: Mrs. H. L. Truett, treasurer; Mrs. W. J. Henry, third vice president; Mrs. J. S. Price, second vice president; Mrs. J. I. Oxford, president; Mrs. C. G. Haynes, first vice president; Mrs. C. C. Ranson, secretary. Second row: Mrs. R. J. Stephens, Mrs. Beulah Ragland, Mrs. L. L. Edmondson, Mrs. T. E. Bridges, publicity chairman; Mesdames Tom Callaway, C. G. Mitchell, C. T. Knight, W. H. Faust, Chappelear, R. C. Adkins, M. O. Kelly, Grady Andrews, R. C. Chapman, J. H. Greer, J. G. Wheeler. Other officers not shown here are: Mrs. W. A. Rhodes, Mrs. W. S. Long, Mrs. Reppard Landers, Mrs. King and E. C. Allen.

The retiring officers of the executive board of the W. M. S. of the Gordon Street Baptist church, who appear in the above group, have closed a satisfactory year under the leadership of Mrs. J. I. Oxford, the retiring president. This society has reached and maintained the standard of excellence set for the mission societies by the Woman's Missionary union of the Southern Baptist convention, all the required auxiliaries being organized, working and contributing their quotas to missions. The total amount given for missions by this organization for the year 1928 was $1,706.42; the apportionment for the year being $1,500. The grand total collections of this society for the year, including building church fun, local work and miscellaneous, was $4,053.72, according to Mrs. Harry Truett, the society's efficient treasurer.

The W. M. S. executive board of Gordon Street Baptist church held its first meeting of the year Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Paul J. Jones on Luvile avenue with a large attendance. Mrs. C. G. Haynes, the newly elected president, presided. Plans for the year's work were outlined and apportionments agreed upon by this very active body of women. After the business session a social hour was enjoyed.

The officers who were duly installed in December and have taken up their duties, are: Mrs. C. G. Haynes, president; Mrs. Paul J. Jones, first vice president; Mrs. F. B. Baldwin, second vice president; Mrs. H. J. Pearson, third vice president; Mrs. T. W. Barnes, secretary; Mrs. C. C. Ranson, assistant secretary; Mrs. H. L. Truitt, treasurer; Mrs. J. G. Wheeler, publicity chairman; Mrs. M. T. Moncrief, chairman scrap book; Mrs. E. H. Gibson, chairman missions; Mrs. T. C. Callaway, chairman stewardship; Mrs. C. T. Knight, chairman personal service; Mrs. J. W. Dalhouse, chairman hospital and orphans' home.

Besides these officers, the following circle chairmen and co-chairmen were elected: Circle No. 1, Mrs. J. S. Price, chairman; Mrs. W. J. Henry, co-chairman. No. 2, Mrs. W. T. McReynolds, chairman; Mrs. J. W. Martin, co-chairman. No. 3, Mrs. W. M. Pyron, chairman; Mrs. J. V. Chastain, co-chairman; No. 4, Mrs. T. J. Daniell, chairman; Mrs. Nelson Crist, co-chairman. No. 5, Mrs. W. C. Denny, chairman; Mrs. A. C. Chappelear, co-chairman. No. 6, Mrs. H. G. Andrews, chairman; Mrs. J. H. Hudson, co-chairman. No. 7, Mrs. Ruby Fain, chairman; Mrs. G. B. Atlanta W. M. U.

The annual meeting of the Baptist Woman's Missionary union of Atlanta association, representing 65 churches, took place at the Second Baptist church Thursday and Friday, January 24-25. The spacious auditorium was crowded to its capacity on both occasions. Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, superintendent, presided. Her address was full of encouragement because of ruby anniversary achievements, and of inspiration for the future. Mrs. J. W. Smith, treasurer of expense fund, reported that the budget for 1928 was fully met and a creditable balance on hand. Mrs. J. W. Awtry, treasurer of Good Will centers, reported $7,036.99 expended for the support of the Kate Pendleson Dawson and Andrew and Francis Stewart centers. Much success of the work is due to the eight district secretaries: Mesdames F. D. Burge, W. L. Allen, L. C. Craig, E. H. Gibson, W. H. S. Dorsey, A. G. Sullivan, S. P. Paschal and W. O. Mitchell.

Mrs. James Kempton, chairman, reported $42,093.57 contributed for personal service. It was voted that Mrs. Kempton's name be recorded in the ruby anniversary book of remembrance, because of the outstanding work done by her in personal service, notably for the Baptist Orphans' home at Hapeville.

The name of Mrs. C. D. Burke, author of the ruby anniversary pageant, was also put in the book of remembrance. The W. M. S. of Grant Park presented a playlet which showed a live missionary society at work. Addresses by Miss Kathleen Mallory, of Birmingham, Ala., corresponding secretary of Woman's Missionary union, of Southern Baptist convention, and by Dr. Aquilla Chamblee, of Forsyth, president of Bessie Tift college, were interesting features of Friday.

One hundred twenty-five thousand seven hundred and thirty-four dollars and 8 cents was contributed and reported by the organization during the ruby anniversary year for the cooperative program, which does not include local aid work; $125,734.08 was contributed and reported by the organization for all objects, except local aid work; $72,852.02 was given for cooperative program.

Mrs. John T. Thompson, chairman, made the report of the nominating committee, and the following officers were unanimously elected: Superintendent, Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones; assistant superintendent, Mrs. Norman Poole; treasurer, Mrs. J. M. Smith; treasurer ,Good Will centers, Mrs. J. W. Awtry; auditor, Mrs. E. D. Crawford; recording secretary, Mrs. T. H. New Field Worker.

Mrs. Paul Etheridge, vice president of the north central division of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia, makes the following announcements:

The election of Miss Ruth Jinks, of south Georgia, as field worker for the north central division of Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of Georgia marks a forward step of progress which was taken during the ruby anniversary year. Miss Jinks was elected to this office last November, but the formal announcement of her acceptance was not made until January 9, when Mrs. Paul Etheridge, vice president of the division held a conference of the associational superintendents at an all-day meeting in Rich's conference room. Miss Jinks will begin her work March 1.

The duties of Miss Jinks will be to organize W. M. U. work in some associations of the division, and to organize and foster woman's missionary societies throughout the division. Plans are made at this conference to hold a missionary study institute in Atlanta, February 19-21, which will be not only for the Atlanta association, but also for the entire division. This institute is planned to be an inspirational mission study movement, which will give impetus to the same endeavor in all the associations of the division.

Those present at the conference were Mrs. W. J. Neel, Cartersville, president of Georgia B. W. M. U., and the corresponding secretary-treasurer, Mrs. A. F. McMahon; Mrs. Paul Etheridge, Atlanta, vice president; Mrs. E. M. Bailey, Acworth, mission study chairman; Mrs. A. F. Johnson, Norcross, secretary. Superintendents present were Mrs. Wilbur M. Jones, Atlanta, Atlanta association; Mrs. M. E. Collins, Acworth, Noonday association; Miss Jewell Morrison, Talking Rock, Jasper association, and Mrs. T. D. McDaniel, Norcross, Lawrenceville association.

Mrs. Mahon Speaks.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the Kirkwood Baptist church meets Monday afternoon, January 28, at 2:30 o'clock at the church. Circle No. 1, Mrs. D. D. Dover leader, will have charge of the program. Mrs. A. F. McMahon, corresponding secretary and treasurer of the State W. M. U., will be the speaker for the afternoon.

Acworth District.

The Acworth district of the Baptist Woman's Missionary Union of the Noonday association will be held at the First Baptist church at Acworth, Tuesday, January 29. Mrs. E. L. Collins, of Acworth, superintendent of the union, will be a prominent figure in the proceedings. Besides the usual annual reports there will be inspirational addresses by the following officers: Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, mission study chairman for north central division, on "Mission Study;" Mrs. Paul Etheridge, of Atlanta, vice president of the division, who will have as her subject "W. M. U. Fundamentals;" Mrs. J. H. Zachry, also of Atlanta, stewardship chairman for the W. M. U. Atlanta association, who will speak on "Stewardship for Young People." Mrs. Zachry will speak at the afternoon meeting, when Mrs. Orlando Awtrey, of Acworth, secretary of young people's work for the district, will preside.

Y. W. A.'s Meet.

The Y. W. A.'s of Atlanta Baptist W. M. U. met Monday evening, January 21, at the beautiful new Inman Park Baptist church. A committee of ladies, with Mrs. W. F. Bird as chairman, served supper. The following program was carried out: Report of the treasurer, Mrs. I. B. Smith, Jr., reading and acceptance of resignation of Miss Marion Smith as president of the City Y. W. A.; acceptance of report of nominating committee, nominating Miss Mary Jones, of Kirkwood, as president, and Miss Hazel Aenchbacher, of Third Baptist, as secretary. Installation of new officers, with candle service, the following officers being installed: Miss Mary Jones, Kirkwood, president; Miss Mary Power, First Baptist, first vice president and program chairman; Miss Louise Spratlin, Druid Hills, second vice president and mission study chairman; Miss Minnie Bird, Inman Park, third vice president and personal service chairman; Miss Annette Brooks, Second Baptist, fourth vice president and social chairman; Miss Hazel Aenchbacher, Third Baptist, recording secretary; Mrs. I. B. Smith, Jr., Capitol avenue, treasurer; Miss Annie Drummond, Western Heights, pianist; Miss Clara Maud Harper, Grant Park, chorister.

A talk on Y. W. A. fundamentals was made by Mrs. Paul S. Etheridge, who challenged the girls to a keener appreciation of Y. W. A. ideals, and to more earnest endeavor to reach higher goals in 1929. An appeal was made by the new president. Miss Jones, for cooperation from all auxiliaries. Report of Y. W. A. work in 1928 and announcements for 1929 were made by Mrs. H. A. Knapp, Y. W. A. city leader. There were 94 present at this meeting.

Announcement was made at the city-wide Y. W. A. Monday, January 21, of a mission study course to be held the week beginning March 4, the place of meeting to be announced later. The faculty will include Mrs. Stewart, who will teach the Y. W. A. methods; Mrs. J. H. Zachry, who will teach a home mission book, and Mrs. E. M. Poteat, who will teach a foreign mission book. It is hoped that all Y. W. A. girls will begin now to plan to attend this mission study course.

Mission Training School.

The mission study training school for the northwest division of Baptist W. M. U. held interesting and instructive classes at the First Baptist church, Rome, Ga., three days of last week. Mrs. A. N. Swain, chairman of mission study, planned the course. Mrs. E. M. Bailey, of Acworth, mission study chairman for the division, was in charge of the young people's classes and had good attendance. Mrs. Paul White, field secretary of missions, taught the adults and had most interesting classes. Africa was the leading subject. Delightful lunches were served by the circles of the W. M. S.

Y. W. A. Party.

A very interesting and enjoyable event of Wednesday night, January 23, was a birthday party, at which the Woman's Missionary society of Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church entertained the Y. W. A.'s, that organization being one year old. A splendid dinner was served, after which an interesting program was enjoyed. The color scheme was green and white, and in the center of the table was a large cake holding one candle. The program consisted of devotional by Mara Sanford, and reports of work done during the past year by the past president, Elizabeth Eubanks. The vice president, Miss Imogene Hudson, gave plans of work for the coming year. Miss Katherine Eberhart gave a toast to the hostesses of the W. M. S. Mrs. J. H. Zachry, president of W. M. S., gave the Y. W. A. two presents, first of which was a ball which, when unwrapped proved to be a world globe, and the other a doll, dressed as the new year, which were significant of the fact that a year was before them, and the interests of the world for which to work.

The following officers for the coming year were elected: President, Miss Hazel Patten; vice president, Imogene Hudson; secretary, Martha Browning; treasurer, Mrs. Clarice Matthews; counselor, Mrs. Nellie Dix Smith.

Barnesville Methodist W. M. S. Holds Meeting.

Woman's Missionary society of the Barnesville Methodist church of Barnesville held its first meeting of the year at the church with Mrs. J. W. Carriker, president, in the chair. Yearly reports of the different departments showed increase along many lines, and marked the society as alive and active. The society has more than $3,000 at interest, looking forward to a Sunday school building. Mrs. O. W. Holland was elected delegate to the annual meeting with Mrs. Z. T. Maxwell as alternate.

The division of the membership with circles for the year was read by the first vice president, Mrs. A. H. English, who named the following as chairmen: Mrs. M. M. Elliott, Mrs. Pierce Owen, Mrs. Abe Boyt. The installation of officers was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Marvin Williams, with beautiful ceremony. This was followed by an inspirational talk by the pastor, which will bear fruit throughout the coming year.

Methodist News Throughout State Centers Cordial Interest

The W. M. S. of Martha Brown Memorial church met Monday afternoon in the educational building of the church. Mrs. C. J. G. Cates, superintendent of study, presiding. The devotional was led by Mrs. John G. Logan, who used for the Bible lesson the story of the "Man Born Blind."

Mrs. J. F. Brown presented the leaflet for the month, "After the Jubilee What?" The "Voice Dramatization" was given by Mrs. R. T. Belk and Mrs. L. W. Medcalf. The special feature of the meeting was the signing of pledge cards. Before the cards were signed a special prayer was offered and a beautiful poem "Your Gifts," was read by Mrs. Paul West. After the meeting adjourned a social hour was enjoyed, the ladies of circle No. 8, Mrs. George Lyle, chairman, acting as hosts.

The circles of the Woman's Missionary society of church meet Monday, January 28, at 2:30 o'clock at the following places: Circle No. 1, Mrs. E. Q. Charming Young Mothers and Their Handsome Children

"The Constitution's feature page today presents a quartet of lovely young mothers and their children in whom Atlanta society feels a cordial and affectionate interest. At the upper left is Mrs. Richard Heber Bennett and her young son, Richard Boykin Bennett, of Chattanooga, Tenn., who were recent guests of the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. F. Boykin. The charming group in the circle includes Mrs. Henry G. Cooper and her little sons, Samuel Evins Cooper (left) and Robert Cooper, who are the guests of Mrs. Cooper's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Evins, during Commander Cooper's absence with his ship, the Dallas, in sea maneuvers. At the upper right is Mrs. S. C. Dobbs, Jr., and her handsome young sons, Samuel Candler Dobbs III (right) and Warren Candler Dobbs. At the lower center is Mrs. Harold Gilmore and her beautiful little daughter, Patty Lou Gilmore, of Chicago, Ill., who are the guests of Mrs. Gilmore's sister, Mrs. Louis H. Beall, at her home in the Georgian Terrace, and are the center of much social attention. The photograph of Mrs. Cooper and her children by the McCrary studio; all other photographs on the page are the work of Thurston Hatcher.

Brides-Elect and Visitors Claim Society's Interest

The final week of January finds society in the whirl of midwinter activities which continue to center around the bride-to-be, the wedding anniversary and visits of outstanding figures of interest in social and civic circles.

Joining the ranks of the many attractive brides of the winter, Miss Dorothy Fluker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Julian M. Fluker, of Fairview road, Druid Hills, will plight her troth to William Arthur Stokes, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Stokes, of Briarcliff circle, Friday evening, February 1, at St. Luke's Episcopal church. The marriage of the young couple centers the interest of society, in view of their popularity and the prominence of the two families.

Golden Wedding.

In direct contrast to the bride and groom of the future is the couple of fifty years. Mr. and Mrs. John Robert Mobley will celebrate their golden wedding anniversary Wednesday, January 30, at their home on Juniper street. The affair will assemble children, grandchildren and other members of the family of this beloved couple who have made Atlanta their home for the past 42 years. Mr. and Mrs. Mobley have contributed much to the cultural development of the communities in which they have lived, winning a wide circle of friends, to whom their golden wedding celebration is a source of deep interest.

Among the outstanding events of the week is the marriage of Miss Elizabeth Leonard Rowland, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Alden Rowland, of Athens, to Paul Courtney Gaertner, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Gaertner, of Atlanta. The service will be performed at 6:30 o'clock Saturday evening, February 2, at the First Presbyterian church, of Athens, the Rev. W. E. Crane, brother-in-law of the bride-elect, assisted by Dr. Eugene L. Hill, officiating.

Theater Guild Representative.

The stage plays its part in the social gayeties of the week. Mrs. Samuel Scott, of New York, representative of the New York Theater guild, will address the Drama league on "The Theater Guild" Tuesday, January 29, at the High Museum of Art. In speaking of Mrs. Scott, Miss Temple Bailey, author of "The Dim Lantern," says: "Mrs. Scott's readings are delightful. They are absolutely divorced from the commonplace, and from cut-and-dried effects. Her personality is charming, her sense of humor sparkles through the comedies, and her gift of imagination gives a deep emotional significance to the serious plays. Her methods adapt themselves admirably to candle light and tea-time. Her drawing room courses have been eminently successful and the hostess who can secure her for a series of afternoon readings will provide a rare treat for her guests."

Mr., Mrs. Richardson Honor Miss Harvey, Mr. Ottley.

Honoring Miss Mary Harvey and John K. Ottley, Jr., whose marriage will be solemnized February 14, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Richardson entertained at a dinner party Saturday evening at their home, Broadlands.

The guests included Miss Harvey, Mr. Ottley, Miss Estelle Boynton, Miss Mary Armstrong, Mr. and Mrs. Charles McGehee, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Inman Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. J. K. Ottley, Baxter Maddox and James Robinson, Jr.

Parties Assemble At Driving Club.

The Piedmont Driving club was the scene Saturday evening of the weekly dinner-dance, which assembled congenial parties of Atlantans and out-of-town guests.

Colonel and Mrs. H. S. Wagner entertained a party. Covers were placed for Colonel and Mrs. Wagner, Major H. R. Herwig and Colonel and Mrs. E. S. Adams.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel N. Evins were hosts to a congenial party.

Valentine Tea-Dance At Biltmore Hotel.

Members of the junior social contingent of Atlanta society will assemble St. Valentine's day at an elaborate tea-dance at the Biltmore hotel.

The affair will assemble a large number of the younger set for tea and dancing in the ballroom of the hotel from 4 until 6 o'clock, when many parties will be given. The guests will include a large and representative group of the younger schoolgirl and boy set.

Adding a novel feature to the afternoon's entertainment will be a miniature postoffice where the guests will mail Valentines to each other which will be distributed during intermission. Dainty favors carrying out the Valentine motif will be used to decorate the tea tables.

Reservations for this dance, which takes place Thursday afternoon, February 14 from 4 until 6 o'clock, may be made by calling Mr. Himmil at the Biltmore at Hemlock 5200.

Misses Skeen Give Lovely Bridge-Tea.

Misses Rebecca and Virginia Skeen entertained 60 friends at a bridge-tea at the Hotel Candler in Decatur Saturday afternoon.

Miss Elizabeth Skeen assisted her sisters in entertaining.

The party was held in the main dining room, which was beautifully decorated in pink and lavender flowers.

Complimentary Concert At Biltmore Hotel.

An event of interest Sunday evening will be the complimentary concert at the Atlanta Biltmore hotel, which will take place in the ballroom of the hotel from 9 until 10 o'clock. The affair will assemble a number of guests who will gather at this popular rendezvous for an evening of delightful musical entertainment.

New York Theater Guild Member Arrives.

Mrs. Samuel Scott, of the New York Theater Guild Repertory company, which appears at the Erlanger theater next month in several of the Guild dramatic successes, arrives in Atlanta this morning and will be a guest at the Atlanta Biltmore. Mrs. Scott will speak before the members of the Drama League of Atlanta Tuesday, the Atlanta Writers' club Thursday evening and at the Shorter college, Rome, Ga., on Friday, besides several other societies and clubs during the week. Mrs. Scott has become well known in the United States through her readings of current plays and advance lectures on current drama. Her lectures are given sincerely from the viewpoints of the audience and her talks on the aims and activities of the New York Theater Guild are very interesting.

Mrs. Alberta Campbell Weds Commander Lawson, U. S. N.

Mrs. J. Fred Lewis announces the marriage of her daughter, Mrs. Alberta Lewis Campbell, to Lieutenant Commander Joseph Hardin Lawson, United States navy, the ceremony being quietly solemnized Saturday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock before members of the immediate families and officers of the naval staff stationed in Atlanta. Rev. J. Sprole Lyons, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony, after which Commander Lawson and his bride left for a trip to southern points of interest. Mrs. Lawson's traveling costume was a smart combination of black and white tweed worn with a hat to match. A shoulder bouquet of gardenias completed the chic costume. On their return Commander and Mrs. Lawson will reside in an apartment on Peachtree road at Brookwood.

The bride is the daughter of Mrs. Lewis and the late J. Fred Lewis, who was numbered among Atlanta's most prominent citizens and was a former city editor of The Constitution. The bride is numbered among the south's most beautiful young women and has enjoyed wide popularity in southern and eastern social circles. She is a representative of aristocratic southern families on both her paternal and maternal sides. She is a granddaughter of Mrs. Henry Lewis and Mrs. Berta Meador Swift, both of this city. Mrs. Swift is a woman of brilliant mental attainments and has occupied a distinct place in Atlanta's social and cultural circles since the war between the states. The bride's paternal grandfather, the late Henry Lewis, was a recognized leader in Atlanta's civic and business circles and numbered his friends by the score.

Commander Lawson is the son of Mrs. Mary Shields Lawson, of Columbia, Mo. Since coming to Atlanta as naval instructor at the Georgia School of Technology he has made a wide circle of friends and has been cordially received in the city's most exclusive social realms. Before coming to Atlanta Commander Lawson served for ten years as naval aide at the white house under the administrations of President Wilson, President Harding and President Coolidge. During the world war Commander Lawson served as flag lieutenant and aide to Admiral Cleaves, who was in command of the cruiser and transport force, which transported the American army to France.

Camp Fire Guardians Meet Friday At Headquarters

The Guardians' Association of Atlanta Camp Fire Girls meets at headquarters Friday afternoon at 3 o'clock. An interesting program has been planned by Mrs. Virginia Wade Bolden and her committee. A full attendance is requested as there are many important plans to be discussed. The Woodberry Hall Camp Fire Girls were introduced Wednesday to their new guardian, Mrs. John M. Inglis. Mrs. Inglis was a Camp Fire guardian when she lived in Montgomery, Ala. At the meeting Wednesday the group chose as its Camp Fire name, "Wo-ce-ha-be," which, interpreted, means "to work with a will, to give service, to be happy and to seek the beautiful both in personalities and in nature." Nellie Jane Gaertner gave a very interesting talk on "Camp Fire and its Meaning." The Woodberry meeting has been changed from Wednesday afternoon to Tuesday. This change will be effective this week.

The new group of Camp Fire girls, recently organized at the Gordon Street Presbyterian church, under the leadership of Mrs. O. M. Mardage, enjoyed making "spatter work" handkerchiefs at their meeting Friday.

Friday morning an interested group of girls, students of the afternoon class at Bass Junior High school, met at the Druid Hills Methodist church and organized a Camp Fire group. Mrs. D. C. Denmark is the guardian of this new group. The charter members are: Misses Tommy Pierson, Olivia Taylor, Eleanor Fike, Marie Rice, Anita Webb, Nell Scott and Mary Franklin. The next meeting will be held Thursday morning at 10:30 at the home of the guardian, Mrs. Denmard, 851 Lake avenue.

The girls of the newly organized group, of Druid Hills Methodist church, Miss Emily Lloys, guardian, will meet at the church Tuesday afternoon at 2:45 and from there will be taken on an outdoor expedition. Each girl is requested to bring one egg and two strips of breakfast bacon. Mrs. Jack Savage, who has wide Camp Fire experience, having had the honor of being a member of a Camp Fire group in New York, of which one of Dr. Luther Gulick's daughters was the guardian, will help with the entertaining. Dr. and Mrs. Luther Gulick were the founders of the Camp Fire organization. Mrs. Savage will tell the girls of some of her experiences as a Camp Fire girl.

Gamble - Gibbs Engagement Is Of Wide Interest

Athens, Ga., January 26.—The wide family connection of Miss Isabella Frances Gamble, of Athens, gives special interest to the announcement of her engagement recently to Robert Shuford Gibbs, Jr., of New York city and Mars Hill, N. C.

Miss Gamble is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John B. Gamble, of Athens, and a niece of Hugh Hodgson, whom Atlanta partly claims. She is a granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Hodgson, leading citizens of Athens, and of Mrs. John W. Gamble and the late John W. Gamble, prominent in Hamilton civic and educational life. Miss Gamble was educated at the Lucy Cobb institute, graduating in music there under her uncle, Hugh Hodgson, her mother having been her own and Mr. Hodgson's first teacher. Mrs. Gamble receiving much of her musical instruction with Madam Varetta Stepanoff, in Berlin. For the past two years Miss Gamble has made a deep study of music and the piano in New York city, under Miss Carpenter, Dr. George Wedge, Mrs. Henry McKellar and Dr. Carl Friedberg. Besides her ability as a musician of exceptional qualifications, Miss Gamble is accomplished along other lines and counts among her talents all those beautiful gifts that endow a well educated young woman.

Mr. Gibbs is a young man of sterling worth, very likable and equipped with unusual business ability. He is connected with the General Electric company in New York.

Miss Gamble's father is one of Athens' ablest lawyers, and Mrs. Gamble, who was Miss Mabel Hodgson, is an outstanding pianist and delightful woman.

Miss Perkins To Wed Mr. Black At Church Ceremony in February

The wedding plans of Miss Beulah Perkins and David Gould Black are of wide social interest in view of the prominence of the young couple. The marriage will be solemnized at 11:30 o'clock Tuesday morning, February 12, at the Ponce de Leon Avenue Baptist church. Dr. L. R. Christie, pastor, will perform the impressive ring ceremony in the presence of a representative assemblage of relatives and friends.

Miss Perkins has chosen as her matron of honor Mrs. Earnest McCullough. Charles H. Black, Jr., brother of the groom-elect, will be the best man. The bride-to-be will be given in marriage by her brother-in-law, Carson Madison Sewell.

The ushers will be Eugene Black, Jr., Grady Black, Henry Grady, Jr., Charles Nunnally and Charles Harmon.

A wedding breakfast will be held following the ceremony at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Black on North Side drive.

The young couple will leave afterward on a several weeks' wedding trip to Cuba. Upon their return they will make their home in the Pallas apartments on Peachtree road.

Miss Perkins is being extensively feted prior to her marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Black, Jr., will entertain at a dinner party Saturday evening, February 2, at their home on Northside drive.

Mrs. Henry Hirsch will be hostess at a luncheon Monday, February 11, at her home on Peachtree road.

Mr. and Mrs. Carson Sewell and Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. White, Jr., will be hosts at a buffet supper Monday evening, February 11, complimenting the members of the wedding party immediately following the rehearsal. Among those who will entertain will be Mr. and Mrs. Henry Grady and Miss Jeannette Bailey.

Junior Music Club Meets Saturday.

The Atlanta Junior Music club meets Saturday afternoon, February 2, at 2:30 o'clock in the school room of M. Rich & Bros. The president, Gladstone Pursley, and the juvenile president, Eugenia Snow, will preside at their respective sessions.

The study course will be conducted by Miss Nana Tucker, followed by a Mendelssohn program. The program includes: Sara Jeffers, Emily Jones, reading life of Mendelssohn; Dorothy Cash, pianist; George Buckley, violinist. The second orchestra will play a Mendelssohn number.

Attention is called for registration for the contest. The convention meets in Decatur in April and contestants must be registered in the local club by February 9. Registration books are open each Saturday from 10 to 2 o'clock in the school room at M. Rich & Bros. Registration fee will be 25 cents in the local club.

Mrs. Rambo Makes Tentative Plans for Biennial Council Meets

Plans for the program of the Third Biennial council of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs are being made. The council will meet in Gainesville May 7-10, inclusive as the guest of the Gainesville Study club, with Mrs. A. S. Hardy, president of the Hostess club. Early in January Mrs. R. K. Rambo, second vice president and chairman of program for the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, went to Gainesville, accompanied by Mrs. S. V. Sanford, first vice president, and Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick to meet with the Gainesville committee.

The Gainesville clubwomen have the hearty cooperation of the faculty of Brenau and the Gainesville Chamber of Commerce, in making the convention a delightful occasion. Brenau college has consented to give a program of fine arts one evening and the trip to Tallulah Falls one day for an official inspection of the federation's mountain school will add to the interest and enjoyment of the council meeting. Several outstanding speakers will feature the program. An outline of the program will be presented to the state executive board at the meeting February 21 for the approval of the board. After this the program will be rounded out as soon as possible for the information of the federated clubs of the state.

Gainesville will be very lovely in May, and with all of the plans arranged by the Gainesville committee for the entertainment of the club women, this will be one of the most delightful conventions the Georgia federation has ever held.

Library Extension Chairman Issues Interesting Letter

Mrs. J. W. Gholston, of Comer, chairman of the committee of library extension of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, has issued the following letter to all club presidents concerning the approach of "library day:"

"Again I come with greetings to you, heralding the approach of that red-letter day in Georgia federation, known as "library day," which has been so designated and is observed by all our federated clubs on or around the date of February 22. The progress of library extension and library work throughout the state was never more gratifying that at the present time. The subject of libraries is one of consuming interest to all, and practically 10 per cent of all clubs are engaged in some form of activity toward an increased library service.

"'After the church and school,' said Theodore Roosevelt, 'the public library is the most effective influence for good in America,' yet Georgia has 81 counties without any public libraries within their borders. Therefore, the problem of adequate library service must largely be met in various ways. Here our staunch friend and ally, the Georgia library commission, stands ready to serve us to the best of its ability, and I beseech you to make use of this privilege. Will you, Madam President, and your club begin now to plan the observance of 'library day' in some fitting manner, not forgetting to reach out a helping hand to your rural community."

The following suggestions on a library day program have been arranged by the Georgia library commission, Atlanta, and the necessary material to carry out this program will be loaned free upon request: Roll call; outstanding books of 1928; if not why not? (intelligence test regarding Georgia library conditions); library legislation for 1929, county free library bill, study of text and discussion; books that travel, the county library brings them to the farm; story of four library haunters, what public libraries have meant to great men; book guessing contest (children or adults dressed to represent well-known characters in books appear before club members guessing their identity; prizes given for most correct lists.)

Hartwell Woman's Club Holds Meeting.

The January meeting of the Hartwell Woman's club was held at the home of Mrs. O. Y. McLees Friday afternoon, January 19, with 40 present. Associate hostesses were Mesdames R. E. Matheson, Henry Hailey, A. C. Skelton, and T. L. Matheson.

During the business session splendid reports from the officers and committees were given. Mrs. J. L. Teasley reported the sum of $20 had been collected for the Tallulah school fund. Mrs. A. F. Bell stated that her committee had received a number of crepe myrtles to be planted to beautify the highways that pass through the city. Plans for the annual flower show, to be held in May, and of which Mesdames A. S. Skelton and H. I. Alford are chairmen, were discussed. Interesting reports were also given by Mrs. A. C. Skelton, chairman educational committee, and Mrs. J. W. Morris, chairman public welfare committee. Mesdames F. E. Jenkins, W. T. Yarborough, J. F. Jenkins and L. A. Fortson were elected new members.

The president, Mrs. F. T. Kidd, introduced the chairmen, Mrs. T. L. Matheson and W. L. Brown, who presented the following program: "Our Constitution," Mrs. Dewitt Teasley; "Woman's Part in Legislation," Mrs. Guy Norris; "To the Old and the New Year," Mrs. Fred White. Miss Alice Meadows, of the state board of health, who was a visitor, told of her work in the counties of north Georgia.

"Before My Baby Came"

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound puts new life into me and makes my work in the store and in the house easier. I took several bottles before my baby came and am always singing its praises to my friends. I recommend it for girls and women of all ages. It makes me feel like life is worth living, my nerves are better and I have gained pep and feel well and strong."—Mrs. A. R. Smith, 808 S. Lansing Street, St. Johns, Michigan.

Clubwomen Given Luncheon During Farmers' Conference

The Junior Cookery class of the State College of Agriculture at Athens entertained at luncheon Tuesday at Soule hall, the guests being the speakers appearing on the program of the farmers' conference. The luncheon, which was cooked and served by the members of the class, carried out the orange, green and white of the furnishings of the dining room of the practice school where the luncheon was served. The place cards, also work of the students, were silhouettes portraying characteristics of the guests.

Those seated at the table were Mrs. Caroline B. King, of Philadelphia, home economics editor of the Country Gentleman; Mrs. Ernest R. Groves, educator, Chapel Hill, N. C.; Mrs. S. V. Sanford, vice president at large, and Mrs. Ira E. Farmer, chairman American Home, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs; Miss Mary Creswell, dean of women and assistant director of extension; Mrs. Joe Myers, social director, and Miss Martha Alpine, child specialist, all of the State College of Agriculture, and Mrs. A. M. Soule, wife of the president of the college.

"Americas Stronghold, the Rural Home," during the conference was on the subject of Mrs. King's address; Mrs. Sanford's speech was upon "Taxation and Illiteracy," while Mrs. Farmer spoke on "Home Demonstration Work and the Federated Clubs."

Mrs. Wey Paid Tribute By University Group

The following resolutions on the death of Mrs. Frances Liggett Wey, student aid chairman for Georgia federation, adopted by the American Association of University Women at the January luncheon: Whereas, in the death of Mrs. Frances Liggett Wey, the Atlanta branch of the American Association of University Women has lost an early graduate of one of its original constituent colleges and the first ever to become a resident of this part of the south; and whereas, as the first Vassar graduate in Atlanta, she gave her services, absolutely without compensation, to preparing the first girls who left Atlanta to enter Vassar; and whereas, with the aid of the Vassar alumnae, she started the first student aid work in the south, to help deserving girls enter the large eastern colleges; and, whereas, her notable educational service was recognized by her election to the presidency of the Associate Alumnae of Vassar college; and whereas, her deep sympathies were not limited to work for her own college, but she became one of the organizers of the Student Aid Foundation of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs and was, for nearly 20 years, its active president; and, whereas, in service to the Atlanta public schools as a member of the original board of lady visitors and in other forms of educational and social work too numerous to mention, she gave herself without stint to the public welfare, therefore,

Be it resolved, That, in the death of Mrs. Frances Liggett Wey, the Atlanta Association of University Women has not only lost a pioneer and invaluable member, but the entire community has lost a woman whose rare personality radiated the most limitless and beautiful sympathy. The committee included Mrs. Emma Garrett Morris, Miss Marian Woodward and Mrs. E. K. Large.

Montezuma Club Elects Mrs. Colier.

Montezuma Woman's club met at the clubhouse Friday afternoon, the president, Mrs. F. L. Pery, presiding. Mrs. R. C. Colier was elected recording secretary to succeed Mrs. Charles Perry resigned.

A committee composed of Mrs. J. E. Hays, Mrs. John B. Guerry and Mrs. R. H. Saunders was appointed to draw up resolutions from the club sponsoring a movement to establish a hospital in Montezuma. Mrs. Hays was in charge of the program, which included a paper, "Conservation of Farm Waste," by Mrs. Sam Guerry; a violin solo, "To a Rose," by Sidney Smith;" a reading, "I Wish," by Miss Nancy Dover, and an address, "The Conservation of Service," by Rev. B. E. Donehue.

Fifth District President Speaks To West End Club

Mrs. Kate Green Hess, president of the fifth district, in a talk given to the West End Woman's club at its last meeting, said:

"The question has been raised many times as to whether a clubwoman can remain loyal to her club and decline every responsibility of office, appointment or to take an active part in doing the work of the club. Without reference to this or any special club, or clubwoman, we will give it as our opinion, that a clubwoman may, under circumstances that warrant it, be more loyal to the ideals of her club in declining to accept these responsibilities than in accepting them. No woman should accept an office, appointment, or undertake the lead in any of the activities of the club's work when she knows that home duties or other obligations previously assumed, would prevent the faithful performance of the new responsibility. A woman's loyalty to her organization may be expressed in many ways. Of course it is plainly expressed in work well done, or in the efficient and faithful management of office, but the woman who would not lightly undertake the duties she has no idea of giving thought and time to, but who is constant in attendance, slow to give undue criticism, attentive to the constitution and by-laws, so that she may conscientiously lend her help by an intelligent vote on important matters and one who tries to carry out the ideals of the club in her home and community life, is just as surely demonstrating her loyalty, as the ones who are able to express it more openly. On the other hand, if she has the ability, the time and strength to fill the office which she is elected to, or to take the leadership work assigned to her, she expresses loyalty to her club in her acceptance. When a woman has accepted the leadership of any of the club's work she should study to find the very best methods for achieving the results desired.

"There is no better way to do this than to get the ideas of experienced workers in the same division of club work. Just such experiences are given in the year book of the state federation, which is sent to each federated club president for her own use, and the use of her departmental chairmen. The report of your state president and of your own district president are also printed in the year book, as well as your state and district chairmen of the departments. The first duty of a chairman after she receives her appointment, is to get the name and address of her corresponding district chairman from her president and write to her for an outline of her work. While she is waiting for an answer, she should continue the work of her predecessor and be trying to get new ideas from the reports in the year book, always with a view of their fitness for the needs of her community. Making reports of the work which has been accomplished is of great importance, not only to the club to which the chairman belongs, but as an inspiration to other organizations doing the same work and that district chairmen may report to their state chairman what is being done in their district. Knowledge thus gained and the cooperation of the many clubs helps to achieve the purpose and ideals of the state and general federation of women's clubs, and clubwomen show their loyalty to these noble ideals in their allegiance to their given responsibilities."

Mrs. Majors Named President Of Claxton Club

The Claxton Woman's club has many plans for usefulness during the year, and the officers for the year are: President, Mrs. Robert Majors; vice president, Mrs. Marshall Girardeau; recording secretary, Mrs. R. J. Kennedy; corresponding secretary, Mrs. S. M. Hall; treasurer, Mrs. W. T. Stubbs; auditor, Mrs. P. M. Anderson; parliamentarian, Mrs. Clara Varnedoe.

The president, who is serving her second term, has made the following appointments:

Division of civics, Mrs. D. C. Newton; division of community service, Mrs. R. J. Kennedy; division of homemaking, Mrs. W. L. Guy; division of health, Mrs. R. O. Barnes; division of publicity, Mrs. P. B. Austin; division of library extension, Mrs. R. H. Burroughs; division of literature, Mrs. B. E. Miller; division of music, Mrs. W. D. Bradley; division of art, Mrs. A. N. Olliff; division of home-making, Mrs. W. L. Newton; division of home economics, Mrs. Henry Durrence; Tallulah Falls schools, Mrs. S. T. Ellis; federation news, Mrs. John Horton; membership and attendance, Mrs. P. H. Perkins; finance, Mrs. S. M. Hall; Mrs. Marshall Girardeau, chairman of program, by virtue of office.

The club is looking forward with much pleasure to the first district convention, which is to convene in Claxton in October or November for the annual meeting.

Bowman Woman's Club Meets.

The Bowman's Woman's club met January 16 at the home of Mrs. T. A. Hall. In the absence of the president, Mrs. F. M. Leeson, the vice president, Mrs. L. Z. Walker, presided.

After all business was transacted the meeting was turned over to the calendar committee, Miss Mauline Harris in charge. Responses to roll call were "Literary Gems." The opera, Wagners "Lohengrin," was presented, directed by Mrs. W. A. Johnson. The story was read by Miss Ina Mae Seymour and the musical numbers were rendered by Miss Kathryn Rucker, vocalist, and Mrs. W. A. Johnson, and Miss Frances Leeson, pianists.

"Historic Paintings," illustrated and elucidated by Miss Ouida Adams, was an entertaining feature of the program. Miss Lula Peek gave a talk on several political topics of interest, after which she introduced Miss Shell, of the state board of health, who gave a talk on preventive measures. The hostesses, Mrs. Hall, Mrs. W. W. Faulkner, Mrs. J. R. Hendrick and Mrs. L. Z. Walker.

Forestry and Welfare Work Featured by Douglas Clubwomen

The forestry and welfare work of Douiglas Woman's club took a prominent part in the Jannary meeting, featuring the distribution in the rural schools of moving picture films, showing the destructive work of fire in our forests and the ways to promote the growth and beauty of woodlands. Quite a bit of similar work has been done within the city, shrubbery has been planted on public grounds, unsightly stumps have been removed, and a plan has been formulated for the planting of trees later in the season.

The welfare work done by the ladies in charge of this particular work has been nothing short of remarkable. Besides furnishing hot lunches for the rural schools, the committee has sent, during this past month alone, one hundred baskets of food to the needy, and has given substantial aid to 75 school children.

The chairmen of each of these committees presented an interesting and instructive program through the members of the committees. Mrs. E. L. Tanner gave all the references in the Bible on forestry. "An Outline of the Forestry Work in Georgia" was read by Mrs. Coffee. Miss Margaret Shelton recited a poem on "Trees," which was followed by a paper entitled "The Friend of the Forest," presented by Mrs. C. R. Tanner. This program was concluded with a lovely vocal solo by Miss Melva Coffee. In addition to this, two papers were read by members of the welfare committee —namely, "A talk on welfare," by Mrs. L. E. eath; "Something we've done and things we want to do," by Mrs. Fred Brewer.

Mrs. Davis, president, made an inspiring talk on our New Year's work and aim, the later introduced two new members, and did honor to the club's first president, Mrs. L. E. Heath. She also announced that the four-point system would be published in the paper, and urged each member to read and study. Much to the regret of the club, Mrs. Fred Brewer resigned the office of first vice president. The following hostesses served refreshments Mesdames M. F. Head, W. J. Williams, A. C. Winn and R. H. Sapp.

Mrs. Sanford Addresses Meeting Of Farmers' Conference in Athens

Mrs. S. V. Sanford, of Athens, first vice president of the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, was one of the most important speakers on the program of the farmers' conference held at the Agricultural college in Athens during the past week. Mrs. Sanford, one of the leading women in the club work of the state, is a brilliant and magnetic speaker and she is thoroughly conversant with all phases of club activity in connection with agricultural life. She chose as her subject "The Georgia Federation and Rural Education," dealing with the problems of rural life in a straightforward, intelligent manner and offering valuable suggestions wherein the federation might cooperate with the College of Agriculture in solving these problems. Mrs. Sanford's address was as follows:

I value highly the invitation of President Soule to be present on this occasion and to bring you greetings from the Georgia Federation of Women's clubs, an organization of many federated clubs, and with a membership of more than 30,000 women. The Georgia federation, great as it is, is only a small part of the General Federation of Women's clubs, with a membership of more than 2,000,000 women. The federation must appeal to all thinking women, since it is only by shoulder to shoulder cooperation that we can and have become a real force in world affairs. From the General Federation has flowed the tide of inspiration, and out of it has come the sentiment for nobler and higher standards—"the fine art of living together."

The present age is characterized by cooperation. In the world of business and industry people have organized and worked together for the sake of economy and efficiency. Perhaps one of the greatest tests of efficiency is the ability to associate pleasantly and efficiently together without losing identity. The world has become one great community. No one city, no one town, village, community, individual can reach the highest state of development without the cooperation and fellowship of her neighbors. The increasing complexity of life creates a greater variety of needs and interest.

"The strength of the wolf is the pack and the strength of the pack is the wolf." A club which liveth for itself alone does not justify its brief existence. The clubwomen, therefore, all over this state and country are cooperating with other organizations and working for a finer citizenship, better homes, saner legislation, good roads, a greater appreciation of fine arts, better rural schools and churches, a more sacred regard for the laws of the land, a deeper sympathy for the underprivileged child, a revitalizing of conditions on the farm, international peace, and the first great objective of education—health.

Endorses Farmers' Week.

I am not here today to speak on the great objectives of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, nor of any woman's club, but to assure President Soule and the Georgia State College of Agriculture that the Georgia federation endorses and commends the work and the purpose of Farmers' week and, further, to assure President Soule that the federation is anxious to cooperate with him in every way possible in making conditions in the rural sections of our state equal to the best conditions found in our urban life and to assist him in convincing all the people that the farm is the economic basis of the country. The Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs gladly cooperates with the Georgia State College of Agriculture in its noble efforts to make a brighter future for the rural child.

What is the meaning of this Farmers' week and why is President Soule emphasizing the rural school and the rural church—in other words all rural life? He is simply asking a question with the hope and the belief that thinking men and women will soon answer it. Here is his question, stated in another way: "Does the farm family, the farm community, and the farming class as a whole mean enough to our state to warrant putting forth an unusual effort to make possible to them as complete an education as other families, other communities, and other classes already have?. To put it in briefer form: "Is the farmer's son and daughter worth educating?"

At present there is no more important aspect of leadership than that of heartening the rural communities and getting each one of them to have a firm belief in its capacity to have as good a school as any other. "An inferiority complex is present is many rural communities who could do more to help themselves than they are. The farmers cannot depend on others to secure from state resources, legislatures, educational institutions, and school systems, efficient educational facilities. Our people in the rural sections need to turn their eyes within towards the wonderful possibilities in boys and girls and to cultivate more dignity and self-respect." Charles B. Aycock sounded the keynote when he said: "Educate the people and all other blessings will come. After and not before the education of the people will come good roads, the development of industries, and the increase of wealth of all the people." After all, improved living and economic conditions can be secured and permanently assured only through improved educational facilities.

The Weak Spot.

The weakest point in our public school system of education today is the rural school, and yet we are proud of the progress that has been made during the past 10 years and that is being done under the able leadership of Superintendent Duggan and the state board of education. The common thought of this nation is that every state is not only to assure every child his opportunity but also to see that he has it even though he be unfortunate in his circumstances. It is most gratifying that the economic and social welfare of the farmer is attracting the sympathetic attention and interest from agricultural blocs and even in political party platforms. The farmer does not have to wait on further legislation, for all communities are empowered to go forward as far as their means and their spirit will suggest in elaborating the schools or multiplying the agencies of general culture.

To devise a system of school revenue that will assure equal educational opportunities which is the birthright of every American boy and girl is the real problem in Georgia today. Inequalities in educational opportunities exist in almost every county today because of inequalities in taxation necessary to produce school revenue. We are fond of saying and preaching from every stage and boasting of our great doctrine—that all American children should be provided with equally good schools. But so far that saying is "tinkling cymbals and sounding brass;" in fact, it is mokery—"85 per cent of the school funds is raised locally. Because of the unequal distribution of wealth in the various counties, the counties that make low assessments are required to levy tax rates five to ten times higher than the rates required in the wealthier counties, but they rarely ever do such a thing. The result is that the poor counties of the state fail to tax themselves adequately for their schools." There is but one solution—the state must aid the poor counties in the support of their schools.

School funds have been secured by taxing real estate—visible property—and the tax rate has multiplied year after year and rebellion against taxation has kept pace with the ever-increasing rate on real estate, particularly farm lands. We must find and we can find new sources of state school funds. We must abandon the plan of taxation on real estate—farm lands. School funds should be used for one purpose only—to provide equally good schools throughout the state whether the schools are located in rich or poor counties.

Sources of Revenue.

Clubwomen in particular, but all women, should study the tax system, should study the tax digest, and should work for such changes in our antiquated system as will bring to pass a new revenue system—new sources of revenue. There are certain corporations and certain men and women in our state who are deriving all the benefits of a law-abiding community, but who are paying very little in return for these blessings. It is time for somebody to call a halt on these inequalities, and the women of this state should not hesitate to take an active part in demanding sufficient revenue to maintain schools in accordance with our boasted philosophy —equal school opportunities for every boy and girl in Georgia.

To me it seems that the clubwomen have been content to see that the small pittance set aside for school purposes is well spent, but we have not aided in making our demands for a tax reform that will finance our school system from the kindergarten through the university. Remember that it is not the cost of our educational system that is such a burden from the standpoint of taxation, but the failures in our civilization. We are spending 8 cents for ill-health, 5 cents for crime, and only 1 cent for education. We must not economize at the expense of our future citizens. Some day we may learn that education is not charity but a large part of our national defense. Here, then, women of Georgia, is our opportunity—fight for tax revision or new sources for school revenue.

There are those who contend that we have excellent schools and that we need no additional taxes—no tax revision. They tell us that our people are happy, contended, and well educated. Are they happy, contented, well educated? Let me give you a little bit of personal experience:

A few weeks ago I was asked to serve as one of the election managers in the state primary. My eyes were opened for the first time as to educational conditions in my own county. Woman after woman, and man after man came to vote, and yet they could not read the ballot, they could not understand the ballot, and yet they would pretend to do so. Many, however, would say: "Please mark my ballott (but I could not), for thsee people, calling them by name, and I do not care anything about voting for anyone else." No interest whatever in the election beyond one name here and another name there. I could not help saying to myself: "How can this condition exist in the shadow of the University of Georgia, the oldest state university in the world, an institution that has been sending forth men for more than a century? If such conditions exist, as I have described, who then are responsible? Perhaps we have lived too much to ourselves and have not yet realized as we should that American democracy is based firmly on the principle of equal and inalienable rights of all to life and liberty and the pursuit of happiness. But there can be no equal rights for all and no best achievement for any without an equal opportunity for education. If these conditions exist within the shadow of the university, what must conditions be in certain counties of my native state?

That the money derived from taxation may be well spent, that the work of the school may be well done and their purposes finally attained, we as citizens and clubwomen should pledge the fullest devotion of all our energies as our patriotic duty and highest service to the state and to the nation.

University Opportunities.

It is not sufficient in this modern age that our boys and girls be given an opportunity to attend a high school but they must be given an opportunity to get a college education in an institution in our own state as good as can be found in any state in this country. We can never have a university system until we have a school system and a school system without a university system would be of little value; for inspiration comes from above and the diffusion of knowledge comes down from the university to the public schools. The two must go hand in hand.

The question is often asked: "Why do so many students drop out of college at the end of the first year?" The answer is easy. In this stage of their development many give evidence of insufficient preparation for the courses—inadequate schools. Of those who pass their work and are qualified to return more than 50 per cent can not because of finances. The time honored struggle for an education still exists. In spite of our increase in per capita wealth, many students find themselves handicapped through lack of funds.

Scholarships and fellowships must be and should be provided for the boy and girl of brilliant mind and vision and ambition. They will be lent to the proper persons and they will be returned.

Mrs. David Woodward in her report on student aid to the Georgia federation says: "The home economics fund is doing worlds of good. The girls who take up this work seem to be active, alert, and interested. Some of them teach economics and some of them go out as county demonstrators, but when they graduate they are well-equipped, get good salaries and very soon pay back their loans."

This year we had two brilliant men as leaders—one of the republican and the other of the democratic party—Herbert Hoover, an orphan with very limited opportunities, and Alfred E. Smith, the son of humble and poor parents, a child of the sidewalks of New York. Who knows but what we have in our rural communities, with poor roads, poor schools and poorer churches, many a brilliant boy and girl asking that those more blessed shall work and not talk in an idle way until we put into practice the saying —equal educational opportunities in every county in this state for the rich and the poor.

Brighter Dawn.

Every man, woman and child should be proud of the Georgia State College of Agriculture. It has done a great work, and it is destined to do an even greater work. Think of what conditions were in Georgia before President Soule threw his intellect and heart into this great movement for finer conditions and happier lives on the farm. With county agents and home demonstration agents all working under his supervision and carrying messages of work and determination and good cheer, who doubts but that a brighter day will dawn for the children living in rural communities and that we will understand the now meaningless phrase, "agriculture is our basic industry."

And President Soule may I say that our club women are proud of the splendid part that the women of the State College of Agriculture are playing in the development of the resources of Georgia, both the material and spiritual. Miss Collier, state director of the Girls' club work; Miss Campbell, state director of vocational home economics, and Miss Creswell, state director of home economics, the woman who has developed a standard course in home economics, a course that the United States government has approved, and a course unsurpassed by any institution in this country. These women, state directors, under your supervision and directions, have done and are doing a work making living conditions better and happier. We are glad that all the glory does not go to the men—we have a big part in it through these women and their many wide awake colleagues and co-laborers.

To all of you actively engaged in this great work, let me conclude with these lines:

"No matter if the day be dark,
Or if the sky is high and blue;
Whether the earth is brown and stark,
Or bright with blossoms peeping through,
We need not heed the winds that blow,
The praise or censure of the mob,
If when the twilight comes we know
We've done our job.

No matter if life's trail be rough,
Or smoothly winds through trees and flowers;
Whether the fates are grim and gruff,
Or prodigal of golden hours.
We need not know how spins the wheel,
If we can face the setting sun,
Knowing that it is the end, and feel
Our work is done."

Cuthbert Woman's Club Votes On Page in Leader

The January meeting of Cuthbert Woman's club proved most inspiring, with Mrs. Granby Owen, chairman of the library extension committee, in charge of the program. The club voted to take one full page in the Randolph county edition of the Cuthbert Leader, which is to be issued between the first and the fifteenth of February. This paper will be a great advertisement of Randolph county, and copies will be sent all over the United States. The club also voted to make a book fund of the $400 made last October at the Randolph County Fair and Centennial association until Andrew college has been enlarged and improved according to present plans, then this sum, with the money which the club intends to make in the future, will be used for beautifying the college grounds. Plans were discussed for the presentation of the musical comedy, "Walk This Way" during February or March. Miss Ida Domingos, city librarian, gave a report of her year's work.

Mrs. Granby Owen and her committee, Mrs. G. L. Lokey, Mrs. Margie Kennedy, Miss Jennie Mae Owen, Miss Ida Domingos and Miss Minnie Sharley presented a beautiful program. Miss Dorothy James, teacher of piano at Andrew college, gave a lovely piano solo, followed by Miss Ida Domingos, who made a short talk, telling how the library extension work is being carried forward by the committee. Mrs. Edward Sealy exquisitely sang "The Bird With the Broken Wing." Major J. F. Muldrow, superintendent of city schools, then gave a splendid talk on library extension, dealing with the books most needed by school children and plans for obtaining these desired books. Mrs. Owen announced that the goal of her committee would be a small library with books for children in and between the first and sixth grades. Miss Lucia Storey delightfully read "The New Piano" and Mr. Welbur Smith closed the program with two beautiful solos, "Sylvia" and "I Love a Little Cottage."

Mrs. Owen and her committee served refreshments. The officers of the Cuthbert Woman's club are Mrs. A. C. Moye, Jr., president; Mrs. Nellie M. Harris, vice president; Mrs. W. S. McWilliams, secretary; Mrs. W. J. Hortman, treasurer; Mrs. J. B. Bussey, parliamentarian; Mrs. I. J. Lunsford, corresponding secretary.

Millen Woman's Club Features Many Activities in Report

The January meeting of the Millen Woman's club marked the half-year for the present administration and reports from departments were most gratifying. Much has been undertaken and each committee filed an interesting report. The library committee, with Mrs. C. Thompson and Mrs. R. H. Brinson, co-chairmen, reported the library well attended during the holidays. The library is in the clubroom and is kept open each afternoon by a member of the club. Since September 213 new volumes have been added. A complete set of southern literature was presented by the U. D. C. as a memorial to Miss Millie Rutherford; $57.12 has been collected from rent books and has been invested in the newest fiction. The Georgia library commission has 100 books on the shelves of our library to supplement the books owned by us. The garden committee, Mrs. J. C. Parker, chairman, reported $35 made from a fashion show and fair sale, this money to be used to promote the annual garden contest. The lighting of living Christmas trees over town during Christmas was a civic project put on by the civic committee, Mrs. Alex Harvey, chairman. The club voted that a note of appreciation be sent the county commissioners for the beautiful appearance of the court house lawn. The officers furnish the money and the civic committee helps with the planning, planting and work. The health committee, Mrs. A. H. Sparks, chairman, is glad to have worked with the Exchange club in getting the county board of health put into operation the Ellis health law. Active work begins March 1.

The American homes committee, Mrs. Robie Gray, chairman, assisted by the ways and means committee, reported buying a story book and fruit for each child at the Cotton Mill school Christmas tree. Also had on hand $5.50 that they recommended be given to the mill school for equipment. This recommendation was approved by the club. Mrs. Gray was made the club's member on the local board of associated charities. The Tallulah Falls school chairman, Mrs. B. C. Branman, brought the new year message from our school. The Millen club has recently sent $32.50 to the endowment fund and will pay its maintenance pledge before the state meeting.

Mrs. G. C. Deble gave a review of the January federation news. This contact with the general federation is a feature of each meeting and is proving most beneficial. The program featured "On Seeing the Beauty in Art." Mrs. I. O. Parker's paper was on "Pictures and Their Value As Home Decoration." Mrs. Brantley Danied gave practical suggestions for arranging furniture, rugs and draperies so as to enhance the artistic beauty of one's home. Music for the afternoon was a vocal solo by Mrs. Wainwright and a piano group by Miss Dubose. Mrs. George Mays read "A Woman's Songs." The hostesses were Mesdames Wilmer Shepherd, Arthur Cates, E. B. Johnson, Lotus Darlington, W. O. Roberts and Z. E. Neal.

W. C. T. U. Increases Activities With Approach of Spring

By M. Frances Meadors Burghard.

The week of spring-like weather following the sensation of "flu" has caused the Woman's Christian Temperance union activities to double in some localities and even quadruple in others. The departmental efforts which must go on in season and out in some form, have enlarged and intensified. The W. C. T. U. works through departments between meetings of which time reports are made.

The annual roll call, when each members answers to her name when called by paying her dollar dues and making a contribution to the budget, has begun in earnest. This method has proved its wisdom again and again since its institution, at the suggestion of Mrs. Marvin Williams, Barnesville, the state president, several years ago. It has the hearty endorsement of the state and district officers and was adopted unanimously at the state convention. So these are busy days for each treasurer and her assistants.

Maintenance Fund.

Finishing up the headquarters maintenance fund comes first in W. C. T. U. prayers, thoughts and activities, and will continue to hold first place until the entire $15,000 is not only pledged but paid and in the bank. It must all be in the treasury soon. Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, secretary of the fund, charged with its collection, writes from her home in Greenville to local presidents about letters which she sent to the entire state membership of thousands saying: "I sent out these letters to help you, and every dollar received by the state treasurer, Mrs. J. L. McGarity, of Monroe, in response will be counted on your union's quota, if paid by any one in your union or your district." Mrs. Armor explains: "I found that many of the women thought the W. C. T. U. was buying the home which the blessed friends, Mr. and Mrs. N. C. McPherson, of Atlanta, are generously giving to the Georgia W. C. T. U. Only last week a dear woman wrote me and said she was going to help, but she doubted the wisdom of buying this home. She thought we were paying this $15,000 to Mr. McPherson, and failed to understand that the $15,000 is not to be spent. That it is our own to be invested and that the interest will be used to run the headquarters. Help all our women to grasp the idea that this is the way to our financial independence so that every one will have an enthusiasm in putting over this proposition. Every woman should have some part—even though small—in this glorious thing we are doing just now."

Later in the letter Mrs. Armor said: "Some think, because I asked for contributions by the 16th, that is all the time we have. Remind them that we have until the first day of March. But that is the last day." Mrs. Armor closed the letter in the following optomistic declaration: "The letters are pouring in now saying that they are working, praying and giving and will go over the top!' Truly as Miss Willard used to say 'There are no women like our women.'"

Some have given $500 to make themselves or to honor another as a "founder," a considerable number have sent hundred dollar checks to honor themselves or others as a "builder." Some unions have pooled their donations to make the oldest or most faithful member of a "builder."

As the first of March draws near the endowment fund nears completion. Every union and every member are urged to send her contribution to Mrs. McGarity right away.

Conference Representation.

The Georgia W. C. T. U. was represented at the fourth national conference on the cause and cure of war in the Hall of Nations at Hotel Washington, in the national Capital January 14-17 by Mrs. R. L. Miller, of Waynesboro, the state director of international relations department. World peace, world purity and world prohibition are goals toward which the W. C. T. U. has worked since its organization. Both local and state W. C. T. U. in this and all other states had indorsed the signing by our country of the Multilateral peace treaty.

Besides Mrs. Miller, the others making up the Georgia delegation were: Mrs. Marvin Underwood, Atlanta, chairman, representing the Y. W. C. A.; Mrs. Sinclair Jacobs, Atlanta, from the League of Women Voters; Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, past president, Georgia Federation of Women's clubs; Miss Roberta Hodgson, Athens, teacher of international law, Georgia State Normal college, and Mrs. David Katchman, Augusta, from Georgia Federation of Clubs. Each state delegation visited its senators at 11 o'clock the day the Briand-Kellogg pact was ratified by the senate.

Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt, New York city, is general chairman of the national committee on the cause and cure of war, the members, each a national president, of on 10 national women's organizations, are Mrs. Ella A. Boole, Brooklyn, N. Y., national Woman's Christian Temperance union; Dr. Mary E. Woolley, S. Hadley, Massachusetts, American Association of University Women; Mrs. John Ferguson, New York city, Council of Women for Home Missions; Mrs. William Edgar Geil, Doylestown, Pa., Federation of Woman's Boards of Foreign Missions of North America; Mrs. John F. Sippel, Washington, D. C., general federation of women's clubs; Mrs. Robert E. Speer, New York city, national board of Young Women's Christian associations; Mrs. Joseph E. Friend, New Orleans, La., National Council of Jewish Women; Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, New York city, National Federation of Business and Professional Women's clubs; Miss Belle Shewin, Washington, D. C., national League of Women Voters; Miss Rose Schneiderman, New York city, National Women's thinkers and writers on the cause or the cure of war were speakers at the various sessions, all creating sentiment against war and for peace. "In time of peace, prepare for peace" is their method.

Miss Wren's Statement.

Miss Amy Wren, United States Commissioner in Brooklyn, said to have been the first woman appointed to such a position, announced recently that she had changed her mind about prohibition since she became a commissioner. She said: "I was not in favor of prohibition at first, but now I am, after hearing all these speakeasy cases." Prohibition should be given a chance." The W. C. T. U. is appealing to the press, the public, all the people, to "Give prohibition its chance," declaring that the liquor traffic has had its day.

State Report.

The state recording secretary, Mrs. F. T. Brown, of Cairo, says that the state report, which was delayed by tardy reports, is in the press, and will soon be ready for distribution. This will be welcome news to state directors and all presidents.

World Day of Prayer.

Most of our readers are no doubt acquainted with the fact that all the women's home and foreign mission boards unite in a world day of prayer on February 15, states the Union Signal, official organ of the national W. C. T. U., and it states further:

"There prayer meetings are held all over the United States and in nearly every community. This year the special subject for prayer is 'For Courageous Witness on Moral and Social Questions.' That the witness of the church on the moral questions of our day may truly reflect the mind of God and may be known and felt throughout the world.

"The national W. C. T. U. has been invited to unite in the observance of the day and at the national convention in Boston it was voted to accept the invitation. It is hoped that our local unions will unite with the local committees in the observance of this day, but it should not, of course, interfere with plans for the Frances Willard memorial meetings on February 17. The arrangements for the day of prayer will be made by the missionary societies and our members will be guests. This will provide an opportunity for the white ribboners to reciprocate by inviting the missionary societies to be special guests at the Frances Willard memorial gatherings." This is the plan the Georgia W. C. T. U. officers hope will be followed in this state.

Prohibition In Japa

"Since the wet-dry issue is so important in America, an incident in the life of the young emperor of Japan is in order," writes Josephine and J. Paul Reed, of the Palmore institute, Kobe, Japan.

"It is reported that several years ago when he was crown prince he visited the city of Okayama and was being conducted through a park there which is one of the three or four finest parks in Japan, notable for its landscape gardening. The crown prince was shown the fine cherry grove where folks went to drink and revel and become debauched at cherry blossom season. The chief men of the city expected approval, but to their surprise the crown prince remarked that it was a pity to desecrate such a beautiful place in such a way. Since that time no sake has been allowed in the park. The emperor of Japan is dry."

BLACKWELL ELECTED

Civic Leader Again Heads Morningside Church Group.

Paul P. Blackwell, widely known civic worker, was reelected president of the Morningside Presbyterian Men's association, it was announced Saturday, following the January meeting of the association.

W. H. Hamby was reelected treasurer, while A. L. Chason was named as vice president of the religious organization. The Rev. Carl McMurray, pastor of the Morningside Presbyterian church, was elected chairman of the board of directors. A feature event of the January meeting was presentation of the attendance loving cup to Frank G. Helrigel.

BOOK REVIEWS IN TABLOID

When Dickens Stopped the Show.

The arrival of Charles Dickens for a reading from his books was invariably a signal for an outburst of enthusiasm. At Edinburgh, says Ralph Straus, in "Charles Dickens, a Biography from New Sources," there was "a blaze of triumph" and an equally splendid reception at Glasgow, in spite of an over-issue of tickets.—Cosmopolitan Book corporation.

NEW FICTION RECEIVED.

Tammany Boy. By Dermot Cavanagh. A story of Tammany in which the following will interest the reader:

"Tammany don't give a hoot for a man's ancestors unless they will come down to the polls with their boy and vote. And that is why Tammany goes on forever."

Among the interesting characters in this story are Thomas Jefferson Gebtry, a young lawer from the country—Big Tom, of the Eskimo club, qualifying with his fists at Jimmy's spring outing and chowder party under the Irish blue eyes of Peggy McShane Tammany. Clever and shrewd, red with mirth, warm-handed and hard-fisted, sentimental and greedy, an institution of the people that, in its 140th year, is just hitting its stride.

The author of this most interesting story whose name naturally is a nom de plume, is really a New York lawyer and a former member of Tammany's general committee. He has written a romance and a political career. Be sure to read it. (J. H. Sears & Co., New York.)

Old Trails on Fire. A new life novel in 33 short stories. (Odin Publishing Co., Cleveland, Ohio.)

The Unknown Daughter. By Therese Benson. "What would you do?" This is another story in which the author hides her identity under a nom de plume, but the story is interesting and is woven around what Claire Bassett did, so read it and ask yourself what you would do? (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The Hidden Woman. By James Hay, Jr., author "No Clue," "The Bellamy Case." Mr. Hay is well known to readers of mystery stories and a great deal of interest is shown by his friends in his latest which he has located in Asheville, N. C., and Washington. The story throws wide open the doors and brings to light four absorbing topics. It also opens the doors to Mrs. Lassiter's home for three callers, two of whom demand that she give them information which she refuses to do. It is here that the detective is called in. You will find it a cleverly told tale by a popular writer. (Dodd Mead & Co., New York.)

The Mad Masquerade. By Kenyon Gambier. There are certain cities which the author never overlooks for the location of an unusually interesting story, both in America and abroad, among the most popular are Paris and New York.

In this interesting fiction story the hero is really on his first visit to Paris—the Paris of dreams, but from the very beginning he becomes a victim of unusual circumstances which, with all the excitement of the pleasure of sight-seeing, seemed nothing more than one of the many experiences he anticipated.

The story played by the young American will hold the interest of the reader until the last chapter. (Houghton Mifflin Co., Boston.)

Willow Smoke. By Ethel Kirk Grayson. The author writes of the wide open spaces. The story is located in the spaces of the great Canadian country in a little country town which is noted for its many different races and grades of society. The author herself is a Canadian. (Harold Vinal, Ltd., New York.)

A Voyage to the Island of the Arricoles. By the author of "Disraeli," Andre Maurois. Translated by David Garnett, the great English novelist. How would you like to voyage to the land where live the artists and writers, great and small, to see them in their living and creating? The reader will observe that Edward Carricks woodcuts are in complete sympathy with M. Maurois' satire. (Appleton Book, New York.)

Show Cases. By Jacques Le Clercq. (Macy-Masius, publishers.)

Clearing Weather. By Cornelia Meigs, with illustrations by Frank Dobias. A story which is full of action. The story is laid in the lean days following the revolution. (Little, Brown & Co., Boston.)

Way For a Sailor. By Albert Richard Wetjen. This book "catches the thrilling rythm, the lift and the plunge of the sea! (Century's Book.)

Kettle Drums and Tom Tims. By James Craig. Illustrations by Monte Crews. The story covers the whole gamut of life from Broad street to Main street and even beyond. (Burton Publishing Co., Kansas City, Mo.)

Adventurers All. By Mary Hazeltine Wade. The author of the "Little Cousin" books. In this volume she has selected seven great men and women and most interestingly she describes their heroic adventures. Among them are Woodrow Wilson, whose name will echo down the ages; Marco Polo, who is pictured as a wonderful traveler; Louis Pasteur, as one who has made possible the advances and progress in modern medicine; St. Francis of Assisi, Elizabeth Fry, and there's a new name too, he has conquered the air—Yes "There he is!" The first time those words were heard was from the shores of France, May 21, 1927, when a slim youth alighted from the Spirit of St. Louis—he is now Colonel Charles Lindbergh, the hero who made a wonder-flight and tightened the bonds of friendship between the nations of the world. The author introduces the air hero first with the comment "Glorious Adventurer of Today," and the late President Woodrow Wilson last as "The adventurer in the cause of world peace." (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS.

Sergeant York. His own life story. War diary. Edited by Tom Skeyhill. Alvin C. York is the man General Pershing called "The outstanding civilian soldier of the war." The hero, Sergeant York, when he returned from France, after accomplishing single-handed the greatest individual feat of the war, was when General Pershing made the remark. He was at that time a Tennessee mountaineer. The story of his life is interesting and entertaining. (Doubleday-Doran Co., New York.)

Dighton Rock. A study of the written rocks of New England, by Edmund Burke Delabarre, professor of psychology at Brown university., with 108 illustrations. (Walter Neale, publisher, New York. Price $6.00.)

Forty Years of Struggle For a Principle. The biography of Harry Fischel. Edited by Herbert S. Goldstein. Compiled from Mr. Fischel's daily diary newspaper clippings, editorials, and addresses delivered by him during his 40 years of service to the Jewish community. (Bloch Publishing Co., New York.)

What Is Socialism? By Jesse Wallace Hughan.

Prosperity. A symposium. Edited by Harry W. Laidler and Norman Thomas. What Makes Prosperity? Foreign Trade? Politics? Weather? These and many more were discussed in a recent conference.

The Child And the Home. Essays on the rational bringing-up of children, by Dr. B. Liber, editor of Rational Living.

Dan Minturn. A young labor leader. By M. H. Hedges. (Vanguard Press, New York.)

Losing Liberty Judicially. Prohibitory and kindred laws examined. By Thomas James Norton, of the Chicago bar. Author of The Constitution of the United States. Its Sources and Its Applications. (Published by MacMillan.)

The definition of liberty is most clearly defined in this volume. The following comment is from the pen of Chief Justice Marshall:

"To what purpose are powers limited, and to what purpose is that limitation committed to writing (in the constitution), if these limits may, at any time, be passed by those intended to be restrained."

War As An Instrument of National Policy—and Its Renunciation in the Pact of Paris. By James T. Shotwell, professor of history at Columbia university, who for the past ten years has spent much time in his study of war and peace. He was a member of the American commission at the Paris peace conference. He is at present director of the Carnegie endowment economic and social history of the world war. Since the war he has lived much in Europe, and has been in close contact with the statesmen engaged in the task of reconstruction and international affairs. (Harcourt Brace & Co., New York.)

Political Behavior. A book on politicians and their ways. By Frank R. Kent, author of "The Great Game of Politics." Walter Lippmann says of the writer: "He knows more about political behavior than anyone writing today." (William Morrow & Co., New York.)

Old Post Bags. By Alvin F. Harlow. Author of "Old Towpaths." The story of sending a letter in ancient and modern times. By Alvin F. Harlow. Introduction by Joseph Stewart, executive assistant to the postmaster-general, U. S. A. The book is a tale of adventure and bravery. (D. Appleton & Co., New York. $5.00.)

The American Way to Prosperity. By Gifford K. Simonds, general manager, and John G. Thompson, assistant to the president of Simonds Saw & Steel Co. (A. W. Shaw & Co., Chicago.)

The Preparation of Stewart Burton Nichols—His life and letters—1900-1925. By Martha S. Nichols. With illustrations. This is a most interesting biography of a man who filled his life with the things that count. (The Grafton Press, New York.)

The Second American Caravan. A year book conducted by literary men in the interests of a growing American literature. Sixty authors are represented. A full length novel by John Herrman. A full length play: New Year's Eve, by Waldo Frank. Four interesting novelettes; four narrative poems, stories and poems by some of the leading writers of today, etc. Harry Hassen, in the New York World says: "It is a gorgeous cargo. . . . Good Craftsmen. . . . Themes out of life, etc.," he also calls it a "treasure chest." This handsome volume is edited by Alfred Kreymborg, Lewis Mumford and Paul Rosenfield. (Published by Macaulay, New York. $5.00.)

Liberty in the Modern World. By George Bryan Logan, Jr. Published by University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill.

POETRY, DRAMA AND MUSIC.

Brush Strokes—On the Fan of a Courtesan. Verse fragments in the manner of the Chinese. By Dorothy Graham and James W. Bennett. (Harold Vinal, Ltd., New York.)

Songs of Tropic Trails. By George Warburton Lewis. With a foreward by Harry Franck. Colonel Lewis is a world wanderer and the author of "Poems of Panama." At the present time he is in command of Coronel and of that splendid body of men, La Policia Insular de Puerto Rico. This collection has all the romance and the color of the Caribbean.

The Song of Solomon. A play by Hubert Osborne. Assistant director of the Yale University theater, and is the author of "Shore Leave" and other successful plays. (D. Appleton & Co., New York.)

Homespun. Poems by Beatrice Joyce. "Rich indeed are the sources from which the author draws her inspiration." Many of the poems in this collection have appeared in New York newspapers. (Harold Vinal, Ltd., New York.)

Moods. By Gertrude Lee. Published by Stratford Co. This is another collection of simple and sweet poems filled with beautiful thoughts and loving words. In the poem on life are the following four lines:

After the sunshine comes the rain,
After the pleasure comes the pain,
After a tear a smile we must have.

JUNIOR BOOKS.

Drums—"The Little River Country." By James Boyd. With pictures by N. C. Wyeth. There are 14 beautiful pictures in color with nearly 50 drawings. This handsome volume is the latest addition to the illustrated series of classics for younger readers. It is of course a historical story that will be both interesting and instructive to the young readers. (Published by Charles Scribner's Sons, New York. Price $2.50.)

Youth's Enchantment. By Suzane Taylor. Illustrations by Jaques Soriau. This little book with its blue and gold covers will be entertaining for any child—its poems are pleasing and will hold the child's attention for "the rollicking tunes of the hurdy-gurdy are a part of every child's musical repertory." (Stratford's Book, Boston.)

CHILDREN'S BOOKS.

Fairies and Flowers. No book can be more attractive for the little people than one in which they are having a good time with the flowers and the fairies:

Little People.

"Come with me—let's make-believe
Sail fairy ships on fairy seas,
For these are the only ships you have
And these are the only seas."

This little book all dressed up in a beautiful dress trimmed in gold contains a collection of poems by Mrs. Charles S. Nelson, the illustrations being by Miss Louise Spradlin. (Publisher, Harold Vinal, New York.)

COMPLETE MEMORIAL, BEN S. READ URGES

Stone Mountain Project Is Vital Need, Telephone Head Asserts.

A letter written by Ben S. Read, president of the Southern Bell Telephone & Telegraph company, declaring that the Stone Mountain memorial has a universal appeal and that its completion is a matter of vital consequence not only to Atlanta but to Georgia and the entire south, was made public Saturday by G. F. Willis, president of the Stone Mountain Memorial association. At the same time, Mr. Willis revealed that he has received similar letters from many prominent Georgians.

In the past few weeks Mr. Willis has received letters of similar import from outstanding leaders of industry, finance, transportation and civic affairs, among them being J. J. Pelley, president of the Central of Georgia railroad; H. M. Atkinson, chairman of the board of the Georgia Power company; Eugene R. Black, governor of the Atlanta Federal Reserve bank; Fred Houser, secretary of the Atlanta Convention bureau; Clark Howell, editor of The Atlanta Constitution; Charles A. Wickersham, president of the West Point railroad and the Georgia railroad; Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power company; Dr. M. L. Duggan, state school superintendent of Georgia.

Mr. Read in his letter mentions the fact that a party of friends of his recently visited in Atlanta, and declared to him that nowhere in all their travels in the principal countries of the world had they seen anything approaching the great monument in process of being carved on Stone Mountain.

Mr. Read's letter to Mr. Willis follows:

"Dear Mr. Willis: I recently entertained some friends from a distant state who were attracted to Atlanta by their interest in the Stone Mountain memorial. They spent several hours at the mountain and, although they had read of the project and seen many pictures of it, they were amazed at the physical magnitude of the undertaking and thrilled by its artistic and educational value to the south and to the whole nation. These people are widely traveled, but they had nowhere viewed a similar work of art which in their opinion approached the Stone Mountain memorial.

"You have doubtless heard of hundreds of similar incidents which emphasize the fact that there is a nation-wide and sympathetic interest in the memorial.

"There is no doubt that the memorial has a universal appeal. The ideals which it is designed to inspire, the tradition which it commemorates, the beauty of its environment, as well as the art which it perpetuates, stir the emotions of all men of all nations.

"In this I see the greatest value of the memorial, and I congratulate you upon your unselfish effort to enthuse and interest the people in our own section in the early completion of this admirable undertaking.

"With my very best wishes and personal regards.

"Yours very sincerely,
"BEN S. READ."

SALVATION ARMY OFFICER TO SURVEY INDUSTRIAL HOME

A detailed study of the Salvation Army industrial home here, with a view to suggesting possible improvements in methods of rehabilitation for men who are "down but not out," is to be made this week by Colonel Myles Pickering, veteran of 43 years in that phase of the army's work.

Captain Hugo Bloomberg, social service officer in charge of the institution here, stated that the study is in line with the army's policy of continually adapting its work to changing conditions and making full use of the steadily growing fund of social service and psychological information gained in handling thousands of men annually.

DR. ELLIS CONCLUDES DECATUR ADDRESSES

Decatur, Ga., January 26.—(Special.)—For the past six days the young preachers at Columbia Theological seminary, Decatur, have been sitting at the feet of a newspaperman, learning the lessons about the Bible, which may be gleaned only by personal travel in Bible lands.

So different from the usual run of religious lectures have been these addresses that large numbers of persons have gone out to Decatur from Atlanta and the surrounding territory. The speaker has been Dr. William T. Ellis, a nationally-known journalist and traveler, who bears the unique distinction of being the first man in history to visit all the places mentioned in the Bible. His six lectures at Columbia, which closed yesterday, have been under the general title "Explorations and Adventures in Bible Lands."

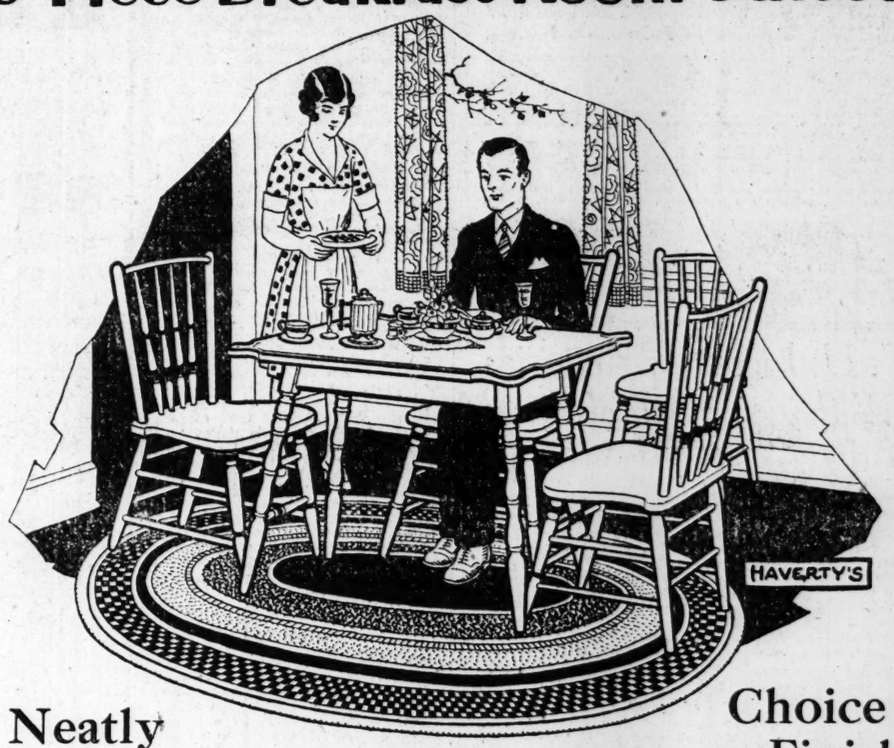

"Bible lands," said Dr. Ellis, "are to the Holy Land as the United States is to New Jersey, the latter being the same size as the Holy Land proper."

Having ranged widely over the vast background of the Bible, in the five earlier lectures, the speaker yesterday confined himself to the Holy Land which was the scene of the life of Jesus. He described the characteristics of the land, and the persistent customs of the people, and took his hearers to Bethlehem for Christmas.

More significant is Dr. Ellis' story of a Christmas eve which he spent in a Syrian kahn, like unto the Bethlehem inn where Jesus was born. In this case, too, there was a baby in the manger. Experiences in a primitive carpenter shop in Nazareth, such as that in which Jesus learned His trade, and amidst a storm on Lake Gallilee, and in the hills of Judea and on the great high road which the Master trudged with His disciples, were told in detail by the lecturer.

In his closing passages yesterday morning Dr. Ellis depicted in detail an Easter sunrise on a housetop on the wall of Jerusalem within shouting distance of all the scenes of the crucifixion and resurrection of Jesus.

THREE FINE HOMES
WE are offering three of the elegant homes in Druid Hills at prices considerably under former figures. This gives the buyer an opportunity to take advantage of circumstances which are in his favor.
TWO of these elegant homes are priced at $25,000; they offer to the prospective buyer a value represented by choice location in the original part of Druid Hills where the lots are very large; no one could possibly buy a lot in this section and build a house as good as one of these without spending considerably more than $25,000; even then he would not have the benefit of the fine shrubbery, planting and landscaping which go with a personal home.
WE have another Druid Hills home priced at $23,000, and for this particular place we can accept as part payment a smaller home or investment property. It represents a real saving in the outlay of cash by giving the buyer an opportunity to make part payment in other city property.
THESE three homes may be seen by prospects who will make personal appointments with our salesmen.

IDEAL HOME
ONE of the finest homes in Druid Hills, on Springdale Road near the byway, two-story cream brick, tile roof, 4 bedrooms and two baths; elevated lot beautifully shaded with fine shrubbery. We are in a position to save you eight thousand dollars on this place. There is no loan and will make very liberal terms. This is the best bargain in this exclusive section. Call Mr. Booth, WA. 2723.

WE'LL BUILD THIS BRICK VENEER HOME FOR $5350.00

THIS OFFER IS SOMETHING MORE THAN MERE ADVERTISING BAIT

It is an unusual temporary offer presented to you to get you to begin building now rather than wait till spring. Waiting till spring to build is a habit that many form without knowing the true facts about winter building.

Winter dampness causes cement and plaster to set up slowly, thereby assuring more durability and less cracks. Winter material prices are lower. Winter labor costs are lower.

The home here shown has six major rooms and is complete in every respect as to architectural design, adaptability, convenience, size, comfort, and attractiveness.

Let us show you this home under actual construction; then you can visualize it on your lot. Our showing you the home or the plans will not obligate you.

Well-Balanced Six-Room Colonial Design

Today's featured design, plan No. 346-S, prepared by Fox, Duthie and Foose, registered architects, of Cleveland, has many good features, including a high sink set beneath a window, clothes chute and built-in corner china closets. Blueprints and specifications of our house plans, ready to build from, are available to our readers at low cost. Plans from Home Owners Institute, Inc., copyright, 1929.

Early American Dwelling Built as Master Model Home

Cleveland Demonstration House Has Brick Walls, Steel Windows, Asbestos Shingle Roof; Clothes Chute, Incinerator, Lavatory Included.

BY L. PORTER MOORE,
President, Home Owners Institute, Inc.

This early American type dwelling, with chimney at one end and stairway at the other, was designed by Fox, Duthie and Foose, registered architects, of Cleveland, and built in the Shaker Heights section of that city by Robert V. Clapp company. Side walls are of common brick, with steel casement windows. A roof of color blended rigid asbestos was used with an exterior drainage system of sheet copper. Decorative shutters with characteristic porch and entry detailing, together with forged iron hardware in the truly American heart design, prevent any feeling of monotony due to the simple lines of the structure.

Built as a master model home under the sponsorship of Home Owners' institute, The Cleveland Plain Dealer and Sykes and Thompson company, the organization in charge of sales in Shaker Village, the exclusive residential community of the Van Sweringen company, this dwelling, plan No. 346-S, contains 24,200 cubic feet of space, which is divided into six main rooms, bath, downstairs lavatory, breakfast alcove off the kitchen and six roomy closets. Storage space is available in the attic. Fully excavated basement provides for a card or billiard room as well as for heating equipment, fuel storage and laundry; floor has been finished and electric outlets provided in anticipation for such use.

House Has Many Good Features.

Porch seats, bay window in living-room, space for built-in seats at either side of the hearth, corner china closets in the dining room, clothes chute at the rear of the lower hall, built-in garbage and waster incinerator with hopper door near the range, high-set sink under a window, provision for electric refrigerator are among the good features of the design that should be noted.

A convenient side entrance, with lavatory just inside, is provided. French doors in the dining room gives access to an open terrace which overlooks the garden. Over the range there is a copper hood to confine cooking odors, smoke and gases. Master bedroom has four windows, with a fifth in the closet; the other two bedrooms are cross-ventilated. Privacy is gained by having the bathroom window in a side wall rather than on the front elevation.

Three coats of lime plaster on metal lath insure crack-proof walls; a complete system of electric wiring provides light and power at each point where needed; insulated, jacketed, sectional boiler, asbestos-covered heating mains, thin tube radiators with necessary valve supply economical heat; brass pipe, chromium-plated brass fittings and plumbing fixtures finished with acid-resisting enamel give a trouble-proof, labor-saving sanitary system.

An outline of the specifications to which this master model home was built follows:

Masonry—Concrete footings under all walls, as shown on drawings. All foundation walls to be of poured concrete or concrete block made with Portland cement. Concrete to be mixed with water-proofing compound. Foundation walls may be of common brick, laid in one-to-three Portland cement mortar, at owner's option. Exterior walls and chimney of common brick; all flues lined. Fireplace selected brick; provide ash dump with clean-out door in cellar. Steel basement windows of standard sizes with cam acting latch and double contact weathering at owner's option.

Incinerator—Built-in incinerator to be installed in chimney, with receiving hopper door located in or near the kitchen for disposal of garbage and trash.

Carpentry—All framing lumber shall be well seasoned and free from large knots, either Douglas fir or yellow pine. California white pine for exterior millwork and interior trim. Edge grain soft pine, maple or oak floors; steel bridging for floor joints. One-panel, inner frame, flush-molded interior doors and built-in kitchen cabinet as required.

Hardware—Owner shall furnish all hardware. Exterior hardware shall be rustproof. Hinges for entrance doors shall be of the ballbearing or anti-friction type equipped with roller pins. Designed hardware to be of forged iron in curley lock or heart design unless otherwise specified. Garage hardware shall be sliding and folding type, depending on type of opening, delivered complete in original box.

Casement Windows—To insure maximum light and air steel casement windows in single or multiple units with transom as shown on drawings are recommended. All corners to be electrically welded; all muntins to be flush on both interior and exterior faces. Malleable iron or solid bronze hardware to be used. Frames to be anchored with continuous angles. Bronze screens recommended.

Plastering and Lathing—Three-coat work over metal lath is recommended. A less expensive job may be obtained through the use of one-half inch of plaster over flat rib expanded metal lath or wood lath. Insulating lumber or plasterboard may be used if desired by owner. Lime plaster for base coats, with finishing hydrate for smooth white finish coat or textured finish, is recommended for all plastering.

Metal Work—Gutters, rain-pipes, valleys and flashings to be 16-ounce copper.

Roofing—Roof of rigid asbestos shingles; styles, thicknesses, colors, sizes and shapes as specified; to be laid in accordance with manufacturer's instructions.

Painting—Strictly pure white lead and linseed oil in proper proportion, with zinc oxide where desired, or a good grade of ready-mixed paint shall be used. Interior trim to receive two good coats of flat paint and one coat of flat enamel. Finished floors to be varnished or waxed throughout as directed.

Electrical Work—Complete system of electric wiring from meter to all outlets, including all panel boards, junction boxes and other fittings. The installation must be in accordance with the rules and regulations of the National Board of Underwriters.

Lighting Fixtures—Lighting fixtures shall be correctly designed to harmonize with architectural details; rustproof metals recommended and quality of finish to be considered.

Plumbing—Brass piping for hot and cold water lines. Gas or coal fired hot-coil water heater. Reinforced concrete septic tank where sewer connections are not available. Acid resisting enamel fixtures, with chromium-plated brass fittings, recommended for laundry, kitchen, bathroom and lavatory. System must be as shown on plans and conform with local regulations.

The Work—The floors and wainscot in bathroom and lavatory, with built-in china accessories.

Heating—Steam, hot air or hot water for hard or soft coal, coke, oil or gas. All steam mains and returns, and all hot water lines to be insulated with three-ply cross-corrugated asbestos pipe covering, fittings to be insulated with a 3-4-inch asbestos cement; all applied in accordance with manufacturer's instructions. Thin tubular radiators recommended; air valves where necessary. Vaporized warm air heating at owner's option.

Temperature Control—Heat regulator with eight-day or one-day clock thermostat, limit control on boiler or furnace, and electric or spring motor.

Insulation—Throughout with insulating building board (or insulating quilting if preferred) used as plaster base on second floor ceiling operates as roof insulation.

Good Construction Made Beautiful Is End Sought

The provision of shelter is the builder's job and many developers are performing a great purpose by the erection and sale of sheltering homes for families with small purses. Yet there should be something more in a community of homes than mere shelter from the elements and interior comfort.

Every one recognizes that there is something wrong with communities created "quantitatively" with no thought of quality. By all means let us have homes but not at the sacrifice of beauty; this is the spirit behind the best modern development work. Good construction, made beautiful, will always remain at a premium in the home market and good developers will always be able to base successful campaigns on these two fundamentals.

Paneled Interiors Reproduce Periods

The popularity of paneled walls is strongly founded upon their association with home interiors of period styles now currently popular. Colonials, English and Norman prototypes of the houses which are springing up on every side in American suburbs had their main rooms usually finished in paneling of some type, for in many cases the old builders did not understand the art of plastering, and frequently there was no suitable material available.

Modern craftsmen have not alone reproduced the best of the elaborate hand carvings of old times but have originated new modernistic forms which accord well with the present-day interiors of pyramid, geometric effects and plane surfaces.

Elaborate applied forms as decorative centers for paneling are now made in synthetic materials hydraulically pressed, and, because of their quantity manufacture, are low in price. These materials reproduce even the defects which were the marks of authenticity on the old panelings, and are fireproof and imperishable.

Home Owner More Valuable

Good citizenship is founded on a willingness of the individual to assume responsibility. When a man undertakes to own his own home he demonstrates that characteristic to a great degree and automatically becomes more valuable to himself and to the body politic.

Kitchen Cabinets Improve.

Sanitary, rounded inside corners, smooth doors, concealed hinges, each unit complete for use singly, or in a unit combination and finished in a choice of colors, including cactus green, dove gray, lama tan, ivory and shasta white, kitchen cabinets become more efficient and more attractive each year.

Color Responses Guide in Use Of Tints in House

Color is one of the most useful tools at the command of the home maker. An understanding of effects color produces, so far as we have been able to measure them, will greatly aid the decorator. The following notes, reprinted from "Gas Logic," are worth bearing in mind.

"It has been found that the nervous system responds to color in somewhat the same manner that it reacts to music. A number of artists are devotees of the color-music theory, and have worked out color symphonies. Red, corresponding to the low notes of the scale, is the most powerful color known to science. It has a very definite stimulating effect upon the circulation and upon the digestive system, and can be used to inspire quick action. Heat, danger, power, destruction and anarchy are denoted by its tone. Persons subjected to the influence of strong red have been found to have a 50 per cent increase in muscular activity over that shown when subjected to a quieter hue.

"Yellow is a gay color, reflecting more light than any other. Suggestive of warmth and joy, it denotes wealth, gold and splendor, and is often referred to as the "energy" color. Orange, being the offspring of red and yellow, has the qualities of each, softened by the effect of one on the other. It attracts attention more than any other color except red, but is less exciting to the nervous system than a carmine tint.

"The soothing quality of blue is readily distinguished. Borrowing its tone from the sky, it suggests distance—that far-away quality which in more tangible forms becomes coldness, solitude and dignity. It has even been connected with sadness by some colorists, who find in it the characteristics of shadows. Green is the "young" color found in budding trees and new grass. As in nature, it tends to form the background, rather than the dominant tone. Being a combination of blue and yellow, it has the restfulness of blue and the life quality of yellow.

"Unable to sell purple silks in certain foreign sections of the city, a silk manufacturer discovered that the color was associated with the church and, therefore, deemed unsuited for ordinary wear. Purple has more historical significance and symbolism than any other color, for it long has been associated with the ceremoniousness of the church and of royal pageantry. It is the "thoughtful" color, tending to stimulate philosophical thought. Black, although traditionally signifying mourning and other forms of sadness, has acquired an association with dignity and formality.

"New associations are constantly being formed, and many of the older color traditions are splitting up into new phases, but the fundamental effects remain fairly constant. Women would do well to gown themselves in blue, if they would meet the color preference of men, for research has shown that "the stronger sex" generally prefers blue, while women favor red. As a second choice, the colors are reversed. Color has a great effect on size. Light colors make objects look larger, while dark ones minimize their actual size, and small spaces make colors seem brighter, while large ones dim them."

Precautions That Will Rid Home Of Coal Gas Menace

Danger from coal gas, which, every winter, takes its toll of lives in American homes, can be eliminated entirely by following a few simple rules, according to heating experts.

"All coal generates deadly carbon monoxide gas when heated," they state. "The problem is to get the gas up the chimney, rather than to have it percolating through the house.

"Many persons imagine they can detect the odor of 'coal gas,' and take no precautions until they begin to smell it. But carbon monoxide gas is entirely odorless, and is therefore all the more deadly. The only safe way to deal with it is to prevent it from escaping, except through the chimney. The following rules will help to accomplish this:

"1—When adding fuel to the fire, make sure there is a good draft by opening the draft and smoke-pipe dampers and closing the checkdraft on the smoke-pipe.

"2—Before putting in coal, close the ashpit door and its draft shutter. This throws the main draft to the fuel feed door above, where it can sweep across the top of the fire and quickly consume all the fuel-gases.

"3—Distribute the coal evenly on the fire.

"4—After it is distributed close the feed door, open the lower draft and let the heating plant stand thus for 15 or 20 minutes while the bases are being 'cooked' out and burned off the fresh coal and the fumes are being carried away. Then make the usual regulations to control the fire."

Coal gas poisoning occurs most frequently, according to the engineers, when large quantities of coal are added to the fire and the heater is "closed up for the night."

This is why it is so necessary for the householder to understand the technical details of his central heating plant. The furnace of standard make consists of only seven solid iron castings. All of these are fitted together with double cup joints sealed with asbestos cement. In this construction the danger of deadly gases filtering into the air-chamber and being circulated through the home is reduced to absolute minimum

Hondurans Break Jail.

Tegucigalpa, Honduras, January 26. (AP)—Twenty men, led by Pedro Sierra, who recently escaped from jail, today attacked the village of El Sauce, near Sagana Grande, killing one municipal official. Forty mounted policemen pursued the band and shot Sierra, the others escaping through the mountains to Salvador.

National Realtor President Plans Visit to Local Board On Aerial Tour of Country

Retiring Leader Cites Prosperous Condition of Nation in Address at Birmingham Session.

Birmingham, Ala., January 26.—(Special.)—Atlanta will be visited on March 8 by Harry H. Culver, of Los Angeles, when the newly installed president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards undertakes his airplane tours of the realtor organizations of the country.

Plans for five airplane tours of the United States and Canada, on which he will have contact with each of the 633 local real estate boards holding membership in the National Association of Real Estate Boards, were announced by Mr. Culver, following his inauguration as the president of the national association at the annual meeting of the organization which was wound up here at the close of the week.

First Airplane Office.

Mr. Culver stated that he intends to give practically all of his time during the year to his duties as president of the association. In order to conserve time and make his air trips as efficiently as possible, Culver has established an office in the plane which he has purchased for the tours. This will be the first association office on record ever to be conducted in the air.

Immediately following the close of the business meeting at Birmingham, Mr. Culver joined a number of members of the association in a cruise of the Caribbean. During the cruise his plane, which he flew to the meeting, will be left at Callender field, just south of New Orleans. On his return, February 12, Mr. Culver starts immediately the tours on which, by holding group meetings of boards where the cities are geographically located so at to make this possible, and by traveling at a good speed in his plane, he hopes to average meetings with two boards daily.

Zander's Report.

Simplification of the laws governing real estate in the various states so that real estate will not remain, as someone has said, "the most difficult of all commodities to transfer," and uniformity for these laws should be the central aims for real estate for 1929, Henry G. Zander, Chicago, retiring president, emphasized in his formal report of the work of the association for 1928.

"Elimination of discrimination against real estate in the federal income tax laws must be secured," Mr. Zander continued. "Especially must we work for a reduction of the rate on capital gains and the treatment of commissions paid for making of long term lease."

In commenting on the outlook for real estate at the present time, Mr. Zander, speaking from his years of experience as president of the national association, said: "In traveling thousands of miles, I have had unique opportunities for studying and observing real estate conditions everywhere. I think that they are sound, more so than they were three or four years ago, when I felt that our activity was above normal.

"Money for real estate development is everywhere obtainable. Indeed, the growth of capital wealth in our country, which amounts to some seven and a half billions of dollars per year, has now reached such proportions that in good real estate mortgages the demand exceeds the supply. Building is still continuing at a wholesome rate, and will, in my opinion, be still more active next year. New living standards in America are creating demands for a new type of housing in dwellings and in business structures, and in factories."

Measurable advancement made during the past year alone in grasp of basic facts about real estate, in betterment of legislation affecting real property, and in the establishment of high standards of business practice in the field of real estate has been so great as to justify all the effort which has been made under the leadership of the national association in the 21 years in which it has been in existence, Mr. Zander said.

Federal legislation profoundly affecting real property and removing handicaps on the sale of real estate was the chief gain made during the year under the association's leadership, Mr. Zander said. Changes incorporated in the federal revenue act, all of them in administrative provisions of the act, will be felt for many years to come, he pointed out.

Work Under Way.

In closing his report Mr. Zander spoke of the projects for real estate advancement at which the national association is now engaged. Among them he enumerated:

1. The organization of a group of councillors to advise with respect to the mortgage situation how best to solve the problems involved in junior financing and in financing the building and purchase of homes.

2. The work of a special committee acting in conjunction with professional economists in a survey and study of the field of agricultural real estate. It is hoped that this study will show the trend of real estate business in farm lands and likewise business conditions in agriculture itself.

3. Research for the purpose of framing a uniform mortgage act to be offered to all states for consideration.

4. A study of a uniform mechanic lien law which will have as its aim the removal of discriminations against real estate.

5. A study of the possibilities of lightening costs of street improvements through so-called "excess condemnation."

6. The preparation of two additional real estate courses—"Advertising" and "Real Estate Finance." These courses will be offered within a month to members of the association.

Roof Rolls and Ridges.

The primary purpose of a roof is to keep out the weather. To attain that end the home owner is justly interested in the selection of a durable roofing material. He should use equal care in the ridge which finishes off the roof. In many roofs a roll of sheet metal is placed along the ridge. This assures the tightness at this weather-beaten place. Another method of finishing asbestos shingle roofs is with an asbestos roll, made for the purpose. The tile roof also has a special ridge roll member.

It is also customary to finish the ridge with shingles or slate overlapping each other at the ridge. With this type of construction, slate or asbestos shingles must be well cemented along the entire ridge to keep out the weather. Hips are usually finished in the same manner as ridges

George J. Morris Cites Essentials In Sales Success

Intelligent effort and approaching enough prospects with a line of real salesmanship instead of just a "joy ride" and exhibiting a few pieces of property, are some of the essentials for success in the real estate field today. These fundamentals of real estate selling, with others, were outlined by George J. Morris in a recent talk to the sales organization of F. P. & George J. Morris.

Excerpts of Mr. Morris' address follow:

"It has been my experience during the past eight years in the real estate field that if a salesman works hard—does his level best and sees enough prospects each day he is bound to succeed.

"The day of riding a prospect around and showing a few pieces of property, then signing a contract on the first or second trip is a thing of the past. It is now a question of real salesmanship, honest work, intelligent effort and close attention to business.

Only Value Counts.

"Few people will buy from you on the basis of friendship or brotherly love alone. It is a cold-blooded proposition where you have to show them the dollar and cents side of the deal from their own standpoint, but above everything else you must show them the property that is suitable to their needs and which they can afford to own. When that point in your work is reached you will find little or no resistance.

"Some people are easily sold and some are hard to sell, but they don't usually buy until they have been educated to the best side of your proposition. It is absolutely unreasonable to expect the other fellow to do business with you until you show him some good, sound, logical reason why he should.

"Remember, there is a real method and time to land every prospective purchaser you have. Make up your mind to that now and when you fail to close the sale don't make the mistake of blaming your prospect. Always take the blame yourself. You'll get a lot of good out of analyzing your work in that way—it will help you improve your methods and increase your sales, while by accepting any prospect as impossible you will weaken yourself, even on the people with whom you are naturally most successful.

Must Create Demand.

"The salesman does not live who can make good and stay at the front without putting in full time every day. In selling real estate you are safe in figuring that the demand must be created to a very considerable extent by you. It is a big man's job and has a big man's income. If the proper effort is put into it, the reward is well worth the battle you win.

"The present-day salesman must be an analyzer, a planner, a hard worker and a constructive producer. It is surprising how quickly you can gain the reputation of being a hustler, and it is wonderful how valuable such a reputation becomes to a man. When you create the impression of a hustling hard worker in the minds of others they are always willing to regard your statements as having weight. The fact that you are always busy establishes the conclusion that you are successful and that your advice is worth while.

"There is always room for improvement. We all know that we have overlooked opportunities to go after new people—that we have actually lost business by figuring certain prospects would keep a little longer—that lots of prospects were not ready to buy or that we would find the conditions more 'ideal' at some future date.

Follow-Up Necessary.

"Remember, when your prospect is ready to buy ninety-nine times out of a hundred he will go ahead and buy from the first salesman who comes along full of pep and shows the property suitable to his needs, and when you arrive, instead of finding him waiting for you, he is packing his furniture and getting ready to move into his new home and your sale is lost.

"Many a call made by a salesman plants a seed for business that never matures simply because it is not followed up—and wherever a call is made and the prospect neglected, that call represents wasted effort and dead expense to the salesman and his firm.

"Staleness on the job settles down on a salesman in a peculiar manner. First he begins to figure that the sales meetings of are no benefit to him and that his daily reports are a nuisance and a lot of red tape—he is inclined to look upon them as a unnecessary bother—then they become in his mind a sort of annoyance and finally he displays a spirit of resentment towards the one who is offering to help him increase his income.

"Permanent success in selling demands team work with the firm. You can't fight the battle single-handed. You need the stimulus that comes from unity of purpose."

AIRPORT CONCERN LEASES CANDLER BUILDING SPACE

Lease of a suite of offices in the Candler building to the American Airports corporation was announced Saturday, revealing further expansion of Atlanta as an aviation center. Captain Stanford E. Moses, retired United States navy officer, will be in charge of the local office, which will serve as southeastern headquarters for the corporation.

Captain Moses was formerly commander of the aircraft squadrons of the battle fleet, and has written extensively on aviation, being a contributor to the Saturday Evening Post and other publications. He came here from California via Chicago and New York as southern representative of the American Airports corporation, which designs and constructs airports and manages them, but doesn't own them. Its duties, Captain Moses explained, correspond to those of an engineer or architect.

Latest Home Creations Attract Attention to Building Program of Atlanta Realty and Construction Company

Four home creations, varied in architectural design but alike in beauty and skill of workmanship, just completed by the Atlanta Realty and Construction company, important factor in Atlanta's residential development. The home shown on the upper row, to the left, was built for H. M. Long, at 543 Lakeshore drive, in the fast-growing Massell subdivision, Druid Hills section. On the right is pictured the new residence of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Peixatto, at 70 East Clifton road. Below, to the left is seen W. M. Carmichael's dwelling recently finished at 1151 Oxford road, Druid Hills, and to the right, the home of J. V. Poole on Ivy road.

DRAPER LISTS $135,000 IN SALES FOR JANUARY

The real estate market in Atlanta shows every indication of old time activity, Jesse Draper, president of Draper-Owens company, declared Saturday. The following sales totaling $135,000, consummated through Draper-Owens company during January, 1929, were reported by Mr. Draper:

Crocket-Jenkins to Jesse Brannen, 13-unit apartment at 22-24 Collier road, at the corner of Anjaco road. This sale was handled by G. W. Withers.

C. W. Martin to Mary Ballenger Fost, residence on Rivers road, in Peachtree Heights park. This sale was handled by Carl Fort.

J. R. Little to J. H. Hines, lot on Rivers road, sales handled by Carl Fort.

Tract of 800 acres farm land in Bulloch county, sold by Brannen Realty Finance corporation to a client; transaction handled by G. W. Withers.

Peachtree Heights Park company to May Atkinson Dick, four additional lots on the corner of Habersham and Una drives, which will be incorporated into the land approximating 25 acres already acquired, on which is being erected one of the most beautiful residences around Atlanta.

Mr. Draper stated that in his opinion it has never been more apparent that the real estate market in Atlanta is on the verge of a period of real activity. Mr. Draper further asserted that it is his belief there exists today in Atlanta opportunities which will never be presented again to the investor, for years to come.

EMPTY HANDED HOOVER RETURNS FROM FISHING

Miami, Fla., January 26.—(AP)—President-elect Hoover returned here at 10:50 o'clock tonight from his fishing trip in the Florida keys. With Mrs. Hoover and other members of his party, he drove immediately to the preinaugural vacation home at Belle Isle. While he landed with a large number of fish, Mr. Hoover failed in his ambition to catch a sailfish, one of the largest and gamest of the finny tribe in the waters to the south. It was stated that as soon as he could clean up an accumulation of work here, within the next few days, he would return to Long Key, Fla., to again try his luck.

Members of the party said the president-elect hooked two sailfish, but that both got away, one breaking his line and the other breaking the leader. Mark Sullivan, fishing companion of the next president, had better luck, landing a large sailfish after a long battle.

As nightfall came the next president reluctantly gave up, landing at Long Key at 8 p. m. and boarding the Havana special on the Florida East Coast railroad 20 minutes later. Great secrecy was thrown about the departure of Mr. Hoover from Long Key, and consequently few knew that he would arrive here.

As a further precaution to avoid the crowds, the train was stopped so that the private car was a full block away from the station.

BISHOP CANDLER TO PREACH TODAY AT DRUID HILLS

Bishop Warren A. Candler will preach at Druid Hills Baptist church at 11 o'clock this morning and again at 7:30 o'clock tonight. His theme at the morning hour will be "The Transfiguration." At night his subject will be "Love and Joy Arising in the Sense of Sins Forgiven." The public is invited to hear the distinguished churchman.

With John J. Thompson Co.

CHARLES T. BELL LUTHER ROBERTS BRYCE B. SMITH

Continued activity in the residential market, which figured notably in the general real estate transactions of 1928, was reflected in recent expansion of John J. Thompson & Co.'s sale organization. The Thompson company, which occupies a leading role in local residential sales, is regarded in some quarters as a barometer of the home market, which adds significance to the concern's recent enlargement of the sales staff.

The latest addition to the organization consists of three high caliber salesmen. They are Charles T. Bell, Luther Rroberts and Bryce B. Smith.

Mr. Smith, who, in keeping with his initials, "B.B.," has been known to commercial acquaintances as "Big Business" Smith, is widely acquainted throughout the south, having traveled this territory for 15 years, as sales representative for large eastern manufacturing concerns. While not directly interested in real estate work heretofore, Mr. Smith is a capable salesman by instinct and demonstration, possessing the attractive personality required for success in this field. In addition to this qualification he is thoroughly familiar with the property and background of Atlanta, having made his residence here for more than six years. He will specialize in north side homes.

Mr. Roberts is well known in this section, having practiced law at Gainesville for about 25 years. As attorney for the state banking department, he resided in Atlanta for three years, until his health failed last year and he was obliged to recuperate in Florida. Upon returning to Atlanta, he was impressed with the opportunity presented by the real estate profession here. He has been engaged in handling local real estate transactions for about six months and has joined the Atlanta Real Estate board and the Atlanta Real Estate Salesmen's association. Like Mr. Smith, Mr. Roberts is specializing in north side homes of the better class.

With the acquisition of Charles T. Bell, the Thompson organization has added for the patron's convenience an expert in the vacant lot field. Mr. Bell is acquainted with basic valuation of unimproved parcels, having devoted his real estate experience of six or seven years to this phase of property sales. For the past two years he has handled the sale of vacant lots in Atlanta and is acquainted with every aspect of local land values.

Enthusiastic Crowd Greets Emory Club at Agnes Scott

BY C. M. McMILLAN.

In its first public appearance since its return from Europe last summer, the Emory University Glee club Saturday night was greeted by an enthusiastic audience of college girls and Atlantans at Agnes Scott college, in Decatur. The club, under the direction of Dr. Malcolm H. Dewey, was the guest of the members of the Agnes Scott Glee club, who were sponsors for the concert, held in the auditorium.

The concert presented a double bill, composed of the Glee club of forty boys and the Little Symphony orchestra of forty-odd instruments. In addition, the program was interspersed with comic and solo talent discovered in the annual "Extravaganza" presented at Emory last fall.

Won Continuous Encores.

With its customary variety of classic, semi-classic and folk songs, the Glee club won continuous encores on most of its numbers. Some of the songs were taken from the European music lore of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, which has been revised by the director to provide exceptional chorus material. In many of these the club was supported by the orchestra.

Opening with Mozart's "Symphony in G Minor," first movement, by the orchestra, the first part of the program presented the more classic atmosphere. The club first appeared singing Bach's "Break Forth, O Beauteous Light," and Morley's "I Go Before My Charmer," both mid-sixteenth century products. "Chit-Chat," by Moffet, was received with tremendous applause by the audience.

Simple Group.

The next group of songs were relatively simple, but well adapted to the chorus of male voices. They included "On Wings of Song," "Indian Dawn," and others. The club closed the first part with several negro spirituals, the songs for which the club has become best known.

Individual triumph was scored in the first act by Mike McDowell, pianist, who was "floored" with applause following his rendition of the "Waltz" by Levitsky. He played again with the "trio" composed of Hugh Trobaugh, violinist, and Erwin Morgan, cellist, in the offering, "Cavatina," by Ruff.

The club ranged freely from the realm of opera in the first number of selections from "Faust" to old English songs of Bantock and Sullivan in the second part. In "Salut Demeure" from "Faust," Edward Kane, former president of the Glee club and tenor soloist, captured the audience with the lead role. He was forced to reappear several times in response to applause.

John Tate, guitarist, and Peter Manning, comic "parson," served to vary the program of the second part, and the audience seemed to like the effect. The new "Emory Quartet," composed of Rosser Smith, George Monk, Bob Martin and Lloyd Griffin, sang several songs.

The concert received a fitting close in the presentation of selections from the "Show Boat," aided fully by the orchestra. The informal manner of these songs was counteracted by the basso rendition of Charlie White singing "Ole Man River," and other selections from the play.

The concert was preliminary to the tour which the club will make to Washington and other eastern points early in February.

DECEMBER BUILDING PROJECTS SHOW GAIN

New construction started in Georgia during the month of December amounted to $6,434,100, and in Atlanta to $4,793,409, according to F. W. Dodge corporation. The total for the state was 34 per cent ahead of the November, 1928, record, but there was a loss of 7 per cent from the December, 1927, total. Atlanta's total was almost double its November, 1928, record and it was almost three times as large as the December, 1927, record.

Analysis of last month's building total for Georgia showed the following items to be worthy of mention: $3,051,900, or 47 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $2,049,800, or 32 per cent, for commercial buildings; $470,700, or 7 per cent, for educational projects, and $314,500, or 5 per cent, for industrial projects.

Included in the December total for the city were: $2,377,100, or 50 per cent of all construction, for residential buildings; $1,958,900, or 41 per cent; for commercial buildings, and $369,800, or 8 per cent, for educational projects.

During the past year there was $76,119,400 worth of new building and engineering work constracted for in Georgia, as compared with a total of $67,213,500 for new building and engineering contracted for during the year 1927, the increase being 13 per cent. Atlanta's total for the year just closed amounting to $33,342,100, was 48 per cent in excess of its total for the year 1927.

STOREKEEPER IS STABBED FATALLY AT BAINBRIDGE

Bainbridge, Ga., January 26.—(AP) Paul Trulock, merchant-farmer, of Climax, was stabbed fatally at his store today, and Lit Brock was placed in the Decatur county jail here charged with murder in connection with the affair.

Witnesses said the trouble arose over an account. An argument ensued over its settlement, witnesses said, and after an exchange of words Brock whipped out a knife and stabbed Trulock in the throat. The injured man was brought to a hospital here, where he died within an hour.

Another Brookhaven Estate Holder Buys Additional Frontage

Golden Pickett, exclusive agent for Brookhaven estates, beautiful north side residential area, Saturday announced sales of 337 feet road frontage in the estates property.

A portion of this is to complete an estate of LeRoy Rogers and his son-in-law, Fleming Law, giving them a total frontage of 475 feet, Mr. Pickett stated.

Mr. Rogers, who is vice president of the American Bakeries, plans to spend a large amount of money developing his estate. Landscaping of the property is already under way, Mr. Pickett said.

J. D. Caraway, Sales Chief, Joins F. P. & Geo. J. Morris

Debut in the local real estate field of J. D. Caraway as sales manager of F. P. & Geo. J. Morris is of interest to those who have watched the rapid growth the Morris concern in Atlanta residential development, and are acquainted with the caliber of Mr. Caraway as a sales executive. The combination foretells for 1929 the most successful year in history of the Morris organization.

Mr. Caraway is fundamentally a sales executive, in which capacity he has displayed far-reaching ability with two of the nation's large rubber manufacturers, and a leading automobile producer.

Mr. Caraway comes with the Morris organization from the Hood Rubber company after serving for six and a half years as branch manager of the Atlanta district. Prior to that he was sales manager for Mohawk, handling the southern territory for four years, and for four years executive of the Willys-Overland local sales organization.

The opportunity guiding the destinies of the sales organization for F. P. & Geo. J. Morris, whose swift rise in the Atlanta real estate world has been one of the outstanding aspects of that commercial sphere, appealed to Mr. Caraway as warranting his latest move. The change has brought expressions of gratification from the Morris firm, Mr. Caraway and friends of both parties who realize the glowing possibilities in this new affiliation.

Mr. Caraway is a native of Thomaston, Ga. He came to Atlanta from Macon in 1914 and has been in the selling field since a youngster. Supplementing his ability as a sales executive in commercial life, he gained wide popularity in social and civic organizations. He is past master and past high priest in York Rite Masonry, and a member of a number of other fraternal and civic groups.

Mr. Caraway assumes direction of the Morris sales organization of about 25 men, and with William P. Oliver, as assistant sales manager, plans a substantial increase in the company's business during the current year.

J. D. CARAWAY.

I.C.C. APPROVES MERGER OF 'BIG FOUR' RAILROAD

Washington, January 26.—(United News.)—The interstate commerce commerce commission approved today the application of the New York Central railroad to acquire control, under lease, of the railroad property of the "Big Four," the Cincinnati Northern Railroad company and the Evansville, Indianapolis & Terre Haute railway.

The "Big Four" properties, which the New York Central was authorized to acquire include all right, title and interest in the properties of the Cincinnati Northern railroad, Evansville, Indianapolis & Terre Haute railway, Peoria & Eastern railway and the Kankakee & Seneca railroad, of the Michigan Central, and of the Chicago, Kalamazoo & Saginaw railway.

The commission attached as a condition to its authorization of the New York Central unification that before the leases become effective, the New York Central shall offer to acquire the lines of the Alpena, the Attica, and the Federal Valley, the steam railroads of the Fonda, and that part of the Owasco's properties known as the southern segment, and the lines of the Ulster.

Acceptance of and compliance with the conditions herein described shall not be interpreted as relieving the New York Central from the further operation of the law respecting consolidations or from taking in further short lines, the commission said.

"These matters will be approached in a spirit of cooperation looking to their solution with all due regard to the public interest," the commission added.

For the reason that more short lines may be included in the New York Central system, the commission said it was deferring its formal order of approval until compliance with the above conditions had been shown by proper proof "relating to the communication of said offers to the short lines concerned."

To give the New York Central time to purchase the short lines it is authorized to acquire, the commission said it will delay for six months entry of the final order.

The New York Central now has a large interest in the "Big Four" and the other lines which it is authorized to acquire, excepting the short lines mentioned.

BODY OF UNDERWOOD LEAVES FOR ALABAMA

Washington, January 26.—(AP)—The body of former Senator Oscar W. Underwood, of Alabama, was started on its homeward journey to Birmingham at 6:19 p. m., today from Alexandria, Va. Congressman W. B. Oliver, a former colleague of the senator, who died at his home in Woodlawn, Va., accompanied the family.

The entire Alabama congressional delegation were at the station.

The train is scheduled to reach Birmingham at 2:35 tomorrow afternoon. The body will be taken to Senator Underwood's former home, and the funeral will be from the Independent Presbyterian church in Birmingham at 10 a. m., Monday. Dr. Henry M. Edmonds, pastor, will officiate.

Messages of Condolence.

In the party accompanying Mrs. Underwood in a special car were her two sons, J. Lewis Underwood and Oscar W. Underwood, Jr., Mrs. J. Lewis Underwood, Charles M. Lews, of Washington, lifelong friend of the senator, and the former Chief Justice E. K. Campbell, of the United States court of claims.

Among the more than 1,000 messages of condolence which were received at the home in Woodlawn today was a personal message from each member of congress, republican and democratic. One from Charles Evans Hughes, who served with Senator Underwood as a delegate to the disarmament conference, paid special tribute to the late senator as a statesman and friend. There were messages from President-elect Hoover, Ambassador Fletcher, to Italy, from Governor Alfred E. Smith, and from officials high in public life throughout the country.

The homeward journey, which started from the home at Woodlawn at 4:20 p. m., was halted nearly two hours at the station at Alexandria, while the family and friends waited for the train from New York, which was to complete the trip over the Southern railway.

Might Have Been Resident.

The wait was filled with verbal tributes from the senator's former colleagues in congress. Representative Oliver said that only "little slips" had prevented Senator Underwood's being the presidential nominee of his party.

"And among leaders both in and out of his own party," Representative Oliver added, "he was admired and loved. He, as president, would have gained universal faith in democratic prosperity for he enjoyed the confidence of business leaders throughout the nation."

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Hurtle, of Gunston Hall, accompanied the family to the station. They had sent as a floral tribute, a blanket of boxwood and holly. The shrub was chosen, it was said, because throughout his life Senator Underwood had a special fondness for it.

Justice James Clark McReynolds, of the supreme court, was among the officials who went to the home at Woodlawn today to pay his last respects to the senator.

CRISP URGES TARIFF RAISED ON PEANUTS

BY GLADSTONE WILLIAMS.

Washington, January 26.—Leaving temporarily his seat as a member of the house ways and means committee, now considering tariff legislation, and appearing in the role of a witness, Representative Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, today laid before the body a complete schedule of increased rates on peanuts and vegetable oils which he urged be incorporated in the new bill as an aid to producers of the southern states.

The rates proposed by the Georgia member call for a substantial increase over those recently approved by President Coolidge, following a report from the federal tariff commission.

For shelled peanuts he asked that a duty of six cents per pound be imposed, together with a duty of 5 cents a pound on the unshelled product, 8 cents per pound of prepared peanuts, 7 cents a pound on peanut oil and a tariff of 1 cent per pound on peanut meal and cake.

Urges Peanuts' Increase.

J. H. Mills, representing the Georgia division of the farmers' union, appeared before the house ways and means committee also to urge increased rates on peanuts and vegetable oils. He contended that farmers of the producing states would be greatly improved by a more substantial degree of protection against foreign imports.

In presenting his schedules Representative Crisp explained that the president in his proclamation did not deal with manufactured peanut products and oils. To make the duty effective a compensatory levy must be placed on the side products, he declared.

At the outset of his remarks before the committee Representative Crisp said he was in full accord with the policy which is "unalterably opposed to the American standard of living being reduced to that of the Orient and Europe."

Not only does he favor such a policy for his section, he said, but for the country generally, adding that he intended to vote for its adoption in the bill.

Wants Competitive Market.

"It is an economic axiom that our present high standard can be maintained only by placing upon our imports a sufficient duty to equalize the cost of production at home and abroad," the Georgia congressman told his colleagues. "I am in full accord with this policy, and, in requesting it for my section, I will vote it also for other sections. I do not believe in rates sufficiently high to amount to an embargo to give a monopoly of the home markets to domestic manufacturers, but I do believe in a rate that will insure a fairly competitive market."

The statement of Mr. Crisp is entirely in keeping with policies of the democratic leadership in the national congress as set forth in democratic campaign documents for the past 10 years. It is an espousal of the "competitive" as against the strictly "protective" idea in tariff legislation, the latter constituting republican doctrine.

As a member of congress from one of the large peanut producing states of the union, Representative Crisp presented to the committee a complete review of the industry, showing the magnitude of operations and the importance of increased duties against shipments from the Orient and Europe. He also went into an analysis of production cost figures, explaining that producers in countries with lower standards of living were able to impose a severe handicap on southern farmers.

BY JOHN P. BOUGHAN,
Associated Press Market Editor.

Chicago, January 26.—(AP)—Grain values ran up against a stone wall of profit-taking sales today. Consequent recoils from fresh upturns in price went to well below yesterday's finish. Nevertheless, increased general inclination was shown to give attention to reports showing likelihood of serious damage to domestic winter wheat. Incidentally, corn today established a new all-around high price record for the season.

Closing quotations on wheat were weak, 1c to 1 1-2c net lower, with corn 1c to 1 1-2 at 1 5-8c down, oats 1¼ at 3-8c off, and provisions varying from 7c decline to a rise of 2c.

In the face of the fact that wheat prices were at nearly the season's best level so far, the market today displayed an early tendency to climb. Nebraska and Kansas weather and crop advices were the chief incentives to buy, Nebraska reports telling of high winds and extreme cold, with much of the ground entirely bare of snow. Meanwhile, Kansas reports were at hand saying many fields of wheat were covered with ice which has been solid for more than a week. This condition, too, was described as being general over northwestern Missouri, as well as northeastern Kansas, and also in the southeastern part of Nebraska.

On the other hand, messages from such important Kansas points as Salina and Hutchinson asserted belief that there is now more than usual damage being done to winter wheat. Motives for selling were also found in news that world shipments of wheat this week will again prove large, and in particular from countries elsewhere than North America. Reports were likewise at hand saying excellent rains have fallen in most parts of India, and that as a result good yields of wheat seem assured.

Comment that the Chicago wheat market has become the highest in the world a good deal of attention today toward the last. It was pointed out also that export demand today for wheat from North America was slow, and that "total United States exports of wheat so far this season are about 50,000,000 bushels less than last year, with domestic visible supplies 130,000,000 bushels compared to 75,000,000 bushels a year ago.

Corn received its transient upward impetus today partly from an estimate that the Argentine exportable corn surplus this year will be 88,000,000 bushels less than last year. In the end, however, the corn market sagged with wheat, although rural offerings of corn to Chicago were small and were generally held above the views of buyers. Oats followed in the wake of corn.

Provisions were firmer at the start on account of the government report showing a decrease of 5,500,000 in the number of hogs being fed on farms. Upturns in the provision market, though, were taken advantage of to sell out holdings, and the gains failed to hold.

INCREASED TRADE DEMAND CHECKS COTTON DECLINE

COTTON TUMBLES; DEMAND ONLY FAIR

BY UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The cotton market during the period January 19 to 25 was rather heavy with quotations January 25 about 7-16c lower than January 18. Domestic demand was not so active as the previous week and foreign demand was reported rather poor. Some reports indicated that holders of raw cotton were asking a higher basis, which buyers were reluctant to meet. According to the weather bureau, during the past week frequent rains and wet soil in southern states prevented plowing and other field operations. According to the bureau of the census, the number of bales ginned from the 1928 growth prior to January 16 was 13,900,000 running bales, compared with 12,500,000 a year ago and 16,600,000 for the same period in 1927. The 1928 production, according to the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture, is estimated at about 14,400,000 equivalent 500-pound bales. Exports to January 27 about 5,500,000 bales, compared with 4,500,000 the corresponding period last year. Quotations for middling, 7-8-inch, January 25—Norfolk 19.06; Augusta 19.00; Savannah 19.06; Montgomery 18.40; New Orleans 18.91; Memphis 18.30; Little Rock 18.32; Dallas 18.25; Houston 18.85; Galveston 18.95c. Average these 10 markets January 25—18.71c, compared with 19.12c January 18 and 17.66c the corresponding day last season. For the week the 10 markets reported spot sales 92,216 bales, against 80,453 the corresponding week the previous season. March future contracts for the week at New York declined 42 points to 19.82c, at New Orleans 46 points to 19.15c and at Chicago 40 points to 19.30c. Certificated stock January 25—New York 62,490 bales, New Orleans 22,963, Houston 44,411 and Galveston 69,647. Total stocks—New York 69,720, New Orleans 333,840, Houston 929,742 and Galveston 589,171.

Grade Differences.

Differences between middling and other grades remained unchanged the past week and on January 25 white good middling stood at 39 points on middling, strict middling 25, strict low middling 78 points off middling, low middling 162, strict good ordinary 249 and good ordinary 339. A year ago good middling was 43 points on middling, strict middling 28, strict low middling 34 points off middling, low middling 78, strict good ordinary 148 and good ordinary 224.

Reports indicated indifference of holders of staple cottons to sell excepting at comparatively higher premiums with manufacturers rather indifferent to meet higher quotations.

Spinners were said to be resisting advances in basis asked by sellers, particularly since they have sufficient raw cotton stocks to meet present needs. According to the bureau of the census, in the cotton-growing states during December there was active 17,931,892 spinning spindles, compared with 17,891,270 for December, 1927. Southern spinners takings to January 18 3,304,667 bales, compared with 2,969,839 the same period a year ago.

Reports indicated considerable buying interest in premiums staple cottons with occasional inquiries for round lots of several thousand bales but manufacturers have hesitated to meet present increased premiums asked by sellers. Manufacturers' immediate needs were said being filled by odd lot purchases of cotton on spot, which is available under quotations for forward shipments. Some reports indicated premium staple cotton consuming mills had enough supply to run until March or April, a few until May or June. Manufacturers reported cloth and yarn markets still very unsatisfactory. According to the bureau of the census, in the New England states there were active during December 11,411,822 cotton spinning spindles compared with 12,380,256 for December, 1927. Northern spinners' takings to January 18, 4,220,148 bales, compared with 860,575 a year ago.

Dry Goods Centers.

Reports indicated that the unsettled conditions which prevailed shortly after first of the year have to some extent disappeared and the tone of the market has recently shown improvement. Some spinners said to be receiving more inquiries for yarn with some little improvement in that situation.

Liverpool reported demand for actual cotton on spot falling off with demand for forward deliveries poor. Offerings from the south were reported on higher basis. That market reported stagnant with limited speculative and trade transactions. Stocks American, January 18, 638,000 bales, compared with 541,000 in 1928 and 887,000 in 1928. Manchester reported poor spot demand and cotton on spot pressed for sale. Offerings from America reported hardening. Yarns were quiet, with cloth sales smaller than previous week, with China the best market. Stocks, American, January 18, 65,000 bales, compared with 54,000 a year ago and 141,000 in 1927. Havre reported business at a standstill with unsold raw cotton and yarn stocks rather large. Very little price tixing reported by mills. Some scattered demand for new crop in evidence with American merchants unwilling sellers. Stocks, American at Havre January 18, 231,000 bales, compared 319,000 a year ago. Bremen said due large stocks local demand was still rather poor, although interior was a little more active. Stocks, American at Bremen January 18, 630,000, compared with 598,000 a year ago. Milan, Italy, reported market rather restricted, but some sales made for forward shipment. Imports all growths were eleven per cent more than last season and exports for yarn also eleven per cent more than last year. Some improvement said to be expected in trade situation during the spring.

World's visible supply, American cotton, January 18, 5,664,990 bales, compared 5,720,567 in 1928 and 7,246,698 in 1927. World's takings to January 18, 11,303,165 bales of which American 8,391,965, compared 11,095,435 in 1928 of which American 8,334,075.

Associated Press Financial Writer.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Favorable weekly trade and industrial reviews, and the prospects of further gold takings in London, kept bullish enthusiasm aglow through heavy weekend profit-taking in today's short session of the stock market.

Some two dozen issues were bid up to new high levels, with gains running to a maximum of 13 points in American Telephone. Utilities led in advance, the Associated Press index of 20 reaching a new high level, while the industrials and rails receded slightly. The bulk of the list closed slightly lower.

Aside from the weekly reviews, which reported that the seasonal expansion of industrial activity was going forward at a thoroughly satisfactory pace, there was little in the day's news to influence speculative sentiment. Sterling Cables dropped to a new low point for the movement, and substantial takings of gold for New York are expected in London Monday when a new shipment of Transvaal Gold will be offered in the open market.

Call Money Rate Cheers.

A 6 per cent call money rate over the week-end was reassuring, although tighter money is looked for with the month-end requirements. New York banks, however, have reduced their borrowings at the reserve bank to a point not far in excess of a year ago, and are expected to prevent a severe flurry in the money market.

American Telephone was seized upon as a market leader and rushed up 13 points to a record price at 220, an unusual spurt for this sedate issue. Consolidated Gas touch a new high, but closed unchanged. Electric Power and Light, Brooklyn Union Gas, and Peoples Gas spurted 4 and 5 points to new peaks.

Federal Mining and Smelting jumped 10 points to a record price at 270, and American Smelting climbed 3 points to a new peak. Greene Cananea, however, lost about 3 points. In the motors, Nash sold down about 2 points on profit-taking, while Mack Truck jumped 2 points to a new peak, and Studebaker touched a new high on a small gain. General Motors issues were firm.

Radio Up About 8 Points.

Columbian Carbon, Air Reduction, Coty and Liggett and Myers mounted 3 to 5 points to record prices, and Wesson Oil pushed up nearly 10. Radio jumped about 8 points. Indian Refining was a strong feature of the sluggish oils, the certificates jumping more than 8 points to a new peak. Chicago Great Western Preferred and Pere Marquette was strong spots in the rails, mounting about 3 and 6 points to new tops.

National Cash Register, which has been bid up wildly of late, sold off as much as 8 1-2 points, but reduced its loss to 2 points at the close. Johns-Manville, another recent higher flier, sold down 6 points, but rallied 3. International Nickel was sold heavily, receding 2 points, and U. S. Steel, after making a moderate advance, reacted and closed fractionally lower. Allied Chemical, Byes, Montgomery Ward, Sears, Roebuck, Motor Products, and General Electric sold from 2 to 4 points lower.

Foreign exchanges were heavy, Sterling Cables dropping to a new low for the movement at $4.84 7-8, and the Canadian dollar again sagging.

U. S. EXPECTED TO RECOMMEND DECREASE IN CROP ACREAGE

POTATO HOLDINGS INCREASE IN YEAR

BY UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE.

The annual agricultural outlook report, which will be released by the department of agriculture on Monday, January 28, is expected to recommend a general reduction in commercial acreage of most vegetables and some fruits, to restore farm prices to a more favorable basis. Growers throughout the United States will be interested to read the report in detail. Its several parts apply to all the important farm products.

During the past week, potato prices mostly held their recent gains, onions advanced further, but cabbage registered some losses. Sweet potatoes showed practically no change, though carlot movement of that product decreased about one-fourth. A slight downward tendency was observed in wholesale prices of spinach, tomatoes and lettuce. Celery markets held firm; shipments of Florida celery were rapidly increasing.

Carlot movement of 22 important fruits and vegetables still totaled about 16,200 cars for the week. Shipments exceeded last January's corresponding record by 3,000 cars, because of heavier output of apples, oranges, grapefruit, lemons, spinach and potatoes. Apple forwardings increased to 1,090 cars from western states and 855 from the east. Though orange shipments dropped 20 per cent to a total of 2,200 cars, they were still twice as heavy as a year ago. Most of the decrease the past week was in California.

The market supply of green peas was almost exclusively from Mexico. About 125 cars of peas arrived from that country, compared with 63 during the same time last season. Recent reports indicate that 63,500 acres on the Mexican west coast were planted to vegetables this season, or about 2,000 more than last year. Most of the gain is in tomato acreage in the Sinaloa valley, where about five-sixths of the tomatoes are grown. The large acreage of peas is almost entirely in the Sonoara district. Local estimates are for 7,000 to 8,000 cars of vegetables from western Mexico this season.

Potato Holdings Gain.

Potato growers and shippers are interested in the report of the department of agriculture which shows 131,000,000 bushels of merchantable potatoes on hand January 1, compared with 100,000,000 last year. The 19 surplus producing states, which account for most of the carlot movement, had about 22,000,000 bushels more, or 25 per cent heavier stocks, than on January 1, 1928, while the 16 deficient-producing late-potato states had an excess of 9,000,000 bushels, or 82 per cent over last season. Reports of intentions to plant potatoes indicate a total 1929 acreage possibly 11 per cent below that of last year, which, with recent average yields, would likely give a moderate crop of about 400,000,000 bushels.

The 1928 production of potatoes in 35 late or main-crop states was estimated at 420,891,000 bushels. With the lower price this season, there is a tendency fo growers in all parts of the country to hold somewhat larger supplies for their own use as food, and the reports received indicate that the quantity of potatoes planted per acre will average eight-tenths of a bushel heavier than last year. The total quantity saved for food on the farms where grown is estimated at about 64,500,000 bushels, and the quantity held for seed is estimated at 34,300,000 bushels. Subtracting from the total quantity, estimated to have been grown, the culls and the quantities left in the ground, fed, saved for food, and saved for seed, leaves a balance of 266,541,000 bushels, most of which has either been sold or is still available for sale. Of this quantity, it is estimated that 130,935,000 bushels are still on hand, these estimates indicate that the quantity remaining on hand for sale is less than the quantity already sold. Estimates from the growers reports indicate that in their opinion about 21,600,000 bushels of potatoes of merchantable quality will this year be utilized as food for live stock. Subtracting the 8 1-4 million bushels, estimated to have been fed to January 1, indicates that farmers still expect to feed more than 13,000,000 bushels of the quantity now on hand.

Cold Spell Hits Markets.

Severe cold weather affected trading in potato markets early in the week. Haulings in some of the northern producing sections also were hindered by cold weather and drifted roads. The western New York f.o.b. market strengthened to $1.10 per 100 pounds of round whites, while Maine shippers still got 90c on Green Mountains. A range of 75-90c prevailed in most parts of the north central area. The Red River valley price had advanced to 75c. Colorado potato districts held fairly steady at 5c-90c, but western Nebraska was weaker at 65c. Southern Idaho declined slightly to 70-75c on russet Burbanks. The Chicago carlot market showed very little change. Barrels of new potatoes from Bermuda advanced in New York city to $7.50-9.50, and Texas Bliss Triumphs sold generally in consuming centers at $2-2.75 per bushel hamper. Total shipments held around 4,670 cars for the week. Maine decreased slightly to 1,130 cars; New York shipped 295, Pennsylvania 205 and the north central region 1,075. Colorado's output decreased to 545 cars, but Idaho increased to 700, and Nebraska forwarded 220 cars.

The department's report of onion holdings differs somewhat from recent trade reports in that it shows more cars available for shipment after January 1 than are indicated by general trade sentiment. About 7,840 cars were available in 13 northern and western states, compared with 9,145 cars a year ago. Actual shipments after January 1, 1928, to the end of the season were 7,710 cars. Heaviest supplies this season are in Indiana, Ohio and New York. The market showed further strength, with western New York shippers getting $4.75-5 on best offerings, and Michigan dealers receiving $5.25 per 100-pound sack. Supplies in Colorado are decreasing, and the f.o.b. market on the western slope advances to $4.50-4.75. A general range of $5-6.00 covered most jobbing sales of good yellow onions, but white stock sold as high as $8.50. Holland onions, in 110-pound sacks, were selling at $5-5.50. Crates of imported Spanish Valencias ruled $2.25-2.75. About 120 additional carloads arrived from Spain, but only 25 from Holland during the week. The domestic movement totaled about 620 cars, as against 700 the week before.

Cabbage probably will be more plentiful than last season in seven second-early states, which report intended acreage of 26,360, compared with 22,130 in the 1928 season. Increases are particularly sharp in Virginia, South Carolina and Alabama. The eastern shore and Norfolk section of Virginia have 8,380 acres. Prices were maintained fairly well, though some declines were reported in certain cities. Bulk stock was returning $45 per ton in New York shipping districts. Wisconsin f. o. b. market was lower at $45. New stock declined rapidly in the lower Rio Grande valley of Texas to a range of $30-35 per ton of $2.00-2.25 per barrel-crate. The city range on northern and New York Danish-type was $18.00-57.00 a ton. The 1 1-2 bushel hampers of pointed-type cabbage from Florida ruled $2.00-2.75; Texas crates sold in terminal markets at $3.75-5.00, and poor stock from Louisiana brought $2.25-2.75 in Chicago. About 23 carloads of cabbage arrived from Holland, and movement of old stock from storage in the United States totaled 615 cars, as compared with 730 the preceding week. Western New York's output held close to 400 cars, but Wisconsin shipments decreased to 115. New stock shipments increased to 380 cars, of which Texas supplied 270 and Florida 110.

A heavy crop of 10,075,000 bushels of spinach is expected in five states that ship during the winter months. Last year's production in the same states was about 6,227,000 bushels. Both acreage and yield are greater this season. Texas expects huge production of 8,700,000 bushels. Total shipments last week held at the moderate figure of 480 cars, mostly from Texas. F. o. b. prices in southern Texas were about 10c lower than the week before at 45-55c per bushel basket. City prices ranged 50c-$1.25 on Texas stock and 50c-$1.00 on Virginia arrivals. South Carolina barrels declined in New York city to $2.50-3.00. Lettuce crates from California sold at $3.35-3.50 in Chicago, but that was exceptionally good stock.

Florida Celery Active.

Movement of Florida celery increased to 125 cars, compared with a dozen the week before and 250 during mid-January of last season. The 10-inch crates from that state held a firm position in city markets at $3.50-4.25. By January 11, cold storage stocks in western New York were reduced to about 175 carloads, but only three-fourths of this probably will be loaded and shipped. Only 50 cars moved last week. The shipping point price strengthened slightly to a range of $2.50-2.75 per two-thirds crate. Dealers in consuming centers were paying $2.50-3.25 for New York stock and $5.00-7.00 per large crate of western celery. Output of California decreased to 540 cars.

The lighter movement of Arizona lettuce was not fully compensated by heavier forwardings from Imperial Valley. Arizona fell slightly below 200 cars, while Imperial Valley increased to 640. During the same week last season, the Imperial total was 870 cars. On the other hand, Florida's 100 cars were twice the corresponding record for that state last year. The cash track price for cratee of 4 to 5 dozen heads in the El Cetro district of California closed lower at $2.00-2.25 and a city jobbing range of $3.50-4.50 prevailed on California stock. Arrivals from Arizona ruled $2.00-3.75, while the general price on 1 1-2-bushel hampers of Florida letttuce was 75c-$1.50, with Atlanta dealers getting as much as $2.00.

Tomato markets did not show much strength. In addition to 110 cars from the east coast of Florida, about 5 cars started from other sections of the state. Imports from Mexico were 125 cars, from the Bahamas 55, and from Cuba 45.

Gold Influx From London Helps Spur Heavy Trading

BY STANLEY W. PRENOSIL,
Associated Press Financial Editor.

New York, January 26.—(AP)—Aided by resumption of the gold movement from England and improvement in the position of the federal reserve banks, stock prices made substantial progress this week. Trading was heavy, averaging about 5,000,000 shares per day during the five full sessions.

Takings of gold in London, amounting to $9,000,000, were the first since last November, and about $8,000,000 came in from Canada, both movements resulting from declines in sterling and Canadian exchange. Whether the movement from England will assume large proportions was regarded as problematical, as the Bank of England is averse to losing more of its gold reserves.

The federal reserve reports disclosed that the New York bank's ratio had risen more than 9 per cent to 80 per cent, which compares with 80.8 per cent a year ago. Brokers' loans rose $48,000,000, considerably less than expected in view of the volume of trading, to a record volume of $5,443,000,000. Revised figures for the previous week disclosed an increase that week of $82,000,000, which was $11,000,000 more than announced.

The increase in loans, as in previous weeks, came from corporations, individuals and foreign banks, the New York banks again reducing their borrowings. Reserve report, however, was regarded as indicating that the bank is still seeking to curtail credit for speculative purposes, as decreases in holdings of securities and bills were shown. The rediscount rate held at 5 per cent and no increase was expected, as the Bank of England made no change in its rate and the reserve bank is not expected to take action that would stimulate the flow of gold from London.

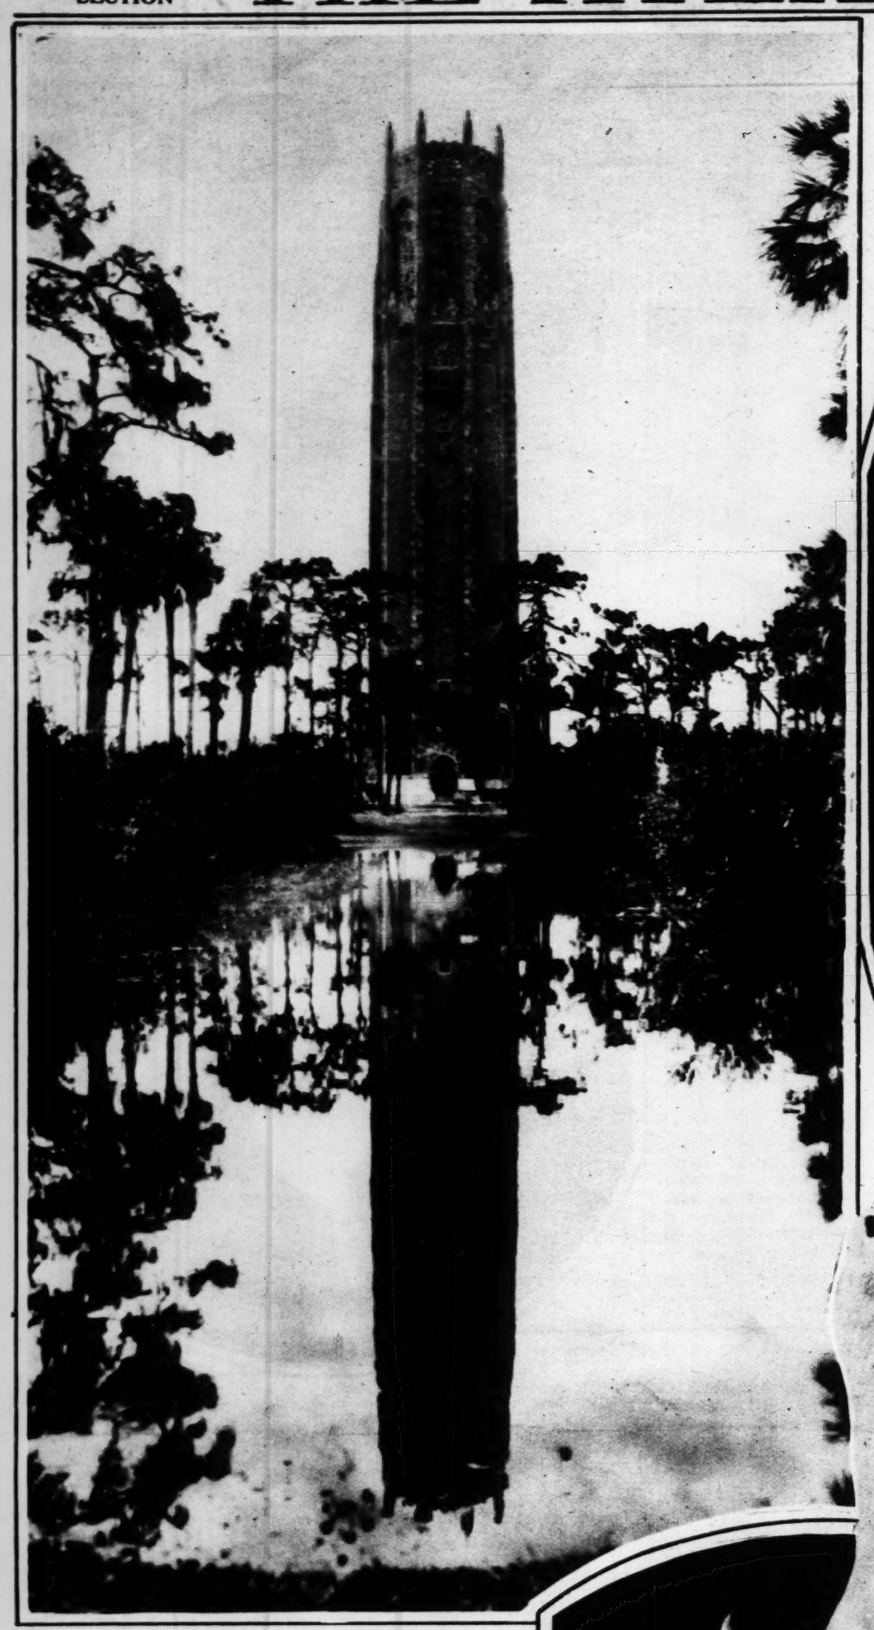

Call money was easier during the weke, holding at 6 per cent. Time money remained firm at its abnormally high levels, however, and the reserve bank increased its buying rate for bankers' acceptances to 5 per cent for the shorter maturities. Bankers still expressed concern over the abnormally tight credit, pointing out that call money fell to 3 per cent a year ago.

Although stock prices generally made headway, buying was of a selective n

MIRRORED IN THE LAGOON is the beautiful Bok Carillon, or "Singing Tower," erected by William Bok at Mountain Lake, Fla., in memory of his grandparents. President Coolidge and President-elect Hoover are expected to attend the dedication February 1.

PENSIVE COQUETTE—Here's an interesting camera study of Corrine Griffith from "The Divine Lady," feature picture which is coming to Atlanta soon.

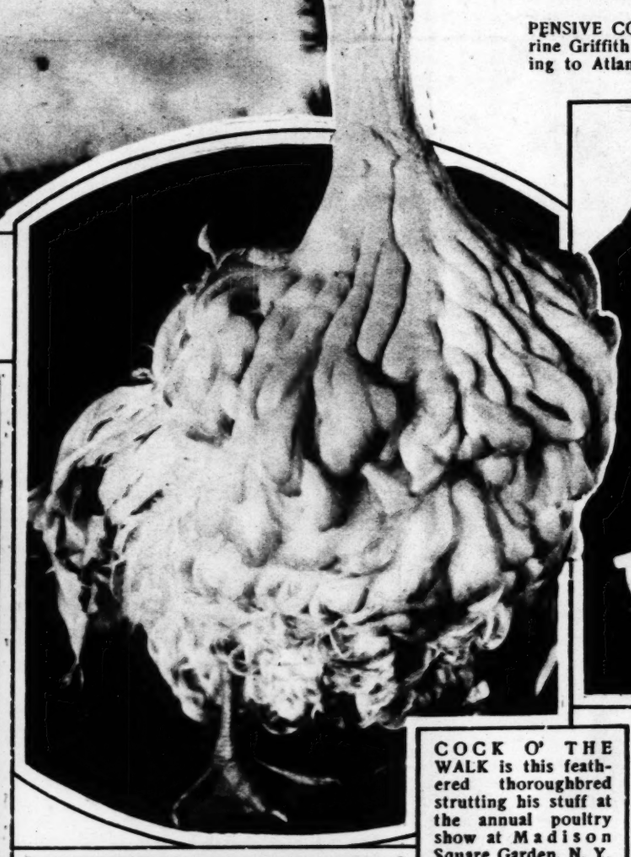

MARRIAGE VS. EDUCATION—That's the row at Washington and Jefferson college. Russell McMahon Smith, of Washington, Pa., married Miss Marjorie Jacqumain, University of Kansas co-ed, and now the powers that be have announced that all married undergraduates must withdraw from Washington and Jefferson by February 4.

THOUSANDS PAY TRIBUTE TO BELOVED MINISTER—This unusual view of the funeral of Dr. F. C. McConnell, veteran pastor of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church of Atlanta, was made by Walton Reeves. The beautiful church at Ponce de Leon and Highland avenues is literally a temple to Dr. McConnell, during whose pastorate it was built.

SNAPPY ROLE FOR COLLEEN—The piquant Miss Moore will be seen this week on the screen of the Metropolitan theater in "Synthetic Sin."

THE TRICK PHOTOGRAPHER GIVES YOU A SURPRISE

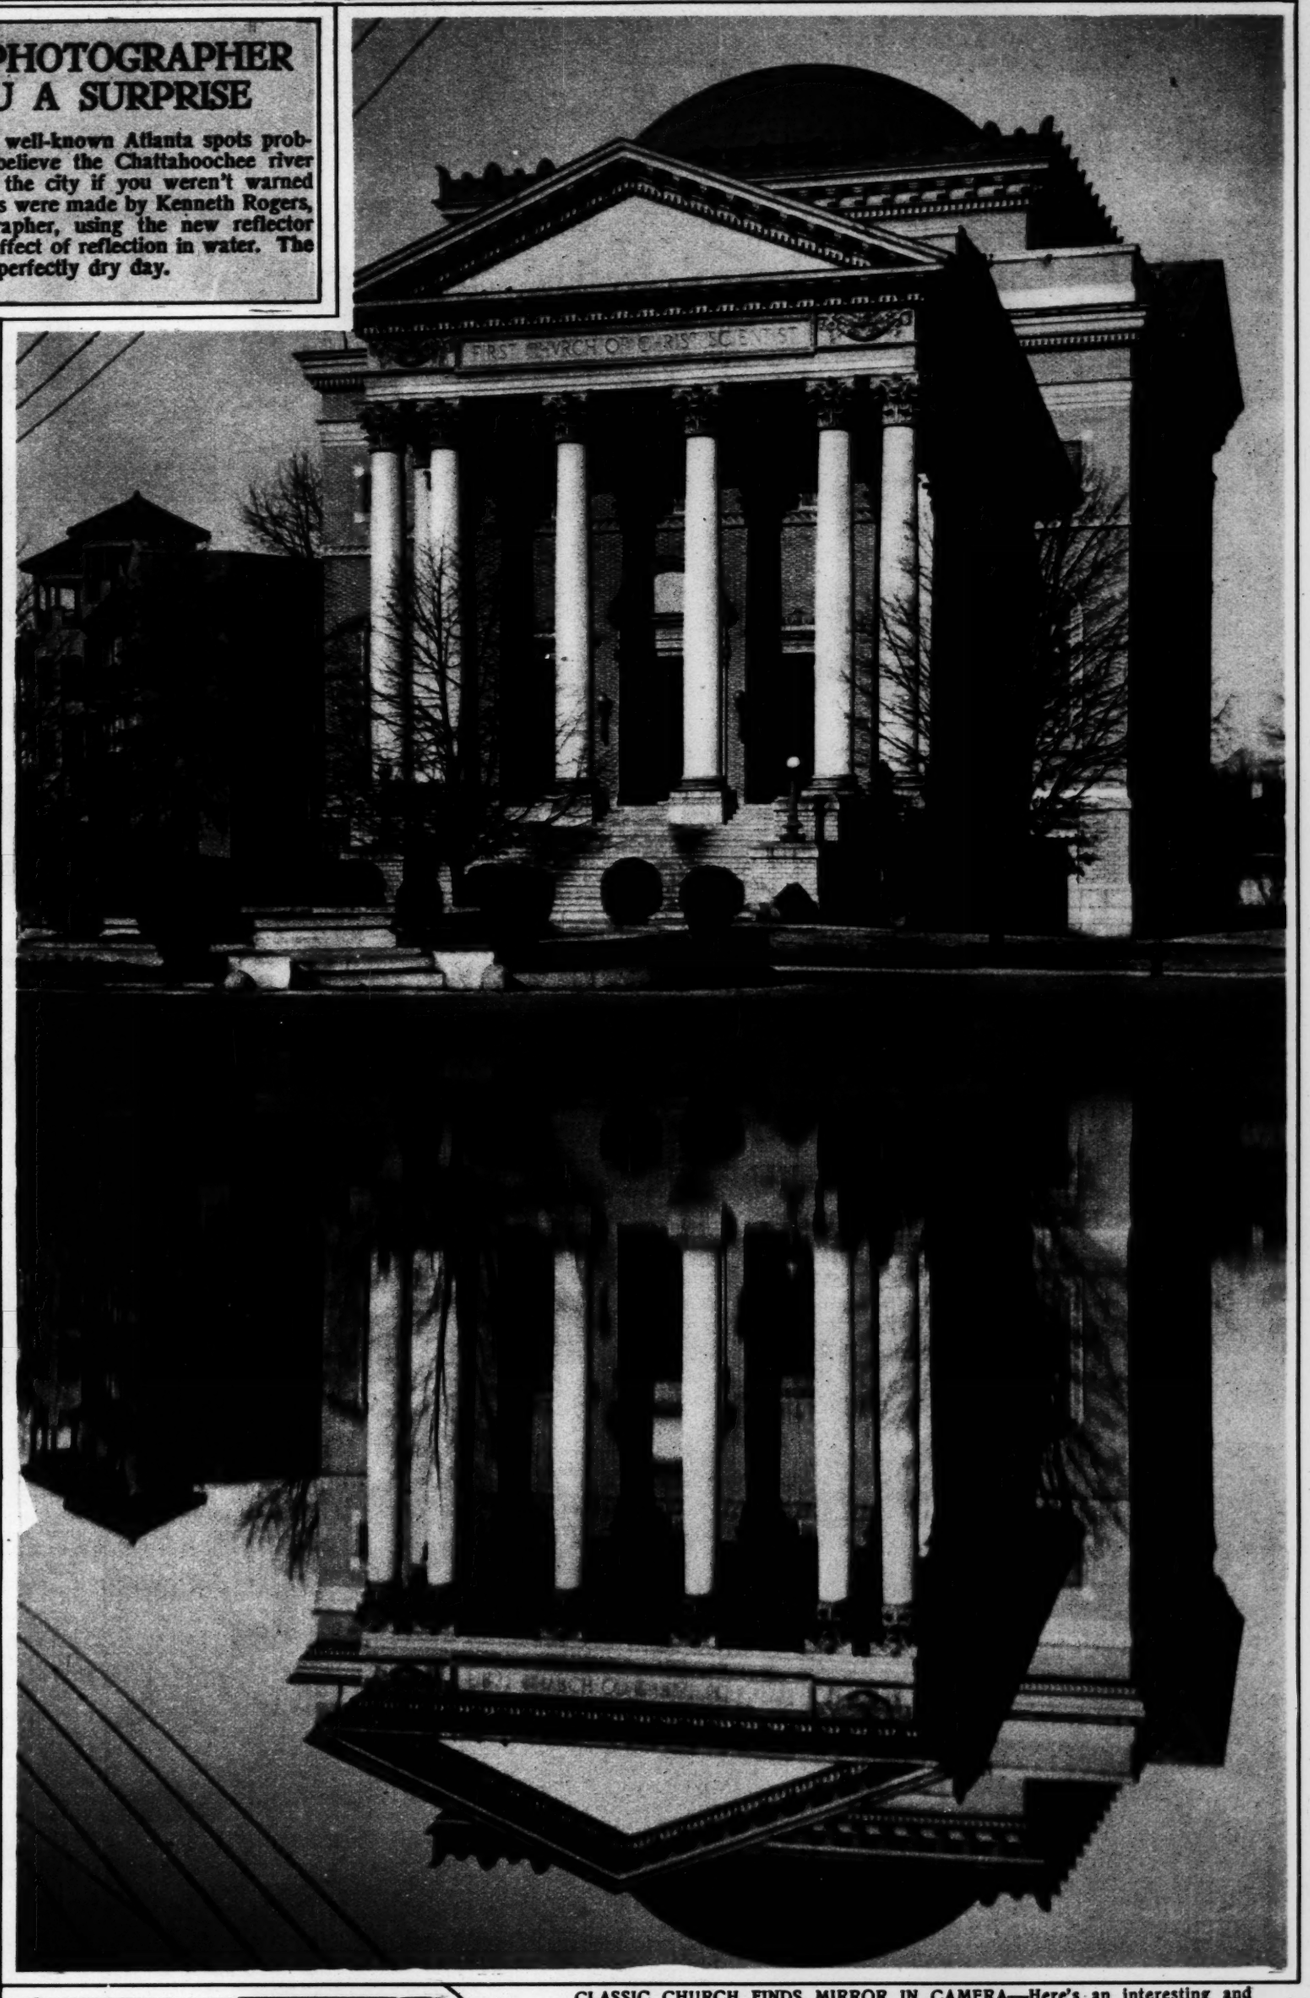

These unusual views of well-known Atlanta spots probably would lead you to believe the Chattahoochee river had invaded the heart of the city if you weren't warned in advance that the pictures were made by Kenneth Rogers, Constitution staff photographer, using the new reflector lens designed to give the effect of reflection in water. The pictures were made on a perfectly dry day.

THIS YEAR THE WOMAN OF FASHION SELECTS

HOLEPROOF HOSIERY

"Color correctness, the first requisite of hosiery smartness, finds its perfect expression in the Lucile-created Holeproof shades," says

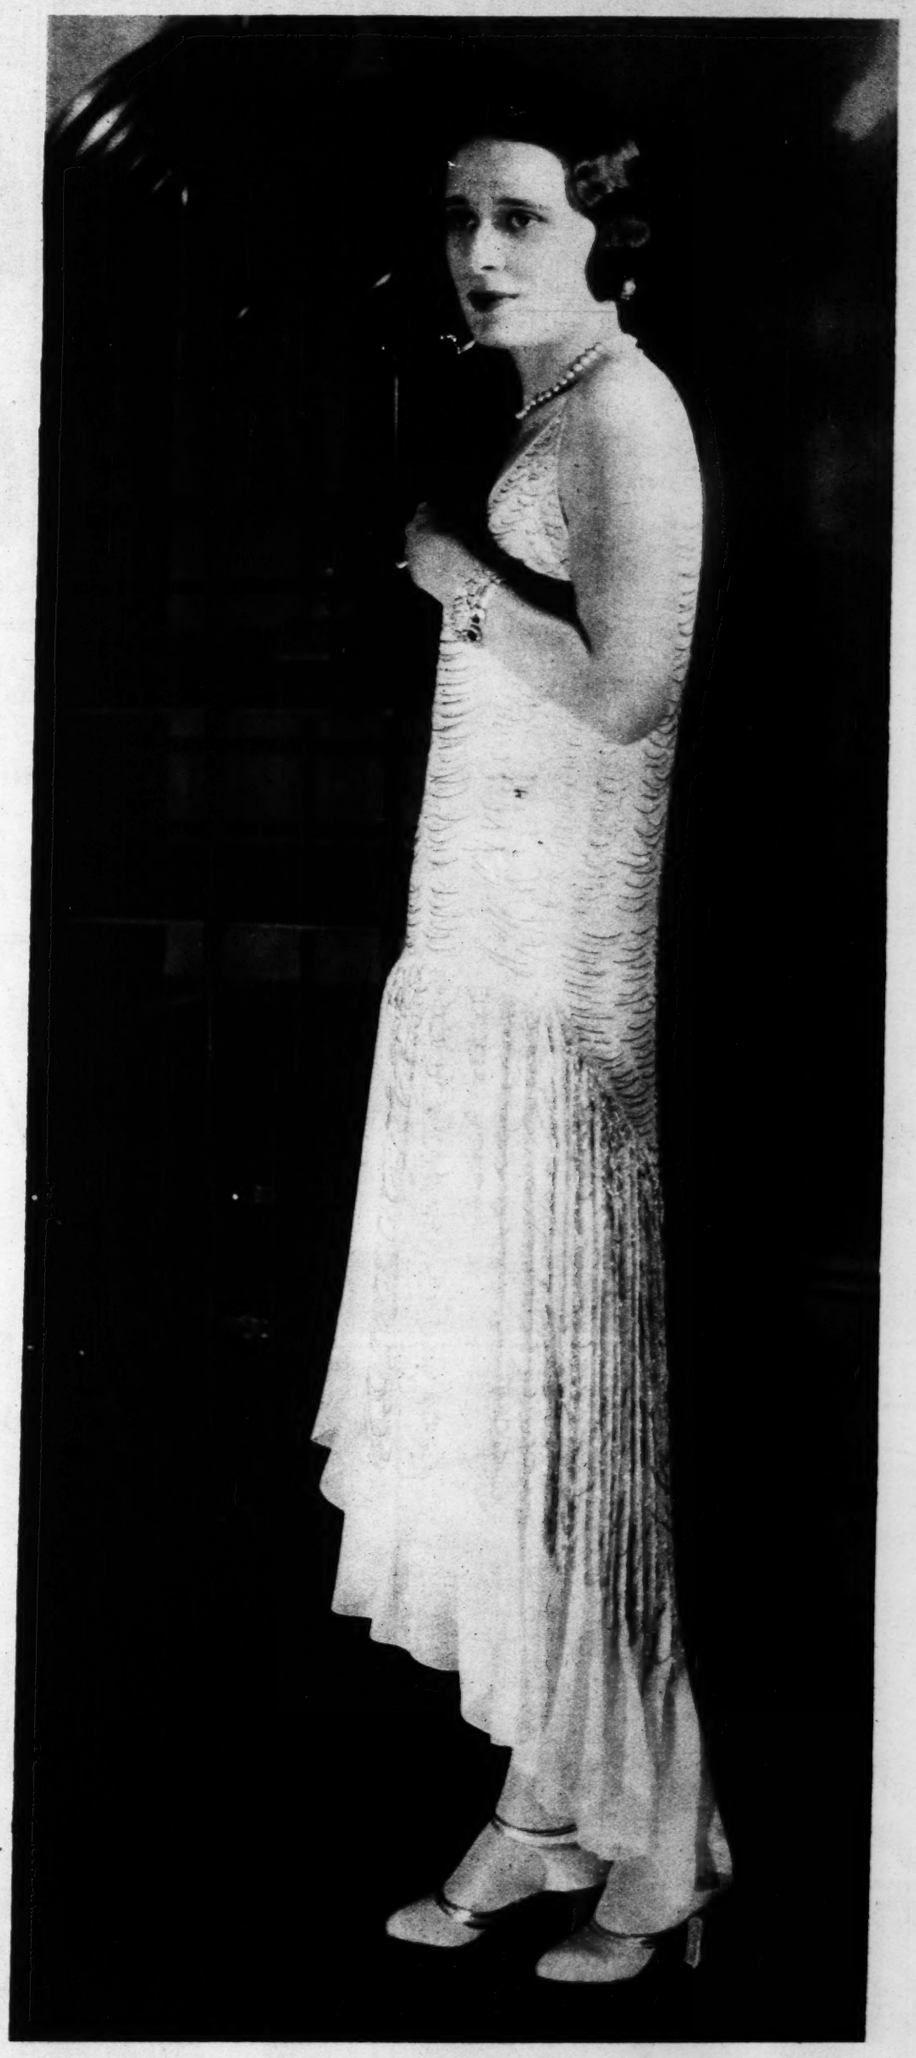

Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt

"Smart grooming, like art, is a matter of infinite attention to detail. A single fault may outweigh a thousand perfections. ¶ The mode today lays increasing emphasis on the accessories. The modern frock is merely the background of the costume. Each note that accompanies it must be fused into the perfect whole. ¶ Perfection of the ensemble frequently turns on the care with which the shade of hosiery is chosen. It is the right blending of color that is the essence of style in hosiery. ¶ This calls for careful style guidance. In enlisting the genius of Lucile, well known Parisian couturiere, to create the hosiery colors that harmonize best with each season's outstanding shades, Holeproof Hosiery has made it possible for every woman to add to the charm of the ensemble. ¶ Color correctness... the first requisite of hosiery smartness ...finds its perfect expression in this beautiful hosiery."

Gloria M Vanderbilt

Holeproof stockings appeal to the woman to whom good taste is the cachet of chic. With colors inspired and created by Lucile of Paris, they have become the medium for those shades which most attractively complement the vogue. • Anticipating the new costume fabrics far in advance of their showing, Lucile experiments with infinite blendings of subtle tints to obtain the perfect cast for every color trend in gowns, shoes and hats. • Her recommendations are then submitted to the searching scrutiny of New York's style arbiters for confirmation and adaptations to American standards. The result is a color range as complete as it is distinctive. • Woven in exquisitely textured silk... perfectly fashioned in the height of the mode for street and for formal wear... Holeproof Hosiery in every respect is worthy of the high recommendations which accompany it.

Mrs. Reginald C. Vanderbilt, nee Gloria M. Morgan, daughter of Mrs. and Mr. Harry Hays Morgan, formerly American Commissioner to Belgium. With her sisters, Viscountess Furness of England and Mrs. Benjamin Thaw, Jr., of Pittsburgh, making up the famous "Morgan Trio," Mrs. Vanderbilt is a well known figure among the fashionable younger set of two continents. While spending most of her time at her home on the Avenue Charles Floquet, in Paris, Mrs. Vanderbilt also maintains an American home at Newport.

Still Thin

Still young, still lovely

So easy to fight fat

Have you wondered why the extra-fat people of old days have so largely disappeared? The chief reason lies in a scientific discovery made some 25 years ago. Medical research found that a great cause of excess fat lay in a deficient gland. A way to correct it was discovered. Since then, physicians the world over have employed this method in the fight on fat.

A famous medical laboratory perfected the utmost in this method in Marmola prescription tablets. People have used them for 21 years—millions of boxes of them. You can see the results wherever you look. Excess fat in men and women is nowhere near as common as it was.

No starvation, no over-work, corrects the cause of excess fat, but moderation helps. When the cause lies in a defective gland, that cause must be corrected.

The slender figures that you see about you are largely due to Marmola. The new youth and beauty, new health and vigor that you envy. You do yourself a grave injustice if you omit this help.

The way is to correct this gland deficiency. No abnormal exercise or diet. Simply take four tablets daily until weight comes down to normal. Watch the fat go, watch the new vitality return. You will be delighted. Do this now to live life at the full. You should not delay a day.

Marmola prescription tablets are sold by all druggists at $1 per box. If your druggist is out, he will get them at once from his jobber.

GRAY HAIR

If you employ this way!

TEST FREE

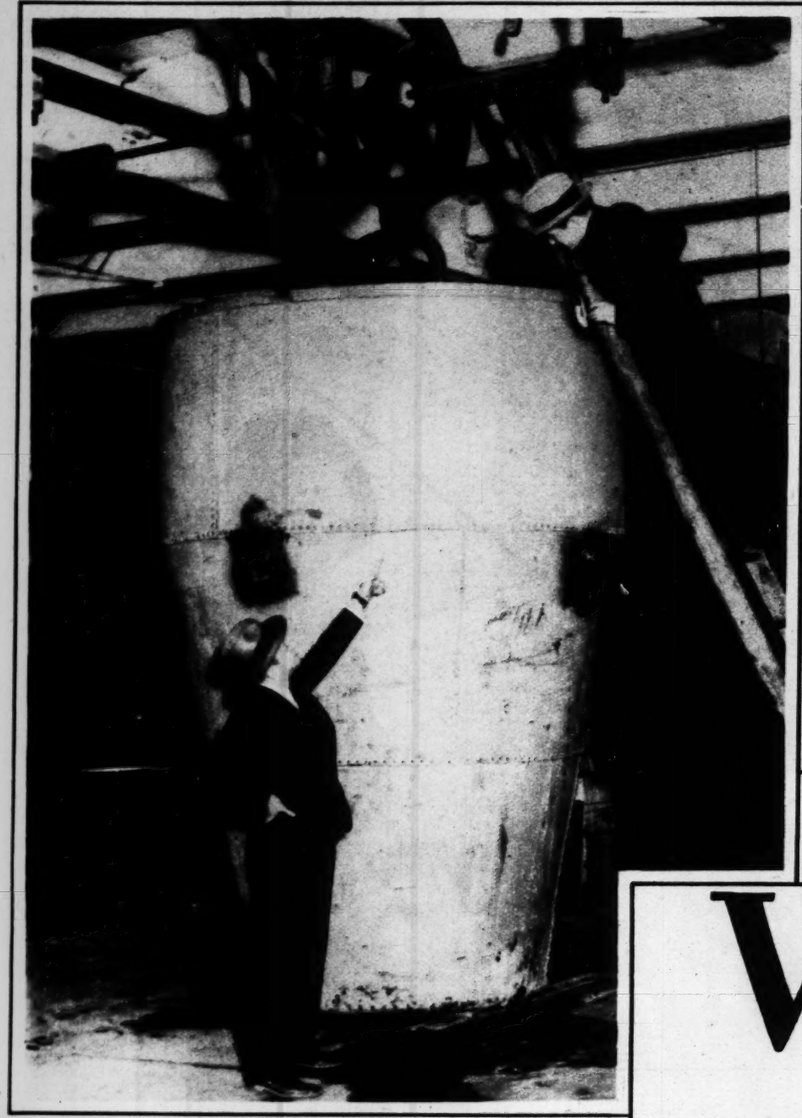

A NEW safe way has been found to bring back original shade to gray hair—to remove faded streaks and restore graying parts—to make the hair live looking and lustrous.

This way is clean and colorless. You simply comb it through the hair. It will not wash nor rub off. It's called Mary T. Goldman's Hair Color Restorer.

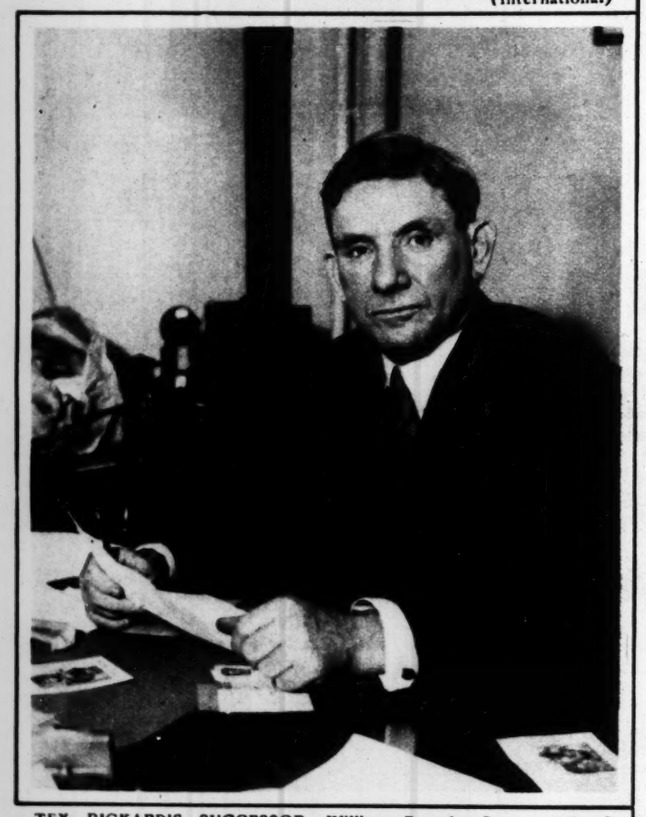

Make amazing test. See for yourself what it will do. Few cents' worth gives complete restoration. Get full-size bottle from druggist. He will return every penny if not delighted.

Or write for free test supply (give color of hair) to Mary T. Goldman Co., St. Paul, Minn.

Wonderful results always certain

BISCUITS made with Calumet Baking Powder possess a certain lightness and sweetness that is positively irresistible. The double leavening action of Calumet is responsible for this. One leavening unit begins to work when the dough is mixed; the other waits for the heat of the oven—then both work together.

No matter what your experience has been with other baking powders or recipes in the past, you may expect and will experience wonderful results when you use this, the greatest of all leaveners.

The whites of more than 6,500,000 eggs are used in the manufacture of Calumet, the World's Greatest Baking Powder, each year, and over 1½ billion pounds of flour are leavened with it.

CALUMET
THE WORLD'S GREATEST BAKING POWDER

The ingredients used in bakings such as flour, sugar, butter, eggs and milk are rich in food values. When they are properly combined and raised with Calumet Baking Powder their food values remain unchanged. Try Calumet once—then you will be convinced of its certain results—its uniformity and unfailing dependability, and why it is used by more housewives than any other brand.

CALUMET BISCUITS

2 cups flour
2 level teaspoons Calumet Baking Powder
2 tablespoons shortening
¾ cup milk
½ level teaspoon salt

Sift flour once, measure and sift three times with salt and baking powder. Rub shortening in with fork or tips of fingers. Add milk, mix lightly, turn out on a well-floured board and roll or pat ½ inch thick. Cut and bake in hot oven (450° F.)

Moon Mullins

OH YES, LORD PLUSHBOTTOM SPOKE ABOUT YOU, MR. MULLINS. ARE YOU BOYS BROTHERS?

YES, SIR— BOTH OF US.

I MADE AN APPOINTMENT FOR MULLINS WITH GERALD GRUNTER THE MILLIONAIRE COCKROACH EXTERMINATOR MANUFACTURER, MISS SCHMALTZ. I THOUGHT PERHAPS GRUNTER COULD PUT HIM TO WORK.

NOW AIN'T THAT JUST LOVELY OF YOU, LORD PLUSHBOTTOM - MAYBE MOONSHINE CAN BRING HOME SOME SAMPLES AND I WON'T HAVE TO BE SENDING FOR THE EXTERMINATOR SO OFTEN.

I WOULD HAVE MORE TIME TO TALK TO YOU IF YOU WOULD COME OUT TO MY HOME TONIGHT, MR. MULLINS.

I'LL TELLYA WHAT, MR GRUNTER - WRITE A NOTE TO YOUR LITTE WOMAN TELLIN' HER WE'RE COMING OUT TO SUPPER, AND TH' KID BROTHER CAN RUN ON AHEAD AND GIVE IT TO HER.

SINGLE, EH? WHAT A BRIGHT CHAP LIKE YOU NEEDS IS TO SETTLE DOWN AND GET YOURSELF A GOOD LITTLE WIFE, MOON.

NOT ME, MR. GRUNTER. NOT ME! THEY DON'T ALWAYS TURN OUT SO GOOD.

WELL, OF COURSE YOU HAVE TO TRUST PROVIDENCE FOR THAT, MR. MULLINS

YEH, BUT PROVIDENCE DISHES OUT A LOT OF QUINCES ALONG WITH TH' PEACHES —

HEY! AIN'T ANYBODY HOME HERE?

WHO IS THERE?

MULLINS IS MY NAME, LADY— LET ME IN!

GET AWAY FROM THERE! GET OUT IMMEDIATELY!! I'LL JUMP OUT THE WINDOW! I'LL SCREAM!

HELP POLICE! POLICE!

WELL FER TH' LOVA JEMINY!

SWEETHEART, ALLOW ME TO PRESENT MR. MULLINS - AH MRS GRUNTER MR. — MUL —

WHAT? YOU'RE MULLINS! GERALD GRUNTER, THROW THAT HOUND OUT OF THIS HOUSE!

AND YOU GO WITH HIM!

MR. MULLINS, I THINK WE HAD BETTER GO TO MY CLUB.

WAIT A MINUTE I'LL GO WITH YOU.

SLAM!

THE LITTLE WIFE IS A BIT OUT OF SORTS TO-NIGHT, MR. MULLINS - OUR COOK LEFT US THIS MORNING WITHOUT NOTICE - UM - TOO BAD — SHE REALLY WAS A JEWEL. WONDERFUL COOK, NICE CHEERFUL SOUL TOO.

UNCLE WALT, HOW DO YOU TELL TIME WITH A BAROMETER?

IT ISN'T TO TELL TIME BY, SKEEZIX. THIS LITTLE BLACK HAND SHOWS US WHAT THE WEATHER IS GOING TO BE.

DO YOU SET THE OTHER HAND FOR THE KIND OF WEATHER YOU, WANT?

NO YOU SET THE WHITE HAND OVER THE OTHER ONE SO YOU CAN SEE IF THE BLACK ONE HAS MOVED.

WOULDN'T IT BE GREAT IF YOU COULD TURN THE WHITE HAND AN' MAKE IT SNOW OR RAIN OR BLOW OR SUNSHINE?

IT CERTAINLY WOULD. BUT THEY HAVEN'T MADE THAT MACHINE YET.

I'M GOIN' TO TRY IT. MAYBE IT WILL WORK.

RAIN CHANGE FAIR

OH LOOKIE! I MADE THE SUN COME OUT AN' GET WARM AN' MELT ALL THE SNOW.

NOW I'M GOING TO MAKE IT ALL FREEZE UP AGAIN.

YES SIR, I DID MAKE IT ALL ICY. NOW I'M GOIN' IN AN' SEE IF I CAN MAKE IT SNOW.

THAT WAS EASY! I'D LIKE TO HAVE IT BLOW UP SOME NICE BIG SNOWDRIFTS. WAIT TILL I TRY.

THIS IS LOTS O' FUN. BUT PRETTY SOON I'M GOIN' TO KEEP IT SUMMER ALL THE TIME.

GEE, I MUST HURRY UP AN' TURN IT OFF BEFORE WE GET BURIED TOO DEEP!

I CAN'T STOP IT

I'M GLAD, UNCLE WALT, THAT YOU CAN'T TURN THE BAROMETER AND CHANGE THE WEATHER. SOMEBODY MIGHT GET TO MONKEYING WITH IT.

New Conquests of Science

BY WATSON DAVIS

OUR PERSONAL internal government—the happiness and smooth functioning of the organs that keep the human body in successful operation—sometimes impresses us as the most important thing in the world, especially when there is conflict or misfunction within. It is perhaps this feeling of personal concern that has led to the intense interest shown by the public in the advances of medical science—an interest that in turn always has spurred the scientist toward deeper research and more fruitful discovery.

Recent investigations of the endocrine glands and the potent hormones that they produce have formed one of the most fascinating chapters of medical progress. So appealing has been the idea of small and seemingly insignificant internal glands influencing personal and national destinies that a considerable body of semi-ficti has grown up about the solid and extremely fruitful work that scientific investigators have pursued in their laboratories during the last decade. Yet the facts alone are startling enough.

For one of the most recent firm steps into the dark, unexplored field of endocrinology, the laurel of the New York meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science was laid upon the scientific brow of Dr. Oliver Kamm. An anonymous donor for the last five years has made available a prize of $1,000 annually, to be awarded to one important paper among the one or two thousand which are presented each year to the half a hundred or more scientific societies and sections comprising the American association and its affiliated organizations. Scientists do not need such financial awards to force them to pursue their explorations into the unknown, but the annual prize gives a delightful flavor of competition to the session, and the prize committee usually finds that it could award, if they existed, a dozen such prizes with perfect fairness.

Dr. Kamm's prize-winning work was done in the laboratories of Parke Davis & Co., manufacturing chemists, of Detroit. He concerned himself with only one portion of one of the smallest and most important of the body's endocrine glands—the posterior lobe of the pituitary.

The power of the pituitary gland, weighing six-tenths of a gram, the mere fraction of an ounce, and lying at the base of the brain, has long been realized. The forward or anterior portion of the gland is responsible for both the giants and dwarfs of the circus. An oversupply of the potent substance manufactured there has the power of making a baby grow into a giant, while an insufficiency of the hormone of this portion of the gland is responsible for the existence of dwarfs and midgets.

From the back or posterior part an extract known as pituitrin has been made and used in medicine. Like all hormones, it is very potent in small quantities, but, unlike the better known thyroxine and epinephrine, pituitrin, from its behavior, was suspected of having a complex chemical structure, if not a dual chemical personality.

The untaglement of the substances in the post-pituitary gland was Dr. Kamm's accomplishment. He obtained the pituitary twins, Alpha-hypothamine and Beta-hypothamine. And at present the pituitary twins are among the costliest in the world. The alpha hormone would cost approximately $3,000,000 a pound if that much could be produced, while a pound of the beta hormone would cost about $1,000,000. So far only a very few fractions of an ounce have been produced and made available for experiment. Analyses must be made under the microscope.

It is too early to know how important the pituitary twins will be in medicine, but they are promising youngsters. The alpha hormone holds promise of useful service in obstetrics, as it promotes the contraction of the muscles of the uterus. Pituitrin, the cruder extract of the pituitary gland, has been used to dull the pain of childbirth, and now that the alleviating powers of the substance are concentrated in one powerful fraction of the gland's output, even more effective use may be expected.

A test of the beta hormone showed a different sensitivity when used with different types of individuals. Dr. Kamm found that "physiological wets" are extremely sensitive to the hormone when it is introduced into the blood stream through the nose membranes. The "physiological wets" retain under the influence of the beta hormone much of the water which they consume. The "physiological drys" are those who are not greatly affected in this way by the administration of the beta hormone. Out of these observations there may come an explanation of why some of us are fleshy and others are scrawny, despite the fact that the fleshy individual may eat little and the scrawny individual may eat much.

The work of Dr. Kamm and his associates in Detroit is but the opening chapter in the conquest of the posterior lobe of the pituitary gland. He has the two active principles of that gland in the form of potent, while, staple, water soluble powder. At present we are dependent upon the slaughter houses for this substance, and only one ten-thousandth of the weight of the pituitary glands used in the preparation is left in the form of the potent white powder when the arduous process of extraction is completed. Some of the difficulties of the separation and differentiation of the two substances may be realized from the fact that twenty painstaking fractionations are necessary in order to separate the two hormones.

The final objective of the investigator of hormones is to determine the chemical constitution of the active principle and then equal nature's ability by building up the complicated structure of the potent material out of simpler chemical substances.

Although the body possesses eight groups of ductless glands, some of which pour more than one powerful substance into the system, only two of the hormones have been carried through the chemist's cycle of isolation, analysis and synthesis. Epinephrine, or adrenalin, as this hormone of the adrenals is sometimes known, and thyroxine are the two that have been prepared artifically by synthesis.

To be sure, synthesis is not necessary before widespread and practical use is made of a hormone in the practice of medicine. The thousands of lines saved or made worthy of living by insulin, the hormone of the islets of Langerhans, are witness to this fact. The Nobel prize winning cooperative research at the University of Toronto by Doctors Bantin, Maclead, Best and Collip was not only a blessing to humanity, but it stimulated greatly the research of other centers of study in the field of endocrinology.

Now insulin is well on the road to yielding all its secrets. Dr. John J. Abel, of John Hopkins university, and his associates have analyzed it, and the eventual synthesis of this substance may be expected. Some of Dr. Abel's latest results were presented at the meeting of the American association.

Upon the program of the meeting there were also reports of researches that mean much to sufferers from anaemia—those by Dr. E. J. Cohn, of the Harvard Medical school, who has isolated from the liver an active principle for the treatment of pernicious anaemia. On a contiguous battlefront of science there may be found Dr. Roger Adams, of the University of Illinois, whose synthetic organic acid substitutes for chaulmoogra oil are being tested as treatment for lepers in the Philippines.

From internal glands of secretion to rotating galaxies in outer space is a far fling in reality—but in presentation it is merely the distance between two platforms of the American association. Dr. Harlow Shapley, of the Harvard College observatory, is a student of universes. His brilliant studies of thousands of photographic plates of the heavens during the last decade have revised our conception of the remote stellar surroundings of this earth.

Although it is true that his predecessors have intuitively or preliminarily suggested some of Dr. Shapley's conclusions, the Harvard scientist and his associates, with the aid of great telescopes and the dovetailing work of other astronomers, have plunged deeper and more minutely into the composition of material things—as far as our present telescopes will penetrate.

Our galaxy or "universe" of stars is perhaps fifteen hundred million miles across. But still larger organizations are scattered through space. These are galaxies of galaxes—"cosmons," as Dr. Shapley has christened them.

Outside our own galaxy there are thousands of independent galaxies, or "galactons," to use Dr. Shapley's nomenclature. Some of these appear as spiral nebulae, with a definite pinwheel-like structure. Others, like the two Magellanic clouds, visible to the unaided eye from southern countries, are more irregular. Dr. Shapley himself has demonstrated that the Magellanic clouds are at vast distances—so far away that they are definitely outside our own universe. At the Mount Wilson observatory, Dr. Edwin Hubble has made measurements of the distances of two of the closest of the spiral nebulae. They also are outside our galaxy, and are made up, like our own, of a vast number of stars.

Dr. Shapley's measures of dimensions show that our own galaxy appears to be from ten to twenty times the diameter of any of the others with which we are acquainted, with the exception of the Andromeda nebulae, which may be a fifth as large as our system. In the oceans of space our galaxy appears to be a continent, to use Dr. Shapley's expression, whereas the hundreds of thousands of extragalactic nebulae may be called "island universes," as Herschel and others termed them a hundred years ago.

But these "islands" are not isolated. They are organized into the higher systems—into galaxies of galaxies.

Good antidotes for egoists are the researches of Dr. Shapley. Remember that the sun is but a minor star hardly worthy of an astronomer's attention except for the accident that the earth happens to be its satellite. There are millions upon millions like it, for Dr. Shapley has found galaxies as remote as a hundred million light years, distant from the earth.

Of similar belittling stuff are the researches of the physicist and Nobel prize winner, Dr. R. A. Millikan, who was elected president of the American Association for the Advancement of Science at the recent meeting. In his probings into the fundamental extent of the universe, in his studies of electrons and protons, in his measurements of the powerful cosmic radiation, he has found evidence of the creation of the common elements out of simpler hydrogen in the outer reaches of frigid, sparsely populated space. Each few weeks bring new and interesting conclusions in the race toward understanding nature in which Dr. Millikan and other physicists are engaged.

Speaking at a banquet of the Geological Society of America during the American association meeting, Dr. Millikan allayed the fear to which past conception of physics have given rise. There is a drama playing in New York that visualizes what might happen if some young physicist should find the way to annihilate matter here on earth and let loose energy. According to recent theories, that play was founded on a possibility. The fires of the sun and stars are stoked, astronomers believe, by the changing of the atoms of those heavenly bodies into radiation. Mr. Millikan's studies of the latest determination of atomic weights convince him that atoms lighter in weight than lead do not have the possibility of disintegrating and letting loose energy in the same manner that radium and other slowly and constantly disintegrating earthly elements have the habit of doing.

Moreover, the conditions here on earth are not right, in the light of the most recent conclusions of physics, for an annihilation of matter. The possibility of the world and the universe being blown up through the chance explosion of one atom, the chance of universal annihilation, has, therefore, become quite remote, if not, indeed, out of the question, in the light of modern physics. The milliennialists among physicists must, therefore, find new gods.

While astronomers and physicists study the galaxies of stars and the behavior of matter in outer spaces, the geologists are attempting to discover the past history of the planet on which we live. The extent of geologic time has been a subject for discussion and study ever since the realization that the earth has left its past illuminated in the record of the rocks. Two clocks have been read by geologists in attempting to ascertain as accurately as possible the present age of the earth.

One is the salt of the ocean and the other the lead of the earth that has been derived from the radioactive disintegration of radium. In the past these two clocks have told different times. The age of the earth, obtained by computing the amount of salt in the ocean and dividing by a figure for the average amount of salt carried down each year to the sea, was formerly much less than that obtained upon the basis of the radio activity. Professor A. C. Lane, of Tufts college, told the scientists that these two methods have now been reconciled by the discovery that flood waters carry less salt than had been supposed. The age of the earth—that is, the period since the igneous rocks of the original crust of the earth were cooled—is somewhere in the neighborhood of a thousand million years.

The more recent chronology of the earth, a record of the climatic conditions during the glacial periods, exists in the banded layers of clay, called varves, which are found in various parts of this country and Europe. One of the foremost students of these earth calendars is Dr. Ernest Anteus. It is the hope of geologists that they will be able to hook this record into the climatic data afforded by the rings of giant sequoia trees on the Pacific coast and thus obtain a year-by-year record extending into the past at least some thousands of years. This is an ambitious undertaking and one that may take years, but the first fruits of it were reported in technical papers at the American association meeting.

Dr. Anteus, through his studies of geology, has placed some limitations upon anthropologists in their searches as to when the first human beings stepped on American soil. It must have been either earlier than 50,000 years ago or else as late as 7,000 years ago. The last great ice sheet slowly stretched down over Canada and froze part of Alaska. Then it slowly retreated again, blockading the northwest coast for thousands of years. Bering strait, generally accepted as the route of the first American immigrants from Asia, was made free of ice about 7,000 years ago.

Thus it is that geology illuminates the human past, physicists find earthly secrets in the stars and a mere trace of a powerful hormone may change the entire course of a life or a nation. When thousands of scientists, with seemingly diverse objectives, meet in unison it is sometimes possible to see the glorious symphony of their endeavors.

Masterpieces of Mystery

Condensed by Arthur B. Reeve

No. 34 --- "THE FENCHURCH STREET MYSTERY" --- By Baroness Orezy

THE man in the corner pushed aside his glass and leant across the table.

"Mysteries!" he commented. "There is no such thing as a mystery in connection with any crime, provided intelligence is brought to bear upon its investigation."

Very astonished, Polly Burton looked over the top of her newspaper and fixed a pair of very severe, coldly inquiring brown eyes upon him.

She had disapproved of the man from the instant when he shuffled across the shop and sat down opposite her, at this same marble-topped table which already held her large coffee, her roll and butter and a plate of tongue.

She was a personality, was Miss Burton of the Evening Observer. For this reason—and others—she felt irate at the man in the corner and told him so with her brown eyes. But being possessed with a keen sense of humor, she smiled at the pale, thin, nervous man across from her.

"And yet," she remarked kindly, "this article, in a well informed journal, will tell you that within the last year no fewer than six crimes have completely baffled the police, and the perpetrators are still at large."

"Pardon me," he said gently. "I never for a moment ventured to suggest that there were no mysteries to the police; I merely remarked that there were none where intelligence was brought to bear upon the investigation of the crime."

"Not even in the Fenchurch street mystery, I suppose," the girl said sarcastically.

"Least of all in the Fenchurch street mystery," he replied quietly.

"What a pity that you do not offer your priceless services in that case! It's had every thinking man in England puzzling for the last 12 months."

"Yes, it is a pity. But in most cases my sympathies go to the criminal who is clever and astute enough to lead our entire police force by the nose."

"I don't know how much of the case you remember," he said quietly. "On last December 12, you know, a poorly dressed woman gave information of the disappearance of her husband, William Kershaw. She was accompanied to Scotland Yard to a fat, oily-looking German who corroborated her story.

"It appears that on the 10th of December this German, Karl Muller, had gone to the home of Kershaw to collect a small debt. When he arrived at the squalid dwellings in Fitzroy Square he found Mrs. Kershaw in tears and William Kershaw himself in a mad state of excitement.

"After a quarter of an hour in obscure hints, Kershaw confided to the German a scheme for making what he said would be a great sum of money. He told the German this story, which both the German and Kershaw's wife told the court:

"Some thirty years previously Kershaw, then a medical student in the London hospitals, had two roommates, one a fellow named Barker and the other—I forget his name. It seems that this latter fellow one day won a great deal of money on the turf, and the next morning was found murdered in his bed. Kershaw himself had a complete alibi. But Barker had disappeared and after a while was known by Kershaw to have settled down in Siberia, where he assumed the name Smethurst.

"Kershaw had heard from him several times, in which Kershaw had sent him small loans of money.

"Now, as Kershaw recounted to the German, Smethurst had become a millionaire. Ah, you remember the details of the case!"

Miss Polly Burton nodded, but was silent.

"Well, Kershaw had been blackmailing Smethurst for some time. And now Smethurst was coming to England to settle the thing once and for all. Kershaw showed the German two letters. One of them, from Smethurst in Siberia, told of the coming visit to England and mentioned an appointment. The second letter mentioned that Smethurst would arrive in London at the Fenchurch street station, in the late afternoon of the 10th of December. For identification, Smethurst mentioned that he would wear a heavy astrakhan fur coat and cap.

It was not until the 31st of the month that a body, decomposed past all recognition, was found in the bottom of a disused barge in those scarcely frequented parts of the river in the East End.

The second letter was the cause of the tears on the part of Kershaw's wife, since she said that she feared a plot. Half an hour later, after having borrowed some additional money from Muller, Kershaw was gone.

"Muller and Kershaw's wife waited anxiously through the night and the next day. On the 12th they went to Scotland Yard. So much for those details." The stranger paused. "I merely mention them so that we can refer to them later.

"Now, if you recall, it was not until the 31st of the month that a body, decomposed past all recognition, was found in the bottom of a disused barge in those scarcely frequented parts of the river in the east end.

"The body had on it a silver ring and tin pin, and these Mrs. Kershaw identified as her husband's.

"Two days after the discovery of the body, and backed up by what they believed a strong case against the Siberian millionaire, the police went to the Hotel Cecil and arrested the man. It was on seeing the notice of the arrest in the paper, together with copies of the two letters which Kershaw's wife had given the court, that I determined to try my own hand on it. . . . I tried to find a motive . . . Did Smethurst kill Kershaw to rid himself of a dangerous blackmailer? That would be a paltry motive, because he must have known that Kershaw held no damning evidence against him. Here is a picture of Smethurst I saved."

"Now what strikes you about that face?" he asked the girl.

"Well, it has a strange, astonished look, due to total absence of eyebrows, and that funny foreign cut of hair, I guess."

"Exactly. And that is what struck me. Here was a tall, soldierly looking man, his face bronzed and tanned. He has neither mustache nor beard, closely cropped hair, and his eyebrows and lashes were all shaved off.

"When they took him into custody he acted completely surprised, and all through the trial protested that he knew nothing whatever of the murder.

"The prosecution brought in an amazing amount of evidence and the court was a hubbub of excitement. Mrs. Kershaw was loud in her accusation of the bloated millionaire who had killed her dear husband, as was Muller, and both hated him so intensely that they would scarcely look at his malevolent figure.

"James Buckland, a porter at the Fenchurch street station, testified that on the evening of the 10th, which was one of dense fog, the 5.05 was late. He had been hailed by a gentleman in a fur coat and all his baggage was directed to a cab. Asking the cabman to wait, the stranger had gone back into the waiting room. And the cabby waited. He waited three hours almost, and was about to turn in the baggage to the lost property office when Smethurst appeared (he said it was the stranger in the fur coat) and directed the cabby to take him to the Hotel Cecil. . . . While all this testimony was being given, and with the eyes of all in the court riveted upon him, the accused man, entirely oblivious to the seriousness of the charges against him, dropped off to sleep, as if he were utterly unconcerned.

"Other witnesses that the police had cleverly unearthed were brought forward. It was shown beyond doubt that the man in the fur coat, whom many attempted to identify as Smethurst, had met a shabby looking individual in the waiting room of the station, a man that closely paralleled in appearance Kershaw at the time of his disappearnce. The appointment seems to have been one previously arranged by the two parties.

"Through all of this Sir Arthur Inglenook, who was counsel for Smethurst, had nothing to say. At length he arose and in his lowest, most drawly tones, said very quietly:

" 'With regard to this alleged murder of William Kershaw on Wednesday, December 10, between 6:15 and 8:45 p. m., Your Honor, I now propose to call two witnesses who saw this same William Kershaw alive on Tuesday afternoon, December 16, six days after the "supposed" murder.'

"It was as if a bombshell had been hurled into the court. Even His Honor was aghast and the lady next to me almost fainted.

"Perhaps you recall the wonderful development of the case which so completely mystified the police. Torriani and a waiter at this hotel in the Commercial Road both deposed that about 3:30, December 10 a shabbily dressed individual lolled into the coffee room and ordered tea. He was pleasant and talkative, said his name was William Kershaw, and that all London would soon hear of his stroke of good fortune, as he would be a millionaire and so on, and so on.

"When he had finished his tea he lolled out again, and the clerk found an old umbrella, apparently left by this same individual. And, sure enough, a week later, on Tuesday, the same individual came to claim it. This man Signor Torriani and the waiter exactly described as Kershaw.

Oddly enough, he seemed to be very absent minded. He left a pocketbook behind him, with sundry papers, all belonging to William Kershaw. This pocketbook was produced in court and Muller identified it as belonging to his dear friend William.

"That was the first blow of the defense. And then Smethurst was brought on the stand and replied that he had never known Kershaw, and had never written him. The letter, he said, were not in his handwriting, and he proved it by scribbling a number of lines and his signature."

"He then recounted his procedure and actions on arriving in England. He had come in on the 5:05 train and had started from the lobby over to the refreshment room to get a glass of wine. On his way he had been accosted by a shabby individual, that he did not know, and never had seen."

"This individual had begged him for money, saying that he had a starving wife and children, and begged him to follow him to his lodgings and see. He was suspicious of the man, and after he had followed some distance, he found that the man had given him the slip. In the fog he attempted to find his way back, and it had taken

The Seventh Year

True As the Fact That Twice Two's Four Is the Maxim That He Who Tries to Intercede Between Husband and Wife Finds Himself 'Twixt the Devil and the Deep Blue Sea

"GRATITUDE?" murmured my cousin Theresa, dreamily interrogative. "I know the word, of course, but the thing it stands for . . . "

Surprising as I found this abrupt outbreak into misanthropy, I felt that it would have been even more telling if my cousin had in any way led up to it. We were discussing income tax, beguiled thereto by the sight of one rich motor car after another, disgorging one richly dressed woman after another into the sunshine of the Croisette; and Theresa, who has a talent for finding out other people's business and a genius for inventing what she cannot find out, was telling me which were the successful gamblers, which the profiteers, which the tax dodgers and which the far-sighted, nimble Russians who had sold out and flitted to the Cote d'Azur before the revolution. After explaining how the money had been acquired, my cousin was pointing out to me how it was being spent.

As any one knows Cannes is able to testify, the little shops between Majestic and the Carlton are as seductive as any in the Rue de la Paix and not much more than twice as expensive. We had watched American and South American women, French, English, Russian and Spanish, each attended by a man to pay the bills and carry the parcels, and we had expressed an ungrudging satisfaction that so many rich men could still be found to support so many expensive women. An unmistakably English couple who had just dived—after long inspection of the windows—into Lacloche's, prompted me to add that, as England was the most heavily taxed country in the world, I was grateful that the inland revenue authorities had left enough money in circulation for a fortunate few to participate in this international rivalry of ostentation.

It was at this point that Theresa exploded in the manner which I have described. Gratitude?

"We'll hope they're as grateful as I am," I said. "I love to see women beautifully dressed, and I love beautiful jewelry——"

"He'll be buying her emeralds," said my cousin between her teeth. "Mildred has the loveliest emeralds I've ever seen. Tom gave her a great collar of them when they married——"

"Were those friends of yours?" I asked, rather superfluously.

"Tom and Mildred? They were. Mildred and I were at school together, and Tom was my oldest friend. It was through me that they first met seven years ago."

As Theresa has herself been married fully ten years, I realized that Madame Mildred's offense could not be that of stealing the heart of her oldest friend's oldest friend.

"Where did the ingratitude come in " I ventured.

My cousin stared resentfully at the many colored windows behind which Madame Mildred was adding to her collection of emeralds.

"It's me he ought to be buying presents for," she protested. "After all, it's through me that they're still together."

"A story," I suggested, mildly, "sometimes gains in intelligibility if the narrator begins at the beginning."

"This isn't a story," Theresa rejoined, impatiently. "You may call it a study in male psychology. Or an awful warning. The Woman Who Sold Her Soul and Got Nothing in Return."

"It was probably all the soul was worth," I said. "She looked an empty headed creature."

"Mildred? She hasn't a soul to sell," my cousin exclaimed in high scorn. "She's simply a collector."

While Theresa continued to stare resentfully after her lost friends, I pacifically propounded the question whether any one who collected things of beauty could be wholly without soul.

"If you regard emeralds for themselves and not merely for their break-up price——" I argued.

"Some of the men Mildred has collected could hardly be called things of beauty," Theresa interrupted with venom. "If you consider Fat Rodney . . . To be admired by Fat Rodney would be an insult to any woman with a soul. She collected him, though. She'd collect any man! And she very nearly came to grief over him. If I hadn't toiled and lied and perjured myself——"

"It was your soul, then? I apologize!" I said.

"And in return I get nothing!" Theresa cried, tragically.

I took occasion to say that the couple we had just seen appeared to be on excellent terms. Was this no compensation?

"When they both cut me in public?"

Though Theresa insisted that there was no story to tell, I scented the possibilities of one.

"If I can make anything of it," I promised, "you shall buy yourself a present at my expense."

Theresa colored faintly, as though she did not relish the idea of seeing all the facts set out, especially by an impartial pen.

"You mean you'd publish it?" she asked.

"Not, of course, without your permission."

"But, I should like you to!" Theresa exclaimed, eagerly. "People of that kind want showing up!"

"Then give me the opportunity of helping," I begged.

"The trouble began last year," my cousin explained, "at Tom's place in Somerset. His land marches with Fat Rodney's, and they were all good friends until Tom, who's as jealous as a cat, took it into his head that Rodney and Mildred were becoming too fond of each other. I don't know that there was anything more in it than in Mildred's last half dozen affairs, but Tom decided that he must put his foot down.

"He pretended, I believe, that he couldn't allow any gossip about his own wife in his own county, but the truth is that the time had come for them to readjust themselves. They'd been married six years, and the seventh year is always supposed to be the most critical. Tom was desperately in love and desperately out of love by turns. Very much on edge. Very unreasonable. And Mildred was the same, except that she's never been in love with anybody; she just condescends to people as long as she thinks they can be useful to her.

"Well, the marriage was hanging by a thread. Mildred was wondering whether it wouldn't be better to go back to her old poverty than to put up with Tom any longer, whether he hadn't exhausted his usefulness. Tom was stamping about, saying: "This isn't good enough——" and hoping for an out and out quarrel if he couldn't bring her to heel. Her extravagance was appalling!

"She neglected all her local duties! And then people began to talk about the way she was seen everywhere with Rodney. What could 'poor' Tom be thinking about to allow it?"

Though I am personally unacquainted with "Fat Rodney," I have followed his career in the press and can sympathize with any husband who regards him as an undesirable friend for any wife. I made a comment in this sense to Theresa.

"O, every one knows Rodney hasn't a very good name," she agreed. "And I, for one, didn't blame Tom when he took it on himself to forbid him the house and put the Hall out of bounds for Mildred. He saw that he was obeyed, too! Once, when Mildred was trying to slip quietly over to see Rodney, Tom met the car and turned it back. And, when I was invited down rather suddenly and quite unexpectedly, I was hardly surprised, knowing Tom, when he explained that he wanted me to keep an eye on Mildred. He had been called away, he said, and, unless he could leave some responsible person in charge, he must take her with him to make sure that she didn't race to the Hall the moment his back was turned."

If I had not realized already that Master Tom was an ass, this would have convinced me.

"A most improper request," I said. "I hope you had nothing to do with it."

Theresa nodded, sawing the air with an emphatic forefinger.

"I made it clear to Tom," she answered, "that, if I was to stay another hour in his house, it must be neither as a spy nor as a keeper. He announced to the heavens at large that, if Mildred got up to any of her tricks, he'd divorce her as quick as winking. I said that was entirely his affair. He appealed to me as his oldest friend, the friend of both parties, the woman who'd brought them together.

"I said I'd do everything in my power to keep the rift from widening, but that, if he continued to suspect Mildred without cause, she would very soon give him cause to suspect her in grim earnest. Something to cry for, as our nurses used to threaten. If I remained at all, I said, I should remain as a friend and a guest.

"And I was as good as my word. Mildred went her way; and I went mine. When she told me she had some business with her Women's institute, I pretended to believe her implicitly."

So much irony was lavished on the "implicitly" and the "pretended" that I felt obliged to ask whether the Women's institute was a blind for the Hall.

"I don't know," answered Theresa, primly. "I shall never know. I considered it my business not to know. All I can tell you is that the institute was in one direction, the Hall in another and that Mildred went and returned for all the world as though she'd walked round five sides of a hexagon. It wasn't my business! Hadn't I told them both, till I was sick and tired, that I should observe strict neutrality? And it wasn't even my business when she had to visit her masseuse in Bath. A sudden twinge of rheumatism. Two or three rubbings. Could I ever forgive her if she stayed away for the night?

"I did suggest that she might have the masseuse out to the house. Ordinary prudence . . . And Tom ready to put the worst construction on everything. Mildred said it was out of the question; the woman had an invalid mother who couldn't be left. Have you noticed that people with invalid mothers always take to massage or manicure work? I can never imagine why, but I suppose they get some satisfaction from mortifying other people's flesh . . . I said it was no business of mine and let it go at that."

Theresa paused to make a calculation on her fingers.

"That must have been a Friday," she resumed. "Tom had gone away on the Wednesday, for a week. Yes, that's right. And he came back, without a word of warning, on the Sunday."

"To find that she wasn't there?" I hazarded.

My cousin nodded grimly: "And that I didn't know where she was! And I had no idea whether we had a spy among the servants! And there was no time to makeup a story! And, if there had been, I couldn't imagine what kind of story Mildred would like me to make up!"

Theresa's voice, which had been rising in a crescendo of excitement, suddenly dropped. "Quite candidly, I lost my nerve," she sighed. "When I saw Tom's car coming up the drive, I fled to my room. After all, I was not Mildred's keeper. I could see no reason for being dragged into this, though I could see no possible way of keeping out of it.

"Well, the car pulled up at the door. The chauffeur rang the bell. I heard Tom say: 'Is her ladyship anywhere about?' And I waited for the butler to tell him that her ladyship had gone away two days before, without her maid, and that nobody knew where she was or when she would be back! I had a dreadful feeling that Tom would order the car off to the Hall, that he'd catch them red-handed, that there would be shooting all round . . . If you knew how I hated the sight and sound of a revolver! Even on the stage . . .

"To my amazement, I heard the butler saying quite calmly: 'I will see, Sir Thomas.'"

The expression of all-embracing disillusion, which I had observed on Theresa's face when she dismissed the moral phantom known as gratitude, reappeared for a moment as she made ready to confess her own foolish part in keeping together people who were spoiling to be separated.

"This is an essentially unrighteous world," she declared. "If you'd ever stayed with Tom and Mildred, you would have said they were equally unfit to be trusted with a good servant; but, when the servants had to come down on one side or the other, you might reasonably have expected them to come down on the side of Tom, who was, for once and in spite of all his tiresomeness, in the right. They knew that the house and the money were Tom's and that, if Mildred were turned adrift, any one who supported her would be turned adrift, too. Even if you like to say that they were chivalrously protecting the woman against the man, they might have guessed it was a thousand to one they'd be found out. In spite of all that, they made a solid, human ring round Mildred!

"As I've told you, the butler was the first. And Mildred's maid was a close second. Before I'd had time to collect myself, I heard the butler coming back to say that her ladyship had gone out in walking things soon after breakfast, but expected to be back in time to change before luncheon. No mention of the masseuse, by the way! And no hint of any direction!

"The next to come into the conspiracy was the gate keeper at the south lodge, who blithely swore that her ladyship had taken her dog through that way between ten and eleven. After this, you won't be in the least surprised to hear that I fell without a moment's hesitation!"

My cousin looked up at me defiantly, as though challenging me to say that I should have acted differently in her place.

"It would have been bad enough, in any event, for Mildred to be hanged on my evidence, even if the evidence had been cork-screwed out of me, but it would have been a million times worse if I'd rushed forward and volunteered to Tom that his servants were lying to him and that Mildred had disappeared on the flimsiest of excuses for one night and had then stayed away two! At the outset I had insisted that I was as a friend, taking no part in their wrangles, and, though I don't pretend that it was a particularly straightforward or dignified course, I decided that my clearly expressed neutrality must relieve me from the obligation even of correcting statements which I knew to be untrue.

"Alas, when one makes friends with the mammon of unrighteousness, no half measures are permitted! I was just saying to myself: 'Thus far and no farther,' when my maid brought a message that Sir Thomas would like to see me if I was disengaged.

" 'O, is he back?' I asked.

"It was utterly unnecessary for me to pretend anything to anybody, but I wanted to keep clear of the conspiracy, I wanted my maid to realize that I could meet Tom without any kind of embarrassment. It was no good! My maid was in as deeply as the rest. I shall believe to my dying day that it was the boot and knife boy who telephoned to the Hall and told Mildred she must come back at once.

"You may be sure I was not let off! While I kept Tom out of mischief, my maid was going to patrol the Hall road in the hope of intercepting Mildred and putting her on her guard. And, before I'd been talking to Tom for three seconds, I had not so much joined the conspiracy as taken charge of it.

"I said it was a pleasant surprise to see him before we'd expected him. He interrupted by asking when Mildred had left the house. I said, some time after breakfast. He informed me that he had the best reasons for believing that she had gone to the Hall on Friday night and had not returned since. I answered that this was not only fantastic, but impossible: Mildred and I had dined together on Friday, lunched and dined together on Saturday . . ."

As my cousin paused, I took occasion to say that she had not spared her corroborative detail.

"What else could I do?" she asked helplessly. "The story about the masseuse might be true, but I couldn't use it after what the servants had said. We were all going to be hanged so far as I could see, and it didn't much matter whether we were hanged as sheep or lambs. And, though I hold no brief for perjury, it may be justifiable when, by telling the truth, you become responsible for one or two lives.

"There was such an air of murder about Tom that I wondered why he didn't go straight out with his gun instead of asking me questions of which he didn't believe a single one of the answers. I can't describe the scene we had! Terrible! He was like a madman!

"I wouldn't give in, though! And gradually it dawned on me that he did half believe what I was telling him. I don't to this day know whether he was bluffing when he talked about his 'reasons for believing' that Mildred had gone to the Hall, but I realized he was bluffing when he barked out "It's not true!' 'Why can't you be honest about it?' I stuck to my story until he became positively insulting, and when I asked him to excuse me, he flung off to the library, vowing that he would instruct his solicitors to institute proceedings for divorce. He was still there, writing like mad and leaving me to starve, when luncheon was announced.

"I don't know whether this was bluff too; with a violent tempered man who's violently in love and violently jealous you can't tell for certain, but I didn't dare give a hint that I was weakening. I told the butler to ask him if he would mind my beginning luncheon alone, as I was faint with hunger. That brought him back to the attack in no time! Perhaps he thought I could be starved into a confession!

"He flourished a letter in my face and asked me if I still denied that Mildred had been away since Friday. I told him I had nothing to add, nothing to retract. He told me to read the letter: this kind of thing could go on no longer. I said that, if he tried to divorce Mildred—whether he succeeded or not—he would be the first to regret it, as—unfortunately for him—he was obviously still in love with her. That sobered him, even though he continued to declare that this sort of thing couldn't go on.

" 'But,' I said, 'whether you divorce her or not, it's no affair of mine. I may lament as a friend, but it's only too clear that I have no influence over you.'

" 'I don't think you can get out of it as easily as that,' said Tom. "And I'm sorry our old friendship should count for so little in your eyes. It so happens that you're the one person who can save things. I'm sorry if I rather lost control of myself, but this is quite literally a matter of life and death. I can trust you. If you'll swear that the story you've told me is true, I'll tear this letter up."

Theresa looked at me again with a glint of defiance, but this time she seemed confident that I should not take up her challenge.

"Of course I swore it was true," she went on. "By everything I held sacred."

For some time the traffic along the Croisette had been lessening; the clock at the top of old Cannes marked a few minutes to noon. As the shop keepers locked their doors for the midday meal and rest, the South Americans and Americans, the English, Russians and Spaniards desisted from the labor of shopping and repaired to the Galeries Fleuries for cocktails and orchestral selections from the musical comedies of Victorian England.

At length the door of Lacloche's opened. An unmistakably English couple was bowed out. As the car drove away, its occupants stared rigidly in front of them.

Theresa relieved her feelings in a bitter laugh.

"I hope they've been made to pay through the nose!" she exclaimed, vindictively.

"You are allowing personal resentment to interfere with your story," I said. "We had reached the point at which Sir Tom, magnanimously or weak mindedly, decided to forgive his wife——"

"My dear, there was no forgiving about it!" my cousin interrupted. "There was nothing to forgive; You may be sure Mildred saw to that. She sauntered in, half way through luncheon, apologized to me for being late, patted the top of Tom's head and told him that, as he wouldn't trouble to repair the foot path from the church she'd come the whole way round by road.

"It was superbly done, though I thought the reference to 'church' was perilously near blasphemy. She never asked why Tom wasn't in London. Though something was quite obviously the matter, she refused to notice it. And without saying a word, in a way that I can only call magnificent, she denied his right to question her or wonder about her or even speak to her until she'd suggested, hypnotically, what he was to say. By the end of luncheon, it was Tom who had come to heel.

"Afterwards, when we were alone, she kept up the same attitude with me. And, my dear, with the same result! You might have thought I should be taken into her confidence, but the only reference she made to her absence was to say that she had fully intended only to be away one night. No regrets, no apologies, no thanks, either to me or her guardian devil for getting her out of an appalling scrape!

"If, in fact, she had been meeting Rodney somewhere, she may have felt a certain delicacy in thanking me for helping to cover up her tracks; but I don't know, I don't suppose I shall ever know, whether she did meet him. Later on, as you'll hear, she pretended that such a thought had never entered her mind, but Mildred is naturally such a liar . . . However, you may say I'm not the person to cast stones on that score. I was too sore about the whole business to discuss it with my maid, or I might have found out something.

"All I can tell you is that, when I tried to pierce Mildred's armor by inquiring after her rheumatism, she said very deliberately that it was better, but that she believed she would have to take a cure at Vichy, after all.

"I made no excuse to leave next day. Whatever had been the purpose underlying my invitation, I felt I'd fulfilled it generously. If I hadn't kept Mildred out of mischief, as Tom hoped, at least I'd tided them over the

After the Call Is Over

Speeding the Parting Guest During the Stone Age Was Simple—a Blow With An Ax Meant Goodby Forever! It Was a Crude Method, But Much Better Than the Lingering Torture of Modern Farewells

ONCE upon a time—and a very early time it was—Gu came over to Ug's cave and squatted down beside the fire. Ug moved over reluctantly and made room for his visitor. He was surprised and puzzled. Nothing like this had ever happened before. He knew that Gu had a perfectly good cave of his own; why, then, did he not stay in it?

As the hours passed and Gu sat and sat, Ug grew impatient. He wanted to ask Gu to go home. Unfortunately, language had not yet been invented and he could only grunt. He grunted vigorously, but Gu stayed on.

Finally in desperation Ug picked up his stone ax, cracked Gu over the head with it and ate him. Thus ended the first call.

Ug and Gu were crude men. Had they lived a few thousand years later their encounter would not have ended so abruptly. Ug would have patted back a yawn, and remarked provocatively, "Well, well, the Pleistocene age will soon be over now, won't it? It hardly seems possible."

"Great Scott!" Gu would have exclaimed, glancing at the notched stick by which he recorded the passage of time. "I had no idea it was so late; I must run along. We're living down in the temperate zone, you know, and the last glacier stops sliding at 11,000 B. C. Rotten service, too. I would not have migrated down there if it hadn't been for the children."

"I hate to see you dash away so early, old man. It's really just the shank of the eon."

"I know it, but if can't be helped. Well, good by, Ug. You must come down and see us one of these eras. You're still driving the Pterodactyl, I suppose "

"Yes, but the old Pterodactyl is practically extinct. I've been thinking of trading it in on a Dinosaur."

"You don't say!"

"Of course, a Dinosaur doesn't have the speed of a Petrodactyl, but there's less overhead, and I like the streamline effect of the body. A good, conservative model is what I want. Some of these monsters are evolution crazy, developing new species every century or so, just to make the public dissatisfied with the old ones. It's a graft."

"Have you seen the new Eohippus? There's a net little beast. They say it consumes very little grass, and can pass any monster on the road."

"Yeah, but people kid the life out of you if they see you driving one. I suppose you heard the story about the Neanderthal man who was trying to get his Eohippus to cross an alluvial plane. The little creature had balked and wouldn't budge a step. Pretty soon along comes a Cro-Magnon. 'Hey!' says the Neanderthal man, 'do you know anything about an Eohippus?' 'No,' says the Cro-Magnon, 'nothing but a lot of bum jokes.' Ha-ha-ha!"

"Yeah, I heard that one when I was an amoeba. But do you know the story about the fossil and the"—

"Uh-huh. I heard that one back in the paleozoic period. Well, I must be migrating. Have to get up early tomorrow morning and make some footprints in the mud for the archaeologists. Toodle-doo!"

"Pip-pip!"

With the development of conversation, the stone ax fell into disfavor as a means of speeding the parting guest. Social calls ended, not in swift annihilation, but in slow torture. This is a refinement of civilization which has continued to the present day.

When a fellow tribesman enters our twentieth century cave, squats down beside our fire and proceeds to chatter at us for hours, we do not slay and devour him. There is a sweeter revenge than that; a few days later we go over to his cave and chatter at him until he is bored comatose. The stone ax and cannibalism have been replaced by the radio, vacation snapshots and unpardonable gin.

It is estimated that the average number of social calls made by each person in the United States last year was 198. Assuming that each call lasted about two hours, the total time wasted in 1928 alone was approximately 43,500,000,000 hours, or more than 4,833,000 years. To many of us, no doubt, it seemed longer.

These figures do not include visits of condolence, back-fence tete-a-tetes, family reunions or calls for the purpose of borrowing and returning things. They are just plain, ordinary calls in which two or more people sit facing each other and make conversation for a given period of time. Thanks to railroads, automobiles, bicycles and other marvels of man's ingenuity this period of time is growing shorter. In 1700 the average call was three days in length. (This gave the horses a chance to rest up before the return trip.) Some callers stayed for an entire week, if the hominy held out, and there is an instance recorded in Balthrop's "Decline and Fall of Southern Hospitality," of one Elkanah Grunion, a Salem merchant, who went to visit friends in Virginia in 1715 and never came back. He just stayed and stayed with his friends in Virginia. Such cases, however, were rare, even in colonial days, and in 1825 the average time consumed by a social call was only 48 hours; it would have been less but for the fact that a guest who declined to stay all night was considered rude and his hostess regarded the refusal as a reflection upon her housekeeping.

By 1900 the mean calling-time had been cut to three hours and fifty-seven minutes, although overnight calls were still customary in the rural districts. Incidentally, the meanest calling-time is about 9:30 p. m., when it is too late to go to the theater and too early to go to bed.

(Note: The statistics in the three foregoing paragraphs are furnished through the courtesy of the Little Daisy Pocket Calculator company, and the costume worn by Mr. Grunion in the second paragraph is by Brooks. Shoes by I. Miller. We also wish to take this opportunity to thank the Reisenstein Furniture company for the use of the grand piano in the conservatory scene.)

At the present time overnight calls comprise less than 2 per cent of the total, and most of these are accidents due to careless reading of suburban time-tables or faulty assimilation of liquor. There is no more pitiable creature than the guest who has failed to make his getaway on time and finds himself marooned in the suburbs. It is all very well for his host to say heartily, "Tut-tut! We can give you a shakedown"—but unless the guest has already had a shake-up in the form of several stiff cocktails, he is doomed to a night of discomfort, mental as well as physical.

Although overnight visits are not as frequent as they used to be, and can usually be avoided by exercising a little firmness and foresight, it is still impossible to set a definite time limit upon the ordinary social call. Conversations which have been given up as dead in the drawing room will come to life and linger for hours when transferred to the vestibule.

There seems to be something about the mere sight of umbrella stands, hatracks and galoshes which opens the floodgates of memory, stimulates the imagination, enlarges the vocabulary and loosens the tongue. The man who was so dumb at the dinner table becomes an inexhaustible raconteur as soon as he gets one hand on the door-knob. The youg lady who said nothing but "Oh, re-ally?" at tea, grows garrulous the moment she picks up her gloves. Inspiration rides on the blast from the half-open door; repartee rules the draughty canyon between parlor and porch.

The right, the manly course would be to say: "I've had a very pleasant time. Good by!"—and stride out of the house without more adieu. But the vestibule is no swift river rushing to the open sea. It is a sluggish canal, with at least three locks which must be negotiated.

Lock 1 ("What a perfectly gorgeous scarf!") is encountered when you put on your wraps. It leads to a lengthy discussion of wearing apparel, department stores, advertising, the unreliability of newspapers and why Mr. Blenkinsop resigned from the country club.

When you open the door, some 15 minutes later, you find yourself at Lock 2 ("Haven't we been having the most amazing weather?") This involves a detailed weather report, a comparison of the temperature a year ago with the present temperature, a comparison of California climate and Florida climate, an assertion that one doesn't mind the cold so much as long as it isn't a damp cold, a conjecture as to whether most of the influenza cases aren't really just old-fashioned grippe, although people never used to die of grippe—an admission that perhaps we aren't as healthy as our grandfathers were—a guess as to how old a person has to be before he can claim to be 100 years old, and whether death is the end of everything.

Crossing the threshold you reach Lock 3 ("Good by! You must come over and see us some time"). This necessitates explanations as to why one doesn't go out oftener, an evaluation of the radio as a strengthener of home ties, an enumeration of the responsibilities of parenthood, a denunciation of the public school system and the younger generation's ideas of a good time, the shocking details of a high school drinking party, a pessimistic commentary upon the price and quality of liquor, a list of the best places to get it and three infallible recipes for the detection of wood alcohol in cocktails. When every topic of conversation has been exhausted, you slide down the front steps, crabwise, smiling reassuringly at your host to show him that you are still his friend, even though you are leaving him. A moment later the door closes and you are a free man!

Obviously, the logical thing to do would be to transpose the vestibule and the drawing room. This would improve the quality of the conversation and encourage abrupt farewells: What the world needs is some way of saying "Good by" in less than three-quarters of an hour.

Pirates Ahoy!

By Charles B. Driscoll

THE TREASURE CHEST OF CAPTAIN BURGESS

AMONG my most highly prized pieces of pirate plunder, gathered together during the years of nosing about among the islands and inlets of the seas where once the buccaneers and sea-rovers sailed, is a heavy iron treasure chest. It was made by some patient and skillful craftsman in Spain, probably about the year 1620, while the Mayflower was making history on Massachusetts' shores.

This handsome old chest is about a yard long, 20 inches wide, and 20 inches deep. It is all of hand-forged iron, with numerous iron straps encircling it in every direction, and strong rivets well distributed over the entire surface, holding the straps in place as securely as though they had been welded into the sheets comprising the main framework of the chest.

Empty, the chest is a heavy load for two strong men. Iron handles that will never give, no matter how heavily the chest may be loaded, are securely fastened to each end. In front there is a large keyhole, into which the iron key fits. But the keyhole is a dummy. The real keyhole is concealed under one of the iron straps in the center of the top of the lid. The strap has been cut carefully, so as to fit over the keyhole without betraying the secret, and is held in place by a concealed spring.

Insert the key, which weighs two pounds, into the secret keyhole, and you require a lever slipped through the handle of the key, to turn it, so heavy is the lock. There are, in fact, nine locks, operated simultaneously by this herculean key. The lock mechanism, securely riveted to the inside of the lid, is most complicated and durable. It works as well now as it did when it contained the ill-gotten gold of Captain Sam Burgess, in the middle of the seventeenth century, despite the rough treatment it has received and the long years when the chest lay hidden in the sand.

Inside of the chest, at one end, there is a built-in strong box, which was operated by another and smaller key. The lid of this box is open. I pried out of the keyhole the business end of the ancient key that once unlocked it, but I have not been able to find an artisan who could reproduce the key for me, so this inner strong-box remains always open.

The chest is intact, and I cannot imagine it being opened without the key, except with a goodly charge of explosive. It shows some effects of corrosion on the outside, and on the top, where the secret keyhole is, there is evidence of violent vandalism. There are the marks of a cold chisel, heavily driven by a powerful arm and hammer. The damage that was done to the lock itself and the covering strips that hides the keyhole has been neatly repaired, but the marks of the cruel chisel will remain there as long as iron endures.

Sam Burgess was born and reared in New York, nearly a century before the city passed out of the control of the English kings. He was sent to school until he reached the conclusion that he couldn't learn any more there. He had a hankering for the sea, and finally left school at noon one day and shipped aboard a merchantman bound for Spain.

Sam had a little money on this first trip, though how he got it I do not know. Probably he extracted it from the till of his father, who was doing well as a ship chandler in New York.

In a dark little shop near the waterside in Vigo, Spain, Sam saw and coveted the iron chest which now reposes in my dining room in Yonkers, half full of my wife's excellent jelly. He bought it for a small sum, and had it removed to the ship on which he was a common sailor. There was some objection on the part of some of his shipmates to such swank, since a chest, requiring two men to lift it when empty, really rated a skipper for an owner. But the captain silenced objectors, hoping to buy or steal the chest himself before the voyage back to New York was finished.

Burgess' next voyage was on a privateer in the West Indies. He lugged his chest along, and locked his winnings in it. Sam was a prudent boy, and didn't spend his money foolishly, and in two years he was mate aboard a privateer, and doing remarkably well.

Next, he went as mate aboard a vessel fitted out to trade with pirates. Some merchants of Boston had conceived the brilliant business idea that they could beat their competitors to the pirate profits by going out to meet the freebooters instead of waiting for the pirate ships to come to American ports and call for bidders on their loot.

In Boston in those days there were prosperous jobbers of pirated goods. These gentlemen were able to undersell all competitors who operated lawfully, for the pirates were not in the habit of holding out for market prices for their merchandise. Gold and silver were the items the pirates counted upon as producers of regular revenue, and these could always be exchanged at full market value, or hidden away for use in future days, when the sea-rovers should settle down to legitimate ways of living. Other goods, such as wine and silks and spices, were taken by pirates from captured ships, and offered in American ports at great bargains to dealers who were specialists in this kind of business.

New York "fences" for pirate loot were getting most of the business. They were in the habit of meeting the pirates at Gardiner's island and trans-shipping the loot to barges which landed it at the warehouse doors. New York was so hospitable to pirates, and laid itself out so extensively to show them a good time, that most of the boys who sailed under the Jolly Roger called New York their favorite port.

The Boston merchants decided they could afford to indulge in a bit of mercantile enterprise that would make their New York competitors start up in surprise, so they outfitted the Jolly Anne and sent her to African waters to take merchandise cargo off the hands of prosperous pirates operating in those parts.

It was on the Jolly Anne that Burgess sailed as mate.

The voyage was a prosperous one. After eight months at sea, the Jolly Anne was heavily laden with valuable cargo.

Sam Burgess was filling his iron chest with gold and silver. He was an astute trader. He did a good deal of trading privately, on his own account, usually getting his goods for nothing as bribes for the use of his influence aboard ship, and selling at a fair profit at every port where sales could be made. He also accepted cash bribes when he could get them. The money all went into the chest, and Sam was feeling rather opulent.

Just as she was about to head for Boston, the Jolly Anne was wrecked in a gale off the Island of Madagascar. Nearly all of the hands were lost, and the cargo was a total loss. Burgess was cast, half dead, upon the rocky shore. Next day, when the wind abated, he induced a party of natives to take him to the wreck in a boat, and, with the aid of the blacks, had the good fortune to find his iron chest, piled up on a reef that was partly submerged at high tide. The chest was under tons of wreckage, and the task of getting it out appeared to be almost hopeless.

It took nine weeks of herculean labor for Burgess, aided by three faithful natives, to clear away the wreckage and extricate the chest.

The treasure within the chest was worth working for. It was gold and silver, in coin and bar, and worth, according to our way of measuring, probably $2,000,000. Burgess had not been behindhand in securing for himself much more than his share of the winnings of the expeditions he had sailed in, and he was not to be cheated of his prize by the sea, either.

The chest was finally hauled out and carried by boat from the reef to solid ground, under thick tropical foliage.

Burgess decided that his only chance to get away from Madagascar depended upon his obtaining some of the gold from the chest and distributing it liberally among the more powerful natives, who might be induced to transport him to a port whence he could sail. But the key was missing, and no amount of searching would reveal it.

It was then that Burgess determined to break open the chest. With hammer and chisel he worked on the lock, endeavoring to break the inner springs.

Exasperated by his failure to get at the gold, Burgess looked up and beheld two of his companions of the Jolly Anne, who were observing him closely. Since he could no longer play his game alone, Burgess told his shipmates his plan to get away from the island by the free use of his gold.

"No need of that," they told him. "There's a British ship in a harbor, just a little way down the coast, right now. We're on our way. If you can't open the chest, let's bury it here, and come back for it later. Meantime, the three of us will wake up some night and have a British ship for our own, with a good black flag to mark it. What about it, Burgess?"

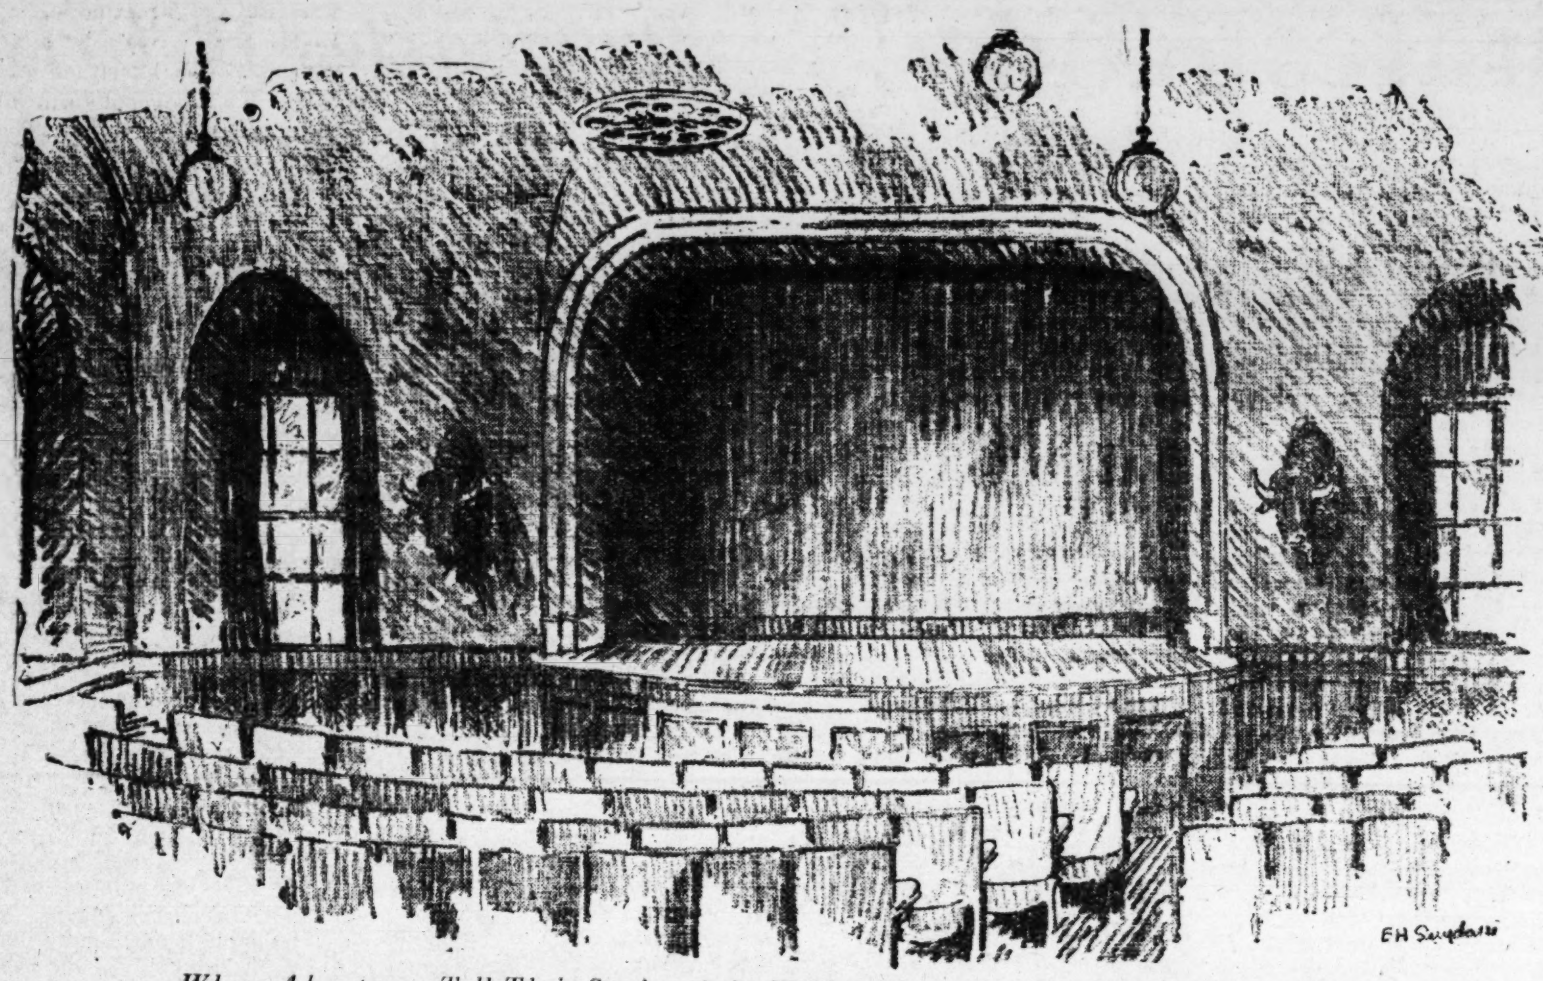

So Burgess shook hands with Mark Ammon and George Jester, and they made the three blacks, who had assisted Burgess so faithfully, bury the chest.

They then killed the three laborers and threw their bodies into the surf. The place where the chest was buried was carefully marked. Each of the three made a map of the place, with prominent landmarks noted, and away they went, swearing loyalty to one another.

It was three years before Burgess came back to get his chest of treasure. He and his companions had succeeded in seizing the British merchantman Albion, on which they had shipped as common seamen. They had murdered the captain and a third of

Crossroads of Adventure

Off to Penetrate Tangled Jungles In Darkest Africa, or Returning From Wind-Swept Floes of the Polar Sea, the Paths of Modern Marco Polos Cross at the Explorers Club. Home of Heroic Trail Blazers of the Wild

BY FRANCIS GOW SMITH

CAPTAIN BOB BARTLETT, rugged and taciturn veteran of 30 year's arctic adventures —any one of which would furnish the average man with reminiscences for life—came home from the Aleutian islands to the Explorers club the other day.

Not satisfied with his countless hardships in the polar sea; not quelled by the memory of the time when he fell through young ice north of Cape Nares, nearly drowned, and was hauled out by Eskimos, barely escaping freezing to death in a temperature of 32 below zero; not deterred by recollection of his 12 shipwrecks or of that amazing voyage in which he brought the leaking, propellerless, rudderless Roosevelt down from Kane basin through ceaseless blizzards and grinding ice—Captain Bartlett, at 54, wants to set out again for the polar sea and spend the next four years aboard a queer, saucer-shaped craft, locked in the icepack and drifting westward around the pole from Bering strait to Spitsbergen. And he would start tomorrow if he could get a ship and an organization in shape.

Such is the mettle of the men who make up the Explorers club of New York. This is the only institution of its kind in the world, and, fine though it is, it is a quite inadequate monument to the indomitable spirit of heroes who have suffered indescribable hardships or sacrificed their lives in the world's most forbidding waste spaces for science.

The Explorers club is the crossroads of the world. There, almost any day, you may talk with men who are more at home in Abyssinia or New Guinea than they are in New York city, where their club is located. You will hear them exchanging casual comments on their acquaintances, the headhunters of Papua, or discussing conditions this year far beyond the Khyber pass, or arguing the relative discomfort of fevers picked up in the Amazonian jungle compared with gangrene suffered from frozen feet while trudging across Ellesmere land with the temperature 50 below zero. They talk as familiarly of ice conditions this year in Baffin bay as the rest of us talk of traffic conditions on Broadway.

The same day that Bob Bartlett came home to the Explorers club I met Horace Ashton there. He was getting ready for another trip, to bring succor to a starving Eskimo village in the Canadian northwest. He had been up there recently with Count Ilya Tolstoy to make motion pictures of the annual migration of the caribou. For some reason the caribou didn't migrate this year, and Ashton didn't get the pictures he wanted—but worse, the fact that there was no migration prevented the Eskimos from getting the meat they needed. And Ashton and Tolstoy raced out of the frigid silence—800 miles in 28 days by dog sledge—to bring word to The Pas of the Eskimos' plight.

Any day now, at the Explorers club, we will be hearing from Merl La Voy, the hardy, stocky built chap who, within the frame of a football center, packs the soul of an artist. Never were more beautiful motion pictures taken than those that La Voy has brought back from remote places rarely or never trod by white man's feet before. He was with the first party to climb majestic Mount McKinley's 20,000 feet of blinding snow.

Until one has seen La Voy's South Sea pictures one does not know the magic charms of the islands celebrated in prose by another Explorers club member Frederick O'Brien. Merl La Voy has photographed Mount Olympus from a dizzily swooping airplane; he has penetrated the jungles of Africa and the deserts of Australia; he has taken pictures in 43 different countries.

There is Eugene Lamb, who has lived 15 years in remotest China, and is the only white man who has seen a certain strange sunbath ceremony conferred upon Buddha in Tibet. He could tell you of Mongolian bandits, and of human heads stuck upon poles along the roadside. His ambition now is to conquer Mount Everest, the last spectacular exploring exploit offered man while our efforts are still confined to this particular globe.

There is Earl Hanson, whose hobby for the moment is another trip to his old stamping grounds in Iceland, where he thinks the hot springs offer vast commercial possibilities.

And there is Carveth Wells, just back from the Mountains of the Moon in equatorial Africa. From Java and the Malay peninsula to barren mountain sides in Norway, Carveth Wells specializes in meeting the world's queerest animals—tree-climbing fish, singing worms, carnivorous cows, birds that pick the teeth of crocodiles, the smallest mammals and the biggest insects known to nature, butterflies with a 12-inch wing spread, not to mention the mysterious lemmings which appear by the hundred million on the mountain slopes near Stravanger, to ravage the country during a mad migration down to the sea, into which these creatures plunge and swim straight out for no known reason and to no known destination.

Such, in countless variety, are the tales you may pick up any time at the Explorers club. But at first the club seems a rather cold and unexciting place, lacking some of the quaint and mellow atmosphere that is felt in New York's other famous meeting places. This is due, partly to the fact that it has just moved into its new half-million dollar clubhouse on Cathedral parkway, which hasn't yet had time to acquire a lived-in atmosphere. But even the old clubrooms on Seventy-sixth street was less characteristically clubby than, for instance, the Players or the Salmagundi.

And this is because of the very nature of the Explorers club itself. It isn't just a frame for deep leather chairs, paintings, odd relics and a library. True, its collections are unique, and of extraordinary interest—prehistoric weapons, Indian war clubs, magnificent headdresses of savage tribes, Eskimo kayaks and Brazilian dugouts, pictures painted by Operti in the arctic wastes, heads of strange animals, a 16-foot snakeskin—each object with a thrilling story attached.

But the true story of the Explorers club is the story of its members themselves, and of man's continual, aspiring defiance of the wilderness and the elements. The club is merely a convenient meeting place for men who have done deeds that will be memorable in history centuries hence. And until you know these men, until you have tasted the spirit that moves them, until you have been touched by their driving impulse to acquire new knowledge about this world we live in—and to diffuse it—you will not perceive fully the true spirit of the Explorers club.

Yes, the story of the Explorers club is the story of men—men who are utterly diverse in temperament, mental habits and physique, yet who are bound together by a common urge to go where no other man has gone before and bring back knowledge that will widen the horizons of mankind, enrich its industries, speed up its progress and pierce more deeply the heavy veils that still enshroud the vast yet fragmentary realm of modern science.

Upon the Explorers club rolls have been listed virtually all the great names in modern adventuring. Each year takes one or another of them from us, often a dramatic and heroic sacrifice to the cause to which the club is dedicated. Amundsen flies into the freezing fogs of the arctic—and is gone. He perished because the guiding code of the Explorers club lived in him; he sought to extend succor to a fellow explorer in the hour of greatest need and was not deterred from his supreme sacrifice by the petty jealousies that had sprung up between him and Nobile in the past.

And Carl Akeley, who died two years ago as he would have wished, active and in the field, while he was making collections in darkest Africa for the American Museum of Natural History.

Akeley and Amundsen, Henry Collins Walsh, founder of the Explorers club; Sir Harry Johnston, Albert Operti, Louis A. Fuertes—so the list piles up of those who have lately gone to join distinguished names associated with the club in the past. Among those earlier deceased are Rear Admiral Peary, Sir Ernest Shackleton, Theodore Roosevelt, Captain Robert Scott, each name ringing in history, each life an epic.

Then there are the names of those still happily alive. Commander Byrd, Major General A. W. Greely, Nansen, Anthony Fiala, Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, the Duke of the Abruzzi, Sir Francis Younghusband, Lincoln Ellsworth, Sven Hedin, Stefansson, Ernest Thompson Seton, Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt, Dr. Knud Rasmussen, General Rondon. I can mention only a few. There are more than 600 members of the club today, and not a one but has some real achievement to his credit, whether or not his name is internationally known. For no man can be an active member who has not actually performed some original work of exploration and added to the geographical knowledge of the world.

Others, by less spectacular discoveries, by scientific studies and writings, have eminently fulfilled the great tasks which are the aims of the club. There is Frank Chapman, of the American Museum of Natural History, one of the world's leading ornithologists, who has studied bird life in all parts of the globe; Edmund Heller, who knows more about small mammals than any other naturalist, and to whom the darkest recesses of Africa are an open book; Louis Schellbach, of the Museum of the American Indian, discoverer of archaeological treasurers in Nevada; Clark Wissler and Earl H. Morris, who uncovered a remarkable Mayan temple in Yucatan; Herman Norden, recently in the Malay archipelago and now projecting a trip to Abyssinia, and George K. Cherrie, one of the greatest of naturalists, who has made 39 expeditions into the interior of South America and knows many other parts of the earth nearly as well.

At any given moment many of them are in the field, and a map of the Explorers club showing with pins their present whereabouts makes the earth look as though it had broken out with some queer rash, the dots being thickest where population is sparsest.

At present Byrd and Wilkins are friendly rivals for the aerial conquest of the south pole; Theodore and Kermit Roosevelt are bound again for the Asiatic haunts of ovis poli, the great wild sheep which they ran to earth some years ago. Sven Hedin, the modern Marco Polo, is now, as generally, somewhere in least known Asia. Other members of the Explorers club have recently been with Roy Chapman Andrews hunting for evidence of man's earliest ancestry in the Gobi desert; with the Stoll- Macracken expedition uncovering mummies in the Aleutian islands; with the Massee expedition to the Ruwenzori range, where Africa's grimmest evil spirits traditionally haunts the silver snows.

With these men goes the diagonally banded red, white and blue flag of the Explorers club, as it went with Byrd and Amundsen to the pole. Two, faring afar in the wilderness under this banner, sometimes meet by sheer accident somewhere hundreds of miles from human habitation. Strange are these occasional encounters, as I was reminded the other day when Horace Ashton told me of an experience in Algiers. A small riot in the street drew him from his lodgings. He beheld a group of Berbers attacking a husky white man, who was putting up a furious but losing fight. Ashton pitched in and helped to turn the tide to white supremacy. Then he discovered to his amazement that the other chap was his fellow member of the Explorers club, Merl La Voy.

As one studies the club's collections, or looks at the list of its most active explorers, one is impressed by the vast preponderance of arctic exploration that is represented. This may be due in part to the fact that the arctic wastes are still by far the greatest unexplored territory. But it is interesting also that the Explorers club grew out of a unique little organization founded in 1894 and known as the Arctic club.

Credit for the establishment of the Arctic club must be divided between Henry Collins Walsh, who died recently after an eventful career of travel, exploration and writing, and Professor William Henry Brewer, a Yale professor well known in the last decades of the nineteenth century for mountaineering and arctic explorations.

The idea for the club was born amid as thrilling a series of adventures as only the bleak stretches of arctic seas can provide. Dr. Frederick A. Cook, recently of more questionable fame, headed in 1894 a sort of vacation cruise to the polar seas aboard the iron steamship Miranda. Scientists and big game hunters made up his party. Near the arctic circle the ship ran on a reef and was nearly sunk. Dr. Cook put forth intrepidly in an open boat in search of aid. He was gone ten days, finally encountering a fishing schooner, which returned to the rescue.

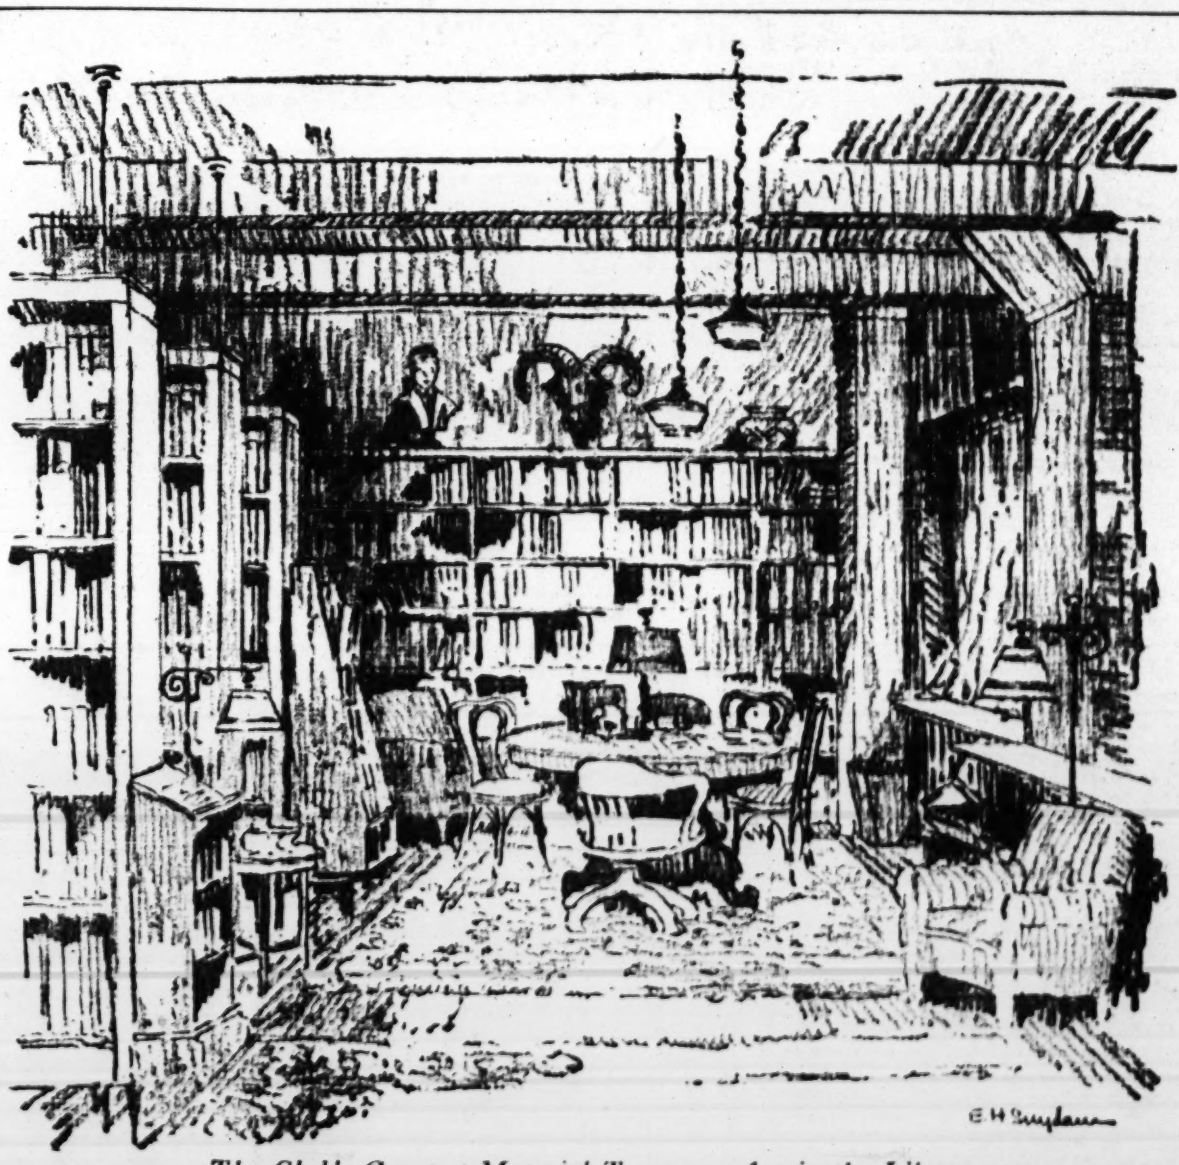

It was while the survivors were aboard the rescue schooner Rigel, battling southward through black storms in Davis strait, that Professor Brewer first proposed the idea of maintaining by some organization the friendship welded by the hardships of the Miranda trip. The idea took root, and Walsh revived it on the last night before reaching New York. There in the cabin the Arctic club was formed with Professor Brewer as first president, Walsh as vice president and Rudolf Kersting as treasurer.

Thereafter for a time the meetings of the group were irregular. The club had no rooms, but met in hotels or restaurants. Other explorers dined with the members as their guests, and it soon became obvious to Professor Brewer and Walsh that here was the nucleus of an institution that could be of assistance to all arctic travelers, offering an easy, informal means of exchanging information.

So in 1897 it was decided to extend membership to all arctic explorers. Within the next year the rolls were enlarged to include the already famous names of Nansen, Schley, Greely, Peary, Brainard and Walter Wellman.

Soon the energetic Harry Walsh perceived that the idea of the Arctic club might serve the purpose of general exploration. Together with his friends, A. W. Greely, F. S. Dellenbaugh and Caspar Whitney, he sent a letter to some 50 distinguished explorers, calling upon them to form an association, with the object of uniting explorers in the bonds of good fellow-

What Was Justice In This Case?

Crime of Harold Croarkin Illustrates the Problem of Degenerates and the Law

WHAT should society do with murderers classed as degenerates? Should they be looked upon as insane and put away in asylums, as defense lawyers almost inevitably contend, or should they be treated as we treat the usual run of killers—in other words grant them a trial by jury and then, according to the verdict, either execute them, imprison them or set them free?

Here is a problem that is continually facing us. From the records, it appears that the problem is being solved in various ways. Sometimes the killer goes to an asylum, sometimes he doesn't. It seems to depend not so much on the eccentricities of the defendant as on the cleverness of the defense. As a rule, however, the defense is not quite clever enough to gain an acquittal. Acquittal in such cases is a bit too much to expect. Let us consider one of these cases—the killing of six-year-old Walter Schmith by Harold Croarkin in Chicago two years ago.

Harold Croarkin, 26 years old, was the son of Peter Croarkin, wealthy flour dealer of Chicago. As we shall learn more in detail later, Harold had a stunted pituitary gland, a persistent thymus, and only four of the customary five lumbar vertebrae. Furthermore, he was a twin, and he played with dolls until he was 14 years old.

Walter S.. ... pallbearers, carrying his flower-covered casket.

He was a weakling and a degenerate. His tendencies had already shown themselves before he committed his final atrocity. If he had not been the somewhat pampered son of wealth and political influence, he would very likely have been sent away as a menace to society—and Walter Schmith would be alive today.

Croarkin had been arrested for taking indecent liberties with a little girl, but the matter had been hushed up and the authorities had permitted Harold to go his way. After all, his father was a man of some influence and his uncle was none other than Francis E. Croarkin, prominent attorney and former member of the Chicago board of education.

The affair thoroughly frightened Harold. He promised fervently that such a thing would never, never happen again.

As the police learned subsequently—just a bit too late—Croarkin soon returned to his perversities. After his arrest for murder he admitted twelve offenses in three months. These had not come to the attention of the police because the families involved did not care to have the matter become public, or because they had not themselves known what happened.

On the afternoon of December 16, 1926, an ingratiating young man with pale, gray-blue eyes approached Anthony Horwick, 15, and Walter Schmith, 6, and with offers of candy, succeeded in luring them to the stable of the Devon Riding club at 2100 Devon avenue, Chicago. They had been there for a while when he sent the Horwick boy on an errand.

Anthony sped away as directed and presently returned. He found the barn locked, though he heard someone moving about inside. He decided that the stranger and Walter had left the place and so he went off and joined some playmates in the neighborhood.

The barn remained locked for some time. Then boys playing not far off heard screams. One of the boys paid particular attention to the screams but decided that some unfortunate youngster was being whipped by his mother.

The late Walter Schmith.

And then the stranger, wild-eyed and frightened, came out of the barn.

The next scene took place in the home of Miss Agnes Furlong, a friend of Harold Croarkin. Harold stumbled into the Furlong home late the same afternoon. Miss Furlong's mother opened the door for him and he collapsed into a chair. He seemed very drunk, so much that Miss Furlong decided not to see him.

"I want to see a priest," he gasped. "I want to see one right away because this is my last night on earth."

"What are you talking about, Harold?" said Mrs. Furlong.

"Never mind. Never mind. Just tell me where I can find a priest."

"What you ought to do," counseled the woman, "is go on home to bed."

"No, no!" he exclaimed, shuddering. "No, I can't go home! I can't. I have no home now."

He kept moaning and complained of pains over the heart. Mrs. Furlong brought him a cup of tea. She wanted to call up his home but he objected so strenuously that she refrained. He drank the tea and presently left.

The next scene is the rectory of St. Vincent's Catholic church.

Croarkin called at the rectory about an hour after his visit to the Furlong residence. He flung himself upon his knees before Fathers L. J. Sweeney and C. J. McCarthy and cried out that he had committed a terrible crime. Sobbing, he told the details of a most shocking offense.

The priests decided that the man was demented, but he was insistent. He said he would take them to the scene.

Fathers McCarthy and Sweeney, puzzled and still rather skeptical, summoned a taxicab. Croarkin willingly enough climbed in beside them. They drove to the Devon Riding club barn and threw open the doors.

"Up—up!" whispered Harold. "He's in the loft!"

The priests climbed a ladder to the loft.

And there they found Walter, not dead yet but very near the end. There were deep gashes in his head, as though made with a hammer. Father Sweeney raised the child's head and flinched a little as he saw Walter's eyes staring at him in agony. The priest spoke to him.

"What's your name, sonny?"

A long pause. Then the lips moved.

"Walter."

In the meanwhile Father McCarthy rushed to seize Croarkin but the latter had apparently been expecting this, for he leaped away, scrambled down the ladder and slammed the door in his pursuer's face. When the priest got outside, the man was nowhere to be seen.

Walter died soon afterward in a hospital, where Fathers McCarthy and Sweeney had hurried him. Before he died he whispered the telephone number of his home. The police learned that Walter Schmith had been missing from his home. The identification was quickly made.

But the murderer was at large.

That the murderer had been Croarkin was soon rather definitely established from the stories of the Horwick boy, the Furlongs, and such information as the priests could give without violating the sanctity of the confessional. George Hinkle, stableman at the Devon club, also furnished evidence linking Croarkin to the crime.

Detectives visited the Croarkin home, but were informed that Harold had not been home for twenty-four hours. In view of his statement to Mrs. Furlong about it being his "last night on earth," it was felt that he might have committed suicide. Both the Furlongs and the priests agreed that Croarkin certainly seemed out of his mind.

Harold Croarkin as he appeared in court during his trial.

And then the next day he walked into the Shakespeare avenue police station with his uncle and gave himself up to Capt. Patrick Harding.

He appeared half crazed and on the verge of collapse. He readily admitted the killing, but could give no definite reason at first why he had struck the child.

"I don't know why I did it," he kept saying. "I think it was because he made me mad."

"Were you drinking?" asked Harding.

"Yes, a little. I bought a bottle of gin that afternoon from a druggist."

"Are you much of a drinker?"

"I can drink a whole pint of Bourbon without feeling it," said Harold a trifle boastfully for all of his fright and nervousness.

His uncle hastened to inform the authorities that Harold had the mind of a 10-year-old child. The uncle said that the youth's parents had never been able to understand him. "He was never able to earn a living,

INSTALLMENT XIV.

ONCE more, as in the New eYar's din of Wing's, the sense of pursuit rushed over her. Swift as the thud of horses' hoofs on the track sounded in her brain the pace of that power which pressed after her, after Joe, after all of them who played their mad game of pleasure. Wildly they ran after a phantom they called life, and relentlessly life itself ran after them. Ever since Joe's victory, ever since she had known how he cared for Violet, she had been fleeing from truth, hoping to find safety in flight. She had believed that she could hold Joe by living a lie with him, by striving to keep a neck ahead of him and a flank ahead of disaster in the furious race of their existence. She had been wrong, and now doom panted close. Beneath the laughter of the clubhouse crowd, a crowd whirling around the same fateful oval of hazard, vibrated the feeling of its imminence. Fear clamped her heart, but over the fear rose the courage of the thoroughbred. It hadn't been swiftness alone which had carried the Corrigan colt to the post. Not the speed in the mile and twenty, but the fight! Pat Mangan's old creed whipped her to combat. "We're only at the mile," she muttered between her set teeth. "There's still the twenty!" An orchestra struck up a dance tune. Lights flashed in high chandeliers. As if on signal the crowd moved toward the dining room, and across an opened space Sally saw Joe and Violet in the clubhouse door.

She moved toward them quickly, glimpsing defiance in Joe's dark [illegible] and twisting panic on Violet's little triangle face. "Ready to eat?" she called, and knew that she had startled them by her manner of greeting. "Who else is coming?"

"No one," Joe said sulkily, not meeting her look. "I called off the rest."

"Why? I thought you'd won a pile."

"We want to talk to you." He followed a steward's lead across the dining room to a window table, flung off a casual order, and lighted a cigarette. "We're going to have a showdown."

"For what?" She watched the trembling of Violet's hand on the white cloth, and wondered at the steadiness of her own.

"You know what."

"I can't even guess." She bowed to some girls from a Weber and Fields show who laughed noisily around a big table with a half dozen bediamoned turfmen.

"Quit your bluffing." There was a snarl in his voice. "I've told Vi about last night."

"You don't understand, Sally," the girl thrust in. "There wasn't any harm in it. Joe only——"

"I know just what there was in it," Sally said. "I've guessed for a long time what you were to Joe. I wasn't sure, though, until he told me."

"But we never——"

"Now that you do know," Joe cut over Violet's protest, "what are you going to do about it?"

"I don't know."

"You'd better decide."

"What's there for me to decide?"

"Joe and I love each other," Violet said.

"You've loved a good many men before him."

"I've never loved any one else."

"O, Violet!"

"Not this way. You knew that I loved Joe long before you married him." Her eyes blazed up to a fire which burned away her terror. "You knew that I wouldn't have looked at any one of the others if he'd cared for me then. You knew it, and you knew that he wouldn't have cared for you if you hadn't held him the way you did."

"Held him?"

"Yes, held him. Why, he had as much chance of getting away from you as—as John Dalton has with May Temple! You grabbed him before he knew his own mind. You married him when he'd have married anybody. You've been trying to hold him ever since, but you couldn't do it!" Her mouth quivered, but her shallow eyes flashed in triumph. "He loves me, and he wants to marry me."

"Well, he can't." She bent toward Joe. "You know better than anything else in the world," she told him, "that my love for you has never been this cheap thing she's trying to make it seem. I can't talk about it here before her, but you know. Even if it weren't that way, even if I hadn't loved you as I do, I'm your wife, and I'm going to stay your wife."

"You're young, Sally dear. You've got a long life before you yet."

"You can't!" Violet's voice rang shrill. "You know he despises you."

"Do you?" She tried to win his gaze, but he stared out over the room in its lively kaleidoscope of lifting glasses and fluttering gowns. "Do you?"

"No." He crushed the fire from his cigarette. "There's no use fighting about this. We've made a mess of things, and all we can do is to call a new deal."

"I haven't made a mess of things," Sally's head went up in pride. "I've loved you, and I've gone through plenty of hell with you, Joe." She clenched her hands to keep down the break in her voice. "I'm going through with this, too."

"No, you're not." The ugly menace in his voice went through her. "We're done, you and I. It's all over but the fireworks. Vi and I care for each other. We want to marry each other, and, by God, you're not going to stop us!"

"I am."

"You're not."

"How can you marry her unless I get a divorce?"

"You're going to."

"I'm not."

"Why not? What'll I be to you, any how? I'm never going back with you again. You can make trouble, I know. Well, go ahead and make it. What'll you gain by it?"

"What'll I lose?"

"Plenty."

"You can't frighten me about money."

"Who's trying to? Look this in the face, will you? I'm going with Violet whether you divorce me or not. In a little while every one's going to know. Then what'll they say?"

"What'll I care?"

"They'll say that you're nothing but a jailer, that you won't give me freedom to do the right thing. Do you call that marriage?" For the first time he looked her in the eyes. "Do you call that love?"

In the trail of Joe's words another sound rushed to Sally's mind, the memory of the clang of the steel gates as her father had turned back from her to his cell in the gray prison. Freedom! That code for which she had battled in spirit as Tom Burt and Grandfather Stevenson had battled for it in body, that gleam on the far horizon of the soul, how could she deny it to any one? Was he right? Did holding him mean jailing him, keeping him prisoner to her pride? Was that love? Was that even human justice? The thought, dazzling and dizzying her, swept from the deck of her consciousness all other standards of measure. "Do you mean," she asked him slowly, "that more than anything else in the world you want to be free to marry her?"

"I mean just that."

"And you'll think I'm wrong, all wrong, if I stop you?"

"I'll know it."

A steward at Joe's elbow spoke softly. He turned to the man with an oath. Men and women at the next table looked around. One of them threw a merry protest to Joe. The orchestra swung into livelier rhythm. The girls from the Weber and Fields show jumped up from their places, and started a writhing line which wound around the room like the file of an Indian war dance. Corks of champagne bottles popped noisily. Some one rang a cow bell, and one of the girls began to sing, "There'll Be a Hot Time in the Old Town Tonight." The crowd took up the chorus, swinging glasses with the ting-a-ling of the words. Around the tables surged the joy of holiday; but the three of them sat silent as it rose to crest. Longer and longer grew the winding line, snaking in and out between tables until its leader came abreast of Sally.

"Here's Sally Gates, boys," she shouted. "Get up and sing, Sally! Earn your supper!"

She shook her head, but the line waited. "Sing Dolly Gray! Sing the Wabash. Tell 'em to play the Wabash, boys. Get up, Sally!"

"No, no," she cried. "I can't. O, please, please let me alone!"

"Come on, Sally! Make her do it, Joe! Look at her sporting silk! Must have made a million today. Don't be stingy. Whoop it up, old girl!"

"I—can't," she made protest, but she caught the gleam, malicious, triumphant in Violet's eyes. It was not Joe alone that Violet sought to take from her. It was her success, her power, her gift of song. Well, she wouldn't, she couldn't! That was her own. Against everything but her love for Joe she had held it. Now, with his love lost, she flung out its banner defiantly. "All right," she said, and stepped to the table.

Pink as the sunset clouds which had hung over the hospital roofs in the springtime of her budding love she glowed in the brightness of the room as she faced the crowd. Within her leaden weights might press down upon her heart, but, as always, the show must go on. Valiantly she braced herself, and signaled the orchestra. As the shouts stilled she looked down at Joe. He was staring straight ahead, his eyes gloomy, his mouth sullen as before; but there was in him that poignancy of predestined failure which for all her seething anger, pierced her. They were, perhaps, together for the last time. She'd bind no man against his will. Not with her world calling her! But what would become of him? This city of theirs—this gay, powerful town of pleasures and passions, of speed and strife—which was speeding her upward, was speeding him down. Could Violet, could any other woman save him from him-

Islam's Threat to

By Charles C. Bato
Former American Trade Commiss

TURKEY, the traditional "Sick Man of the East," has, it seems, at last arisen from his bed and kicked all the self-appointed doctors out of his chamber. Persia and Afghanistan are trying to follow his example. Egypt, Syria, Mesopotamia, Morocco and Tripoli are struggling to throw off European domination. There is unrest among the Mahometans in China, Java, India and Russian Turkestan. In Arabia, the source of Islamism, hundreds of thousands of pilgrims, visiting the Holy City of Mecca, are subjected to propaganda which sends them back to their distant homes filled with resentment against the European.

What does all this mean? Will the dream of the "Red Sultan" come true? Will the whole Mahometan world launch itself again against Europe in a fierce crusade like the one that swept it to the walls of Tours and enabled it to thunder at the gates of Vienna in 1683?

This sudden revival of the Moslem world has come as a shock, for it long has seemed hopelessly decadent and doomed to come under the political and economic control of Europeans. Foreign capitalists built its railroads and developed its mines and oil fields. Committees of bankers managed its finances. Foreigners were not subject to the laws of Mahometan lands. Spiderwebs of treaties and agreements limited its taxes and other governmental activities. But now many of these entangling nets have been torn to shreds. The strands of others which bar the way to freedom are strained and snapping.

The permanence of Europe's rule of Moslem subjects, acquired long ago by conquest or treaty, has clearly been shaken and no one can safely predict the future. It is astonishing to learn that the King of England reigns over more followers of Mahomet than any Caliph of Bagdad. There are 100,000,000 of them, scattered in India, Malaya, Africa and the Near East. Queen Wilhelmina of Holland has 40,000,000 Moslem subjects in the Dutch East Indies. The French have another 30,000,000, mostly in North Africa. Even the United States has 500,000 Moros in the Southern Philippines. The growing restlessness of these formerly docile millions is now a matter of the gravest concern, to be discussed only with the greatest discretion.

How far is Bolshevist propaganda responsible? A school is maintained in Moscow to train native agitators to arouse the populations of all these lands against their governments. The Bolshevists continually proclaim their intention of helping all the oppressed peoples of Asia to throw off the yoke. Streams of money have been sent to carry on the campaign. When the Ameer of Afghanistan invaded India in 1919 the Indian Moslems were urged by their leaders to join their co-religionists against the English. The recent revolts in Java were due to Bolshevist influence. Bolshevist "cells" everywhere are "sapping from within."

From two of the most powerful human emotions—religious fanaticism and the love of wealth and plunder—Mahomet forged the weapon which enabled his successors to conquer Southern France, Spain, Northern Africa, the Near East, Turkey, the Balkans, Hungary, Persia, Turkestan and Moghul India and to harry the shores of the Mediterranean and even of the British Isles.

Two twentieth century organizations are trying to repeat the achievement of the eighth century and to hurl themselves on the possessions of Christian Europe as their ancestors did on the Byzantine Empire.

The first organization is the Senussi, an oath-bound brotherhood. It has been waging war in the Sahara against the French and the Italians. Its emissaries, the Arab traders, have been converting the Negroes of Central Africa and even have penetrated into South Africa. It is estimated that they have gathered 10,000,000 black converts in the last few years. Moslems of this type made up the human avalanches which overwhelmed Gordon at Khartum and "broke the British square." They are numerous among the French Black Colonial troops. The few thousand Riffs held the Spanish and French armies at bay for months.

The second organization is made up of the Wahabites of Ibn Saud. They have been conquering the various Arabian kingdoms since the war and the capture of the Holy City of Mecca has given them a dominant position. They may be called the Protestants of Islam. They not only are trying to restore the religion to its primitive simplicity, but they abstain from alcohol and tobacco, keep the fast of Ramazan on the burning sands of torrid Arabia and carry abstinence from drink even to the extent of refusing to swallow their saliva

The watchword of their religion is "The Koran or the Sword," and their fanatical belief that death in war against infidels wipes out all past sins and opens wide the gates of Paradise makes them dangerous foes. They already have raided the British Mandates of Mesopotamia and the Trans-Jordan. It is said that their object is the conquest of Egypt and the expulsion of the British from all Moslem countries.

The experience of the British during the Boer War in South Africa shows the dangers of guerrilla warfare, even when the enemies are without arsenals, heavy artillery and the resources of modern industry.

The Mahometans, formerly so docile, are filled with a burning resentment, convinced as they are that the Europeans are determined to blot out their religion and their whole culture, of which they are intensely proud.

The doctrine of the right of all races to self-determination, which has overspread the whole world as the result of the war, is largely responsible for the smoldering insubordination which is constantly breaking out in riots and insurrections against Europeans. The insurrections in Egypt were so serious that the British withdrew their protectorate and gave that country virtual independence. Moslem sentiment in India caused England to alter its whole policy toward Turkey and cancel the Treaty of Sevres at the end of the war. When Moslem princes, either independent or allied, visit Europe they are received with all the pomp due crowned heads.

Thousands of Manometans fought against Turkey in Mesopotamia, Syria and elsewhere and rendered loyal service. Now they feel that they have been deceived and betrayed, and after dusk, in their remote villages, they plot revenge. This ferment is working in all Mahometan countries.

The laws, as well as the customs, of Moslem countries are based upon the Koran and are entirely unsuited to modern needs The prohibition against receiving interest on money prevents Moslems from being bankers or merchants on a large scale. Art is hampered by the law which forbids the making of representations of any living thing. The whole organization of their society has been petrified by hidebound Koranic traditions The result has been that finance, commerce and industry have been almost monopolized by Jews and Greek, Armenian and other Christian merchants. Primitive agriculture and handicrafts have been left to the Mahometans. Decay has been inevitable. Towns have been deserted, forests destroyed, and fields lie untilled as the result. "Where the Sultan's horse's hoof treads grass never grows again."

Until the time of the World War any thought among the Moslems of revolt against the white man was crushed by memory of the defeats suffered by their armies from Morocco, through Egypt and Syria to the Balkans, Persia and Afghanistan in the days of European conquest. Though they had fought bravely and perseveringly, they had been no match for the heavy artillery, motor transport and other products of European science. eaten, cowed and hopeless, there had seemed no alternative to complete submission. The white man ruled the earth through prestige, superior intelligence, mastery of machines.

But Orientals served in the armies of the Allies, and learned to use the shattering high explosives and to operate the devilish machines. They saw white men prostrate in defeat. They visited the slums of our great cities and knew us at our worst. The prestige of the white man was gone. All over the East ran the whispers in the darkness, "These Europeans are not demigods. They are as weak and as bad as we are. Perhaps worse." Everywhere the subject races plucked up courage. They tried boycotts, riots, mutinies. The war-weary Europeans vacillated and failed to inflict the expected punishment. Concession followed concession under pressure from pacifists, altruists and anti-imperialists at home. Autonomy, once granted, became the basis for further demands. The flood tide of Moslem revival had begun.

"Fight fire with fire" is an old proverb, and the more intelligent Mahometan leaders are convinced that the only way to hold their own against the pressure of European imperialism is to adopt the economic processes of Europe. The decision of the Japanese in 1868 to do this was the only thing that saved them from the fate of China and India. Mustapha Kemal Pasha, "Conqueror of the Infidels," in Turkey; Reza, Shah of Persia, and Amanullah, former Ameer of Afghanistan, have tried feverishly to carry out this plan before it is too late. Mustapha Kemal and Reza have accomplished wonders in political reorganization, in new legislation and in changing manners and customs in their countries.

Mustapha Kemal Pasha tore their red fezzes and flowing robes from the Turks and the veils from the hidden faces of the women. Amanullah tried to cramp the free legs of the Afghan mountaineers in second hand American pants, but lost his throne as a result. Reza has his troubles with an obstreperous Parliament.

Conservatism is fundamental in Oriental character. Stubborn opposition to all these sacrilegious changes and blasphemous defiances of the precepts of the Koran is active among the clergy, peasants and lower classes. It took two mobilizations and four army corps to put down the revolt of the Kurdish mountaineers against Mustapha's confiscation of religious endowments for the benefit of the new schools, the closing of monasteries and other reforms. Reza had to take command of his armies in various rebellions. Amanullah, after a fight for his life against the rebels, could not even save his throne by canceling his "blasphemous" orders and withdrawing nearly all his program of Western reforms.

Have these and other reformers gone too fast? Have they committed the unforgivable sin of the Orient in attempting to "hustle the East"? Have they imposed upon unwilling peoples a thin veneer of sham foreign civilization which will crack away when subjected to strain? This is what was done by Peter the Great of Russia, and Bolshevism is fundamentally the sweeping away of all these outlandish contraptions and the restoration of institutions that are consistent with true Russian character and ideals.

Amanullah of Afghanistan is not the only one of these rulers who have been troubled by revolt and treason. Mustapha has found it necessary to order that all those who oppose him are to be exiled, imprisoned or executed. It is rumored that Reza refused to renew the contract of the American, Mr. Millspaugh, who performed the miraculous reorganization of Persian finance, because the latter impeded the accumulation of deposits in foreign banks to provide for the time when the Shah would be driven out by rebels.

In every Moslem country we see similar struggles between the old and the new, between the machine and the artisan, the indolent inefficiency of the East and the exasperating precision of the West. The result is the unrest, misery and chaos which for years has crushed the working classes all over the Orient.

Formerly the artisans were sure of a modest livelihood in supplying the wants of their neighbors. Each could estimate what his trade required and had no fear of being undersold, as the costs of raw materials and labor were the same for all his competitors. Now, however, he is constantly undersold by goods made by tireless and soulless machines, while his raw materials soar in price to fill the demands of their insatiable steel maws. Ground between the upper and neth millstones of modern industrialism, his misery makes him receptive of the propaganda of every radical.

The only salvation of any of the Moslem lands is the adoption of the complete economic organization of the West. Poverty and death are the fruits of trying to assume part of the political and social methods without industrialization. None of the Mahometan races has so far shown any skill in manufacture or business. Their fear of oppression and their hate of foreigners prevent them from employing the indispensable European capital, managers and technical employees. The complete failure of Mustapha to solve the industrial problems of Turkey is the main cause of the opposition of his liberal former associates. Persia and Afghanistan are countries without industries.

All these lands are inconceivably poor, for backward agriculture and handicrafts cannot produce much income for farmers, merchants or governments. The overtaxed people cannot furnish the funds for roads, railroads, sanitation, education and other modern improvements.

Yet most of these lands are potentially rich. Turkey and Persia possess oil fields which may rival those of Russia and Mexico. Undeveloped mines of copper, gold, coal, iron and other minerals abound and are coveted by European and American capitalists. American oil companies have been bidding on the Persian oil fields, some of which are being operated by British companies. The "Chester Concessions" promise vast wealth to those who develop the mines and build the railroads of Turkey.

Europeans are now at work exploring the possibilities of Afghanistan. The competition of different groups of European capitalists for the iron mines of the Riff was the underlying cause for the disastrous Riffian war. There are few good roads or railroads, and neither the peoples nor the governments have the money to build them. Yet the rulers will not grant concessions to foreigners on terms which would attract capital, develop the resources and make the whole region prosperous.

It is quite possible that in the near future—if the governments should have a lucid interval in their mad fear of foreigners—American capital will find the development of the lands of Northern Africa and Western Asia more profitable than similar investments in South America. The problems are those of new countries, with which American engineers are quite familiar. Even now Americans are planning to build Persian railways. Various Europeans are interested in those of Turkey.

American investors may soon be solicited to buy the securities of Persia and Turkey, for the governments are not afraid that American capital will pave the way for territorial annexation. On the other hand, they have not forgotten that British and French bondholders caused the British control of Egypt, and that foreign bankers dominated Turkish finance.

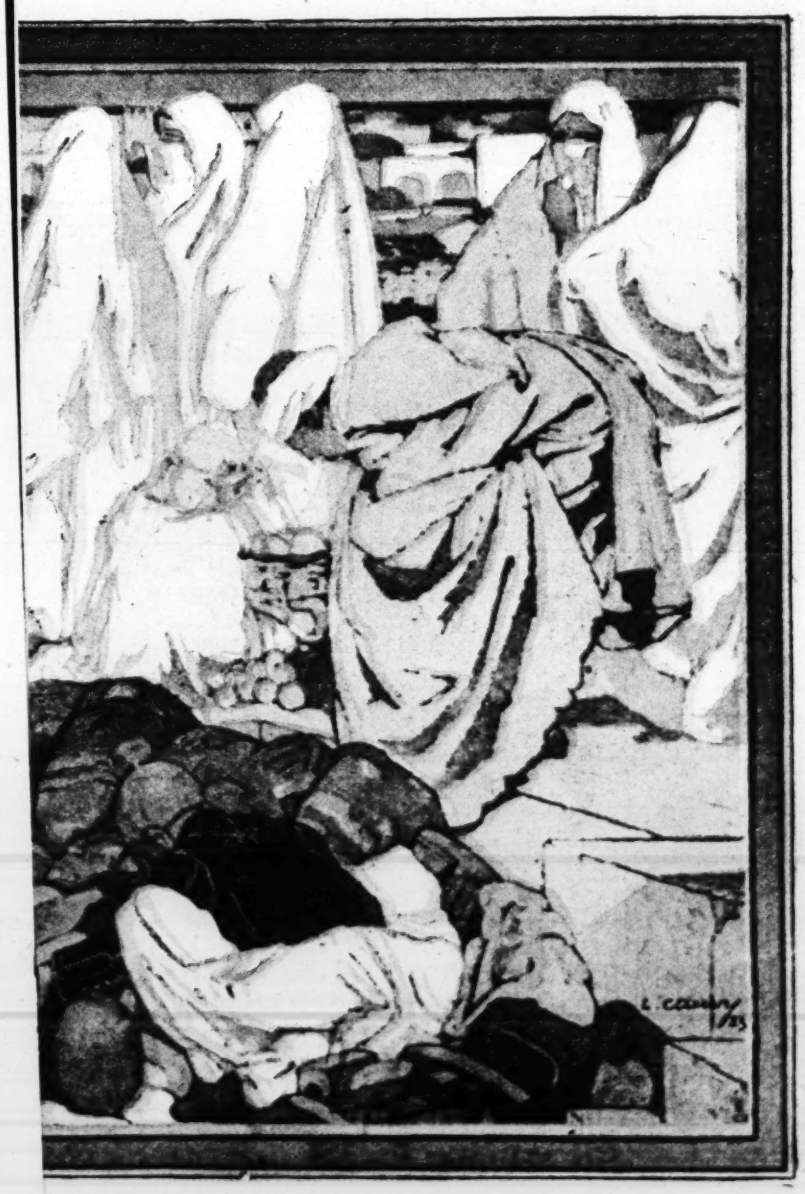

What will be the result? Famine, civil war, ruin and death, as in China? Peace, prosperity, good administration as in British administered Egypt before the war? European political, economic and financial domination, as formerly—or the triumphant rise of new nations, independent, successful, rising rapidly like Japan to places in the family of nations?

Opinions differ widely, according to the individual's philosophy of life. We can be sure, however, that the civilization of the Mahometan races will not be an imitation of our own, as is that of South and Central America. As Japan borrowed largely from the cultures of Korea, China, India and Europe, but remained basically Japanese, so Moslem social orders will assimilate European elements, which, however, will be outnumbered by those of the ages past.

Christianity has made slow progress in Mahometan, Hindu and Buddhist lands. The efforts of numbers of devoted, self-sacrificing, conscientious missionaries have not borne adequate fruit. The millions of American and European money have succeeded in improving sanitation and education, but the genuine converts are few, except among the lower classes. This is particularly true among the Moslems. The day when the whole world will be Christian seems far away.

We even now can see the future of the Moslem revival, although dimly, without details. The day of European domination by force of the races of northern Africa and Asia has gone forever. It is useless to attempt to stem the tide. We should hasten to offer our assistance to the youthful nations.

As we welcomed the new republics of Central and South America, so we should hail the young countries of the Near East.

"LADY DEDLOCK" may have been a wow of a play in its day but it seems pretty dull stuff now. This play has recently been launched with none other than Miss Margaret Anglin as its star. I feel quite certain if Miss Anglin in her heydey had indulged in the sort of acting she does in "Lady Dedlock" she would never have achieved the prominence she has. She did an enormous amount of old-school acting, but when you come to think of it, maybe that was all you could do with "Lady Dedlock."

This old melodrama is sprinkled with such gems as "The fire has been kindled in your sitting room, sir," delivered by a butler arrayed in bright musical comedy blue livery. Lady Dedlock did a lot of suffering, she was always busy steeling herself for the next blow which invariably turned out to be more staggeringly unbearable than the last one. That girl certainly led a hard life. She was a forerunner of the mad, mad Marches, for apparently she was "never let off anything."

Miss Anglin is not as slim and shapely as I suspect she was in the old days. She is, of course, still an interesting figure. I'd like to see her properly directed in a good play. Then maybe she could be a good actress again.

* * * *

The last thing anyone expected concerning the Peggy Hopkins Joyce show, "The Lady of Orchids," is what happened. There has been a bit of snickering about the sort of actress Peggy would probably turn out to be, and veiled—not too veiled—insinuations that she would probably ruin a perfectly good play. Then, lo and behold when she opened, the critics were unanimous in praise of Miss Joyce's performance and further added that the play was bearable only on account of her glamour and performance.

However, "The Lady of Orchids" was not a success. It has already closed. It is a curious thing the way spectacular people fail to draw audiences to theatres. First there was Jack Dempsey and his wife, Estelle Taylor, who earlier in the season appeared jointly in a play called "The Big Fight," in the third act of which Mr. Dempsey did a bit of fighting. Anyone would have thought that show would run for years. Yet New York received it so indifferently, they packed up and went on the road where, surprising enough, the same thing occurred.

Then it must have been quite mortifying to "Peaches" Browning to learn that the show she had been expected to build up with her presence—"The Squealer"—started losing money as soon as she joined it. Can it be the receptions accorded the Dempseys, Miss Joyce and Miss Browning are indicative of an increased intelligence and discernment among theatre-goers? It is almost alarming when you think of it. Here we are filling Eugene O'Neill's "Strange Interlude" in nine acts nightly and tilting our noses at shows in which "Peaches" Browning is to be seen. We seem to be getting frightly arty and high-brow, we do.

Whenever the movies have attempted to film a newspaper story, they have always made themselves ridiculous by the unauthenticy of their newspaper office scenes. For that reason, Paramount who is filming Ward Morehouse's play, "Gentlemen of the Press," at the Long Island studio, has engaged Mr. Morehouse in an advisory capacity during the filming of his play. Your Mr. Morehouse, you may be sure, makes a most impressive figure on the set looking all the world as though he has been directing pictures since "The Great Train Robbery." There is no more popular person in New York writing circles than young Morehouse.

At the same studio on the floor above, they were just beginning to start work on Richard Dix's first talking picture, "Nothing But the Truth." No one is more curious than Dix himself as to how his voice is going to record.

Incidentally the funniest remark I have so far heard about the talking pictures is one I heard recently. A picture critic who has been reviewing movies for fifteen years said that his ears had started hurting him. "I am sure," he said, "that these ghastly talking pictures have given me Kleig ears. I have never had any trouble with my eyes during all these years, but one year of the talkies have gotten my ears in a bad shape."

* * * *

Noel Coward continues to work on "This Year of Grace" as though it were the least instead of the most successful revue in town. Recent additions to this sparkling revue include satirical sketches of "Jealousy," "The Front Page," "The Kingdom of God" (Ethel Barrymore's play) and a most hilarious one of "Jealousy." It is not planned to take "This Year of Grace" on tour. Mr. Coward is due in London during the late summer to appear in another of his own revues, while Beatrice Lillie, bless her heart, is to make a talking picture. Her one cinema appearance some years ago, "Exit Smiling," was not a success, but it was not a fault of Miss Lillie's. The story was poisonous and the direction uninaginative.

* * * *

"You've the Cream in My Coffee" from "Hold Everything" seems to be the reigning dance hit at the moment, being pushed pretty closely by "A Room With a View" from "This Year of Grace." "Dance Little Lady" from the latter show is also being played everywhere. I am more than glad to welcome any new music which will help orchestras to forget "Varsity Drag." I liked it immensely for the first ten years, but I find it isn't wearing so well as the years roll by.

The Seventh Year

worst crisis of their married life. I'd been the trusted old friend, with a vengeance! When she'd finished establishing her ascendancy over him Mildred began to behave as though she were almost fond of poor, doting Tom. The last time I met them they were coming out of Boucheron's. Mildred told me it was the anniversary of their wedding day.

"'Seven years!' says Tom, 'and I swear she grows more lovely each day!'"

My cousin, who is incapable of calculating without the use of at least one set of fingers, tapped out a rapid sum on her knee.

"May, June, July," she murmured. "It was in July, three months after this meeting, that I heard there was a fresh outbreak of the old trouble over Rodney. You'd have thought Mildred would have learned her lesson, wouldn't you. And Tom, for the matter of that? They hadn't!

"Mildred wrote that Tom was becoming jealous again; and she, apparently, was being obstinate. Each was beginning to say that this couldn't go on, that rights must be upheld and feet must be put down. Soon Mildred was saying, in the very phrase I'd warned him to expect, that she'd give Tom something to cry for. Tom was saying he wouldn't trust her farther than he could see her.

"That gave Mildred her opportunity. She reminded him of the time when he'd returned unexpectedly in the hope of finding her with Rodney. 'And all the time,' she told him, 'I was with my masseuse in Bath, as I can prove! I hoped that would cure you of being suspicious, but apparently you're incorrigible.' I have the letter somewhere. It's the wildest outpouring, written in her room, with the door locked against Tom and her maid packing for dear life. It was the last letter but one that I ever had from her.

"I wrote a frantic reply, begging her to be sensible. To my amazement it was returned unopened, with a note from Tom—in the third person and ungrammatical at that—saying that, as he now knew what I meant by friendship, he would be glad if I would cease to hold any kind of communication either with himself or with his wife. This to the woman who'd saved them both from shipwreck!

"But his effort was eclipsed by Mildred's. She wrote a day or two afterwards to say that, while she abominated liars at all times, she abominated most those who considered it necessary or expedient to lie in her defense."

"And that," I asked, "is the whole story?"

"It isn't a story," Theresa reiterated. "You may call it, if you like, an odd freak in masculine phychology. . . ."

"Or feminine," I suggested, in defense of my own sex. "Whatever we call it, I think you've earned some luncheon."

"The sight of those two has simply taken away my appetite," sighed Theresa.

I pointed towards the Galeries Fleuries.

"Let's see if we can charm it back with a cocktail," I suggested.

"I don't feel I deserve a cocktail. I've done nothing all the morning except sit in a chair and gossip to you."

"Then let us take some exercise by walking round the Galeries. In one or other of those most engaging little shops I hope you may see something that you would condescend to accept as a reminder of this most agreeable day. And, Theresa," I added, "I trust I may never again hear you describing yourself as a woman who sold her soul and got nothing in return. . . ."

"You don't thing that perjury imperils one's immortal soul?" my cousin inquired.

"You cannot divorce the act from the motive that inspired it," I answered, "or from the result which it produced. However badly you were treated, it is due to you and you alone that those young people are still, more or less happily, united. I suppose somebody has to be thrown to the wolves. . . ."

"She gets the emeralds," Theresa muttered.

"Do you grudge them?"

My question failed to elicit a direct answer.

"She'll leave him," my cousin predicted, "when she can't get anything more out of him."

"You don't suppose she's learned her lesson?"

Theresa emitted a hoot of derisive laughter. "Mildred? How little I've been able to make you understand! The only person who has learned anything from this business is myself."

"And you . . .?" My courage failed me before I reached the end of my question.

"I shan't sell my soul again," Theresa declared with noticeable decision.

ship and promoting the work of exploration.

The call was answered and the club was finally incorporated, its first meeting taking place in October, 1905, in the Studio building at 23 West Sixty-seventh street. By 1912 the membership had increased to 131 and had become fully international, including Sven Hedin, Dr. Hansen, Captain Scott and Sir Ernest Shackleton.

Meanwhile the club had been using quarters in the Engineering Societies building, but in 1912 it opened its own modest rooms on Amsterdam avenue. The next year the Arctic club was merged with the Explorers club, keeping, however, a semi-independent organization within the larger body. Thereafter the growth was so rapid as to necessitate moving within a few years to the brownstone building on Seventy-sixth street, which has only this year been relinquished for the splendid new building in Cathedral parkway, made possible through the assistance of many wealthy men like James B. Ford, George G. Heye, Caspar Whitney, William E. Harmen and Robert Blackman, treasurer of the club, who supported the club from the start.

Drop in the new clubrooms and you probably will find them uneventful and relatively deserted. Most members, most of the time, are either in the field or returning from it, or getting ready to set forth again. And those you meet will talk about anything but themselves. Should Albert Payson Terhune be at the club you will find it difficult to make him tell of the days he went adventuring among the Moslems, disguised as one of them. Nor will William E. Mullins let on that he has a splendid record for developing transportation in Central America, has been through 17 revolutions, has had encounters with bandits and was shot twice in the body while trying to escort a young lady safely through a Guatemala war zone.

Rudolf Kersting, assistant secretary and treasurer, will be an affable guide to the club's historic treasures, but he will skip over the thrilling story of his arctic shipwreck with the Miranda expedition in '94. Frederick Dellenbaugh, vice president, will be just as hesitant about recounting his part in that wild adventure back in the '70s when Major Powell piloted the first successful expedition through the rapids of the Colorado canyon. You may find yourself talking with a mild and low-voiced young man, and sizing him up as an average commuter who is visiting the club by chance, like yourself. He is Harold Noice, leader of the famous rescue expedition to Wrangel island, where the party left by Stefansson to claim the island for Canada perished almost to a man.

As likely as not you will meet Merian C. Cooper somewhere about the building. You may remember him by name as the creator of the unforgettable film, "Grass," which portrayed the migrations of the Bakhtiari tribes—but likley you will not know that Cooper as a combat pilot with the Americans in France, was shot down and taken prisoner; or that after the armistice he organized the Kosciusko squadron in Poland and was again shot down and made prisoner in Russia; or that the has wandered through and written fascinatingly about the Carpathians, the Ukraine, Galicia, the Andaman islands, Sumatra, Abyssinia, Turkey and Arabia.

Some of the tales that members of the club can tell would make startling contributions to hitherto unpublished history. There is the incident which nearly resulted in Roosevelt's murder in interior Brazil. He was taken seriously ill while on the River of Doubt trip. His helplessness was delaying the party and dissensions arose between the American members. One of the foreigners, whose nerves had been worn raw by hardship, fearing that T. R.'s illness would be fatal and would result in the whole party being lost, drew a gun on the prostrate ex-president. But another member of the party was just as quick on the draw, and the would-be assailant was finally quieted.

Another little known incident of the River of Doubt expedition can be told by Anthony Fiala, member of the club whose exploits are chiefly associated with the arctic. He was a member of Roosevelt's Brazilian party, and he and Kermit Roosevelt were thrown into the river while shooting treacherous rapids and escaped drowning only by a miraculous rescue by two Parecis Indians.

As the Explorers club has grown it has witnessed and its members have taken part in important metamorphoses in exploration. Two decades ago it was carried on largely in haphazard, individual adventures, poorly equipped and struggling indefatigably against almost insuperable odds. Peary's career is a sample of that period, for he was almost constantly in debt and frequently derided while he struggled, year after year, paving the way by ill-fated expeditions for his final conquest of the north pole.

Later exploration became slightly journalistic, being often financed and conducted by enterprising newspapers. The wealthy big game hunters came in at about the same time; and more recently, the scientists have taken it up in earnest, so that nowadays you will find some slender, spectacled scholar penetrating the wilderness side by side with rugged veterans of the earlier chaotic days.

The members of the Explorers club today fall into groups roughly typifying, also, these successive stages of modern exploration. Captain Bob Bartlett, for instance, may be taken to represent the old timers. He was Peary's navigator; his sleepless slavery in keeping the Roosevelt afloat and bringing her back with Peary in 1906 from the polar icepack is a thrilling tale in itself. And, three years later, he was the last white man with Peary when the latter set forth on his successful dash to the pole.

The late Henry Collins Walsh, like Albert Payson Terhune, Caspar Whitney, Martin Johnson, Horace Ashton, Lewis R. Freeman, Lowell Thomas, Felix Riesenberg and Frederick O'Brien, may be set down to represent the varied group of editors, authors, lecturers and publicists who have done their part for the upbuilding of the club.

The scientists, like William Beebe, Henry Fairfield Osborn, Edmund Heller, George K. Cherrie, Robert Cushman Murphy and W. K. Gregory, are an increasingly important element in the club membership. Commander Byrd, Fitzhugh Green and Roy Chapman Andrews may be taken to represent roughly the explorers who are especially gifted also as organizers and leaders.

Despite its fine new building and its enlarged membership of young explorers and business men big game hunters of the modern school, the Explorers club still clings to some of the old timers' traditions. It is slightly inhospitable to women, and is averse to holding dances. They have even bolted down the seats in the new assembly room so that the floor cannot be perverted to dancing. Tea parties have been proposed, but voted down. They would be too effeminate, and besides, some awkward explorer might spill his cup over some of the club's priceless collections.

Among these collections is a painting made in the arctic by Albert Operti, who used a pair of Peary's trousers for a canvas; and the snow shoes worn by General A. W. Greely on his famous trip of 1881, when he was lost for months at Cape Sabine. Only seven members of his party survived terrific hardships and were rescued by the third relief expedition under Captain Winfield S. Schley. Major General Greely, the grand old man of American exploration, is today the honorary president of the club.

The greatest material treasurers of the club are not to be found, however, amid the weapons, war drums, historic ship's bells or Indian implements that it holds, but in its library, which is valued at close to $100,000 and includes some books obtainable nowhere else in America, not excepting the Library of Congress. Two of its volumes, relating to travels in the holy land, were printed in the middle of the fifteenth century. The club has also discovered and published in facsimile the original log of the famous Scotch whaler, Captain William William Scoresby, who in the 1820s did the most remarkable work of discovery and mapping along the shores of Greenland.

To those who ask whether the work of exploring the world isn't about finished the club's books and maps show many blank spots in the known world even today. And each explorer you meet there has his own pet project for clearing up the mystery of some still unvisited region.

There are still depths of the ocean for William Beebe to penetrate. There are still vast polar stretches for Bartlett, Byrd, Stefansson, Fiala and Hanson to risk death in; there are still huge unknown areas in South America where George Cherrie can wander; there is much of inner Asia where Roy Andrews and his fellows can seek some new sensational discovery; Everest is still to be climbed; Papau and its pigmies tempt the adventurous, and Alaska, Canada and even the United States itself have their inaccessible, mountain barricaded corners where the explorer has still to push his pioneer footsteps.

Yes, the work of the Explorers club in fostering modern scientific studies of the world's geographical secrets is yet only in its infancy. Even when the final trail breaking, surveying and mapping is done there will for many decades be mopping-up work that only the patient scientist—the studious naturalist, ethnologist and archaeologist—can perform.

Meanwhile, as their great work goes on, the Explorers club is a rich fountain of thrilling tales of heroism, hardship and adventure.

The Reading Room of the New Clubhouse

How She Got Rid of Rhuematism

Knowing from terrible experience the suffering caused by rehumatism, Mrs. J. E. Hurst, who lives at 204 Davis avenue, 139 G, Bloomington, Ill., is so thankful at having healed herself that out of pure gratitude she is anxious to tell all other sufferers just how to get rid of their torture by a simple way at home.

Mrs. Hurst has nothing to sell. Merely cut out this notice, mail it to her with your own name and address, and she will gladly send you this valuable information entirely free. Write her at once before you forget.

The Good Red Bricks

self on its swift course? For the instant, poised above him, Sally yearned over him in the forgiveness of a great and understanding love. Then she saw his hand reach toward Violet's. Slowly, but with the surety of the artist, she began to sing.

Beneath her in uplifted faces she read tribute, and knew how far she had come from the night she had first sung in the West Town. With the recklessness of the high staker she flung her fate on one turn of the wheel, casting all that she had, her love, her singing, her beauty, her heart, into the song that had been part of her since the time she had sung it for Joe beside the old rosewood piano in the brick house. Pleading, and promise, and longing she poured into the words. Not in memory of a home among the sycamores but in hope of holding a home on city streets she threw on the red everything that life had given her for love, youth, and remembrance of magic moments among the red bricks of their childhood, loyalty, and knowledge of all she had given him; pledge of forgiveness, and lure of happiness she might yet bestow upon him; courage, and the clasped hand of comradeship; devotion, and foresight of the long road to the journey's end. All these, and the shining loveliness of her radiant twenties she held out to him as she sang:

"O, the moonlight's fair tonight along the Wabash,
From the fields there comes the breath of new mown hay,
Thro' the sycamores the candle lights are gleaming,
On the banks of the Wabash, far away."

For him, and him only, she sang, and knew that he knew it, although he never once lifted his eyes to her, even when she let the last note drift into silence. Not Joe, but the girl at the head of the snaking line led the crowd into cheers. "Good girl, Sally, you've earned your supper!" Beneath her hands pattered, eyes smiled. A man lifted a foaming glass of champagne to her. She held it high, still watching Joe. He bent toward Violet, his eyes soft with the gaze Sally knew so well.

All the rage of hurt pride, of scorned love, of wrecked marriage blazed up in Sally Gates' heart. To this man she had given youth and love and faith. With him she had struggled to success. For him she had given up her own chance of fame. And all that he might fling her off for cheap little Violet Caine! That he might shame her before their world! That he might call her jailer, and tell her that she stood between him and freedom! Her eyes widened in fury as she stared down at this sleek, dark head. He looked up from his gaze at Violet. For a second their glances held, clashing in the fight of ancient enemies. With a sweep of her arm she flung the champagne in his face.

"Take her," she cried, "and be damned!" She threw down the crystal with a crash which splintered through the room, then, with her pink gown billowing about her, she jumped from the table and ran from the clubhouse to the darkness of the track.

As she rode homeward on the elevated, vivid as a lone geranium on a tenement window sill, among the black and white revelers of a Derby night, she felt nothing but wish for shelter. The race was over. Life had caught up with her and passed her to the post. Not Violet only but all the other temptations of Joe's weakness, his vanity, his drinking, his cowardice, had beaten her. Not alone his infatuation for another girl but the greater force of which it was but part—the rushing, driving, maddening speed of the city—had overtaken them. Tonight, a lusty conqueror, it roared in a great wind, bugles blaring, tom-toms beating its passage. Candles of Moloch blazed the lights of Twenty-second street. Chant to Moloch lifted the wind's wild paean. Before the gale of its power Sally Gates crouched back in a corner of the swaying car. Not bitterness but the heavier weight of knowledge of the inevitability of fate flooded her heart. Bravely she had fought to save Joe from his folly. Now, at his own insistence, he was free, free to marry Violet, free to go his gait, free to fall some day before this hurricane of passions. Her part was done. Crushed and beaten, she fought back the tears of her humiliation as the train swerved townward; but when she had crossed the river and come to the Harrison street house she could no longer hold down her grief.

In the misery of a lost child she flung herself down on the steps worn by the passing of many feet. "I can't go on," she sobbed. "I'm all through. There's nothing else for me. I'm done." Under the pale moonlight which silvered the roofs into strange and eerie beauty she lay, the dreams and hopes and deeds of her love for Joe in wreckage around her; but through them, little by little, rose the tide of the street which had always been her home.

Not the city of high stake and high fling beyond the river, but this city of her own people pressed upon her a boon greater than peace. The spirit of the west side—the indomitable endurance of poverty and sorrow and pain, the will to face today and find tomorrow—surged into her storm-tossed soul. She raised her head, and the bravery of the Burts, that courage which had braced Tom off with squared shoulders on his way to prison, and which had held up Nan through every misfortune, gave guerdon to the last of them.

"I won't die," she told herself. "There is something for me. I don't know what it is, but there's something. I won't go down!"

Slowly she clenched the iron railing of the steps and lifted herself to face the locked door. Her fingers trembled as she turned the key, but her eyes burned in a rising fire of valor as she went into the empty house.

Chimes that called and pealed and tolled, gongs that clanged and clashed and clamored, the bells of the west side kept beating their brazen hammers of evangel on the white-hot forge of Sally Gates' sorrowing soul.

From morning to midnight, from midnight to morning fire gongs crashed out imminence of danger, patrol gongs clattered nearness of crime, ambulance gongs claimed right of way for the dying. Slow bells knelled grief above the moaning horns and muffled drums of Italian funerals, glad bells swung for wedding and festival. The sad bell in the tower of the Home of the Little Sisters of the Poor said Angelus over the old men and women in that high walled haven of age and poverty. The great bell of Notre Dame bade the children of the habitants to fasts and feasts. Little tinkling bells of the Salvation Army begged remembrance for the city's derelicts. St. Jarlath's and Epiphany's to the northward, the Jesuit's and the Lutheran's to the southward proclaimed mass and matin, compline and vesper.

Day by day, as they had rung year by year, the bells flung to her the message that time was speeding, life passing for others as well as for herself. From behind the closed doors of her grief she heard them at first only dull, accustomed sounds of daily living; but, because she could not shut them out as she had barred all else of the world in the intensity of her pain, they boomed into insistent, recurrent heralds of creed that her misery was but part of the destiny of humankind.

For a time the thought, dinned by the constant clangor of swinging bronze tongues, brought her no comforting. She had tried too hard to rise above the common lot to find alleviation of suffering in knowledge that she must share the pains of the crowd. Conscious though she had always been of the drama of her setting, appreciative of that sixth sense of understanding of people which made foundation for her artistry, she had been too highly personalized, too vividly individual to admit herself bone and sinew of the struggling multitude. Even yet she rebelled against confession of the realization, but the greatness of her hurt drove her into a thoroughfare, wider for all it was darker than the bright boulevard of youth, the gay speedway of pleasure.

Through the hot summer which overlay Chicago, with winds blazing like dragon's breath from the giant oven of the prairies in battle against cool breezes from the lake, she held to the house on Harrison street in the fear of the stricken, dreading lest she meet any one who had reveled with her and Joe in the days of their glory. Only at night would she go forth, choosing then to walk eastward in ways which she had never taken with Joe, pacing in restless woe the crowded, breathless streets of little Italy and the Ghetto, wandering through Greek settlements and Syrian colonies, seeing at every turn poverty, and wretchedness, and squalor, and sickness, and misery, and death. Night after night she fought against sympathy for the crying children, the worn women, the troubled men, the sad, patient burden bearers of civilization; but in the long run Nan Burt's daughter could not pass on the other side of the road, and Sally's heart, grieving for its own loss, welled into pity for these other sufferers of her town.

There was in them, however, a quality of hopefulness which presaged their rising from the depths, promise of fulfillment, if not for themselves, for their children and their children's children; but there were other streets of her treading where the shadows never lifted: Madison street, with sodden, drunken bums reeling out of barrel houses; Green street, with blondined girls tapping at red lighted windows; Randolph street, with its dope counters luring cringing wrecks from the warrens of final degradation, and speeding them toward the sluggish river; streets of crime, and dissolution, and despair. Dimly through her youth she had apprehended and feared them. Now, in grief, she saw how thin was the line which marked her and hers apart from the drinkers of the dregs, and knew at last the meaning of her Grandmother Stevenson's phrase which linked John Wesley and the grace of God. Not with resignation, but with knowledge that she had place in a long procession toward a dimly descried calvary and a more dimly visioned resurrection, she fell into the ranks of the marchers under the beating of the bells.

Not since the night at Washington park had she seen Joe, although every stone of Harrison street held before her some reminder of him. The day after the Derby, fighting in vain with hot anger against her tears, she had packed all his belongings and sent them to Grimes at the old training quarters. She knew that Violet had gone from the house next door, but she could only guess that she was with Joe when Mrs. Caine, with a Pilate's gesture of washing her hands of her daughter's escapade, gave up the boarding house, sold the furniture, and made ready to spend her time on the road.

Things New and Old About the Bible

BY REV. W. P. KING.

THE WEAKNESS OF LIBERALISM.

IT IS an easy and common custom to belabor traditionalism for its manifest errors and obstinate prejudices. But the theologian who is not hopelessly partisan cannot fail to see the defects of a prevalent liberalism.

WILLIAM P. KING
Book Editor and Editor of THE METHODIST QUARTERLY REVIEW
Nashville, Tenn.

Many of our liberalists minimize the heritage of the past. They become obsessed by the new. The theory of latest date makes a strong appeal to this group. They fail to hold on to the values of the past and fail to get any hold on the present, and the future.

According to the federal census of the churches the two liberal denominations among the Protestant bodies suffered losses in the ten years from 1916 to 1926.

The universalists suffered a loss of 3,609, and the unitarians a loss of 22,363. As the theological platform of liberalists became broader, the number who stood on the platform becomes smaller.

Liberalism deals too exclusively in negatives. A man may reject all the doctrines of orthodoxy and make out against many of them a strong case, but the soul of man cannot feed on the husks of denial.

In "Present Perils of Religion" Dr. Albert Edward Day writes, "Let a man prove to his own satisfaction that the world was not created in six days by a divine energy that ceased working on the seventh; he has done nothing to put meaning into the world as it is. Let him loudly deny the Virgin birth; he has done nothing to promote the new birth which multitudes so terribly need. Let him repudiate an everlasting hell; his repudiation will not make an end of earthly hells which are consuming the virtue of womanhood and blasting the honor of manhood and blighting the promise of childhood." Thomas Carlyle dates his spiritual new birth when he arose in his God-created majesty and turned from the everlasting no to the everlasting yes. At least we can only live and lead others to life by great affirmatives. "For all the promises of God in Christ are nea and in Him amen, unto the glory of God by us."

Liberalism places a one-sided emphasis on the reasoning faculties.

"The world with its wisdom knew not God." The natural man receiveth not the things of the spirit of God; for they are foolishness unto Him; neither can He know them, because they are spiritually discerned."

The intellect of man has its function which must not be ignored, but the full-orbed truth can only be mirrored in the total personality of man, and the larger bulk of this personality is in his emotions of love and sympathy and mystic insight. Professor J. Arthur Thompson writes: "It is contrary to philosophy and to ordinary experience to believe that man can come near exhausting the reality of facts by scientific methods only."

The logical processes of the intellect bring to us a range of knowledge that is very limited and that fails to minister to human life in its deeper-felt needs.

A poet makes an arraignment of the blight of a barren intellectualism in a poem, "My Slain Self."

"What can you give my poor starved life in lieu of the dead cherub
I slew for you?
Woe worth the knowledge as a bookish love that makes men mummies;
Weighs out every grain of that which was miraculous before,
And sneers the heart down with the scoffing brain."

We cannot dispense with the critical exercise of the intellect unless we are to turn our people over to the inroads of every conceivable vagary of fanaticism and superstition.

At the same time the highest exercise of reason itself will prevent us from making a one-sided approach to reality. Worthy of a place in the prayer book is the petition, "From the knowledge that puffeth up, may the good Lord deliver us." The intellectual snob attracts the admiration of no one except himself or those of his kind. This type is well-described by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, "A proud exclusiveness is more than unwarranted; it is wicked. Men are always in danger when they begin with a certain air to talk about 'the masses' or the 'common herds;' or the 'hoi polloi' or 'the rank and file' coming dangerously near to pronouncing the last phrase as did the German, 'rank and vile' or as someone has said, speaking the first as if it meant something offensive and the second as if it were something that grated harshly on the sensitive ears of culture."

The cynic is one of our sorriest citizens. He may know many things that are true, but he himself is false. His ultimate conclusions on the meaning of life are false. The light of knowledge which he possesseth at last becomes darkness.

Young in his "Nights Thoughts" long ago described him:

"Your learning, like the lunar beams, affords light but not heat;
It leaves you devout, frozen at heart,
while speculation shines."

There is on the part of liberalists a lack of patience towards the more conservative type. This is the anomalous attitude of a pert and shallow species of radicals.

There is the inconsistency of the impatience of the men who profess to believe in the infinite patience of God. We have the curious spectacle of men who take pleasure in being called modern in their true conception of God and yet who become impatient with fundamentalists because they are not made over in a day. They claim that God takes a long period of time to make new adjustments in nature and at the same time become irritated at fundamentalists because they do not make readjustments in a brief time. They profess but do not share the patience of God, "who shall not wail nor be discouraged" and whoever works in patient love.

The fundamentalist is very much concerned for fear the imperishable spiritual values should be lost and unfortunately wastes the new wine by trying to keep it in old bottles.

Fortunately we do not have to choose between an impotent liberalism and a discredited traditionalism.

There is in liberalism the manifest lack of moral and religious earnestness. A knowledge without zeal is no more to be desired than "zeal without knowledge."

There is the inclination to rest in an easy faith on the ongoing evolutionary processes of life without any sacrificial cooperation.

Tennyson writes of this false optimism:

"Is there evil but on earth? or pain
in every peopled sphere?
Well be grateful for the sounding watchword 'evolution here,' Evolution ever climbing after some ideal good,
And reversion ever dragging evolution
in the mud."

A thin type of liberalism bases hope on the human personality.

This kind of liberalism so exhausts itself with liberality of views that it makes this a substitute for liberality of money or a liberal expenditure of energy toward the cause of righteousness and the building up of the kingdom of Christ on earth. It was inevitable that a measure of unsatisfactory vagueness should accompany that stage of thought which is "wondering between two worlds, one dead and the other powerless to be born." It is worse than useless, however, to indulge in sentimental sighing over the old days and old conceptions which never can return. We must work our way out by filling all the contents of modern knowledge with the presence and purpose of God. A fresh consciousness of God and a vital spiritual fellowship with Jesus Christ is our supreme need. This will produce an earnest enthusiasm for bringing the power of the gospel into the lives of men everywhere and into all the relationships of human life and society. A living fellowship with Jesus Christ will result in the earnest endeavor to make the reign of Christ universal in spite of the passing away of missionary motives which will no longer work.

Dr. Joseph Fort Newton, writing in "The Christian Century," says: "We are deadlocked between an archaic orthodoxy and an arid, negative modernism, both alike impotent to deal with the problem of redemption in its tragic and gigantic modern setting. One abides but does not advance; the other advances but does not abide. One looks backward and loses the vision of the pilgrim Christ; the other tries to trim a titanic Christ down to fit its fastidiousness. Modernism, as it now stands, is no more a gospel than were the meditations of Marcus Aurelius.

A plague on both their houses! What we need is a further step in religion, an altogether other dimension in faith and fellowship, if we are to get on with the Christian enterprise. Either we must go forward to a greater Christianity or be forced out of religion altogether by the tide of cynical materialism now flowing; losing, first of all, the loyalty and service of a generation of virile and educated youth."

him till 9 o'clock to get his bearings again."

"Of the letters, of the man Barker who he was supposed to be, or of anything else pertaining to the case, he said he was completely ignorant. He was finally discharged, on the two points—that he had not written the letters, and that the man he was supposed to have murdered had been seen since the supposed murder."

* * * *

The man cocked his funny, thin head on one side and looked at Polly. He went on tying knots in the string he held in his hands, as he had been doing since he began his story.

"Now I will tell you what, to, me, is the only and the inevitable solution of the mystery."

"Now Kershaw did know of Smethurst's arrival, didn't he? The letters showed that. Now it was never disproved that those letters were written by Smethurst. . . ."

"But"—suggested Polly.

"Now it was evident that William Kershaw did visit the Torriani hotel. He even left his pocketbook so no one would mistake his identity. But where was Francis Smethurst that afternoon? Did any one ask that?"

"And who informed Smethurst of this valuable bit of evidence? Mind you, Torriani did not report his find to the police, as he would have if he had seen notices in the paper."

"Another point—did Mrs. Kershaw produce William Kershaw's writing in court? Of course, not. The police were on the wrong track and stayed on it."

"The body could be identified only by the valuables that might have been placed on it. Well, it never struck any one that this could be Francis Smethurst and not the body of William Kershaw."

"Ah, it was cleverly conceived! Kershaw is a genius! Think of it all! He had a shaggy beard, hair, and mustache. He shaved up to his very eyebrows! No wonder his wife didn't recognize him in court. Kershaw was shabby and slouchy; Smethurst stood like an army officer.

"And that trip to the Torriani hotel—making up to look like himself again! Kershaw was not murdered—of course not! He called at the Torriani hotel six days after the murder, while Smethurst was supposed to be out in the park!"

The man rose nervously from the table, laughed in a cynical way, and Miss Polly Burton found herself staring at a photograph and a piece of string tied full of knots.

Sunday Health Talks

—By—
William Brady, M. D.

NUTRITION is the subject of today's lesson and it is especially intended for the older boys who do no honest work, such as ear specialists, insurance agents, bootleggers, ministers, butter and egg merchants and professors of psychology. I'm pretty sure about all of these except the last. I've just been having a go at Professor Daniel Bell Leary's "Modern Psychology" (Lippincott), which happens to be both normal and abnormal, so perhaps I should revise my list to read professors of abnormal psychology.

What does nutrition mean, anyway? What does a doctor mean when he says a patient is "well nourished" or poorly nourished?" Does it reflect on the board? No, it makes little difference whether the board is A No. 1 or what we droll Americans call rotten. Nutrition is not merely a question of how many calories in this or that item nor of how many pounds you weigh or eat. Nutrition means the physical development and growth of the body and the chemical composition of the body tissues in reference to their fitness or capacity to function. Many factors may impair nutrition, for instance disease, say cancer or diabetes in a middle-aged person or tuberculosis in a high school child; foul air; insufficient exercise; prolonged slight poisoning, occupational or accidental, as by carbon monoxid; or insidious poisoning by drugs the individual indulges in; finally, least important of all, deficiencies or faults of diet.

It should be clearly understood that the deficiency or fault in diet that is rarely responsible for a state of malnutrition, poor nutrition, undernutrition, or whtever nutritional disorder it may be called, is practically never a matter of want of food, but almost invariably a matter of selecting the wrong kind of food. Some kind-hearted but unsophisticated ladies in a club discovered that a large share of children in a public school were found by the medical examiner "undernourished" and they actually tried to arrange to have each school child served a glass of milk every day, probably because the milkman on their route assured them that milk is a "health food."

A man who seeks to live by his wits and never do any honest work may get away with it all right until he reaches 40 or 45. After that if he sticks to his scheme of life he is due for trouble, and it rests largely with himself what form his trouble shall take. With many of us who would rather go to jail than work—and that's the great trouble with the so-called jails in this country—the trouble takes the form of a nutritional disease called obesity. This may or may not be associated with cardiovascular disease, arteriosclerosis, myocarditis or slow heart muscle failure, or insidious nephritis, or apoplexy. It depends, as I said, on the man himself, his sins, his habits. I do not believe his grandfather or his uncle has anything to do with it, unless the man cultivates grandfather's or uncle's bad habits.

The sad news I regret to bring to the older boys who won't work is this: after 40 a guy must either resign himself to a moderate amount of work or else swear off from over-indulgence in carbohydrate. What hootch is to the young fool excess of the good old carbohydrates is to the older boy.

Carbohydrate (any sugar or starch) is the best known fuel for muscular work, voluntary muscles or heart muscles. Marathon runners rely on a little sweetened tea or some candy here and there along the course, to stave off acidosis, prevent collapse in coma, and help them finish the race. Mountain climbers depend on a little chocolate or other sweet to carry them over the top. Children playing hard thrive on a proper-allowance of candy or other sweet; it literally puts heart and life into the youngsters and give them better "wind." Even football players replenish their stock of blood sugar with some form of sugar or starch between halves. But we older boys who won't work don't need it, and if we follow the everyday example and indulge in the usual excess of carbohydrates we are bound to pay dearly for our fun in impairment of nutrition and one form or another of ruined health.

Observe the eating habits of people in hotels, restaurants, dining cars, even in their own homes. Their meals consist principally of starches, sugars and lean meats. These foods are almost devoid of vitamins be it noted. Such items as white flour bread, white potatoes, polished or white rice, lean meats, tea or coffee saturated with white sugar, sweetened puddings and pies, candy, soft drinks, provide carbohydrates aplenty for honest working people, but practically no vitamins at all.

The evils we have long ascribed to overeating, and more recently to carbohydrate excess, may be partly due to the associated deficiency of the popular American diet in vitamins. What says McCarrison about this? He stated that in nine years' practice among Himalayans (McCarrison was stationed in a remote region of the Himalaya mountains as a British army surgeon) he performed more than 3,600 major operations, yet did not see a case of gastro-duodenal ulcer, appendicitis or mucous colitis. He attributed the remarkable freedom from such diseases among the primitive Himalayans to their diet of "natural foods," such as raw milk, fresh eggs, whole grains, fruits, leafy vegetables. He believes that vitamin B (antineuritic) and vitamin C (antiscorbutic) serve to protect the digestive tract from infections and that the bad effect of a deficiency of these vitamins in the diet is enhanced when the diet contains an excess of carbohydrate.

So there you are, older boys. Wrap that around your liver and see what it will do for your gall bladder. McCarrison does not assume that faulty diet is the sole cause of these diseases, but simply that it predisposes the stomach, gall-sac, intestine, appendix or colon to infection.

Here are a few simple suggestions to help the older boys about diet, and no objections if the girls care to try the same treatment.

1. The most important part of any meal is the salad, relish or fresh fruit.

2. Raw or certified milk is rich in vitamins that pasteurized or sterilized milk is poor in.

3. After 40 a man courts danger if he takes toast, roll, cakes or cereal at breakfast without fresh fruit to balance the account.

4. For the man of 40 it may be just as well to heed the fake food specialist's warning about combining fruit with cereal. Omit the cereal.

5. Even though you are a fat guy, if there's cream or milk that hasn't been par-boiled or otherwise mistreated to kill off the disease germs in it, use it liberally, for there are scads of vitamins in it, the very kind older boys need.

6. Whenever you can get wheat bran or cakes, gems, cookies or other things made of plain wheat bran more or less, eat it unless your doctor has sternly forbidden bran in your diet.

Did YOU Ever Take An INTERNAL BATH?

By M. PHILIP STEPHENSON

THIS may seem a strange question. But if you want to magnify your energy—sharpen your brain to razor edge—put a glorious sparkle in your eye—pull yourself up to a health level where you can laugh at disease and glory in vitality—you're going to read this message to the last line.

I speak from experience. It was a message just such as this that dynamited me out of the slough of dullness and wretched health into the sunlit atmosphere of happiness, vitality and vigor. To me, and no doubt to you, an Internal Bath was something that had never come within my sphere of knowledge.

So I tore off a similar coupon to find out what it was all about. And back came a booklet. This booklet was named "Why We Should Bathe Internally." It was just choked with common sense and facts.

What Is An Internal Bath?

This was my first shock. Vaguely I had an idea that an internal bath was an enema. Or by a stretch of the imagination a new-fangled laxative. In both cases I was wrong. A real, genuine, true internal bath is no more like an enema than a kite is like an airplane. The only similarity is the employment of water in each case.

A bona-fide internal bath is the administration into the intestinal tract of pure, warm water, Tyrrellized by a marvelous cleansing tonic. The appliance that holds the liquid and injects it is the J. B. L. Cascade, the invention of that eminent physician, Dr. Charles A. Tyrrell, who perfected it to save his own life. Now here's where the genuine internal bath differs radically from the enema.

The lower intestine, called by the great Professor Foges of Vienna "the most prolific source of disease," is five feet long and shaped like an inverted U—thus—∩. The enema cleanses but a third of this "horseshoe," or to the first bend.

The J. B. L. Cascade treatment cleanses it the entire length—and is the only appliance that does. You have only to read that booklet—"Why We Should Bathe Internally"—to fully understand how the J. B. L. Cascade alone can do this. There is absolutely no pain or discomfort.

Why Take An Internal Bath?

Here is why: The intestinal tract is the waste canal of the body. Due to our soft foods, lack of vigorous exercise and highly artificial civilization, nine out of ten persons suffer from intestinal stasis (delay). The passage of waste is entirely too slow. Result: Germs and poisons breed in this waste and enter the blood through the blood vessels in the intestinal walls.

These poisons are extremely harmful. The headaches you get—the skin blemishes, the fatigue—the susceptibility to colds—the sluggish responsiveness of both mind and body—failure to get most out of life and many other conditions are directly due to the presence of these poisons in the system. They are the generic causes of high-blood pressure, rheumatism, premature old age and other serious maladies.

Thus it is imperative that your system be free of these poisons. And the only sure and effective means is internal bathing. In fifteen minutes it flushes the intestinal tract of all impurities. And each treatment strengthens the intestinal muscles so the passage of waste is hastened.

Take just before retiring, you will sleep like a child. You will rise with a vigor and satisfaction that will insure your doing all the strenuous things you will want to do.

Just one internal bath a week will remake glorious vibrating health. This is not my experience only. It is the experience of over 900,000 men and women.

What Was Justice In This Case?

and the family always considered him a bit queer," he said. "In the past six months his mental behavior has grown worse."

Harold said it was the first time in his life he had ever struck any one.

After hours of questioning, he finally admitted that he had killed Walter through fear. He had attempted to mistreat the boy and then, thoroughly frightened at the prospect of Walter telling on him, had beaten him on the head with a blacksmith's hammer.

State's Attorney Robert E. Crowe, who provided so much of the fireworks in the Leopold-Loeb case, said: "If this is not a hanging case, you might as well abolish the penalty." Crowe in his career as state's attorney seldom failed to say this in connection with a murder.

"In the murder of a six-year-old boy by a depraved man there can be no extenuating circumstances," added the state's attorney. "Of course I can't say what will be done, but I do know what I did in the Fitzgerald case."

Reference to the Fitzgerald case was another of Crowe's favorites. He was referring to the time when he as a judge sentenced Thomas F. Fitzgerald, an elderly degenerate, to death for the murder of six-year-old Janet Wilkerson. Fitzgerald had pleaded guilty. It was the only death sentence on a plea of guilty in thirty years.

Crowe called upon William O. Krohn and H. Douglas Singer, psychiatrists, who came in for considerable sarcasm at the hands of Clarence Darrow in the Leopold-Loeb trial. They reported that Croarkin was sane. They asserted that no ten-year-old child could have passed the examination Harold did. He had had good marks in school they said, and had shown business aptitude as a salesman for his father.

Once during his examination by the alienists, Dr. Krohn asked him what punishment he thought he deserved. The prisoner hesitated and then said, "I don't know."

"Great heavens, man," cried the alienist, "don't you think the law would be justified in hanging a man for a crime like this?"

Croarkin flinched. "Don't say that," he said. "Can't you see you're hurting me?"

The prisoner was arraigned December 29 before Chief Justice William Lindsay and on advice of counsel refused to plead. The court therefore automatically entered a plea of not guilty.

The trial was first set for February 1, but the defense won a delay and on February 14 Attorney Michael Ahearn for the defense pleaded that he and his associates would need still further time to familiarize themselves with the case. The defense, for instance, must be given time for examinations by alienists.

"No, there will be no more delays," said Judge Lindsay. "There will always be something—perhaps adenoids next."

And so late in the month Harold Croarkin went on trial.

Crowe outlined the case for the prosecution and concluded with a demand for the death penalty for the protection of other children.

The defense, on the other hand, asserted it would prove that Croarkin had been insane for a long time. Attorney Patrick O'Donnell for the defense said Harold had been called "The Goof" by other boys, that he had had no capacity for learning, that he had always kept apart from other boys and never was able to take care of himself.

As the state's witnesses began to take the stand, the defendant sat unmoved in his chair. He gave no hint of emotion as Mrs. Walter Schmith, mother of the slain boy, identified a cap Walter had worn the day he was murdered. He sat slouched in his chair, one foot resting on the round of a chair in front of him, and gazed idly around the courtroom.

Playmates of Walter took the stand and told of events on the afternoon of the crime. One boy mentioned that he had seen Walter go off with a man and later heard screams.

"I thought it was a kid being whipped by his mother," the boy testified, "so I didn't pay any attention."

Candy wrappers found in the barn were identified as having been purchased by the defendant, and Stanley Kenny, a taxi driver, told of being summoned to St. Vincent's rectory and of hurrying with the priests and the dying child to the hospital. Kenny identified Croarkin.

Peter Croarkin, father of the defendant, testified that his son had always been an object of special attention. He said that his son had never been left to shift for himself. The flour broker gave his testimony from a wheelchair.

As expected, the defense presented a battery of experts to prove that the prisoner was mentally defective. X-ray pictures of Croarkin's body were placed on view andn Dr. Maxmilian J. Hubeny testified that Croarkin was revealed by the pictures to have a stunted pituitary gland, a persistent thymus, and to have only four of the normally five lumbar vertebrae.

Dr. Hubeny pointed out that the pituitary gland controls the development of the body and that the defendant's was so small as nearly to equal the minimum for a human. He said the thymus should have appeared as only a remnant in one of Croarkin's age but was of tumbrous growth and had pushed aside the windpipe and the aorta, the main trunk of the arterial system.

Dr. William J. Hickson, head of the Cook county (Chicago) Psychopathic hospital, testified that Croarkin was a sufferer from dementa praecox with tendencies toward mania and dementia. He stated that it was his opinion that the young man had been insane when he killed Walter Schmith.

"I applied psychological, psychatrical and neurological tests to the prisoner," he said. "Though I find his intelligence average, I found him very suggestible, as in all cases of his type, and very, very weak willed. I found no adequate emotional reaction, and disharmonies between his intelligence and his emotions. His laughs are silly and unmotivated, typical of dementia praecox."

The most sensational expert testimony was given by the Rev. Dr. Thomas Moore, head of the department of psychology at the Catholic university at Washington, D. C., and consulting psychiatrist at the Mount Hope Asylum for the Insane at Baltimore.

Dr. Moore stated it was quite likely that Harold's mental and physical deficiencies were the result of lack of proper nourishment before his birth. He pointed out that Harold's twin sister, Hortense, was an unusually robust young woman, and that very probably she had received an oversupply of pre-natal nourishment while her brother had received an undersupply.

"My opinion," said Dr. Moore, "based upon my examination, upon his personal history, his absolute indifference to the enormity of the act he committed, his complete lack of remorse or regret, is that Harold Croarkin was insane at the time of the murder and is now insane."

State's Attorney Crowe attacked these findings of the defense alienists. In his summation he said:

"One defense alienist says Croarkin was a victim of dementia praecox since his birth twenty-six years ago. Another defense alienist says his mental deterioration set in just last fall. One defense attorney tells you that this case is so involved that no twelve jurors can fathom its intricacies and it should be decided by expert psychiatrists. Another defense attorney would convince you that it is so simple a case that no doctor is needed, that any twelve men could tell that Croarkin is insane.

"These are all futile attempts to confuse you and aid this man to escape the gallows."

Crowe pleaded with the jury to return a verdict of murder in the first degree and a sentence of death. Only thus would little boys and little girls be properly protected from fiends who prowl at large seeking victims for their depravities. Crowe continually dwelt upon the idea that this defendant had known right from wrong when he committed his crime, and therefore was sane in the eyes of the law.

The jury deliberated two hours and then returned a compromise verdict which sent Harold Croarkin to Joliet penitentiary for life.

Pirates Ahoy!

the crew, and with the other hands had run up the black flag and sailed upon the account. But so rich were their winnings that they kept postponing the return to Madagascar. They made Boston with rich booty. They sold to competitors of their former owners, and safely deposited their gold.

Then they sailed in ballast for New York, where they expected to strike a bargain with some of the high officials and financiers. Burgess, who was captain of the pirate ship, killed his two partners just off Sandy Hook by the simple device of putting into their food a poison he had bought in Boston. Thus he disposed of the only two persons who knew of the location of the treasure chest.

In the excitement following the death of Ammon and Jester, Burgess faced both a storm and a mutiny. While the men refused duty, the vessel was driven aground off Sandy Hook. Burgess escaped ashore, as did about half of the men, but that was the end of the pirate career of the Albion.

As soon as he could, Burgess fitted out a small brig and sailed for Madagascar, under the proprietorship of a company of New York merchants who desired Burgess to get rich cargo without spending money for it.

On this trip Burgess dug up his treasure. He took a few small prizes and looted them, but chiefly was concerned with getting his chest open. He sailed for Cigo, whence the chest had come, and there obtained the services of a knowing locksmith, who made him a new key and repaired the damage that Burgess had inflicted upon the lock and cover. Burgess stood guard over his chest in person, throughout all the labors of the locksmith.

Having now plenty of money, Burgess tried to retire from the sea. He settled once in New York, where he married and had two sons. But the call of the sea took him again and again away from his New York home, to crying fortunes and wild adventures. He left his well-filled treasure chest with his family in New York when he sailed away upon his last trip, at the age of 49.

After six years of bumping about and pirating in African waters, he died a sordid death, poisoned by a black chieftain whom he had unwittingly offended.

The treasure chest, gradually emptied of its golden contents, passed from father to son, and finally out of the family altogether. When I found it, it had landed in a dark corner of a little shop in Richmond, Va.

Now it holds jelly in a Yonkers apartment, and I often wonder whether some of the "elementals" who are said to hover about the relics of powerful personalities of old, ever sit upon that treasure chest at midnight and weep for the passing of the strenuous days when men wore red sashes and carved out their fortunes with dagger and heavy cutlass.

"She's a Septic!"

Many women want to be, deserve to be, and could be far more popular than is their lot. Doctors know why. So do nurses. They call such cases septics.

To remedy obnoxious body odors and bad breath, you must recognize their cause. The trouble is deep-seated. Frankly in the colon. Semi-constipation makes millions of systems septic. There may be a daily movement, but all the waste is not eliminated. The matter that remains poisons the blood, and permeates the perspiration. It taints the breath. Nature is signaling her need of a little calcium.

Calcium wafers work wonders in one's appearance, too. With the inner system sweet and clean, the complexion clears most marvelously. Eyes brighten. Teeth whiten. The tongue is no longer coated, even on arising. And you never need take another harsh cathartic.

Perhaps you are a septic, and don't know it. Try a tiny wafer of calcium, and see! It may make all the difference in the world. Leave harsh, habit-forming cathartics alone. You never need them if you take an occasional calcium wafer.

TRY THIS THOROUGH TEST

A five-day test will prove to you very conclusively the system's need for calcium compound, and the benefit from these little wafers. Your druggist has them for 10c. Or the family size, 60c. Start this test today!

FULL BOX FREE

Enough for full test—ample to prove the value to you of Stuart's calcium wafers—will be sent you, if you mail this coupon to the Dept. C-811, Marshall, Mich.

A Letter From the "Seckatary"

Dear Club Members:

Here's a contest about one of the jolliest days in the year—St. Valentine's Day. It may be a bit early to be thinking of valentines, but by the time we get all the contest letters in and judged, the day will be close at hand, and we will be turning our attention to the different kinds of valentines we are going to send to our friends.

A FAIRY TALE PASSWORD

Go back into your fairy tales for a solution to our password this week. It's one of those missing-letter puzzles which you like and which are rather easy, at the same time affording you a very interesting and pleasant pastime. Here it is:

-A-K-H-G-A-T-I-L-R

Each dash represents a missing letter. When you have filled in the right letters, you will have the title of a very famous young lad who did great deeds of derring-do in the old fairy tale days, when giants walked the earth. Now, that ought to give you the key to the solution. Try it right away.

Answer to last weeks: "Rail-splitter."

"VALENTINE'S DAY"

Prizes announced each Sunday for best letter, story, drawing or poem.

READ THE RULES CAREFULLY

In our next contest the title must contain the words, "VALENTINE'S DAY." You may write a letter or a verse or draw a picture.

WRITE ON ONE SIDE OF PAPER ONLY.

YOUR COMPOSITION MUST BE ORIGINAL. YOU MUST WRITE IT WITHOUT ANY ASSISTANCE FROM OLDER PERSONS. DRAWINGS MUST BE MADE IN BLACK DRAWING INK.

All contributions must bear the writer's full name, address and age. Don't forget to give your age.

The contest is open now. It will close next Thursday at 4 o'clock.

Prize winners will be announced Sunday, February 10th.

PRIZE: A BOOK OF ADVENTURES OF SECK AND THE BOYS

Address all submissions in this contest to Seckatary Hawkins, care The Atlanta Constitution.

So get busy at once—read the rules carefully, and then sit down and write your letter, or story, or verse, or draw a picture. It's easy.

Those who are not yet members of our club should fill out the membership blank on this page at once and send it in with a postage stamp and receive a club button and certificate of membership. They will then be eligible to take part in all our contests. You may send in your membership blank with your contest work, if you choose. Every boy and girl who reads this page is welcome to join our club, and there are no dues, no charges whatever, only your kind wishes and good will.

OUR WEEKLY MEETING

Now let's gather round and hold our meeting, which we will open with a communication from down in Dixie:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

We have organized a club, "Just We Three." Our club is growing by leaps and bounds, Seck, and we would like for you to send us a book to put in our club library—we sure do hope we get one.

I was elected captain of our club; Bernard Crumbly, seckatary, and Woodrow Wilson, treasurer; and we have five other boys who are going to join.

Yours, fair and square,
DORSEY REAGAN, 14,
R. F. D. 2, Covington, Ga.

On the banks of the beautiful Ohio lives the member from whom we received the next one:

Dear Seck:

For a long time I have read your stories printed in the Sunday paper, and I think they are grand. I would like to join your club. I am 10 years old. My brother joined your club about four months ago. He has always tried to get me to join. I have told my friends about your wonderful club, and they are all joining.

Wishing you a Merry Christmas,

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY BOUCHONNET,
4365 Virginia Ave., Cincinnati, O.

The sunny south is represented this week by a member from Alabama, who writes as follows:

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

This is the first time that I have written to you, but I hope, with your permission, that it won't be the last.

You know, Seck, I just adore reading your section of the paper, and there is the very first place that I turn to when the paper arrives. Since I have been reading your section of the paper I have gotten my mother and father both interested in your club. They say it is the finest club that they have ever read about. And they are not the only ones that think so. I am going to try to get others to join your wonderful club.

Although I have a few correspondents, please ask the club members to write to me. And you yourself write if you have time.

Well, I hope that the next letter that I write will have more than my coupon in it. Hoping that you will print this, I remain,

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY PALMER,
314 Jefferson St., Montgomery, Ala.

And last, but not least, comes one from a boy in Kansas, who is going to get more new members for our club:

Dear Hawkins:

I have been reading your stories. I like them. I have a club. I like the rules I get with my badge. The stories are very interesting. I am going to show the boys my badge and see if they won't get one. They read your stories, too.

Truly yours,
EVERETT A. TUCKER,
8258 Locust St., Ottawa, Kan.

SO ONG!

This will be all for today, and we adjourn to next week, same time, same page. Don't forget about our Valentine contest—I am sure you are going to enjoy it much—and try to, find time to write to me this week. You know I'll be glad to hear from you—I'll be watching for a letter every time the mailman passes.

Bye, till next week.

Yours, fair and square,

Seckatary Hawkins

Dear Seckatary:

I have written one letter to you and I was proud to see it in print. I wrote a verse in the contest on My Hobby, but I did not put my age on it, but I guess you know that my age is 11 years old. I am so little that the people at school call me little runt, but I don't care if I am always fair and square.

MABLE MINS,
Gastonia, N. C.

Dear Seck:

I read your pieces in the paper every day, and enjoy them very much. We have a club at our school, I am seck and Jeff Marshall is captain.

I am 13 years old and in the seventh grade. I will be glad to hear from any other members of your club.

Yours fair and square,
CLYDE HAULMAN,
Eatonton, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a little boy 9 years old. I would like very much to become a member of your club.

I am glad that your club colors are blue and white because that is the color of my paper and ink.

I have been reading your adventures every day and enjoy them very much. I hope your club will not have any more trouble with the Peham's.

I have a black and white dog as a pet His name is Pal.

Yours, fair and square,
CLIFFORD CLEM,
Box 66. Langdale, Ala.

Dear Seck:

How about letting a "Ala." boy join your club, eh? I have been reading about your club each day and like it very much. I am a little boy age 11 and in the fifth grade. One of my new year resolutions was to join your club, and I hope my letter won't land in the waste basket. Some of your members write to me.

Yours, fair and square,
WAYMON TANKERSLEY,
Langdale, Ala

Dear Seck:

I want to become a member of your club. I sure do enjoy reading your stories and letters. We take The Daily Constitution and I can't hardly wait to see how you and the club are getting along. I sure hope that Bill Darby is better with the flu. You be careful and don't catch it, for you are too useful a member of the club.

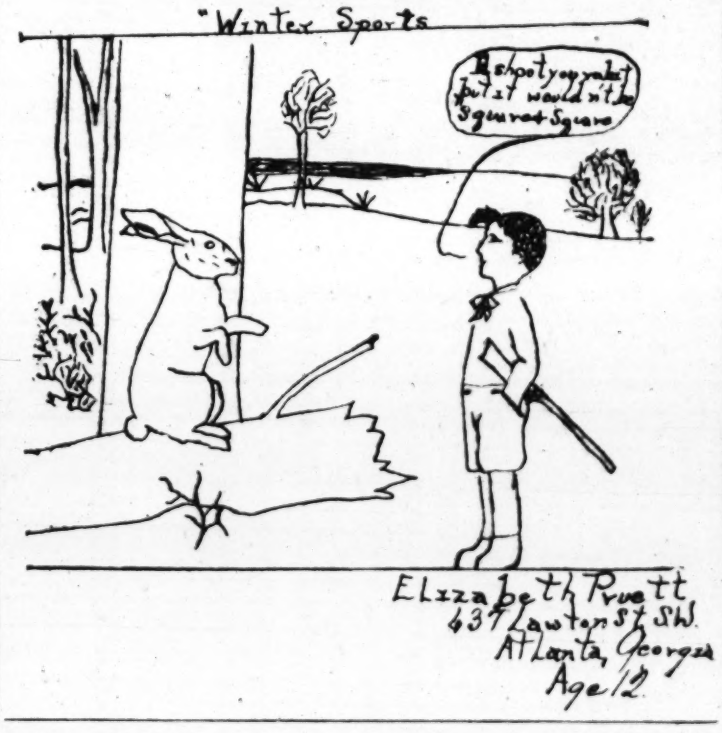

Your new member,
ELEANOR MITCHELL,
Chalybeate, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I have been reading your club page for some time, and sure do enjoy it—most especially little Gil, and the skinny guy, who is sick. Be good to him, won't you? and help him to get well. I am 8 years old and live on a farm. I have to go five miles every day on the bus to school. Am in the third grade. I have a pet cat and just lots of little pigs and chickens. I am enclosing membership blank. Won't you please admit me to your club and send the club badge right away. I am a little girl and my two brothers are also going to join your club, too.

Yours, fair and square,
HELEN MILDRED CHANEY,
Rt. 2, Box 171, Leesburg, Ga.

PRIZE WINNER.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I always turn to your page when we get the paper every Sunday, for you have different adventures every week.

I will be 12 years old January 15. I am in the sixth grade, and one of my nick names is "Sally."

You have very pretty club colors. Blue is my favorite color.

I hope my letter gets printed, and I hope I get a book.

Your, fair and square,
SARA HUTCHINS,
Watkinsville, Ga.

Dear Seckatary Hawkins:

I am very much interested in your club and read it every Sunday. I think of what a good time I could have with you all sometimes, even if I am a girl. I am 13 years old and in the eighth grade.

I would like to correspond with some of the club members. I wish all of you a happy new year.

Yours, fair and square,
VERNA FULFORD,
Route 3. Ellaville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Here I come knocking at your door. Please let me come in.

I am a little boy 10 years old. I am in the fifth grade. I have black hair and brown eyes. Seck, I am very sorry you got a doll Christmas. I can imagine how you feel. I got a cowboy suit.

I like your club fine. I read your story on Sunday and keep up with you all the week.

Yours, fair and square,
CHARLES SMITH,
Langdale, Ala.

Dear Seck:

I would like to become a member of your club. I am 11 years old and in the sixth grade.

I have a cat and a pigeon. The cat does not know any thing, but the pigeon will sit on your shoulder or arm and will not fly away.

My dady runs a store and I help him run it every evening when I get out of school and on Saturday.

I hope Santa Claus was good to you. He was good to me, he brought me a desk, some fruit and fireworks.

I hope you have a happy new year and do not get into very much trouble on the river bank.

Yours, fair and square,
W. T. McLARTY,
Hogansville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am very interested in you. I have a club, the name is Giggling Gurlies. The flower is the sweet pea. Our colors are pink and blue. The motto is "Love One Another."

Yours, fair and square,
VIRGINIA BEARDEN,
280 Elizabeth St., N. E.

Dear Hawkins:

I am eight years of age and in the second grade. I have enjoyed reading your letter in The Constitution magazine. I have three black and white spotted calves and a Collie dog, named Major. I had better close for this time.

Yours, fair and square,
ONEN BARNETT,
Route 2. Lawrenceville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I will write you a few lines today. Saturday my mother would not let me go to Milton's house, but we are going Saturday. We can not have that old house that we was figuring on having, but Mr. Tarpley let us have an old barn and we are going to fix it up. We get seven boys, but some of them have not joined yet, but they are going to. There is one girl, but she is not coming to our club house. I hope Bill will soon get well with the flu. I reckon Jerry was glad when he got there and they would not let him in. Goodbye.

Yours, fair and square,
HUGH WILSON SIMS,
Lovejoy, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I just can't let my sister join your club and get ahead of me, so here I am. I sure do get lots of fun from the club page. You see I, too, am a regular fellow and every chance I get I go hunting for rabbits and birds. I have a dog and a cat for pets. My cat sure is some mouser when he goes after one; he never fails. My dog, well I just can't tell you how good she is. She is some rabbit dog I'll say. She was only about three weeks old when I found her lost in the woods by the road side. I carried her home to mother, who helped me to raise her, and now she is paying me back for my kindness. Not only is she a good rabbit or hunting dog, but a good watch dog as well. Mother is not afraid of tramps when she is by her self. I am 10 years old and live on a farm. My dog is one year old. I think your club is great, keep it up you are doing good work.

Yours, fair and square,
ROBERT O. CHANEY,
Box 171, Rt. 2 Leesburg, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a member of your club. I am 10 years old and in the fifth grade. I hope you won't have any more trouble with little Gil.

I have a cat and I play with him all the time. I enjoy reading your stories, especially on Sunday. I wish every one of the club members to write to me. I hope my letter will win a prize. I will answer all your letters.

Yours, fair and square,
BASIL FRANKLIN,
Box 34. Turnerville, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a boy 8 years old and I am a member of your club. Every Sunday I get your page before anybody else and I read it. I am in the third grade at the James L. Key school and I live across the street from it.

I am going to try for some of your contests soon. I have a dog name Sport and she has a puppy name Blackie.

Yours, fair and square,
JACOB BROMBERG,
708 Capitol Ave., S. W., Atlanta, Ga

Dear Seckatary:

I have written letters and entered many contests, but I have never won a prize. I had just about given up hopes of ever winning. Then I saw these words, "Don't give up the ship," in your paper. This encouraged me so I am writing again.

I am 13 years old and in the ninth grade.

I have a lovely new book for autographs. I wish I could come to your club house down on the river bank. I would have you all to write in it. I guess I'll be satisfied with associating through the paper.

Yours, fair and square,
MILDRED POGUE,
Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dear Seckatary:

I have only been a member of your club a few weeks. I enjoy your page in The Constitution.

My winter sport is skating and playing football, though I have just written a book of stories entitled "Tommy Cat and the Story of Yellow Pig," which I hope to get published some day.

I am 9 years old and am in the fifth A.

WIULIAM RUSSELL, JR.,
Athens, Ga

Dear Seck:

I am a little girl 9 years old and in the fifth grade at school. I have some gold fish and today I missed one and when I found it it was behind mama's work box and was dead, I think. My sister gave them to me. Hope the skinny guy don't give anybody else any trouble.

Yours, fair and square,
DOROTHY MAXWELL,
Box 168. Calvary, Ga.

Dear Seck:

I am a little girl 10 years old and I am in the fourth grade. I like to hear of the adventures of the club. I would like to get letters from other members. I am enclosing a two-cent stamp to join your club.

Yours, fair and square,
FRANCIS ERCLINE BAILEY,
Brookman, Ga.

Dear Seck:

Please, please let me join your club, for I want to very much. I have enjoyed reading your stories in the paper and am sorry little Gil has given you so much trouble, but I feel sorry for him and am sure he will turn out good. I love white and blue and I am so glad the club colors are that color. If you will let me join your club I will try to live up to the motto.

Yours, fair and square,
MARTHA LOUISE WILLIAMS,
Juliette, Ga

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY

Chapter CXVI—The Revival of Learning

by J. CARROLL MANSFIELD

DURING THE FIRST PART OF THE "MIDDLE AGES" LEARNING WAS CONFINED ALMOST ENTIRELY TO THE CLERGY. THIS STATE OF AFFAIRS WAS GENERAL THROUGHOUT EUROPE.

ABOUT 1100 A.D. MANY MEN BEGAN TO DISPLAY A THIRST FOR KNOWLEDGE. THERE WERE FEW TEACHERS, AND EVERY WELL-EDUCATED MAN WAS LIABLE TO BE BESIEGED BY A CROWD OF STUDENTS EAGER TO LEARN. —•

VERY FEW PERSONS,-EVEN AMONG THE NOBILITY,-COULD READ AND WRITE. "CLERKS" AND "SCRIVENORS" WERE EVERYWHERE IN DEMAND TO READ AND WRITE FOR THOSE WHO COULD DO NEITHER. —•

BOOKS WERE SCARCE. AT THAT TIME THEY HAD TO BE LABORIOUSLY COPIED BY HAND FROM THE ORIGINAL MANUSCRIPT, AND MANY MISTAKES WERE MADE BY THE COPYIST. MOST OF THE BOOKS OF THAT DAY DEALT WITH PHILOSOPHY THEOLOGY AND LAW.

GROUPS OF TEACHERS AND STUDENTS GATHERED AT PARIS, BOLOGNA (ITALY) AND OXFORD (ENGLAND). FROM THESE GROUPS GREW THE FIRST GREAT UNIVERSITIES OF THE MIDDLE AGES. —•

MOST BOOKS HAD BEEN WRITTEN IN LATIN, THE LANGUAGE OF THE CHURCH. NOW THEY WERE TRANSLATED INTO VARIOUS LANGUAGES SO THAT THE FRENCH, ITALIANS AND ENGLISH COULD READ THEM IN THEIR OWN TONGUE.

THE CHIEF SOURCE OF KNOWLEDGE WAS THE WRITINGS OF ARISTOTLE, THE ANCIENT GREEK PHILOSOPHER AND SCIENTIST, WHICH HAD BEEN PRESERVED THROUGH THE "DARK AGES" BY THE MONKS. FOR A LONG TIME EVERYTHING ARISTOTLE HAD SAID WAS ACCEPTED AS TRUE.

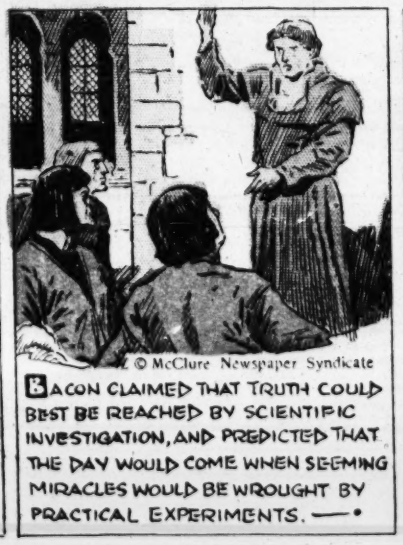

IN TIME MEN OF INQUIRING MINDS BEGAN TO MAKE EXPERIMENTS AND INVESTIGATIONS OF THEIR OWN. IN MANY CASES THE RESULTS OF THEIR EXPERIMENTS BROUGHT THEM INTO CONFLICT WITH THE TEACHINGS OF ARISTOTLE.

MOST OF THE OLD SCHOLARS BELIEVED THAT THE WORKS OF ARISTOTLE REPRESENTED THE SUM TOTAL OF HUMAN KNOWLEDGE, AND THEY STOUTLY DEFENDED THEIR IDOL AGAINST THE CRITICISM OF THE FEW WHO DECLARED THAT MUCH REMAINED TO BE LEARNED.

FOREMOST AMONG THE LATTER WAS ROGER BACON (1210-1293), ENGLISH FRANCISCAN MONK AND TEACHER AT OXFORD. A MAN FAR IN ADVANCE OF HIS TIMES, HIS VIEWS SOMETIMES GOT HIM INTO TROUBLE WITH HIS ORDER.

© McClure Newspaper Syndicate

BACON CLAIMED THAT TRUTH COULD BEST BE REACHED BY SCIENTIFIC INVESTIGATION, AND PREDICTED THAT THE DAY WOULD COME WHEN SEEMING MIRACLES WOULD BE WROUGHT BY PRACTICAL EXPERIMENTS. —•

SOME 650 YEARS AGO ROGER BACON MADE THIS AMAZING PROPHECY —

"MACHINES FOR NAVIGATING ARE POSSIBLE WITHOUT ROWERS, SO THAT GREAT SHIPS ··· GUIDED BY ONE MAN MAY BE BORNE WITH GREATER SPEED THAN IF THEY WERE FULL OF MEN. —

LIKEWISE CARS MAY BE MADE SO THAT WITHOUT A DRAUGHT ANIMAL THEY MAY BE MOVED.

AND FLYING MACHINES ARE POSSIBLE, SO THAT A MAN MAY SIT IN THE MIDDLE TURNING SOME DEVICE BY WHICH ARTIFICIAL WINGS MAY BEAT THE AIR IN THE MANNER OF A FLYING BIRD."

At 7 o'clock in the evening we boys gathered in our clubhouse for singing practice. When I came down the little river path that led to our famous meeting place, I could hear the strains of the old organ—Lew Hunter was playing soft and low the sweet music of that old, old song 'Believe me, if all those endearing young charms," and I knew what he was thinking about. We had sung that old song together, all of us boys, down in that little dug-out in Burney's field, one day not so long ago, for Little Gil—the boy who knew how to sing. And that song had lured Little Gil away from that place, and away from the old tramp who had been keeping him—old Jacobi.

And old Jacobi had found it out, somehow. Switch me! I don't know how he did it, but he found it out. And he had come, in all his ugliness, to our clubhouse, and told us that he knew that we had coaxed Little Gil away from him, and that if we didn't have the little beggar back in the dug-out by 6 o'clock, he would burn our clubhouse down. So you see, we boys had lots to worry about this particular evening. Not that we were sorry we had got Little Gil away from old Jacobi. No, sir! Little Gil belonged to Old Daddy Joe. We knew that from the start. Old Jacobi had no claim on him. Of course, we kids had no business bothering about Little Gil at all; he had played plenty of monkey-shines in our clubhouse, and we were all mad as the dickens at him for a while, but when we found out he was nothing but a litle tramp himself, and belonged to a tramp, we felt kind o' sorry for him. But even if Old Daddy Joe was a tramp, we would rather see Little Gil belong to him than to old, ugly Jacobi. I knew Jacobi was mean. I could just read it in his eye. His face was against him.

"Hello, Hawkins," said Lew, turning from the organ as I came in the clubhouse, "Perry Stokes came down with me and opened the door. He's in your writing room now. I was just practicing on the old organ till you fellows got here."

"Practicing an old favorite of that little hobo kid," I said, with a smile, as I twirled my old winter cap upon a hook behind the door. "Ah, Lew, I know how you feel for that little tramp. But what's the use? His daddy is a tramp—he's been with tramps all his life—he'll grow up a tramp, most likely—"

"But you can't help feeling sorry for him!" broke in Lew. "He's such a little fellow. Gosh! Hawkins, suppose you or I were in his place—"

"Easy, easy!" I said. "Let's not think of any unpleasant things tonight, Lew. There might be plenty of unpleasant things coming, without thinking of others."

I drew off my coat and started for my writing room.

"You mean—" began Lew. And he stopped short, looking at me, his eyes narrowed, his lips parted.

"Old Jacobi," I said, nodding, as I paused at the curtains hanging in the doorway between the meeting room and my little office. "Old Jacobi, Lew. The old sinner ain't goin' to let us get off so easy. He's sore at us for what we did—taking Little Gil out of that unhealthy place underground on Burney's field. Too bad we couldn't find the little beggar back, to take to him. We could have gotten him away again, later."

"But the house up in the tree—where we left him—was burnt down—"

"Old Jacobi knows nothing of that. He didn't even know where Little Gil was hiding. He couldn't have set fire to the tree-top house. But he's likely to set fire to our clubhouse, Lew, because he knows this place well enough, and he knows we took the kid away."

Lew's eyes brightened.

"Where do you think Little Gil went, Hawkins?"

"I don't know—wouldn't have the slightest idea, Lew. But wherever he is, you can trust your bottom dollar that he is safe. No fooling that smart little kid. He can take care of himself. I wish we could say as much for ourselves—tonight, at least. Now, Lew, you watch that door, as the others come in. Remember, each knock may be the knock of Jacobi. He said if we didn't have the boy back to his dug-out at 6 o'clock—"

"It's seven already!"

"Don't I know it? Steady, Lew. Watch the door!"

And I went into my little writing room and hung up my coat. Turning around, I met the gaze of Perry Stokes, who was seated in my chair, my writing book open upon the desk in front of him.

"I've been thinking, sir, he said—

"Just as I would expect," I said, with a nod and a grin; "Perry, were it not for your thinking, you wouldn't be half as useful around this clubhouse, even though the other boys say you are only the janitor—"

"I've been thinking about him, sir, the little, troublesome person, sir, and it seems to me, that now his tree house is burnt down, we ought to go look for him. Suppose he has no place to shelter him, sir? And this cold weather! My, it would be frightfully bad for his lungs, sir—"

"Don't you bother about his lungs, Perry," I said with a laugh. "That youngster is used to the outdoors—he's been a tramp kid all his life—ever since he was a baby—maybe. He can stand the air, cold as it may be. No sir, Perry! Look here! You are one of the few in our club who I can trust to help, Perry. We might need a lot of help tonight, you understand?"

"You mean the old codger might come, sir?"

I nodded. "Yeah," I said.

"Well, then, sir, why not call off the singin' practice—and all of us go home, and fool the old fellow, when he comes—"

"Fiddlesticks! Fool him by being right here in the clubhouse. Fool him, eh? What you thinking of, Perry? If we weren't here, he'd burn down this clubhouse. We want to prevent him doing that very thing, un'erstan'?"

"Excuse me, sir," said Perry, humbly. "My usual way, sir—always think in the head."

He smiled. I couldn't help returning the smile. I said:

"Perry, you've got a wonderful sensible head on those little shoulders of yours. I don't want you ever to say that again. Remember this, you're my bodyguard—you said so yourself—"

"Always, sir!" exploded Perry enthusiastically. "Whenever I can serve you, Hawkins—"

"You can serve me now—tonight, —Perry! We might have some trouble. You're one I expect a lot of help from. Don't mind my words—I'm all excited, Perry—but keep your eyes peeled on the door. And if old Jacobi does come—well, we've got to figure out something that will keep him from burning this clubhouse down. That mustn't happen."

"It would be a pity, sir."

"Worse than that, Perry. It would mean the end of our club, should old Judge Granbery hear about it. So—you'll keep your wits about you?"

"Trust me, sir."

The other boys began to come in now, one after another, and finally the entire club was present, standing around the old organ, while Lew handed out the song sheets, and we sang the songs that he practised with us on the old organ. At times my mind would be taken off the threat of old Jacobi, as I listened or sang along with some of the more appealing songs. And how those kids could sing! Boy! Take all your high-toned thunder of the operas, but give me the plain and simple songs sung by a bunch of boys in harmony, and I ask nothing more. But always, after that exquisite pleasure, back into my mind would come the picture of old Jacobi bursting in the door, and demanding that which we could not give him—

But Lew Hunter has magic in his music. He soothes you first with those soft notes of that old, worn organ, and finally he makes you forget everything except the music and the songs, and some of the words of those old songs make a fellow feel like life is the most beautiful thing, without a single possibility of anything dreadful or ugly happening—Lew Hunter makes you feel so safe and secure—well, we had about forgotten everything, when there came a loud knock on the door—

"There he is!" whispered our captain, Dick Ferris; "old Jacobi has come!"

No! No, it was not old, ugly-faced Jacobi who stood there. No. Quite the contrary, I should say, for the face that peered in at us was smiling, and very happy-looking.

"Oh, I say!" called out a cheery voice. "Am I butting in, what?"

None of us answered. The voice went on:

"I hope I'm not intruding, I do. Look you me! I'm just a poor old hobo—Happer Nam's my handle, and I heard the sweet music of your voices—eh, what? I should say it was great! May I come in?"

Suddenly there came a sound . . . followed by a flare of light . . .

"Come in," said Shadow, backing away from the door.

He came in. None of us said a word. And now we had a good chance to take a good look at him. He was handsome—a dark-haired young man, I should guess he was about 22 or thereabouts, but a handsome young man as I ever expect to see. Something about his eyes, I think, made me think so; those eyes were always dancing and sparkling, and about this thin lips there quivered always a very strange smile—strange, because you did not know whether to believe it or not. You just couldn't tell about that smile. Perhaps there was sadness behind that smile—who could tell? It struck me so.

"I thank you," he said, making a bow as he drew off his tattered cap. In fact, his whole outfit of clothes was nothing more than tatters. You wondered, as you looked at him, how such a handsome fellow could wear such ragged clothes. "My word!" he continued, gazing around at us boys as we stood about the organ. "Never in my born days did I expect to see such a sight! You mean to say you actually come together here, to sing, to stand beside that organ, and sing such hymns as I have heard all the way up the path from the river?"

"Yeah," I said, nodding. "We have singin' practice every night but Sunday."

"My word! This is indeed amazing. Well, well. May I ask you a simple question, if you don't mind?"

"Look here," said our captain, "we were expecting somebody—but you're not the one. Why did you come here, then?"

"My name's Happer Nam," answered the young man, with a grin; "I'd ought to forgive you for not knowing me, since I've been here such a beastly short time, and you kids are not, of course, acquainted with the code of the road runners. But I'm a road runner, all right—just plain tramp—if that's what you want me to say—yes, I'm a tramp, all right, and Happer Nam's my name, as I told you."

"You told us that once before," said Jerry Moore, stepping up. "Look here, kid, you might be bigger'n us, but remember we got a bunch of kids in this club, and we can lay it all over you if the time comes—"

"I hope the time is delayed somewhat," broke in the young tramp, grinning. "No, listen, in all seriousness, boys, I'm here at your mercy, to be sure. But I do want to ask you a certain something—a favor, perhaps—you might call it that, but any information you might give me will be cheerfully accepted."

"What do you want to know?" asked our captain.

Happer Nam, as he called himself, smiled sadly, and took a seat. Slowly the boys left the organ and gathered about him. Even I found myself very close to him, watching his eyes that seemed to sparkle and dance, and his smile that came and went as elusive as an early morning sunbeam.

"Once upon a time," began the stranger who called himself Happer Nam, "there was joy. Not what you boys think. Nay, not so. Joy was my name; see? My mother said I was her joy, too. But that's long ago—oh, so long ago! Anyway, my name was Bill—that's what they called me, Bill Joy. Well, time came when I joined the knights of the open road—you know, tramps—those lazy fellows who would rather walk and walk than work and work. That's me. Yeah. It's much more fun to walk than to work, eh what?"

He paused and looked around at all of us. But none of us said anything.

"I didn't say nothin'!" blurted out Jerry Moore.

"To be sure you didn't!" exclaimed the hobo, laughing. You wouldn't But one little kid — he was a hobo's kid—little fella—never see 'em often on the road, y' don't, s' help me! But this little fella—he couldn't say Happy Name—like that! No. All he could pronounce it, as it were, was Happer Nam—that's the way he said it—yeah! Happer Nam. So they all called me that. I like it better because that little rascal called me that—he weren't no bigger'n a toad stool—I wish I could see him now—oh!"

He folded his arms across his breast and gazed into the glow of the open stove. For a few moments he stayed that way, while we watched, speechless. Not knowing what to say. But poor old Happer Nam! such a name! By golly, my heart went out to that young fellow! I was sorry he was a poor bum—so young, and so good looking, and—yeah, so soft-hearted and everything.

"Maybe," I said, "maybe, mister, if you don't want too much, we boys might help you get what you want, if you tell us, just a little bit, that is, of what's in your heart."

Swiftly he turned to me and gone from his eyes was all that uncertainty. Now I could see in his look the same thing that I could see when I looked into the eyes of Perry Stokes — faithfulness — true blue—fair and square!

"Say the word!" he breathed. "Tell me where I can find him!"

"Who?" I asked, looking at him.

But he didn't answer me. No. He just sighed and turned away. He looked all around the clubhouse, and then his eyes fell upon the old organ. He turned to Lew Hunter who sat on the edge of the organ bench.

"Would you mind, eh?" he asked, pointing toward the organ.

"Go ahead," said Lew, nodding.

The tramp walked over to the organ and sat down on the bench.

"I'm lookin'," he said, "for an old man." He turned around on the bench, his hands on the organ keys, and repeated. "An old man. But with this old man, a little boy. Rather touching, eh what?"

Nobody answered him. But he seemed to expect no answer. His fingers seemed to drip harmony; they fell upon the organ keys and brought forth from it such music as no one—not even Lew Hunter—ever dreamed was in that ancient instrument. And Happer Nam, seeming to forget that there was anybody else in the room, closed his eyes and sang:

"Another day gone . . . still I wander on
. . . can't say I'm happy . . .
Poor old Bill Joy . . .
. . . lookin' for an old man
And a little boy . . . Old Man Sunshine
. . . Little Boy Bluebird . . ."

And suddenly there came a sound. An ominous sound. A growl of rage, followed by a flare of light through the murky window panes. And the singer suddenly stopped and turned away from the organ.

"What's that?" he hissed.

"I'll show you kids!" thundered Jacobi. "I'll show you how to treat Jacobi! Thought you could double-cross me and get away with it, eh? Not so you could notice it—not so you could notice—"

Suddenly his eyes fell upon the young man at the organ.

"Happer Nam!" he exclaimed.

"Jacobi!" shouted Happer Nam, springing up. He leaped toward Jacobi in the open door. But Jacobi had gone. Nevertheless, Happer Nam went after him. Together they were swallowed up in the darkness. We boys stood huddled together, there on the threshold, gazing across the porch into the darkness, but nothing more of these strange figures did we see—and we all knew that we were face to face with a new mystery.

"This singing practice is over," was the next thing I heard our captain saying; "all meet again tomorrow here in this clubhouse, after school."

Which we did.

Paris Lays Down the Law

Wigs, Picture Gowns, Diamonds and Deep Decolletages Are Prescribed Themes for the Theater

The two sketches in the upper left corner represent stage dresses made by Martial et Armand for Regina Camier, playing in "Eusebe" at the Nouveauties Theatre in Paris. The first is developed in black taffeta and black tulle, studded with diamantes; the second is of rose tulle, embroidered in rose beads and tubes. In lower left corner—Alvire Popesco, appearing in "La Course de l'Etoile," at the Theatre de Paris, is wearing a Jenny model, which combines black crepe de chine and blonde tulle, embroidered with gold threads

PARIS.—There is a rising tide of formality at the Paris theater which is rapidly assembling itself into a code of fashions. Not since the days before the war has there been such an adherence to dicta, such a respect for rules. Informality has been badly routed and chic once more requires a recipe.

Thus, it is a most essential thing at the smart Paris theater to wear clothes suitable to the seat one occupies. A woman placed in view on the front row of a box must appear in a formal low neck gown with handsome jewels. For that purpose black, white or else parchment or flesh pink dull fabric dresses, such as chiffon or net are very suitable because they set off the quality of the skin and hair and form an excellent background for elaborate jewelry which is so fashionable just now. Evening bodices being very simple, cut quite straight with a round or a square decolletage and just one or two flowers of the fabric on the left side or shoulder straps, it will not be too much to complete them by earrings, a pendant necklace, a rectangular brooch, a waist buckle, two or three forearm bracelets or a watch bracelet and several rings in platinum covered with brilliants.

Accompanied by a white silk, silver, steel, gold or copper thread wig, a picture gown of black faille, or satin for a matron, or of pastel blue or pink taffeta or net, without a wig, for a debutante, are suggested for occupants of the box. On these dresses jewels of pearls and colored stones or of clear or dull crystal and strass can be worn.

If the popular back-drooping dress with a wide spreading skirt looks well in a box, a more moderate style must be chosen for the orchestra, where skirts cannot be too voluminous. Black chiffon or lace dresses with neck scarfs to match are in excellent taste. These can be brightened by a gay touch of color, such as the popular poppy red in the form of a flower, a bag or heels and shoe buckles, and worn under handsome fur-trimmed silk and metal brocade or printed lame coats. Colored dresses can also be worn in shades such as scarlet reds or turquoise blues. A navy blue evening gown looks simple and offers the advantage of being suitable both for late afternoon and for after-dinner wear.

A certain type of white satin evening dresses, not unlike a bride's dress, enjoys the cachet of chic at the Paris theaters this season. These look striking under a ruby-red velvet wrap. Many evening wraps have a flared skirt section drooping down at the back to follow the movement of the gown worn underneath.

Perhaps no adjective so well describes the current Paris theater fashions as fluttering. There is a graceful, delicate air about them which is not so much revived femininity as it is sophisticated softness. The costumes are not harsh, severe, prim or boyish. They rather represent the second years' refinement of the new elegance.
